Book Review Digest

1929

13ov

[illegible]

THE BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNUAL CUMULATION

(MARCH 1929 TO FEBRUARY 1930 INCLUSIVE)

BOOKS OF 1929

EDITED BY

MARION A. KNIGHT, MERTICE M. JAMES,

AND RUTH N. LECHLITNER

Property of Graduate Theological Union
Return to San Francisco Theological Seminary

NEW YORK

THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY

1930

Printed in the U. S. A.

PREFACE

The twenty-fifth Annual Cumulation of the Book Review Digest brings together in one alphabet the books entered in the monthly issues from March, 1929, to February, 1930, inclusive. No single number for February is issued, that month's books being combined with those in the previous issues of the year covered by the Annual. No books of 1930 are included but periodicals of January, 1930, in which reviews of 1929 books appear, are represented.

Each of the approximately 3500 books included is accompanied by a descriptive note, or summary of contents, followed by quotations from reviews in the publication from which excerpts are regularly made, and some others occasionally quoted. The following periodicals have been added to the list during the past year: the Columbia Law Review; Harvard Law Review; Yale Law Journal; Current History Magazine of the New York Times.

The descriptive notes have been written by Matilda L. Berg, Ruth N. Lechlitner and the editors. Miss Berg's loss to the staff was felt keenly, when she left in September to take a position with the publishing house of Longmans, Green and Co. The Book Review Digest was fortunate to find Miss Lechlitner, with her experience as a reviewer on several New York papers, to take up the work efficiently where Miss Berg had left it.

Again grateful acknowledgement is made to the interested and capable work of the other members of the staff: Lillian Bender, Jean Sacchitiello, Evelyn Smith, Wilma Adams Sendler and Dorothy Nixon, some of whom have been with the staff long enough to give it a stability unusual in these days of rapid change; also to Mary E. Furbeck, editor of Public Affairs Information Service for her monthly list of public documents for small libraries.

M. A. K.

Publications from which Digests of Reviews are Made

Am Anthropol—American Anthropologist. $6 George Banta Publishing Company, 450-454 Ahnaip St., Menasha, Wis.

Am Chem Soc J—Journal of the American Chemical Society. $7.50. Charles L. Parsons, Sec., Mills Building, 1709 G St., N.W., Washington, D.C.

Am Econ R—American Economic Review. $5 American Econ. Assn., Evanston, Ill.

Am Hist R—American Historical Review. $5. Macmillan Company, 60 Fifth Av., New York.

Am J Psychol—American Journal of Psychology. $6.50 Morrill Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.

Am J Pub Health—American Journal of Public Health and Nation's Health. $5. American Public Health Association, 370 Seventh Av., New York

Am J Soc—American Journal of Sociology. $4. University of Chicago Press, Chicago.

Am Pol Sci R—American Political Science Review. $5 American Political Science Association, 450-458 Ahnaip St., Menasha, Wis.

Ann Am Acad—Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. $5. 3622-24 Locust St., Philadelphia.

Booklist—Booklist. $2 American Library Association, 520 N. Michigan Av., Chicago

Bookm—Bookman. $5 Bookman Publishing Co., Inc. 386 Fourth Av., New York.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune)—New York Herald Tribune Books. $2. 225 W. 40th St., New York.

Boston Transcript—Boston Evening Transcript. $5.50 (Wednesday and Saturday) Boston Transcript Co., 324 Washington St., Boston.

Canadian Hist R—Canadian Historical Review. $2. University of Toronto Library, Toronto 5, Ont.

Cath World—Catholic World. $4. Missionary Soc. of St. Paul the Apostle, 411 W. 59th St., New York.

Chem & Met Eng—Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering. $3. McGraw-Hill Pub. Co., Inc., 10th Av., at 36th St., New York.

Christian Century—Christian Century $4 Christian Century Press, Inc., 440 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

Class Philol—Classical Philology. $4. University of Chicago Press, Chicago.

Columbia Law R—Columbia Law Review. $4.50 Columbia Law Review, Kent Hall, Columbia University, New York

Current Hist—Current History Magazine of the New York Times. $3. New York Times Co., Times Square, New York.

Dial—Dial. $5. Dial Pub. Co., Inc., 152 West 13th St., New York.

El School J—Elementary School Journal. $2.50. Dept. of Education, Univ. of Chicago, Chicago.

Eng Hist R—English Historical Review. 32s Longmans, Green & Co., 55 Fifth Av., New York (39 Paternoster Row, London, E.C. 4).

Eng N—Engineering News-Record. $5. McGraw-Hill Pub. Co., Inc., 10th Av., at 36th St., New York.

Geog R—Geographical Review. $5. American Geog. Soc., Broadway and 156th St., New York.

Harvard Business R—Harvard Business Review. $5. A. W. Shaw Co., Cass, Huron & Erie Sts., Chicago.

Harvard Law R—Harvard Law Review. $4.50 Harvard Law Review Assn., Gannett House, Cambridge, Mass.

Hist Outlook—Historical Outlook. $2. McKinley Publishing Co., 1021 Filbert St., Philadelphia.

Ind & Eng Chem—Industrial and Engineering Chemistry. $7.50. American Chemical Society, Charles L. Parsons, Sec., Mills Building, 1709 G St., N.W., Washington, D.C.

Int J Ethics—International Journal of Ethics. $4. University of Chicago press, Chicago

J Home Econ—Journal of Home Economics. $3 American Home Economics Assn., 101 East 20th St., Baltimore.

J Philos—Journal of Philosophy. $4. 515 W. 116th St., New York.

J Phys Chem—The Journal of Physical Chemistry. $10. Journal of Physical Chemistry, 654 Madison Av., New York

J Pol Econ—Journal of Political Economy. $4. University of Chicago Press, Chicago.

J Religion—Journal of Religion. $3. University of Chicago Press, Chicago.

Living Age—Living Age. $6 Living Age Co., 280 Broadway, N.Y.

Manufacturing Ind—Manufacturing Industries. $5. Ahrens Publishing Co., Inc., 222 W. Adams St., Chicago.

Mod Philol—Modern Philology. $4. University of Chicago Press, Chicago.

Nation—Nation. $5. Nation, Inc., 20 Vesey St., New York.

Nation and Ath—Nation and Athenæum. £1 10s. Nation, Ltd. 38 Great James St., Holborn, London, W.C. 1.

Nature—Nature. $14. Macmillan Company, 60 5th Av., New York (£2 17s Macmillan & Co., Ltd., St. Martin's St., London, W.C. 2).

New Repub—New Republic. $5. New Republic, Inc., 421 West 21st St., New York.

New Statesman—New Statesman. 30s. New Statesman, 10 Great Queen St., Kingsway, London, W.C. 2.

N Y Evening Post—New York Evening Post. $3. 75 West St., New York.

N Y Times—New York Times Book Review. $2. N.Y. Times Co., Times Square, New York.

N Y World—The World. $4. Pulitzer Building, Park Row, New York.

No Am—North American Review. $4. North American Rev., Corp., 9 East 37th St., New York.

Outlook—Outlook and Independent. $5 Outlook Company, 120 E. 16th St., New York.

Pol Sci Q—Political Science Quarterly $5. (including Supplements). Academy of Political Science, Columbia University, New York.

R of Rs—American Review of Reviews. $4. Review of Reviews Corp., 55 Fifth Av., New York.

Sat R—Saturday Review. 30s. 9 King St., Covent Garden, London, W.C. 2.

Sat R of Lit—Saturday Review of Literature. $3.50. Saturday Review, Inc., 25 W. 45th St. New York.

School Arts M—School Arts Magazine. $3. Davis Press, Inc., 44 Portland St., Worcester, Mass.

School R—School Review. $2.50 Dept. of Education, Univ. of Chicago, Chicago.

Science—Science. $6. Science Press, Grand Central Terminal, N.Y.

Spec—Spectator. 30s. 99 Gower St., London, W.C. 1.

Springf'd Republican—Springfield Republican. $10. The Republican Pub. Co., Springfield, Mass.

Survey—Survey (also Survey Graphic). $5. Survey Associates, 112 East 19th St., New York

Theatre Arts Mo—Theatre Arts Monthly. $5. Theatre Arts, Inc., 119 West 57th St., New York.

Times [London] Lit Sup—The Times Literary Supplement. 17s 4d. $4.15. The Times (London), North American Office, 280 Broadway, New York.

World Tomorrow—World Tomorrow. $2. World Tomorrow, Inc., 52 Vanderbilt Av., New York.

Yale Law J—Yale Law Journal. $4.50 Yale Law Journal Co., Inc. Yale Station, New Haven, Conn.

Yale R n s—Yale Review. $4. Yale University Press, 143 Elm St., New Haven, Conn.

In addition to the above list the Book Review Digest sometimes quotes from the Cleveland Open Shelf; Crozer Quarterly; Pittsburgh Monthly Bulletin; Pratt Institute Quarterly Booklist; New York Public Library New Technical Books; St Louis Library Bulletin; Wisconsin Library Bulletin; and other bulletins.

Explanations

The descriptive note is separated from critical notices of a book by a dash.

The plus and minus signs preceding the name of the magazine indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of the entire review.

In the reference to a magazine, the first number refers to the volume, the next to the page, the letters to the date and the last figures to the number of words in the review.

[2] This book is mentioned for the first time in this issue.

Publisher's directory will be found at the end of this number.

Book Review Digest

Devoted to the Valuation of Current Literature

Cumulation of monthly numbers, March, 1929—February, 1930

---

ABBOT, CHARLES GREELEY. The sun. 2d rev ed 433p il $3.50 (12s 6d) Appleton

523.7 Sun 29-1821

"Revised to include developments since the publication of the first edition (1911). While not strictly of a 'popular' nature there is much to interest the general reader. There are chapters on the influence of the sun on plant life; utilization of solar energy; and the relation of the sun to other stars. Numerous illustrations and tables. Author is Director of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory."—N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 25:329 My '29

"A comprehensive, up-to-date authoritative and scientific work which, because of the interest and clarity with which it is presented, makes an appeal to the general reader as well as to the student of astronomy. The excellent illustrations, the many charts and diagrams and the extensive tables not only add to the interest of the work, but they also make an important authority in the astronomical library."

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 23 '29 100w

"To the astronomical reader, Dr. Abbot's book is a standard work of reference, containing a number of useful tables, and also first-hand information on the measurement of the solar-constant of radiation—a work long associated with the name of the author and the Smithsonian Institution. It is therefore thought to be a regrettable omission that this revised edition does not include a table of collected results of measures of the solar-constant. . . But Dr. Abbot has renewed, by this timely second edition, the usefulness of his very readable book."

+ — Nature 124:331 Ag 31 '29 300w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:19 Ap '29

ABBOTT, A. A., pseud. See Spewack, S.

ABBOTT, CLAUDE COLLEER. Life and letters of George Darley, poet and critic. 285p il $6 (16s) Oxford

B or 92 Darley, George 29-14501

"George Darley is best remembered by those who remember him at all as one of the little group of 'closet' dramatists who in the third and fourth decades of the last century constituted what is sometimes called 'the Elizabethan Revival.' . . This sensitive and retiring, cultured and somewhat formidable Irishman touches the history of English literature in the years between 1820 and 1846 at many points. If his 'Sylvia recalls 'The Faithful Shepherdess' and Michael Drayton, it is also closely related to 'The Plea of the Midsummer Fairies' by Thomas Hood. . . As a contributor to 'The London Magazine' in the first brilliant years of its existence he was a colleague of Charles Lamb."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"The pent-up stream of Darley's ideas, which lacked a natural oral outlet, bursts forth in the turgid and unending cataract of his letters. It cannot be said that they form an addition of much value to English letters; they are so verbose that even his indulgent biographer finds it necessary to cut many of them. But for those who have the patience to read them they afford much information of the state of literature in the comparatively barren period between the sunset of Byron and the sunrise of Tennyson." S: C. Chew

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ap 28 '29 980w

"It is difficult to revive with fairness a minor poet, especially one with such a proclivity to lapses from sweetness into silliness, and with so shoddy a taste in tushery as Darley had; but Darley had enough of virtue to make him worth while, and Mr. Abbott has tactfully rescued him from the limbo of the piping bullfinches, with a minimum of that overpraise which is a legitimate implement in the trade of the resurrectionist." Sherard Vines

— + Nation and Ath 44:696 F 16 '29 620w

"There are criticisms, both of literature and of art, in these letters which seem to us worthy of Hazlitt at his best: illuminating phrases struck off at a white heat which might form the text for long discourses; judgments—amid some extraordinary perversities—usually sound and sane. Above all, these criticisms are marked by a determination to tell the exact truth as he saw it."

+ New Statesman 32:500 Ja 26 '29 830w

Times [London] Lit Sup p105 F 14 '29 4350w

ABBOTT, JANE LUDLOW (DRAKE) (MRS FRANK ABBOTT). Black flower. 248p il $2 (5s) Lippincott

29-24588

Theodate Waring, fifteen years old, was freckled and lanky and harum-scarum, but beloved by her father, the town doctor. Then the rich Bradfords came to town with their daughter Beth, who was pretty and dainty but very unhappy because of the constant illness of her mother. While Beth and Theo become fast friends, Dr Waring takes up Mrs Bradford's case, and prescribes a cure based on common sense and old-fashioned psychoanalysis—a cure which is completed when Mrs Bradford's twin brother Charles, formerly in disgrace and exile, miraculously turns up again. The Bradfords become a happy family, and Theo has learned in the process much about human nature.

"There is nothing to criticize in the story and it is less artificial than most of its class. Girls of high school age are bound to like it. But when one can write as well as Mrs. Abbott, it makes one wish that she would write one book that should be keyed to a little higher note and not be content to write the conventional story, even if she does it well."

+ — Boston Transcript p3 N 30 '29 300w

Reviewed by M. A. Fontaine

Sat R of Lit 6:418 N 16 '29 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '29 100w

---

ABBOTT, WILBUR CORTEZ. New York in the American revolution; sel. by Victor H. Paltsits. 302p il $3.50 Scribner

974.71 New York (city)—History. United States—History—Revolution

A history of New York City and surroundings in the Revolution, beginning with 1763, and tracing the growth of the revolutionary spirit thru the Stamp Act riots and repeal, the activities of the Sons of Liberty, the final break with England and the war years, up to the evacuation of the city by the British.

"Professor Abbott's narrative is a smooth and agreeable piece of writing, sometimes tragic and sometimes humorous, but tragic with restraint and humorous without posturing. Professor Abbott has also the notable merit of having a judicial temper. His writing is that of a civilized, urbane and cultivated man, who fulfills Chesterton's definition of a sound historian as being patriotic without being partial." Hoffman Nickerson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 D 1 '29 900w

"Professor Abbott has done a scholarly piece of research on the part played by the city of New York in the American Revolution. His book, although devoted particularly to New York's share in the Revolution, is actually another history of the American revolution, and an admirable picture of the social and economic conflicts which caused the break between the Colonies and Great Britain."

+ Current Hist 21:828 Ja '30 180w

"Professor Abbott's special service beyond the range of earlier narratives is the utilization of the facts embraced in late documentary publications and the results of new investigations, so that he gives a well rounded, thoroughly articulated account, with fresh and stimulating viewpoints. . . [But] he resorts to the doubtful device of printing parts of old documents in the original forms, including colloquial irregularities which were deemed pardonable at the time, the meaning of which would be conveyed more clearly now by a less literal method. Yet when allowance is made for these things and for some rather sweeping historical statements which may be questioned, the result is, on the whole, delightful and informing reading, as well as the compact treatment which the subject requires." A. S. Will

+ — N Y Times p15 D 22 '29 1500w

"New York was one of the brilliant capitals of the world during these seven years. . . They were colorful years, pregnant years, and we know so little about them! Of what we do know, Dr. Abbott has made orderly, effective use. He writes with a conversational quality that is engaging and quite unlike the traditional manner of his historians. It cannot be said that he has added greatly, if at all, to our knowledge, but he has done much to make that knowledge accessible and inviting—a real service." W. P. Beazell

+ N Y World p10m N 17 '29 650w

Outlook 153:429 N 13 '29 50w

ABDULLAH, ACHMED. They were so young. 376p $2 Payson & Clarke

29-8834

"In which Three More Musketeers, rejoicing in the names of Prince Mehmed Tamerlane, Lord Frederick Augustus Cyprian Treherne de Vere Carmyon and Hector Aristide L'Hommedieu, stone broke in Paris, fly to the aid of Evelyn Macdonnell, Sultana of Kivastan, who is being put upon by Iskander Bek, Sultan of Mervistan, claimant to the throne. After kidnaping Iskander's son they beat it over mountains, deserts and steppes to Ullahbad, where occur some more than Zendaesque events."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"Nothing startlingly new about the ingredients, no unforeseen events to take the breath away, but Achmed Abdullah has one gift which most writers of adventure stories either lack or suppress: when he says that one of his characters is in love his reader does not sigh or smile or skip the passage; he believes it. That belief works a miracle. There is suddenly a motive for all this courage and madness and flying about on two continents, and Mr. Abdullah's adventure story comes to life."

+ Bookm 69:xxix Jl '29 110w

"It sounds slightly ridiculous, and is all of that, as Captain Abdullah amiably intended; indeed, he encourages the satiric effect with a liberal supply of American and Kivastanese vernacular." Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p38 Ap 14 '29 120w

Boston Transcript p1 My 4 '29 330w

Reviewed by F: F. Van de Water

N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 20 '29 70w

"The book leaves the reader breathless and entirely unconvinced concerning the probability of the events recorded and the actual existence of the characters."

— + N Y Times p39 N 17 '29 220w

"Sometimes verging on the nonsensical, the tale is romance at its wildest, but the vivid descriptions of barbaric Eastern life, in which the author always excels, raise the book a bit above the average."

+ N Y World p10m My 12 '29 100w

" 'They Were So Young' is as neatly suited to the purposes of the screen as any book we have ever read. . . It is as good as a Cook's tour around the world, and as unsatisfactory." E. M. Benson

— Outlook 151:588 Ap 10 '29 120w

"There are throughout humorous touches, comments on the Russian situation, satiric hits at England and America, which make a flattering appeal to the reader's intelligence unusual in such books. A jolly good romance."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1030 My 18 '29 240w

"It is all very jolly, slashing and diverting."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 11 '29 180w

ABDULLAH, ACHMED, tr. Lute and scimitar; with a preface by Hervey Allen. ltd ed 86p $2.50 Payson & Clarke

891.5 Afghan poetry. Oriental poetry—Translations into English 28-29449

Songs, poems, and ballads from Afghanistan, Russian Turkestan and Chinese Turkestan, gathered by Achmed Abdullah during a year of wandering among the peoples of Central Asia; with annotations by the translator and a preface by Hervey Allen.

"It is not an important book of poetry, and, even considered as mere translation, far from impeccable; but it is full of pleasant and unfamiliar spices."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 D 30 '28 580w

"The only possible objection to be raised against 'Lute and Scimitar' is that it is too short. Captain Abdullah—the only man qualified to translate songs in the various tongues of Central Asia—should expand this collection into a volume four times its present size." Isa Glenn

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 9 '29 700w

"Abdullah, one of the most successful of expatriate authors, always has had a magic entirely his own, and he has made free use of it in interpreting for us the proud hearts and the strong arms of his people." A: Laing

+ N Y World p10m D 23 '28 100w

"The collection presents a wonderful storehouse of ethnology and folk-lore. The annotations of the author contain rich information in the field of the historical and religious life of several Oriental peoples and countries. Concerning the form of the English verses one reproach, perhaps, can be made: the translated verses apparently are not a line by line version of the original which is not published. . .Notwithstanding, 'Lute and Scimitar' is a very valuable work with rich and precious material." N: Martinovitch

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:644 F 2 '29 550w

ABDULLAH, ACHMED, and CUTHRELL, MRS FAITH (BALDWIN). Broadway interlude. 306p $2.50 Payson & Clarke

29-23491

The first volume of a trilogy on New York life. Bob Foster's first play, "Bedrock," is produced by Leo Cardoza, starring young Sally Cameron. Cardoza, king of the theater world, has "made" many actresses; but his tactics do not win Sally, who is in love with Bob. The play is a failure; but Sally and Bob, now married, are willing to face the future and work for success in the theater world together.

---

"It is racy, and superficial, and suggestive when it is not outspoken—and, beyond the creation of atmosphere which the adopted method intensifies, there is little justification for much of its dialogue and half its description." P. E. R.

— + Boston Transcript p6 N 13 '29 330w

" 'Broadway Interlude' is a good book, alive, and daring in spots, and it strips nearly all the better-known members of the seven lively arts." Walter Winchell

+ N Y Evening Post p6m S 28 '29 750w

"As writing, the novel is commonplace, made up of highly melodramatic incidents that follow one another without hiatus, and with characters unrealized, their portraits touched up only by a few lines of direct description. The dynamite seems to lie between the lines." Harry Hansen

— N Y World p16 O 5 '29 700w

ABDULLAH, ACHMED, and PAKENHAM, THOMAS COMPTON. Dreamers of empire. 368p il $3.50 Stokes [7s 6d Harrap]

920 Biography. 6 analyticals 29-20898

Biographical sketches of the adventures and careers of six men who dreamed of empire: Cecil Rhodes in South Africa; Richard Francis Burton of Arabian fame; John Nicholson and Henry M. Lawrence, whose careers centered in India; William Walker, who sought an empire in Central America; and "Chinese" Gordon.

---

"High Romance—Pure Adventure. Here is a book to quicken the pulse, start the heart pounding, make the breath come fast and cause the walls of libraries to fall back. It is the story of farseeing men, dreamers of Empires, more often 'failures' rather than 'successes,' but despite this, they were Colossi when compared with the contemporaries they towered over. They were men who single-handed forged vast, wild lands into Empires." S. A. L.

+ Boston Transcript p3 O 26 '29 550w

"To have written the best biographical sketch of Sir Richard Burton is no mean achievement. That is one of the things the authors of 'Dreamers of Empire' have done." L: Sherwin

+ N Y Evening Post p10m O 12 '29 800w

"The authors give to each of these men sufficient space to tell his story as fully as the ordinary person in a busy world cares to read it, and they tell it in a rich style, sometimes perhaps a little too rich in its colorful language, with sympathetic insight into the subject's temperament, purposes and motives and with a knack for nervous, intense narrative that weights still more the inherent interest of the story."

+ N Y Times p11 O 13 '29 350w

ABEL, THEODORE FRED. Systematic sociology in Germany; a critical analysis of some attempts to establish sociology as an independent science. (Columbia univ. studies in hist., economics and public law) 169p $3 Columbia univ. press [12s King]

301 Sociology—Methodology 29-13140

A critical analysis of the systems of sociology developed by four German writers, Georg Simmel, Alfred Vierkandt, Leopold von Wiese, and Max Weber.

---

"No self-respecting sociologist should miss this book; it is a rare treat to find a doctoral dissertation that bears within it the marks of its author's maturity, thoroughness, and selective ability, and which deals with a topic of importance." H. P. Becker

+ Ann Am Acad 145:206 S '29 570w

"Dr. Abel combines a thorough knowledge of the background of the German movement with a scientific skill, using a niceness of touch which is not always found in technical treatises. With his ability as an analyst goes a desire to interpret fair-mindedly the systems which he evaluates for us."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 11 '29 250w

"While recognizing Dr. Abel's ability and his mastery of the chosen German authors and of the whole subject, we are moved to ask if it was worth while to apply such a fine-spun net of formal analysis to these tentative schemes in order to demonstrate their inadequacy for the task. The only positive result is to show that there may be such a sociology as is postulated; but none of the four types examined has yet created a workable system for it."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p348 My 2 '29 620w

ACLAND, PEREGRINE. All else is folly; a tale of war and passion; with a note by way of preface by Ford Madox Ford. 345p $2.50 Coward-McCann [7s 6d Constable]

29-19778

The story of a Canadian line-officer, Falcon, in the war. He loves Adair Hollister, whose husband is a prisoner of war in Germany. Then, in action on the front, Falcon is severely wounded, his features almost shot away. He recovers in an English hospital. Adair does not come to see him. When she does at last see him, he knows that she no longer cares for him. The story ends with the question: "Does man fight only because he hasn't yet learned how to love?"

---

"One suspects that the manuscript of 'All Else Is Folly' was originally much longer and was cut desperately to standard novel length. One suspects also that it was written at a time when a love element was considered indispensable to a successful war story. When the author is describing trench life and fighting he writes with power, vividness and restraint. When he is trying to make this material into a conventional novel he removes the hero still further from our comprehension and sympathy." R. N. Linscott

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 3 '29 600w

Boston Transcript p4 D 14 '29 230w

" 'All Else Is Folly,' despite a persuasive introduction by Ford Madox Ford, remains a rather feeble story except for the power and dark vigor of its battle scenes. The love motive intrudes with the appropriate conviction of a serenade on bagpipes." F: F. Van de Water

— + N Y Evening Post p7m S 28 '29 120w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver

N Y Evening Post p6m S 28 '29 330w

"There is a gusty quality of Elizabethan humor about this excellent novel that sets it apart from the current moanin' low school of war literature. The horror of organized murder under patriotic auspices is not forgotten. But Major Acland commits the heresy of showing that the men who fought—at least the Canadians in the Scots regiments—were occasionally able to find some hilarity in their calling. The book, therefore, is important."

+ N Y Times p6 O 13 '29 680w

"It is not propaganda; it is a story; you may draw your own conclusions. You will read it for its interest as a novel, for it is well written. But however warlike you may be, we think you will be something of a pacifist for a few days at least after reading it."

Outlook 153:193 O 2 '29 80w

"It is intensely human and is, as Ford Madox Ford points out, the first really authentic work of imaginative writing dealing with the War to come out of the great British Dominions. You will be glad to have read 'All Else is Folly' because you will at once recognize it to be a human document of great feeling and a picture sketched by an artist who has the faculty of striking just enough detail and dashing enough color to give you a true picture of human life during a rather unhuman period." Homer Dean

ACLAND, PEREGRINE—Continued

+ Portland Evening News p8 D 10 '29 320w

Sat R of Lit 6:623 Ja 4 '30 280w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 5 '30 320w

"The hero, Alexander Falcon, is admirably drawn and in the main likeable. Possibly the social and amatory side of this novel will give it popularity, but from the point of view of literature it would have been much better if we could have seen more of Falcon at the wars and less in the lap of Delilah or the drawing room of a most fantastic 'smart set.'"

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p706 S 12 '29 170w

ACTON, HAROLD MARIO MITCHELL. Humdrum. 310p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

29-8263

A continental siren and her sister from the country exchange rôles in this novel of ultra modern life on the Riviera. The siren, following divorce and remarriage to a youthful lover, takes to a quiet life in country England. Her sister has long envied the other's gay career, and after the loss of husband and child, passes rapidly from sophistication to decadence.

---

"In 'Humdrum' Harold Acton reveals a highly original mind, audaciousness unmarred by vulgarity, and an amazing technical surety." Leonard Ehrlich

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 My 5 '29 280w

"This story of two sisters is decidedly modern, but it is also decidedly theatrical and unconvincing. . . . The novel shows real promise in the first half, but the second is a bit unreal. The sparkle from the champagne is allowed to evaporate."

— + Boston Transcript p5 Ap 6 '29 330w

"The characters have the unreality of the figures in problem-pictures. Their clothes and their postures are accurate, and for all I know the author may have recorded their remarks from life on his cuff. He does not make them significant. Mr. Acton is a born novelist who seems inclined to rely too much upon his natural gifts." Raymond Mortimer

+ — Nation and Ath 44:181 N 3 '28 260w

"The book, though brilliantly intended, is actually boring. As a novelist, Mr. Acton is not only precious, but world weary." T. S. Matthews

— New Repub 58:259 Ap 17 '29 170w

"In a way Humdrum is a true picture of modern life, but its very truth gives it a kind of woodenness, for all the characters are types and hence incapable of behaving unlike themselves." Cyril Connolly

— New Statesman 32:126 N 3 '28 260w

" 'Humdrum' is a book that should prove something. It is a book about a fast set, with the accompaniments of champagne, scarlet lipstick, 'dope' and more champagne. A good woman is ruined, but, alas for moral standards, a ruined woman ends as a country Lady Bountiful in Victoria Woodhull's 'odor of sanctity.' It is most disconcerting."

+ — N Y Times p19 Je 9 '29 470w

" 'Humdrum' is an unequal book; but the author writes with gusto, and may achieve something when he has stabilized his style." L. P. Hartley

— + Sat R 146:660 N 17 '28 160w

"Sophistication and a modern smartness, sometimes degenerating into vulgarity, are the distinguishing qualities of this study of two sisters. Mr. Acton gives us incidental touches of truth. But his satire is overdone, and the story, loaded with insignificant detail, becomes tedious."

— Spec 141:745 N 17 '28 70w

"The author may have had some purpose in view in writing this book, but beyond possible satire none is apparent. It is not entertaining; there is a ring of insincerity throughout it, it proves nothing, and it is not skilfully done. It has, however, a promising beginning in the graphic characterization of the two sisters and the mother."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 21 '29 200w

"The follies of the day, the naive crudities of smart conversation, are faithfully reflected in Mr. Acton's pages. He seems to despise all his puppets equally, except for that faintly admiring inclination towards the very rich, and he must have spent a lot of time thinking of clever things to say."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p986 D 13 '28 420w

ADAIR, ARTHUR H. Dinners, long and short; with a preface by Sheila Kaye-Smith; and an introd. by X. Marcel Boulestin. 232p il $3 Knopf [7s 6d Gollancz]

641.5 Cookery. Menus. Dinners and dining

29-2385

A book of practicable French recipes for the English and American housewife, with a chapter on wines, and lists of luncheon and dinner menus. Indexed, with translations.

---

"The housewife who uses 'Dinners Long and Short' must have a previous knowledge of cookery in order to follow these directions successfully. The recipes, although not inaccurate, are not as specific as a beginner is likely to need. The chapter on polite wine drinking has a certain quaint interest and the menus will prove helpful to one who knows her French." Lettie Gay

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 14 '29 130w

Boston Transcript p5 My 4 '29 250w

"Mr. Adair, having set out to be practical, is sometimes not precise enough about proportions and times for his purpose. Mr. Adair's recipes are mostly good, and some, as would be expected from a writer associated with M. Boulestin, are novel. It is to his credit that he encourages simplicity, and does not scorn homely dishes. But his pleasant and in its way useful book is far too vague about the principles of cookery."

— + Sat R 146:510 O 20 '28 330w

Sat R of Lit 5:716 F 23 '29 100w

"Mr. Adair's menus are well planned and his advice on 'polite wine-drinking' is sound."

+ Spec 141:367 S 22 '28 60w

"This is a pleasant little book, containing specimen luncheon and dinner menus, a number of sensible though uninspired recipes for all courses and some useful advice, almost always absent from cookery books, on the general conduct of food and drink."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p668 S 20 '28 130w

ADAM, KARL. Spirit of Catholicism; tr. by Dom Justin McCann. 237p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Sheed]

282 Roman Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works [29-16765]

"Dr. Adam, the Professor of Catholic Theology in the University of Tübingen, writes in order to discover the governing ideas, the distinguishing characteristics of Catholicism, and the forces that are consequently set in motion by them. His book is made up of a series of lectures delivered to an audience of mixed religious beliefs in his university; and the fifth (enlarged and revised) edition follows the original scheme."—Sat R of Lit

---

"He writes in a wholly admirable spirit, and carefully avoids all temptation to the mere scoring of points, than which nothing is more easy to a Catholic controversialist—or less effective. His erudition is apparent on every page; his mind is profound, candid, and subtle; and an air of charming tenderness is everywhere. If he does not make any very novel contribution to religious thought, such was not a part of his plan. His method of approach is decidedly new and stimulating. Nobody is so well read in this field that he can fail to learn much from this happy and luminous presentation of Catholic concepts." Theodore Maynard

+ Sat R of Lit 6:91 Ag 31 '29 920w

"Tolerantly and sincerely written by a German scholar, a devout English Churchman might read this book without wishing to skip more than a few passages. The slight signs of controversy are directed against Lutheranism, not Anglicanism. There is a genuine desire to move out of the rut while keeping rigidly to the lines of the modern Roman Catholic Church."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p147 F 21 '29 420w

ADAM, MRS PEARL (HUMPHRY). Kitchen ranging [with an introd. by Mrs Oliver Harriman]. 400p $2.50 (10s 6d) J. Cape & H. Smith

641.5 Cookery 29-15309

An "anthology" cook book for epicures. The favorite recipes of famous cooks and famous hostelries thruout the world are included, under general headings, together with amusing and instructive notes on the history of and anecdotes about specific dishes.

---

Booklist 26:105 D '29

"We have long hankered for a cookbook exhibiting some degree of imagination and lo, it is here! It is a find for the epicure. But make no mistake—an amateur cook (and the average housewife is included in this classification), faced with the necessity of getting a meal from it, would stand as much chance as a child dropped into mid-Atlantic and told to swim. Tiger-skin pigeon eggs might be a delicacy at the Ritz, but for ordinary home consumption it might be well to keep a copy of Fannie Farmer close at hand."

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 16 '29 250w

"A cookery book of a very remarkable kind. Those who want to eat a dish of guinea-pig and eel (from French Guiana) or the famous bouillabaisse of Marseilles or Omelette Poularde as cooked at Mont St. Michel or Maids of Honour from Richmond in Surrey, must get this book for their kitchens."

+ Nation and Ath 44:698 F 16 '29 60w

"The book has a wide range and is extremely readable. Mrs. Adam has collected an extraordinary number of recipes, and her comments on various genres of cooking, native tastes and delicacies, unusual dishes, are informed and critical."

+ New Statesman 32:642 F 23 '29 120w

"It is a sort of round the world cruise in a skillet, and while there are some dishes mentioned that we'd rather not try, such as Stewed Black Cantonese Cat, many others sound extremely interesting. We'd specially like to try the Australian Passion-Fruit Tart. The book is very entertainingly written." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 153:274 O 16 '29 120w

"The author's manner is light, leisurely, original, well-informed. . . Droll as the book is in parts, it never strays far from the needs of the kitchen. From soup to dessert it is good, and by its aid we may order a dinner worthy of a Château Yquem."

+ Spec 142:sup385 Mr 9 '29 520w

"Mrs. Adam presents us with a work of serious gastronomic erudition. She has investigated the cookery of all countries with such zeal that it is surprising that her book can proceed from anything less than a subcommittee of the League of Nations on culinary cooperation."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p199 Mr 14 '29 480w

ADAMS, FRANK RAMSAY. Help yourself to happiness. 239p $2 Macaulay

29-16851

Steve Bernaberry, the artist, is shot in his studio by Carlotta, his model, while Anne Harkness—who has just answered Steve's ad for a "womanly young woman"—is present. Anne leaves the studio, and Carlotta tells the police that Anne shot Steve. Anne, running from the city, is in a train wreck and regains consciousness to find herself dressed in the clothes of a Mrs Bernaberry—and discovers that henceforth she must play a part as the wife of Peter Bernaberry, Steve's brother. It proves to be a perfectly satisfactory rôle to Peter and Anne, especially when the murder-mystery is solved.

---

Bookm 70:xxxiv O '29 40w

"Though written with less than usual grace and innocent of finesse its staple plot should interest less fussy clients." Will Cuppy

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 22 '29 100w

"Should you be one of those persons who take murders seriously, this will be no book for you. It is absolutely devoid of gruesomeness and hair-raising situations. In fact, there is very little mystery about it. However, if you want rollicking humor and delicate satire, you will be satisfied." J. C. C.

+ Boston Transcript p10 N 16 '29 450w

ADAMS, HERBERT. Caroline Ormesby's crime. 301p $2 Lippincott

29-9933

Caroline Ormesby's uncle lost all her money in rubber investments. Caroline kidnaps a rubber millionaire and tries to gouge the money out of him. What happens thereafter is a light, irresponsible tale of young moderns in England, who mix modern daring with old fashioned sentiment.

---

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Mr 31 '29 80w

"The girl bandits are not hardened criminals and their ingenuous efforts to get out of the scrape are entertaining. Though not so interesting as the Jimmie Haswell stories, and with a less involved plot, it is an amusing story with which to while away an hour or so."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 19 '29 220w

"The story has many elements of novelty, and is as plausible as most other mystery stories. The romance woven through it will appeal to feminine readers of mystery literature."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '29 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p1005 N 28 '29 170w

ADAMS, HERBERT. Oddways. 307p $2 Lippincott

29-20796

Patton, an English schoolmaster on holiday, received a summons from his cousin who was very ill. There had been a murder and the sick man felt implicated because ten years before he had jilted the woman who was accused. Patton's investigation drew him further and further into the case, and nearly cost him his life, but he emerged triumphantly.

---

Bookm 70:xxvi Ja '30 50w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ag 18 '29 130w

"Written with the same swift action and the same refreshing humor noticeable in his other books, readers of Herbert Adams will welcome this new product of his typewriter. It is just another mystery story, but it is nevertheless sufficiently different to be interesting aside from its plot. . . Mr. Adams is a successful business man turned author; perhaps this accounts for the marked success of his work."

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 7 '29 250w

ADAMS, HERBERT—Continued

"The story is more amusing than thrilling; whether or not that is a fault depends upon the attitude of the reader."

N Y Times p17 S 1 '29 200w

"An instructive example of what a detective story should not be."

— N Y World p11m O 13 '29 150w

ADAMS, ISABEL. Heart of the woods; a story of life among the habitants in the Laurentian foot-hills. 365p $2.50 Century

28-29959

In the heart of the Laurentian woods is a little French-Canadian settlement near which Mrs Gwyn of the story lives. Her book is a friendly chronicle of neighborly comings and goings, and reflects Mrs Gwyn's love of man and of nature.

Booklist 25:247 Mr '29

"It is difficult to believe that much of this story is not based on personal experience. At any rate, it is based on a great love for the region about which she writes, for it exudes a quiet charm and beauty that proves a radiant nimbus for the tale."

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 3 '28 180w

"The book strikes a serene and lovely note. The author has pictured with literary charm and grace a scene, a mode of life, an environment that allure and interest, although it is not a book for every reader. It will have to find its predestined audience."

+ N Y Times p7 D 23 '28 450w

"The story thread is slight, and somewhat over-laid with description; but if there is a hero it is little Paul. He is drawn with a pen dipped in the living fluid of that motherly love which always makes any writing irresistible."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:543 D 22 '28 180w

Wis Lib Bul 25:30 Ja '29

ADAMS, JAMES TRUSLOW. Our business civilization; some aspects of American culture. 306p $3 Boni

917.3 United States—Civilization. United States—Social conditions 29-25482

" 'In making the business men the dominant and sole class in America,' he writes, 'that country is making the experiment of resting her civilization on the ideas of business men. . . Can a great civilization be built up and maintained upon the philosophy of the counting house and the sole basic idea of a profit?' He makes the plea for more contemplative and less material an existence. His conclusion is a demand for greater individual originality in the conduct of life and a refusal to accept the dollar sign as the common denominator of civilization."—Outlook

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 N 3 '29 800w

Boston Transcript p12 D 14 '29 200w

Reviewed by J. T. Gerould

Current Hist 31:830 Ja '30 20w

"With the freshness of the trained observer and the precision of the established historian, Mr. Adams has diagnosed the disquieting symptoms of disease in our social life. To a certain extent, his book may be branded as 'white collar' muck-racking, as the protest of a special class which is being crushed under the wheels of progress. He will assuredly run afoul of the 'don't knock, boost' element. Nevertheless, this collection of thirteen articles and essays is the most accurate, impartial and objective statement of the case against American materialism that has yet appeared." J: Carter

+ N Y Times p5 N 24 '29 1350w

"The task of diagnosis has never been so effectively performed as by James Truslow Adams. With a brilliant, sure touch he lays bare the diseased tissues of the body politic and, in a series of profoundly stimulating essays, suggests the cure."

+ Outlook 153:511 N 27 '29 300w

"James Truslow Adams's plain-spoken book is medicine, bitter and tonic. . . His book is really a book on manners, but its conclusions, if not cosmic, are inescapable." H: S. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 6:438 N 23 '29 850w

"Mr Adams does not fail to offer criticism and suggestion, but the whole would be improved by greater concentration and selection."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e N 3 '29 1000w

ADAMS, SIR JOHN. Everyman's psychology. 427p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [10s 6d Univ. of London press]

150 Psychology 29-20236

A book of applied psychology written and explained in terms that the average lay reader can readily understand. All the most recent psychological tendencies and schools are presented, the question of individual adjustment to conditions of environment is taken up, and the study of instinct and emotion as applied to individual development.

Booklist 26:99 D '29

"The content and treatment of this book explain, in part, the reputation enjoyed by Sir John Adams as England's leading educator. With rare impartiality and understanding, he presents to the intelligent layman all the modern schools of psychology. . . The last two pages of the volume contain a stimulating suggestion for the application of collective or social psychology to international problems. Throughout the volume, the author reveals unostentatiously a wealth of learning as well as a consideration for everyman's point of view."

+ Bookm 70:x N '29 130w

"Life supplies the specimens, the analogies and the background for this excellent introduction to the various modern schools of psychology. By his plentiful use of illustrations drawn from daily experience, the author robs his subject of the abstract and bewildering formulas which—like bloodless scarecrows—frighten the average reader out of the cornfield of mental science. . . His story of 'the psychic nether regions' is an illuminating example of how a difficult subject can be reduced to understandable terms. The chapters dealing with suggestion, temperament and internal harmony possess practical value and the entire perspective of the book is sane and balanced."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 N 10 '29 150w

Boston Transcript p3 O 11 '29 420w

"While the British approach and interests are not quite the American, the two are congenial save in one respect: the leisurely, digressional procedure may produce impatience here and there in minds adjusted to the tempo in which time is money and racing a sign of abundant vigor. 'Everyman's Psychology' will find favor on both sides of the water, for it makes a vivid appeal to the common interests of all men who believe that psychology has a guiding function in the control and comprehension of the human endowment or have curiosity enough to test for themselves whether it has." Joseph Jastrow

+ — Nation 129:688 D 4 '29 350w

"The work's real value is that it provides those who are compelled to discuss man's conduct in the light of psychology with an armoury of facts and terms for all occasions."

+ New Statesman 34:134 N 2 '29 270w

"Sir John Adams offers the pre-war stuff—smooth, of remembered bouquet, but curiously less potent than of old." Clarence Britten

N Y Evening Post p7m S 28 '29 400w

"The book is especially rich in the relating of modern thought to that of previous generations. By its application of psychology to many fields of modern daily life it not only illuminates the subject of psychology itself but shows its practical usefulness. Most readers will find it helpfully suggestive for their problems of personal adjustment to environment."

+ N Y Times p34 N 24 '29 430w

ADAMS, JOHN QUINCY. Diary, 1794-1845; American political, social and intellectual life from Washington to Polk; ed. by Allan Nevins. 585p $5 (21s) Longmans

B or 92 United States—History—1783-1865. United States—Politics and government

28-25438

"Charles Francis Adams made this massive fragment of the diary of John Quincy Adams available to the public fifty years ago, but it has long been out of print in fact as for most people it always was in effect. It was a happy idea of Allan Nevins to compile a selection of extracts from this formidable work and in the compass of 600 pages to present the passages of greatest permanent interest. His subtitle, 'American Political, Social and Intellectual Life From Washington to Polk,' is not an exaggeration."—N Y Evening Post

---

"He has accomplished his task with the highest degree of success. The proportions of the work are excellent. No one of the critical periods in Adams's life is slighted. Nor is Mr. Nevins's emphasis, as the subtitle of the abridgment makes clear, entirely political. There is a very considerable body of material that throws light on social and intellectual conditions, on conditions of travel, on religious and intellectual currents, on the development of the national capital. Not the least valuable part of the whole work is the penetrating analysis of the personality of the diarist by which it is preceded. Sympathetic and yet discriminating, it is one of the best brief descriptions of this noble, and yet bleak, personality that has ever been penned."

\+ Am Hist R 34:886 Jl '29 250w

Booklist 25:160 Ja '29

"The book is to be heartily commended and, I may add, the publishers have done an excellent piece of work in printing and binding, as has also the editor in his brief introduction." J. T. Adams

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ja 6 '29 1050w

"Historically it is doubtful if any diary is of more importance to its time in any country than the famous one of John Quincy Adams." S. L. Cook

\+ Boston Transcript p2 N 3 '28 2200w

"Allan Nevins has rendered a service to every person interested in the social and political history of the United States during the first half of the nineteenth century."

\+ Hist Outlook 19:404 D '28 150w

"It is the greatest American political diary we have. . . It was a happy thought to attempt to compress the twelve volumes into one and thus, by selection make the 'Diary' more accessible. Mr. Nevins has shown intelligence in making his selections and has produced a most readable volume. . . Unfortunately the new volume is not what it should be. The notes are inadequate in number and in quality. The original issue, edited by the elder Charles Francis Adams, gave a text that was above criticism, remarkably few errors have been found in it. In Mr. Nevins's volume there are a number of serious lapses, indicative of haste or carelessness." W. C. Ford

\+ — Nation 128:620 My 22 '29 750w

"Here is the heart and gist of that weighty matter, selected by a competent hand and made available to thousands who never saw or heard of the majestic original. Nothing essential seems missing in letter and spirit." C: A. Beard

\+ New Repub 57:354 F 13 '29 200w

Reviewed by R. J. Davis

N Y Evening Post p10m D 8 '28 280w

"In these times the work of a capable editor of source material relating to American history may be easily as useful as that of a historian who relates his own version, sometimes more so. Professor Nevins has shown that he is at home in either rôle."

\+ N Y Times p2 Ja 6 '29 700w

"Shrewd selections and no less shrewd elisions have given a compact, coherent vivid narrative of a life of which 'extraordinary' is but mildly descriptive." W. P. Beazell

\+ N Y World p10m D 9 '28 980w

"Allan Nevins has done another fine piece of work. He has selected his passages with his usual intelligence making a readable volume." Herschel Brickell

\+ No Am 227:adv Ja '29 80w

"In this one-volume form the diary bristles with incisive and picturesque records of our social and political history." Van Wyck Brooks

\+ Outlook 151:148 Ja 23 '29 920w

Pratt p32 spring '29

Sat R 147:18 Ja 5 '29 650w

"For the good judgment with which Mr. Nevins has carried through the considerable task of abridging the diary there can be nothing but praise. If his book is not exactly a discovery in biography, it is certainly a helpful guide to the understanding of a unique personality." W: MacDonald

\+ Sat R of Lit 5:1109 Je 15 '29 1050w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 3 '29 1200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p999 D 20 '28 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 25:100 Mr '29

ADAMS, LEONIE. High falcon & other poems. 48p $2.50 Day

811 29-30218

Poems directed by an intellectual and sophisticated craftsmanship coupled with emotional austerity. Some of the lyrics included have appeared in the New republic and the Saturday review of literature.

---

"The superb musicianship, the vibrant intensity, the power to achieve spiritual poise through sensual excitement that so distinguished Léonie Adams's first book of poems are notably present in this volume. Indeed, so perfect is her command over syllabic pattern, so acute her ear to the values of this vowel and that consonant, so nice her balance of harsh and gracious, light and heavy, bare and rich in mere sound that one is almost prepared to let the sense escape, or at least to allow the emotion of the poem to be so colored by its purely formal expression that one is neglectful of the question as to whether its theme could be stated fully in intelligible prose." Babette Deutsch

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 D 29 '29 900w

"To our way of thinking Leonie Adams is, first of all, the poet's poet. Hers are no simple, naive, unaffected, small thoughts concerned with daffodils, with human kindness, or with any of the trifling every-day happenings which by very repetition mount in importance in our routine minds. No, here is the clear-cut, incisive, introspective and often involved thought or happening expressed in adequate measure, and sometimes with the music of other days and Biblical swing."

\+ Boston Transcript p3 D 7 '29 230w

"All the poems in her book have the stillness, the faint lighting, the introspection and retrospection of an awakening at dawn when our labor is yet a dream and our dream has the burthen of labor. But perhaps 'High Falcon' is lacking in a quality that would fill up the measure of our admiration for a fine book of poetry. That quality is fulness. The moods that the poems come out of are real and poignant, but again and again we wish that they had been given a fuller body. Too often, the poet gives us the trees stripped bare. We want her sometimes to give us the tree with its leaves and fruits and a bird singing in the leaves." Padraic Colum

\+ — New Repub 61:113 D 18 '29 500w

"If this modest poet is an indefatigable craftsman her work does not, in consequence, show artificiality. Hers is an art that conceals art. And so acute is her sense of rhythm that her cadences have a music of their own. One could read 'Caryatid' to a person unacquainted with the English language and that person would realize that he had listened to a rarely beautiful bit of verse."

ADAMS, LEONIE—Continued
+ N Y Times p35 N 24 '29 500w

"If Miss Adams were less of a craftsman than she is, her verses would be unintelligible. As it is, her fine and intricate figures of speech serve to convey to us the unique qualities of her experience of life. Miss Adams is a very serious-minded poet, and that is right and proper. Nevertheless, it is something of a relief to turn to a poet who confronts life less tensely." Granville Hicks
+ N Y World p10m N 24 '29 160w

"Her new book deepens but clarifies her quality, resolves her chord. Her consciousness does not modify itself for apprehension, as a dream changes in the telling. Her diction is not music, not poetry, but something odd and right, made of consciousness itself. With her gravity of a wise child goes something robust, lusty. Her awareness does not make her mad, but hardy." L. T. Nicholl
+ Outlook 153:509 N 27 '29 100w

ADAMS, PETER. Clipper ships done in cork models. 102p il $1.25 Dutton
623.8 Ship models 29-13292

In an earlier book, "Cork ships and how to make them," (Book Review Digest, 1928) Mr Adams told how to make tiny ship models from ordinary corks, pins, thread, matches and paper, giving also a brief account of the history of each type of ship from ancient to modern times. The present book gives a history of some of the most famous clipper ships and explains how to make models of them from the same materials.

---

Booklist 26:74 N '29
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Je 30 '29 280w
Cleveland Open Shelf p135 N '29
St Louis 27:291 O '29

"Listed as a book for children, ages eight to twelve years, this little book by the author of 'Cork Ships and How to Make Them' has interest for even the most aged of grown-ups by reason of its informative and simple prose. Peter Adams hits two targets at one twang of his bow. Undoubtedly a seaman of ability, and possessing no casual knowledge of his subject, he includes in his text a reminiscence of the great days of sailing ships and seeks, by the best and most difficult of all artifices, straightforward writing resembling speech, to impart some measure of his own pride in American shipbuilders, American clippers, and American seamen, to the reader, be he eight or eighty." D: Bone
+ Sat R of Lit 6:160 S 21 '29 520w

ADAMS, RANDOLPH GREENFIELD. Pilgrims, Indians and patriots; the pictorial history of America from the colonial age to the revolution. 206p il $3 Little 973.2 United States—History—Colonial period. United States—History—Revolution
28-28985

Similar in style to an earlier book, The gateway to American history, this new volume by Mr Adams is built around old pictures and prints taken from the period he describes.

---

Booklist 25:215 F '29

"The style is clear and interesting. The pictures are unusual and represent a painstaking and discriminative collection. The book was made for connoisseurs, but it is admirable for children, too."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 26 '29 160w
Cleveland Open Shelf p79 My '29
El School J 29:636 Ap '29 80w
N Y Times p9 D 16 '28 80w
Pratt p31 spring '29
St Louis 27:102 Mr '29
Reviewed by Allan Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 5:930 Ap 20 '29 500w
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 25 '29 150w
Wis Lib Bul 25:77 F '29

ADAMS, SAMUEL HOPKINS. Flagrant years: a novel of the beauty market. 304p $2 Liveright
29-10429

Connie's first job when she arrives in New York from the West is in a beauty parlor. James Smith, commonly known as Ipsy, is responsible for that. As Connie learns the technique of her trade, of which the reader also learns a lot, Ipsy Smith continues to weave in and out of the story, supplying bright moments and ideas even in the midst of a murder mystery.

---

"The author, whose political novel Revelry, aroused so much interest, is here equally successful in catching the spirit of the beauty market. It is an excellent story of adventure written in a humorous vein."
+ Bookm 69:xxiv Je '29 60w

"The story has a smooth and supple gait and there is the jounce of jazz in much of the dialogue." R. C. B. Brown
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 My 19 '29 350w

"Mr. Adams has a considerable supply of fresh information at his disposal. Moreover, he releases it in a thoroughly amusing style. The result is an effective picture of a colorful background, described in a slangy, colloquial manner."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 1 '29 290w
Cleveland Open Shelf p126 S '29

"Here you have the low-down on the face-lifting profession turned into a first-rate funny story." C. A. C.
+ New Repub 59:54 My 29 '29 110w

"What if the people are unreal? What if the popular heroine does many unconventional things conventionally? What if there are many coincidences? And some unexplained motives? What of all these things when there's speed and action and nineteen twenty-nine written on every page?"
+ — N Y Times p22 My 19 '29 180w

"The eternal and sometimes tragic struggle of women to preserve the supremacy of their youth and good looks is vividly told in the life of Consuelo."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 16 '29 100w

ADAMS-ACTON, MURRAY. Domestic architecture and old furniture. ltd ed 123p il $15 Houghton [42s 8les]
728 Architecture, Domestic. Furniture
29-27656

"Murray Adams-Acton is a charming draftsman, and he has combined his own drawings of reconstructed interiors with nearly two hundred photographs, to form a pictorial record of the evolution of domestic architecture and decoration in Europe out of the mists of the dark ages, and even into our own day. . . . He has very little good to say about the present evolution of London and the current fads in domestic decoration."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"In bringing together these illustrations, and telling, in a rather discursive and charming way, the story of the slow flowering of domestic life and its gradual alliance with artistic aims, Mr. Adams-Acton has performed a useful and fascinating task. . . The book is inevitably expensive, but all larger libraries should have it; for it is history from the intimate view of the living room."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p35 N 17 '29 320w

"Mr. Adams-Acton rambles rather than moves with precision through the different epochs of art with which he deals; but his rambling manner allows him to introduce much miscellaneous and often interesting information, some grumbling at the age in which we live, and a great deal of admiration for the picturesque qualities of old objects."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p619 Ag 8 '29 500w

ADLER, ALFRED. Science of living. 264p $3.50 [2] Greenberg

131 Psychoanalysis 29-20528

"Dr. Adler, famous Viennese physician and psychologist and Professor of Psychology at the Institute of Vienna, makes a surprisingly clear and simple statement of the fundamental principles of psychology with which his name has long been associated. . . Briefly, he believes that the problem of inferiority is at the basis of psychologic revelations and is the beginning and the end of the method for the application of individual psychology."—N Y Times

Bookm 70:v Ja '30 150w

"The book is not profound. Perhaps it was not intended to be, but it does not give the impression of issuing from a wealth of background. It seems, on the whole, although its ideals are excellent, to be rather a thin presentation, considering the enormous possibilities which the author's thesis opens up. . . If 'The Science of Living' is not all that one would wish it to be, it is nevertheless a wholesome effort at teaching people the importance of understanding one another, with the emphasis on the social significance of such additions to our knowledge." W. A. White, M.D.

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 O 13 '29 700w

Boston Transcript p4 N 13 '29 700w

N Y Times p18 O 27 '29 420w

AGATE, JAMES EVERSHED. Rachel. (Representative women) 178p $2 Viking press [3s 6d G. Howe]

B or 92 Félix, Elisa Rachel 28-29521

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:245 Mr '29

"Mr. Agate's method has its drawbacks. He is a skeptic not only of his material but of the very conclusions which he draws from it, and consequently there is almost no enthusiasm, no emotional sweep to the book. Mr. Agate never loses himself in his material, or succeeds in recreating vividly the era or the scene." Juana Allraum

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Mr 3 '29 450w

N Y Times p18 F 24 '29 370w

Pratt p37 summer '29

"There is a vast amount of literature published on Rachel. Mr. Agate, who knows admirably the first half of the nineteenth century in France, is familiar with those documents. He has been content with dabbling in them with the tip of his paper knife, talking as he did so. The writer never draws a long breath. He is careless in arrangement as he has been in proof-reading. Gallicisms abound and this writer, generally careful, is indifferent. Yet, if we succeed in getting rid of the idea that Mr. Agate's little biography is a book we at once become tolerant of its deficiencies." Ernest Dimnet

— + Sat R of Lit 5:823 Mr 30 '29 1200w

"As vulgar, dull and useless a biography as has ever been written has just come from the pen of one of England's most distinguished dramatic critics, Mr. James Agate, a man who has written so much, so brilliantly and well that his descent to this account of Rachel arouses a world of wonder." E. J. R. Isaacs

— Theatre Arts Mo 13:230 Mr '29 880w

AIKEN, CONRAD POTTER. Selected poems. [2] 361p $3.50 Scribner

811 29-28544

Mr Conrad's selections from his six most recent volumes of verse, chronologically arranged. Among the longer poems included are The jig of, Forslin, The house of dust, Punch: the immortal liar, The pilgrimage of Festus, and Priapus and the pool.

"A perusal of this book, which contains almost the entire body of Mr. Aiken's work, gives one the feeling not so much of having read a volume of poetry as of having listened for hours to a hidden orchestra playing low adagios that softly trouble the heart. The volume is like a collection of symphonies by a composer whose new works nearly always embody rephrasings of theses which his previous works have made familiar. . . An examination of Mr. Aiken's work as assembled in this volume deepens one's feelings that he is more of a musician than a thinker." Babette Deutsch

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 D 8 '29 1250w

"Here is a volume of substance, representing, in both the longer and shorter pieces of work, that rare gift of interpretation, penetration and beauty of form which are characteristic of this author's work."

+ Churchman p16 D 28 '29 60w

"He is still the only poet today who can sustain a long poem without (like Masefield and Edwin Arlington Robinson and Robinson Jeffers) resorting to elaborate narrative. Few things of their kind could be more artistically successful than 'The Jig of Forslin' and 'The Pilgrimage of Festus.' But Aiken's work is of an age already alien and outstripped; and his 'Selected Poems' must stand as the interesting but unexciting utterances of a period rapidly growing mute." Emanuel Eisenberg

— + N Y Evening Post p11m D 7 '29 750w

"Although it is regretfully true that one who reads 'Selected Poems' in their entirety will feel that the thought behind the lines is nebulous, intangible; that intellectually the poet is groping for something he has little prospect of finding, none with an ear for such music as is inherent in words, none who is susceptible to magically interwoven rhythms, but must be entranced by the pure sound effects of these, his major works. Lacking the crystal clarity of Robinson, Aiken is a more luminous poet. He is America's outstanding maker of brilliant verse." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p4 D 22 '29 1450w

Reviewed by Granville Hicks

N Y World p11m D 22 '29 450w

Springf'd Republican p6e D 15 '29 100w

AIKEN, CONRAD POTTER, comp. American poetry, 1671-1928; a comprehensive anthology. (Modern lib. of the world's best books) 362p 95c Modern lib.

811.08 American poetry—Collections 29-4202

"It is, as Mr. Aiken says, the first attempt to include in one volume specimens of American poetry from the earliest times to the present, and as such it illustrates the various purposes which a good anthology may serve; it gives the reader an opportunity to see modern poetry against the background of the past; it calls to the attention certain forgotten writers; it brings together contemporary poems that most of us would otherwise fail to see."—N Y World

"A very excellent—and cheap—collection."

+ Christian Century 46:365 Mr 14 '29 130w

"Comprehensive, not in the sense that a Household Book of Poetry is comprehensive, but in the better sense of being a comprehension of the real poetry written in America from Anne Bradstreet to Marianne Moore."

+ Dial 86:437 My '29 200w

"As he is both a scholar and a poet, Conrad Aiken is more than usually fitted to choose the poems for an anthology. And this double fitness is amply proved by his selections from American poetry beginning with Anne Bradstreet and closing with Marianne Moore. The reader will, however, regret Mr. Aiken's excessive modesty which moved him to omit his own verse in making the collection." Percy Hutchison

AIKEN, C. P., comp.—Continued
+ N Y Times p2 Je 23 '29 280w

"Of Mr. Aiken's selection one can speak with the highest approval." Granville Hicks
+ N Y World p11m Mr 10 '29 230w

"In questions of taste Mr. Aiken's authority is considerable. He is guilty, to my mind, of but one considerable breach, and that is in the omission of himself. His modesty is commendable. But a man making an anthology has no right to modesty. The result is that his presentation of modern poets is extremely incomplete because he himself occupies a place among them which is not filled by mere silence. With this one (considerable) objection Mr. Aiken's anthology stands as the best existing anthology of American verse. And certainly the most interesting." Archibald MacLeish
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1023 My 18 '29 500w

"The principal criticism to be made of Mr. Aiken's book is not that familiar and commonplace works are omitted, but that too much space is given to a particular group which happens to illustrate the editor's theories. His choice even of contemporary works seem capricious. . . The reader is likely to discern nothing but labored and freakish perversity in some of the works which Mr. Aiken has seen fit to include."
— Springf'd Republican p10 F 15 '29 320w

AINSLIE, PETER. Scandal of Christianity. 212p $2 Willett

280 Christian union. Sects 29-7089

Denominationalism is in Dr Ainslie's eyes, the blight of Christendom. His little book is an earnest plea to Christians everywhere to abolish denominationalism and to unite in one great effective Christian church.

"The book is poorly written and composed. Its chapters show little evidence of systematic arrangement; the argument begins nowhere and goes everywhere. Dr. Ainslie probably thought as little of the standards of literary art when he poured forth his soul in these pages, as did the Hebrew prophets when they lifted their cries to Yahweh. What is essential Dr. Ainslie has attended to with an honesty of conviction, a courage of utterance, a fierce passion of idealism, which stir the heart." J: H. Holmes
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Je 2 '29 250w

"This is a striking and challenging criticism of all the churches and an heroic appeal to do away with childish things and get together."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 6 '29 230w

"Among the many recent books upon various phases of the union question, none is more dynamic in its faith, more thrilling in its presentation of the duty and the opportunity, or more catholic in its sympathy with Christian men of many minds, than this by our generation's great apostle of Christian unity." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 46:331 Mr 7 '29 780w

"Let the smugly contented denominationalist who enjoys his smugness, avoid this volume, for it is quite sure to disturb him—provided, of course, that his mind is not short-circuited and his conscience not electrocuted." W: R. McNutt
+ Crozer Q 6:512 O '29 500w
J Religion 9:495 Jl '29 30w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:26 Ap '29 40w

"Ainslie's book is a blazing, blistering excoriation of the whole denominational system. It is the long-delayed explosion of a fermenting conviction. And this is the conviction: that whatever good may have been accomplished in the past by all the more or less antagonistic groups of Christians, the whole system is utterly and pathetically inadequate to meet the desperate social, industrial and racial needs of today, and even less adequate to meet the larger problems of tomorrow." C: S. Brown
Survey 62:203 My 1 '29 90w

"The book deserves wide reading in church circles."
World Tomorrow 12:236 My '29 30w

AKELEY, MARY L. (JOBE) (MRS CARL ETHAN AKELEY). Carl Akeley's Africa; foreword by Henry Fairfield Osborn. 321p il $5 Dodd

916.7 Africa, East—Description and travel. Hunting—Africa. Zoology—Africa. Akeley, Carl Ethan. Photography of animals 29-27647

An account of the Akeley-Eastman-Pomeroy expedition for the American museum of natural history, written by the leader's wife, Mary Akeley, who accompanied her husband. Their hunt for animals on the plains of Africa, and the work of photography and preparation of the skins for preservation and shipment, is fully described; there are also descriptions of the land and its people. At the climax of the trip Mr Akeley was stricken with fever, died, and was buried in the heart of the country he loved. His wife carried on with the expedition, chiefly in the land of the mountain gorilla and in the sanctuary of the Parc National Albert.

"As a friend of Africa and as a man deeply interested in all that pertains to that 'brightest' land I feel tremendously grateful to Mrs. Akeley. Her book is one most decidedly worth owning and reading, whether one is vitally interested in Africa or not. In this modern age 'Carl Akeley's Africa' is a unique record of a great man and a great work written by the one person who could do such a task full justice, his wife. That she did not fail is nearly as great a tribute to her husband as it is to her." W. D. Hubbard
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 D 22 '29 550w

"No man could have a nobler monument than such a book, which is not only a tribute of affection but a manifestation of intelligent sympathy with his purposes. And besides all that, it is a fascinating presentation of one aspect of that mysterious continent which Akeley delighted to call 'bright Africa.' "
+ Christian Century 46:1512 D 4 '29 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p149 D '29

Reviewed by Joe Gould
N Y Evening Post p13m D 21 '29 250w

"In her book she literally takes her readers with her on her adventurous trek across the deserts of East Africa, through Uganda, to the Congo; she brings them face to face with the wild beasts which lured her and her husband from the comforts of their homeland; she makes them feel the silence of the African deserts, the breathless excitement of those moments when Akeley, in his jolting motor car, would come upon some superb specimen of animal life. . . His wife, after valiantly and faithfully seconding his efforts, has given us, in her book, a picture of vanishing Africa as lifelike as her husband's wonderful museum groups." T. R. Ybarra
+ N Y Times p8 N 24 '29 1500w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 153:468 N 20 '29 80w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:14 D '29 150w

ALDANOV, M. A., pseud. See Landau, M. A.

ALDINGTON, HILDA (DOOLITTLE) (MRS RICHARD ALDINGTON) (H. D., pseud.). Hedylus, ltd ed 185p $4.50 Houghton [6s Blackwell]

[29-8858]

"Hedylus is son to Hedyle, Athenian hetaira. His mother, a wanderer from Athens, the beloved, has come to haven on the Isle of Samos at the court of Douris. Hedylus is held in spiritual leash by his mother (she has made him brood on the idea that he owes a debt to her, and must stay by her to repay it). All that transpires in the 185 pages concerns the break of Hedylus, the cutting of the constringent thong. A girl and a man, the latter a former lover of Hedyle, play their subtle parts in the youth's wrench to freedom."—N Y Times

---

"We have in this book sharp renderings of exterior beauty. One has a sense of adjectives and italics and 'manner,' which one cannot think of as characteristic of H. D., but the fervour and 'exact fantasy of visualization'—and the beauty in print and arrangement—seem hers."

— + Dial 86:264 Mr '29 80w

"'H. D.'s' second novel is so desperate in its ideality and so precious in its prose that it will find few readers. But those who do read it will be rewarded by knowledge of a distinguished poet turned exquisite novelist. At best a cold and beautiful curiosity."

+ Nation 128:722 Je 12 '29 60w

"'Hedylus,' like its precursor 'Palimpsest,' emphasizes the fact that nowhere in contemporary English prose fiction is there any prose more exquisite than that of H. D.; and that nowhere in English prose fiction are human emotions and experiences more immaculately reproduced." W. F. Kohn

+ New Repub 57:200 Ja 2 '29 230w

"Hedylus is too closely written, there is too much 'he said, he thought, she thought, she said,' and the transitions from thought to dialogue produce a breathless and irritating mock subtlety. The poems also are not very good. Hedylus, in fact, is overwritten. It will be a disappointment to those who read Palimpsest, but to those who know nothing of this remarkable writer it will be interesting, if difficult, to read." Cyril Connolly

— + New Statesman 32:636 F 23 '29 950w

"H. D. loves hard, precise, decorative words and phrases, and her constant use of them gets very much in the way of the clarity she evidently tries so determinedly to achieve. If the Imagist aim is to employ the exact word, and if H. D. conforms to the Imagist formula in this story, the result is simply a paradox that, for us, is too enigmatic to iron out."

— N Y Times p7 N 18 '28 580w

"For those who can transmute the fragilities and subtleties of H. D.'s seeing and knowing into their own experience, the book will offer rarely suggestive reading." Grace Frank

+ Sat R of Lit 5:538 D 22 '28 1000w

"The prose of 'H. D.,' like her verse, is of the imagiste kind; but the colours and shapes are so closely confounded that one gets the impression of splintered mosaic. The drip of too conscious words that never convey very much frets the reader's mind into exasperation. Some of the bright details are charming in themselves; but the idea behind all the preciosity of images escapes like a bird."

— + Spec 142:396 Mr 9 '29 230w

"The poetess, H. D., who more than any other writer of our time has succeeded in recovering the spirit of the Garland of Meleager, now attempts in a prose work to recreate the social life from which that garland was gathered. It is a brave attempt, and on the whole remarkably successful."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p240 Mr 21 '29 550w

ALDINGTON, RICHARD. Collected poems. 234p $3 Covici [12s 6d G. Allen]

821 28-29525

A collection of poems by the well-known English imagist poet, some of which have never before been printed in America. Most of them have appeared in previous volumes of his works

---

Booklist 25:201 F '29

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 9 '29 160w

"If intelligence and honesty and general intellectual attractiveness could make a poet Mr. Aldington would be one. The author of 'Images,' 'Images of War,' 'Images of Desire,' 'Exile,' and 'A Fool i' the Forest' neither gains nor loses by the collection of his poems into the present very handsome volume, except that now we have full evidence that he never possessed the necessary spark of whatever it is that makes a poet."

— Nation 128:114 Ja 23 '29 130w

"Though not a voluminous writer, he has produced enough in verse to justify the title and enterprise of this book, which displays him altogether as a gifted annotator of life and a resourceful artist of word and tone."

+ Nation and Ath 45:539 Jl 20 '29 430w

"A writer whose verses—the good, the indifferent and the downright bad—are (or try to be) poems in the original sense of the word: things made, products of the mind, not the tawdry phantoms of incommunicable sorrows and delights."

+ New Statesman 33:684 S 14 '29 100w

"Grant him his technique, concede his claim to subtle rhythms, yet it is difficult to evade the feeling of an astonishing hollowness in Richard Aldington's work. . . But those to whom so limited and doctrinaire an application of the imagist theories makes more satisfying poetry than it does to this reviewer will of course, find Richard Aldington's 'Collected Poems' one of their indispensable Bibles." Shaemas O'Sheel

— + N Y World p11m Ja 13 '29 350w

St Louis 27:166 My '29

Sat R of Lit 6:546 D 7 '29 400

"There is a certain fastidiousness and disdain, a patronizing air towards his loves and enthusiasms, which betray a lack of vitality and emotion. He is fretful and resentful—perhaps because he half-knows this callousness at the heart of his world—and vents his nervous misery by torturing the beauty which eludes him and which cannot make him lose himself in the joyous passion of a liberal poetic life." R: Church

— + Spec 143:165 Ag 3 '29 180w

"Mr. Aldington is most a poet when he writes of such beautiful subjects as naturally charm the poet. If such subjects are the common stock of poetry, Mr. Aldington succeeds in stripping them of all the luxury which poets have added to them so that they are still fresh and clean. He is an ascetic in the associations which he allows his poetic images to evoke. But he is not always able to walk easily amongst what is distasteful, relishing its horror and turning it into fine phrases as the born satirist will. His descriptions of the tedious and the horrible are both adequate and very sincere, so that they fall into their place in the contrast and do not overcome the beautiful, but as poetry, at any rate in the earlier poems, they take a second place and are not always appreciable for their own sake."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p620 Ag 8 '29 900w

ALDINGTON, RICHARD. Death of a hero. 398p $2.50 Covici [8s 6d Chatto]

29-17387

Captain George Winterbourne of the British army, crazed by the sight of death and destruction, springs in the path of a line of bullets and is killed. The novel, dealing with his background and life, is divided into a prologue, which tells how the news of his death was indifferently received by his father and mother, wife and mistress; and three parts: the lives of the Victorians who produced him, his life as a painter in Bohemian London, a picture of the war and his part in it.

---

"The final section . . . has in its own right something of the coldness of light on steel, and a considerable honest rage against the practice of death by national appointment." Vincent McHugh

+ — Bookm 70:205 O '29 470w

"Perhaps he has done the most distinguished novel about the war to be written in English. Certainly he has made a book both rich of background and quick of pace, both finely sensitive and insistently ruthless. . . While it possesses a firm unity of theme, it has a personal freedom of utterance reminiscent of Fielding. . . As the novelist gets into his story, whatever of artificiality may have lain in this insistency of manner, evaporates. The good qualities remain—a keenness for the point of the book (though there is no inartistic intrusion of dogma), a vitality and charm of utterance that are remarkable, and an individuality and richness of material due to the fearless pulling into the narrative of anything from Aphrodite to advanced modern art of psychology or politics, as suits the author's mood. The novel is a strong, fresh wind in the stale-aired flat places of most modern fiction, confident phrase of song cutting across the monotone of its modern conversation." Frank Hill

ALDINGTON, RICHARD—Continued

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p28 S 29 '29 1850w

" 'Death of a Hero' is not disgusting. It is only dull, as one chord, however lovely, struck again and again in a symphony becomes dull. Repetition is the bane of art." B. B.

— + Boston Transcript p7 S 14 '29 700w

"The book would be more effective if we had only its last part, for that takes its place among the half dozen superb stories of the war that will not let men forget. Yet I should be sorry to miss the rest of the book, savage, often wrong-headed, and muddled though it is, for it is furiously alive." A. B. Parsons

+ — Nation 129:554 N 13 '29 550w

"Each of its disparate elements is presented with intense sincerity, ruthless directness, and a vigorous, magnificently sustained hatred of middle-class England which exalts the reader to the point of full participation in the author's contempt. As polemic, the War has given us nothing more stirring than this novel, to which the reader surrenders himself with gratitude for its power; but the novel lacks a certain catalysis which alone might fuse its elements into a whole that would stand as the truth." L: Galantière

+ New Repub 60:356 N 13 '29 1050w

"Death of a Hero is probably the most uneven and, at moments, the most disappointing novel published this month; it is also one of the hardest to ignore." P. Q.

— New Statesman 33:781 O 5 '29 550w

"As a novel it is misshapen and shrill with invective. As a picture of war through more civilized eyes than Junger's it is lacerating. . . Mr. Aldington's disgust with the world drives him to yawping that frequently is indiscriminate. He yawps at the modern women; he yawps at the women of the Victorian era. He recognizes beauty in wind, sky, sea and heath, and his descriptions thereof have a legato loveliness. As for the rest of the world, he proclaims that it needs its mind and mouth scrubbed with soap and sand. So, for that matter, does Mr. Aldington, his publishers seeking refuge from his forthrightness in long strings of asterisks." F: F. Van de Water

— N Y Evening Post p7m S 28 '29 370w

N Y Times p8 Ag 25 '29 850w

"As an antidote to the smug self-forgiveness of those of us who are trying to live down the war in this sentimental manner, I recommend 'Death of a Hero,' by Richard Aldington." C: H. Gray

+ Portland Evening News p15 S 24 '29 540w

"Mr. Aldington's judgment is so unbalanced that the very power and keenness of his mind become weapons that turn in his hand and injure his own cause. The onslaught on the middle classes with which the book opens is so grotesquely unfair, and the characters selected to illustrate it so exaggerated, that in spite of many palpable hits and isolated successes, as a whole it fails completely." L. P. Hartley

— + Sat R 148:396 O 5 '29 420w

"Here is an extraordinary, bitter, feverish, wrong-headed, and yet—in spite of everything—somehow noble book." L. W. Dodd

— + Sat R of Lit 6:232 O 12 '29 1200w

"I am very tired of this plague of War books, but Mr. Aldington's account of George's service in France, held me to its tragic end. Those last hundred odd pages are a grim and exciting piece of first-class narrative writing." V. S. Pritchett

+ — Spec 143:418 S 28 '29 280w

"It has notable qualities; on the other hand, there are things in it which are repulsive, and others which are merely dull. There are frequent passages of rhetoric, written in the first person and having very little to do with the narrative, which, while they are occasionally forceful, are frequently insipid or grotesque. It has been said that if an artist once conceives of a great theme, and embodies it in a simple and direct plot, the resulting work cannot be other than good. Mr Aldington's theme is undoubtedly one of the greatest for the present generation, and the main outlines of its development are clear, vigorous, and yet subtle. But one questions the application of the dictum, not because of the details of the story, but because of these unrelated diatribes." H. K.

— + Springf'd Republican p7e S 8 '29 720w

"I know of no novel that seems to me more enlightening as an explanation—not a vindication—of what the elders are likely to consider the laissez-faire frivolity and cynicism of the 'lost generation,' the generation who reached maturity when the world was at war." Mary Ross

+ Survey 63:164 N 1 '29 380w

" 'Death of a Hero' remains aloof from the competition of technical fiction. If here and there it labours a little under some descriptive or sociological evolution, the whole note and energy nevertheless emerge with impassioned directness. The author loses count of all lesser considerations while he speaks of the fate of that generation which paid so vast a price for the late War. . . The quality of Mr. Aldington's book is its indignation and study of revenge. We can scarcely even call him, in these pages, a satirist; his sense of intolerable wrong is something outside the art of gnomic condemnation."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p713 S 19 '29 1000w

ALDIS, DOROTHY (KEELEY) (MRS GRAHAM ALDIS). Jane's father. 142p il $2 Minton

29-19255

Jane's father was a very funny man. He looked like other fathers but he said "twop" instead of "stop," and his head wobbled, and he ate eggs-in-a-mess. Jane and her mother had a hard time curing Jane's father of his bad habits.

---

Cleveland Open Shelf p159 D '29

"Mrs. Aldis's prose lacks the charm and spontaneity of her verse, but this amusing tale of Jane's irresponsible father has many elements which will find an echo in families everywhere."

+ N Y World p11m N 24 '29 30w

"Children's books that intend to be funny are often very hard to bear. Dorothy Aldis, however, exhibits a bubbling sense of humor that carries her straight through the book. . . It's all quite hilarious and jolly and will appeal to any small person from six up."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:544 D 7 '29 120w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 19 '29 100w

ALDRICH, DARRAGH. Peter Good for Nothing. 351p $2 Macmillan

29-7070

A story of love and jealousy in a Minnesota logging camp. Peter Good for Nothing, a big, sunny-natured French Canadian, comes to camp and falls in love with the owner's daughter. A sly and unscrupulous rival for the girl's hand casts suspicion and discredit on Peter who, nevertheless, turns out very much of a hero.

---

"The picturesque figure of Pierre Bonarien strides into the story and gives it an excuse for being. Full of vitality, imaginative intelligence, with his exuberant French-English fresh from the backwoods of 'Canadah,' he carries the narrative from beginning to end by the strength of his personality. The love story is somewhat banal, although Peggy, the casual and adventurous modern young thing, is a likable person."

+ — N Y Times p19 Ap 21 '29 180w
Outlook 151:556 Ap 3 '29 20w
Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 7 '29 200w
Wis Lib Bul 25:195 Je '29

ALDRICH, RICHARD. Musical discourse from the New York Times. 304p $3 (12s 6d) Oxford

780.4 Music—Addresses, essays, lectures [28-29515]

A collection of sixteen essays about musicians and musical history, reprinted mainly from the New York Times. Contents: Programme music; Folk-songs in America; At the back of some dedications; Wagner and Brahms on each other; The beggar's opera; Shakespeare and music; The modernizing of Bach; Usurpations of the ballet; Schumann's children; Berlioz to-day; Camille Saint-Saëns; Jenny Lind and Barnum; Adelina Patti in America; Franz Kneisel; Henry Edward Krehbiel; Theodore Thomas.

---

Booklist 25:238 Mr '29

"These essays are scholarly, thorough in scope and of potential value and interest to the inhabitant of the musical world."

+ Bookm 69:xxii Jl '29 110w

"The subject is an old one, but rarely has it been treated with so much good sense and pleasant wit." P: Bowdoin

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 My 19 '29 480w

"A delightful volume, which is not too technical for the layman and is at the same time valuable for the musician."

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 17 '28 230w

"Always he is a man of the world, temperate, courteous and urbane; a civilized amateur whose love and understanding of music are none the less profound for being quietly expressed." Deems Taylor

+ N Y Times p8 F 17 '29 1200w

"Some of Mr Aldrich's subjects seem far from the hurlyburly of musical modernism, but the music lover may well be grateful for the quiet, suggestive or informative consideration of older subjects. Mr Aldrich's papers are not for the most part examples of serious musical analysis or criticism. They are largely excursions in memory or musical history."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 16 '29 450w

"Charmingly written and also very scholarly pages."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p927 N 29 '28 450w

ALEXANDER, grand duke of Russia. Religion of love; tr. by Jean S. Proctor. 310p $2 Century

201 Religion—Philosophy. Spiritual life. Soul 29-9636

"The author of this book is one of the grandsons of Nicholas of Russia. The Bolshevist revolution stripped him of the wealth, the position and the power which heredity had generously heaped upon him, and thereupon escaping to a friendly country, he became deeply interested in his soul. In the dozen years since then he has developed the philosophy of the religion which he embodies in this little book."—N Y Times

---

"He sometimes assumes that the mere dogmatic statement of a theory will insure its acceptance, and his definition of terms is not invariably clarifying. Despite all that, however, the author deserves recognition as an earnest seeker after truth, animated by a sincere desire 'to allow God to reign in the human soul.' "

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 9 '29 150w

"Together with a certain amount of rather fantastic detail, the book contains not only a lofty thesis and many wise admonitions but a real system of religious thought issuing from a thoroughgoing application of the principle that people not merely have, but are, souls."

+ — Christian Century 46:1040 Ag 21 '29 130w

"In some respects it suggests Tolstoy's philosophy of life, as if part of its inspiration might have come from study of his later works. But it is narrower, less rich, less mundane, more theoretical and far less concerned with the conception of service."

— + N Y Times p18 Ag 25 '29 300w
St Louis 27:280 O '29
Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 13 '29 210w

ALEXANDER, HARTLEY BURR. Truth and the faith; an interpretation of Christianity. 313p $3 Holt

239 Faith. Christianity 29-14367

Dr Alexander bears eloquent witness to a living and transforming spiritual faith which to him is as valid as the faith which springs from belief in the purely physical and rational. The faith of which he writes is the Christian faith and his quest is for what is most real and noble in that faith.

---

"It is the first duty of a reviewer to pay homage to his splendor of conviction and magnificence of sincerity. Many an author is buried in the dust of his own book. This book quivers with the life that produced it. . . It is with regret that one has to notice a few acts of violence done upon English usage. The style certainly is not a simple one. But it has pages that make us think of Pascal; and it has few pages that do not force us to recognize that standing before us is an eager, loving, hoping soul. Let that remain as its highest praise." W: L. Sullivan

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p32 S 29 '29 750w

Reviewed by Clarence Britten
N Y Evening Post p7m Jl 27 '29 420w

"The current divorcement between competent prose and mysticism makes this book of Professor Alexander's the more remarkable and the more welcome. Even though one may deny the truth of his contentions—which this reviewer for the most part does not wish to do—there is no denying that the man is an artist with words. The book, uniformly of a style fitted for perusal by civilized people, has in it here and there some of the most competent pages of prose writing of this year, or of several years back." B. I. Bell

+ Sat R of Lit 6:236 O 12 '29 720w

ALEXANDER, J. A. Life of George Chaffey; a story of irrigation beginnings in California and Australia; with a foreword by Stanley Melbourne Bruce, an introd. by Elwood Mead, and a chapter on the Imperial valley, by H. T. Cory. 382p il $10.50 (30s) Macmillan

B or 92 Chaffey, George. Irrigation [29-10073]

Many years ago a Canadian boy dreamed of making waste places fertile. Today an old man of eighty looks out on the fulfilment of his dream. The story of the years between when George Chaffey organized and carried out his great irrigation projects in Australia and southern California is interestingly told in these pages.

---

"Mr. Alexander has shown us by means of biography both the history and the romance of the irrigation situation, though at times the grim realities seem to shut off the horizon of romance. He makes us appreciate that the beauty and fertility of large tracts of land have taken their toll in the energy and enthusiasm of men,—particularly of George Chaffey. It is Mr. Chaffey's own personality rather than anything Mr. Alexander has said about him, however, which makes him a hero." R. R. M.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 15 '29 350w

"For the general reader, even restricting that term to those interested in land reclamation and settlement, the book is overdetailed; but judicious skipping of local and family details is easily possible, while those who wish for the details will be glad of the opportunity to select such of them as they desire."

ALEXANDER, J. A.—Continued
+ — Eng N 103:110 Jl 18 '29 420w

"Mr. Alexander has had everything in his favour—subject, material, auspices; if he could have kept his hero-worship under control and spared us most of the bitter details of controversies long past and best forgotten, he might have given us a narrative of very great interest and importance. As it is, we have to disentangle from a plethora of railing accusations, no less fiercely rebutted, the essential facts of George Chaffey's remarkable and public-spirited career."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p614 Ag 8 '29 960w

ALFORD, LEON PRATT. Laws of management applied to manufacturing. 266p $4 Ronald

658.5 Factory management. Efficiency, Industrial 28-24173

"Just as the progress of science advanced when basic laws were discovered and formulated, so has the success of management been promoted by adherence to fundamental principles. Mr. Alford has gathered together data from all available sources, and expressed these principles in the form of laws. Some of these he offers merely as established facts, based upon years of practice. Others he supports by corollaries and substantial proof. Still others are stated with the exactness of a mathematical formula."—Chem & Met Eng

"The chief merit of the book is bringing together in one place and under a logical classification most of the principles which have been applied in management." C: B. Gordy
+ Am Econ R 19:460 S '29 320w

Booklist 25:347 Je '29

"The book should be of value to anyone who regards himself as a productive agent, whether he be a manufacturer or office manager, gang foreman, contractor—any entrepreneur."
+ Boston Transcript p7 Je 29 '29 220w

"One of the distinctive impressions of the book, as a whole, is its readability. The presentation is semi-popular, and strictly technical terms are omitted as far as possible. One experiences a feeling of confidence in the author and his knowledge of the subject. He is frank to state where facts leave off and theories begin. The text is replete with references to the work of nearly everyone worth mentioning who has contributed to this important field." W. S. Landes
+ Chem & Met Eng 35:757 D '28 500w

ALLEE, MARJORIE (HILL) (MRS WARDER CLYDE ALLEE). Susanna and Tristram. 220p il $2 Houghton

29-19257

A brave sixteen-year-old Quaker girl gets into many difficulties in her attempts to help out an elderly relative known as the president of the Underground railway. With a courage and a determination far beyond her years she sticks to her job and succeeds in a daring rescue which even her elders could not manage.

Booklist 26:74 N '29

"Marjorie Hill Allee has made a fine, vigorous story of Susanna and Tristram, a story written about a period and an episode of our history seldom touched by writers for boys and girls. . . There is a ripeness to this book that shows the author's love for the subject and the people she has created, many of whom actually lived." Jacqueline Overton
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 17 '29 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p159 D '29

"Girls who react with a sense of personal glory to tales of heroism and courage on the part of other girls will like reading about Susanna Coffin. There are some grueling experiences which will not detract from the book's appeal, and some weird methods of escape are depicted." M. G. Bonner
+ N Y Times p12 D 15 '29 120w

Reviewed by O. M. Fuller
N Y World p11m D 8 '29 50w

St Louis 27:315 N '29

Reviewed by Catherine Woodbridge
Sat R of Lit 6:492 N 30 '29 100w

ALLEN, CECIL JOHN. Steel highway. 2 pts in 1 132,144p $2.25 (6s) Longmans

625 Railroads. Locomotives 28-23447

An interesting account of the British railroads, of difficult feats of railway engineering the world over, and of the building and design of locomotives. The book is copiously illustrated, including a few plates in color, and tho American railroading is not altogether neglected, it will be of special interest to British youth for whom it was written.

"This book could have been produced nowhere but in England. It is a book about trains, tracks and travel, but obviously by an adult for adult consumption. It is a well-written, if plain-spoken, account of railroads and how they are run, in the language of the layman. While most of it is concerned with British practice, the author has also drawn freely of material from other countries—especially the United States." Evans Clark
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 10 '29 300w

"The author's writing is too fluffy and wordy; young people interested in trains prefer to have letterpress like the best machines—severely economical."
— New Statesman 32:100 O 27 '28 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:12 Ja '29

St Louis 27:50 F '29

ALLEN, DEVERE, ed. Pacifism in the modern world. 278p $2 Doubleday, Doran

172.4 Peace 29-19444

A symposium on pacifism introduced with a historical essay by Devere Allen. Contents: Pacifism old and new, by Devere Allen; The meaning of pacifism, by Paul Jones; The use of force, by Reinhold Niebuhr; The background of goodwill, by C: A. Ellwood; Overcoming evil, by R. M. Jones; The new white man, by Devere Allen; "Relaxation" and race conflict, by Howard Thurman; Pacifism and the criminal, by R. N. Baldwin; Pacifism and class war, by A. J. Muste; Pacifism and social injustice, by G: L. Collins; Does noncoöperation work? by A. F. Brockway; Pacifism and international police, by Kirby Page; The quest for national security, by J: N. Sayre; Pacifism and patriotism, by H. C. Engelbrecht; War resistance as war prevention, by Devere Allen; Pacifism and the state, by Bruce Curry; Nationalism and the new age, by Rabindranath Tagore; Shifting the national mind-set, by G: A. Coe; Planting peace among the children, by S. N. Cleghorn; Pacifism in personal relations, by J: H. Holmes; Can pacifism grow? by Goodwin Watson; Life's bread and wine, by E. M. Root.

"The book serves a useful purpose by bringing out problems of statesmanship and ethics which must be further elucidated by more intensive and systematic study." Bruno Lasker
+ — Survey 63:192 N 1 '29 360w

" 'Once a war is imminent there are no real facts accessible. . . . The only time when a rational being can determine scientifically his attitude to war is now.' In these words, taken not from his preface but from his article (p. 179), the editor, Devere Allen, gives the supreme justification for publishing Pacifism in the Modern World. . . Taking the volume as a whole it is delightfully free both from overstatement and from that imputation to the adversary of wrongheadedness and wrongheartedness, faults which too often have marred the propaganda of peace as of other good causes." H: T. Hodgkin
+ World Tomorrow 12:471 N '29 1350w

ALLEN, ELMER L. Model airplanes; how to build and fly them. 326p il $3.50 Stokes

629.18 Airplanes—Models 28-22549

This book, recommended by the Boy Scouts of America tells how to make model airplanes for racing, and how to make replicas of many famous planes, among them the Curtiss "Jennies," the Fokker tri-motor, and the Spirit of St Louis. The opening chapters explain the necessary first principles of airplane construction and flight, and thruout the text, the diagrams are abundant and clear.

---

Booklist 25:169 Ja '29

"Useful in the actual construction of a model." C. D. Lunt

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 F 3 '29 30w

Boston Transcript p8 D 20 '28 80w

Cleveland Open Shelf p79 My '29

N Y New Tech Bks 14:3 Ja '29

Pratt p17 winter '29

St Louis 2?:381 D '28

"Fills its purpose admirably and is minute in its detail. A model builder, with care in following the instructions and very numerous full-scale patterns for templates, should produce flying models with all of the beauty and grace of their larger counterparts."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:497 D 8 '28 100w

Wis Lib Bul 25:70 F '29

ALLEN, HERVEY. New legends. 168p $2 Farrar & Rinehart

811 29-21084

A collection of seven long narrative poems, some of which have been previously printed, such as "Sarah Simon"; and a selection of short lyrics. The writing of these poems has ranged over a period of five years, and they comprise Mr Allen's fourth volume of verse.

---

"Mr. Allen's work is not limited to a specific locale, nor are the themes he chooses confined to a specific subject-matter. Neither has he found it necessary to employ the trick of unique verse-form underslung with jazz-and-machine-age diction to advertise the merits of his verse. He is not ashamed to stand quietly and soundly upon the foundation of an older tradition; he erects, thereby, certain limitations, but he attempts neither to force nor to disguise them."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p32 D 1 '29 500w

Boston Transcript p10 N 30 '29 500w

"Hervey Allen's poetry is unnervous, unsensitive to any newer or sharper lyric values. It displays facility and metaphorical abundance, but only in a tone that caps the theme. One of the author's incidental phrases, 'sweet kickshaws,' describes his work. If you have an appetite for 'sweet kickshaws,' you will enjoy 'New Legends.'" J. T. Farrell

N Y Evening Post p11m O 19 '29 700w

"In these lines Hervey Allen has gone to the root of the poetic method of those whose work has withstood the impact of time. And in his own numerous attempts to objectify imaginatively that which he has subjectively perceived he has attained impressive results."

+ N Y Times p35 O 27 '29 280w

"The most ambitious poem in the book is 'Sarah Simon,' a long narrative in blank verse, and here we find sound characterization, appealing imagery and smooth lines. Mr. Allen does not find it necessary to create an original and difficult diction to express his perceptions, but he is agreeably facile in his treatment of his chosen themes." Granville Hicks

+ — N Y World p11m O 20 '29 230w

"When a man dedicates himself to poetry (no kindly mistress), as Mr. Allen has done, to the revealing of beauty and significance in the so often seemingly chaotic flux of life, it is an ungracious thing, since he has given of his best, and given so much that is excellent, to hesitate over whole-hearted praise. But for all his notable gifts, for all his earnestness, Mr. Allen has yet to achieve a truly individualized and memorable poetic style—that slight, quintessential difference in the choice and ordering of words which marks off the poets (major or minor, it matters not) whom we perforce remember." L. W. Dodd

+ — Yale R n s 19:391 winter '30 200w

ALLEN, HERVEY. Sarah Simon, character Atlantean. ltd autog ed 72p $10 Doubleday, Doran

811 29-10774

A long narrative poem the heroine of which, Sarah, is a native of some tropical island. "Sarah is brought, in her youth, into various relations with the white Northerners; loses her first husband, a fisherman, in a hurricane; rescues a young Cornish sailor during the aftermath of another storm at sea, and, keeping him with her as mate 'without benefit of clergy,' bears him three half-breed children; is deserted by him, and left to bring up the three children alone; is finally robbed by them, when they are grown up, of all her possessions, and is left wholly solitary for the rest of a life which is represented in the poem as having reached the far boundary of ninety years." (Books [N Y Herald Tribune])

---

"'Sarah Simon' is a welcome successor to 'Earth Moods,' and demonstrates that Mr. Allen can hold the flight he launched in the best parts of that book—with the exception, I think, of the fine poem, 'Funeral at High Tide.'" Newton Arvin

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 My 12 '29 700w

"'Sarah Simon' is enjoyable poetry. One signal advantage is that it offers us poetry without poeticism. The right adjective for Mr. Allen's poetry is not so much high or sweet or flexible as sound. He often gets the right word, and he handles this right word with an unpretending authority, a careless proprietorship, which marks the robust and unaffected writer." O. W. Firkins

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1189 Jl 20 '29 660w

ALLEN, JOHN WILLIAM. History of political thought in the sixteenth century. 525p $6 Dial press [21s Methuen]

320.9 Political science—History. Reformation. Church and state. State, The 28-30763

Mr Allen, formerly professor of history in the University of London, has based this history of political thought in the sixteenth century on a close study of contemporary sources. He devotes the first section to Lutheranism and Calvinism, and following sections to England, France and Italy.

---

"This is an altogether admirable book. . . Here is a man who reads all the authors for himself, looks at them with his own eyes, and has tried first of all to understand them, to see what they aim at, and not to use them to point morals or enforce existing theories or to fit into some prearranged scheme." A. D. Lindsay

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:755 Ag '29 1100w

"Particular attention should be called to a brilliant chapter on Machiavelli, and to the admirable expositions of the views of Richard Hooker and of his Continental peer, Jean Bodin."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 Je 9 '29 180w

"The author commands an amazing mass of erudition of which he is so thoroughly the master that he moves easily and gracefully under its burden, and he presents his materials in a style of great charm and clarity."

+ Christian Century 46:1250 O 9 '29 200w

"This remarkable work, both by its learning and its capacity in the exposition of complex

ALLEN, J: W:—Continued
ideas, does honour to English scholarship. . . The only grave defect is the absence of a full treatment of the Spanish writers." H. J. Laski
+ Eng Hist R 44:469 Jl '29 930w

"If Mr. Allen's book does nothing else, it seems clear that it will compel a more reasonable approach to the political science of a century when religion and politics were so nearly inseparable. It should become the standard short work of reference for students of modern European political thought, and for them it will throw some useful beams of light into the centuries after the sixteenth. . . The style is lively, and highly personal, and the matter proceeds from broad and accurate scholarship."
+ Hist Outlook 20:300 O '29 430w

"Professor Allen's book is the mature result of many years of affectionate brooding, the product of a mind which has always been absorbed in the history of ideas." Kingsley Martin
+ Nation and Ath 44:472 D 29 '28 350w

"There are some pages in this rather formidable looking volume which are simply the very best kind of talk and there is not one on which something shrewd and sensible is not said. Mr. Allen never gets angry and very seldom lets himself go, but one could not wish for a safer or more stimulating guide over his chosen field."
+ New Statesman 32:132 N 3 '28 750w

"On the whole admirably impartial, indeed sometimes almost exaggeratedly sceptical, this large and learned book has one very obvious merit and one very obvious defect. Its merit is to give a fairly full and detailed treatment of the less well-known writers and thinkers of the period as well as of the outstanding figures, of Castellion, Coornhert and Paruta as well as of Luther, Calvin, Machiavelli and Bodin. The defect is that, apart from incidental references, the great Spanish thinkers are omitted."
+ — Sat R 146:475 O 13 '28 550w

"It is solidly based on an examination of the sixteenth-century ecclesiastics and philosophers whose debates are far from having lost their practical importance; it is admirably written; and it is dispassionate."
+ Spec 142:209 F 9 '29 170w

"A learned and conscientious survey of some of the most important elements in the political thought of the sixteenth century."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p789 N 1 '28 1500w

ALLEN, WILLIAM CHARLES. War! behind the smoke screen. 192p $1.50 Winston 940.488 War. European war, 1914-1918—Propaganda
29-21374

An effective indictment of the whole war system and the people who are responsible for it. Mr Allen shows how hate-creating propaganda is manufactured and how the truth is withheld by means of the censorship. Various other deceptions practiced in war time are described, also the churches' share in the sins of governments.

---

"Here is a small volume developed by means of anecdote and the citing of war stories, treated from the viewpoint of the churchman and student of social affairs. Sincere and idealistic, it is not, however, comprehensive or penetrating. As an indictment of war and its many evils it is convincing, but neither original nor now, it is to be hoped, necessary."
+ — Boston Transcript p5 Jl 20 '29 90w

"The author has evidently travelled widely, lived long, and thought deeply. Out of his extensive knowledge he has put together a more or less patchy book." Duane Squires
Hist Outlook 21:34 Ja '30 170w

"The book is popular in style and contains much illustrative material. It makes no pretense of being constructive and offers no solutions or remedies. It is exclusively devoted to analysis."
World Tomorrow 12:378 S '29 50w

ALLIER, RAOUL SCIPION PHILIPPE. Mind of the savage; tr. by Fred Rothwell. 301p $3.75 Harcourt [15s Bell, G.]
572.7 Savages. Ethnopsychology. Magic 29-22416

"M. Allier is a notable representative of French Protestantism, being professor of Protestant Theology in Paris. He has for thirty years been concerned practically with the problems of mission work, particularly in French Africa and Madagascar. Allier deals specifically with the dominant place in uncivilized life of magic and the practice of sorcery. . . The point of his argument is that magic, wherever found, represents a surrender of the effort to solve problems, and a giving of oneself into the hands of occult powers capable of being influenced by talismanic methods. Magic, therefore, means mental arrest and moral deterioration."—New Repub

---

"This book, by the aged Doyen of the Faculty of Protestant Theology at Paris, is in reality merely a rationalization for 'carrying the Gospel to the heathen'. As the author's discussion of magic proceeds, the hidden Ethiopian emerges from the word-pile and one becomes conscious of the fact that the book is propaganda." B. J. Stern
— Bookm 70:219 O '29 660w

Reviewed by Ruth Benedict
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 S 15 '29 580w

"Uncivilized types of man, viewed from somewhat different angles, get ample illustration in these informing volumes, both of them based on ample acquaintance with anthropological and folk-lore literature."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 31 '29 470w

"M. Allier has ingeniously identified the anthropologist's concept with the theologian's, and on that basis he resurrects an old self-flattering thesis that primitive people are retarded, or fallen." Anita Brenner
Nation 129:553 N 13 '29 550w

"The book is written with the usual Gallic lucidity, and well translated. It is most readable, although one would like to see conclusions stated categorically instead of having to be found by inference from a sometimes labored mass of arguments. One feels that there is perhaps too much reinforcement of the old self-assured view that the uncivilized are poor benighted heathen whom it is our duty to save. On the other hand, it is a corrective to the theory of the untouchable sanctity of primitive cultures in a world of unavoidable racial contacts." J. W. Slaughter
+ — New Repub 60:129 S 18 '29 700w

"We are now beginning to see dimly that the savage is neither god nor beast, but a man after all; and that it is worth while to try to analyse his mind in the only terms which can have any meaning for us—that is, in terms of our own. This is the purpose of the present work by a French Protestant theologian, who thus brings a much-needed philosophical and psychological insight to the discussion."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p789 O 10 '29 820w

ALLINGHAM, MARGERY. Black Dudley murder (Eng title Crime at Black Dudley). 269p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Jarrolds]
29-8653

During a house party at Black Dudley someone suggests the revival of an old family ritual —the passing, from hand to hand in the dark, of the Black Dudley dagger. Sometime during the ritual the head of the house is stabbed in the back. The house party finds itself in the control of a criminal gang. One shock follows another till Albert Campion, who is not such a fool as he looks, outwits the Master mind.

---

"Miss Allingham's stage settings are rather too obvious and her treatment of poor verisimilitude too sketchy to evoke much illusion in this Suffolk nightmare." Will Cuppy

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Mr 24 '29 100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p209 Mr 14 '29 230w

ALTENBURG, EDGAR. How we inherit. 273p il $3; students ed $2.40 Holt

575.1 Heredity 28-12977

A very clear statement, for the person of non-scientific training, of the laws of heredity. There are chapters on Reproduction, Inheritance as seen through the microscope, Mutation, Twinning, etc.

---

"It is possible to recommend this book to the public for two reasons: it represents simply and clearly the essentials of genetics with their bearing on questions of general interest, and it is cautious, reliable and up-to-date." H. M. Parshley
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 18 '28 300w

"Professor Altenburg's work comes at an opportune time, and will be read with profit by many. The author is careful to include all the substantiated recent discoveries, at the same time avoiding the yet controversial and unestablished theories of recent interest."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 18 '28 120w
Pratt p13 spring '29
St Louis 26:350 N '28

"Professor Altenburg of Rice Institute has succeeded admirably in telling how we inherit in terms so simple that the reader without previous training in biology can understand the process as it is understood by students of genetics to-day."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:842 Mr 30 '29 250w

AM I getting an education? by George A. Coe, and others; [ed. by Sherwood Eddy]. 92p $1 Doubleday, Doran

370.1 Education, Higher. United States—Intellectual life 29-9200

A presentation and criticism of the educational methods employed in American colleges and universities, in a series of essays by seven educators or lecturers. Contents: By-products of the college classroom, by G: A. Coe; How to acquire a love of good reading, by W: L. Phelps; A student looks at education, by Paul Porter; The meaning of education, by F. D. Slutz; Soviet education, by J: Dewey; A constructive criticism of modern education, by J. S. Wilson; Am I getting an education? by Sherwood Eddy.

---

Booklist 25:378 Jl '29

"Seven educators seek to answer this question as it relates to the functioning of the American college and university of the present day. They differ in their approach to the subject and in their appraisal of certain details, but they are strikingly unanimous in their major conclusions."
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Je 9 '29 150w
Cleveland Open Shelf p117 S '29
St Louis 27:306 N '29
Survey 62:381 Je 15 '29 30w

AMERICAN ACADEMY OF POLITICAL AND SOCIAL SCIENCE. American Negro; ed. in charge of this volume, Donald Young. (Annals) 359p il pa $2 The academy

326 Negroes. United States—Race question. Race problems 28-29716

"The book consists of forty articles written by experts, some of whom are white and some negro, each discussing a different aspect of the life of the negro. The collection is edited and the foreword written by Donald Young, Assistant Professor of Sociology in the University of Pennsylvania, who says, however, that the chief credit should go to Charles S. Johnson, chairman of the Advisory Editorial Committee." --N Y Times

---

"The fact that this volume does contain a number of papers which can be termed scientific is in itself significant." M. J. Herskovits
+ Am Anthropol 31:526 Jl '29 900w
Booklist 25:307 My '29
Bookm 69:x Je '29 180w

"To one interested in sociology, in inter-racial problems and especially in the future of the negro in America, this will be an absorbing book." Dorothy Scarborough
N Y Times p5 Ja 13 '29 1750w

Reviewed by H. W. Odum
Sat R of Lit 6:2 Jl 27 '29 600w

"The range of this volume is exceptionally wide—the legal, political, economic, educational and cultural aspects all receive somewhat proportionate treatment, race relations are adequately discussed from angles both of theory and practice, and an admirable section on the international bearings of the race question illuminatingly widens the usual perspective on our national problem. The New Negro movement and the recent cultural advance of the Negro are given careful analysis, and a well-balanced picture is achieved by dividing the studies almost equally between white and Negro experts and by reflecting both northern and southern liberal thought on the race question." Alain Locke
+ Survey 61:689 F 15 '29 380w

AMERICAN caravan, New; a yearbook of American literature; ed. by Alfred Kreymborg, Lewis Mumford, Paul Rosenfeld. 465p $3.50 Macaulay

810.8 American literature—Collections (27-19157)

The third American caravan continues the policies of the first two volumes and contains work of both well-known and unknown authors. There are short biographical notes about the contributors.

---

"The new Caravan hardly ever lets us down by crude or dull gray writing (as it has in the past) but keeps us almost continuously delighted (even if most of the time we are not seriously impressed)." G. B. Munson
+ — Bookm 70:100 S '29 1100w

"The things one will remember, I think, are the stories by Erskine Caldwell, Robert Cantwell, Gerald Sykes, and others who up to this moment, so far as I am aware, have been unknown. And what stories! What utter abandon of material and technique, what callousness in the face of madness and perversion, what expertness in the handling of obliquities! There is much foolish talk of the generations, and there always has been; yet in this case an older generation has reason, not by any means to complain, for what they get here is powerful and amusing, but to exclaim at the sudden issuing forth of talent from a cave." Mark Van Doren
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 O 27 '29 680w

"This, the third issue of a praiseworthy undertaking, comes as a distinct disappointment after the first and second issues. For one thing, the actual material has been cut down by at least a third, possibly more. . . The verse is on a much higher plane than the prose; on the whole, it is skillful and deeply felt." C. P. Fadiman
— + Nation 129:684 D 4 '29 600w

"The volume as a whole has a unity which is difficult to overlook and even more difficult to define. It involves no sacrifice of individuality by the separate authors; they differ widely among themselves, but they belong unmistakably to one country, to one period of history, and most of them to one period of life. . . In the realm of ideas, they are of the generation which recognizes that esthetic and moral principles are closely allied and that both of them must be transplanted into action." Malcolm Cowley

AMERICAN caravan, New—Continued

+ New Repub 60:326 N 6 '29 1680w

"The dominant impression that one gains from this third 'American Caravan' is that young America in literature is feeling its way along, working with no positive energizing concepts. . . The authors of the Caravan have not been presented with the spectacle of people choosing between good and evil and with the drama that grows out of the attempt to make the choice effective. But the fact that Mr. Winters writes as he does is at least a hopeful straw in the wind." J: Chamberlain

— + N Y Times p5 N 10 '29 800w

"To me 'The New American Caravan' is a distinct disappointment. The prose on the whole is dull and lifeless, and most of the poetry is undistinguished. But there are striking exceptions to this judgment. There are several things in this volume which more than compensate for the general average. And if 'The New Caravan' had published nothing else, its existence would be justified if only for bringing to light these marked and heretofore unknown talents. The two most distinguished prose pieces in the volume are those by Erskine Caldwell and William Rollins, jr. One should not be surprised to learn that the most impressive poetry in the volume has been contributed by Isidor Schneider and Stanley J. Kunitz." Arthur Strawn

— + N Y World p11m N 24 '29 500w

"Given the unusual opportunity of selecting material for such a book, the editors have had a natural tendency (in their anxiety to present an accurate picture of transition) to mistake the exotic for that which is simply and definitely new. That often happens in The New Caravan, and it unfortunately prejudices the general impression of the volume. . . Most of the fiction has a subjective quality which makes it considerably more like an article or a scientific report than a human interest story. The poetry is better; in many instances it is remarkably good. Here, too, we find self-pity and morbidity, the most common manifestations of the restless uncertainty which is the keynote of the modern tendency in literature."

— + Outlook 153:27 S 4 '29 630w

"A mildly exciting pinwheel, not without force and momentum, but restricted to a narrow radius and illuminating for only a moment one corner of the native scene. It is a relief to discover, for one thing, that the hard-boiled fad is passing. Nothing of the Hemingway school is to be found in this volume; the editors have had the foresight to deflect its movement toward other goals. They have uncovered this year nothing sensational. What one finds instead is sincere, self-critical writing, wrought out of sweat and whipped-up nerves; the concentration is all upon varying and individual conceptions of what constitutes first-rate prose and poetry." Horace Coon

+ Sat R of Lit 6:508 D 7 '29 750w

"This year's 'American Caravan' will make it harder than ever to welcome future issues—if any. Some of the sketches, or short stories, represent nothing but dull juvenile pornography, while a contribution by E. E. Cummings represents nothing but dull literary perversity. Fortunately some of the stories have greater interest and merit. The verse contributions are mostly in free verse forms, but reveal a soldier conception of workmanship than the prose. The critical essays are undistinguished."

— Springf'd Republican p7e O 13 '29 230w

AMES, EDWARD SCRIBNER. Religion. 324p $3 Holt

201 Religion—Philosophy 29-6025

The author, professor of philosophy in the University of Chicago, studies the nature of religion and of God in the light of the history of religion and social psychology. Religion is here viewed as a natural, social process growing out of the communal life of men. "Religion is in a confused state," Professor Ames writes, "because its conventional forms are still bound up with the values of the past, with submissive faith, other-worldliness, and the symbols which these have generated; while the newer interests of scientific knowledge, social welfare, and their appropriate symbolism have not yet sufficiently permeated the popular mind."

---

"Professor Ames has probably given us in this book the best single volume dealing with religion from a strictly scientific point of view. . . It should perhaps also be said in criticism of the book that it does not envisage religion explicitly enough as a phase of culture. The psychological point of view is adhered to somewhat closely, and the cultural standpoint is not always insisted upon. Nevertheless, this is a minor fault in a book which all sociologists who have not surrendered themselves to some fad of scientific method should welcome." C: A. Ellwood

+ — Am J Soc 35:321 S '29 820w

Booklist 25:343 Je '29

Reviewed by J: H. Holmes

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Je 16 '29 200w

"Poise in the midst of a perplexed and changing world is in this book. Here is one who has passed through the religious and social and moral unsettlement in which so many are struggling and has come out on the other side where there is peace and understanding. He can look at the facts revealed by modern knowledge and the dear old discarded illusions, see the whole in true perspective and feel that he is at home in the universe. And God is altogether sure." H: N. Wieman

+ Christian Century 46:391 Mr 21 '29 1550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p120 S '29

"This book is much more than the confession of faith of a single person and much more also than the platform of a church; it offers a clear analysis of what liberal Protestantism ought to be. . . There is a finality about this work which marks it as the most mature, if not the final, version which this type of religion has achieved. . . The value of the book lies not so much in its fresh contribution to the understanding of religion in general, as to its masterly presentation of a particular religion; the vitality of which cannot be questioned, when it has such able and devoted adherents." H. W. Schneider

+ J Philos 26:607 O 24 '29 2200w

"The layman will understand what the author is talking about, and will find himself relaxing from the muscle tensions which a theologian always seems capable of inducing in him. That the book was written for him is apparent from its almost total lack of footnote apparatus and from its easy-reading type. . . No one can gainsay the clarity, charm, and cogency with which it is written." E. E. Aubrey

+ J Religion 9:640 O '29 2200w

"One balks at Professor Ames's arguments, and yet one cannot fail to sympathize with his attempt to preserve the value of religion to society. The book pleads sincerely for social justice, for a spirit of brotherhood, for the development of the kind of character that will create a better type of civilization. Leave out the theological jargon, and there is little reason to object to the book." Granville Hicks

+ — Nation 129:123 Jl 31 '29 680w

"Professor Ames has done a piece of work which should have enduring consequences. He is not the first to bring religion and naturalism together; but we believe that he has done it more consistently and thoroughly than anyone else." H. N. Wieman

+ New Repub 59:44 My 22 '29 680w

Reviewed by H. F. Ward

N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 23 '29 450w

"They are volumes solid, scholarly and simple, and the layman who honors himself by becoming a reader will have no difficulty in appreciating what are the issues discussed." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 28 '29 1450w

"'Religion,' by Edward Scribner Ames, is brilliant in thought, beautiful in its English, commanding in that its author is a man of eminent scholarship, winsome personality, and radiant, persuasive religion. But on the whole the book is a disappointment. As a work of art, it is excellent. As a book on religion, inadequate." A. V. Bliss

+ — Portland Evening News p5 Je 18 '29 580w

St Louis 27:260 S '29

"A clear and readable popular presentation of a position that is held by many people in this country." D. V. Steere

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1162 Jl 6 '29 1050w

AMES, JOSEPH BUSHNELL. Bladed barrier. 393p $2 Century

29-17040

"This weird mystery-adventure romance is laid in the wilds of Lower California. Two young prospectors, down on their luck, chance upon a dying Mexican, mortally stabbed by unknown assassins. His expiring words and gift to them of a large unset emerald have an import which sends the two, joined now by a grizzled soldier of fortune, off on a perilous treasure-hunt in the uncharted depths of the Peninsula."—Sat R of Lit

---

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 S 15 '29 90w

"'The Bladed Barrier' is its author's last novel. It falls far below his earlier Westerns, for example, 'The Lone Hand,' and is an impossible farrago of blatantly incredible adventure." F. H. M.

— N Y Evening Post p7m S 7 '29 80w

"Though the sheerest hokum, we guarantee that the yarn will enthrall those who fancy horrors of a particularly bloodcurdling and nightmarish kind."

Sat R of Lit 6:140 S 14 '29 120w

AMES, VAN METER. Aesthetics of the novel. 221p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

808.3 Fiction. Esthetics 28-14834

"The novel is fast becoming the most important form of art; hence its deeper significance calls loudly for investigation by philosophers. Enquiry into its place among the other arts, into its peculiar beauty, into its function in life, can no longer wisely be avoided. Concerning all of these problems Mr. Ames has something interesting to say. He has given much thought to the underlying aesthetic principles, and his reflections are supported by a large and varied acquaintance with the best novels of England and America, France, Russia, and Spain."—Int J Ethics

---

"One might wish in this author's own literary method of expression a little more proof of that artistic felicity which it is his avowed purpose to investigate."

+ Dial 85:539 D '28 60w

"The book is delightfully written in a style at once picturesque and aphoristic. There are charming passages, and many memorable, quotable sentences. If the book has a fault it is that of too much profusion. But throughout one feels that the author has lived with novels as most people live only with men; and out of this intimate acquaintance has come a fine understanding." D. H. Parker

+ — Int J Ethics 39:111 O '28 700w

"We encounter here many topics, worthy in themselves, but extremely unexpected in this context. We are informed why we admire athletes, and incidentally are presented with Swinburne's ballade, complete, of Swimming. We are offered a number of parallel passages on education culled from the writings of Professor Dewey and Romain Rolland. Incidentally, we are told some of the reasons why we like to read fiction. But on the whole, considering the title of the book, relatively little is said about the æsthetics of the novel." H. H. Parkhurst

J Philos 26:26 Ja 3 '29 250w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:634 D '28

AMMERS-KULLER, JO VAN. House of Joy; a story of stage-life in Holland; tr. from the Dutch by H. van Wyhe. 284p $2.50 Dutton

29-26893

A teacher of literature living as paying guest in a shabby but distinguished old Dutch home, discovers promise of great talent in the drab little daughter of the house. The teacher arranges for her pupil's first appearance in public and becomes friend and mentor to the fledgling artist. With fear and misgiving she watches the progress of her protegée, thru dubious experiences, to stardom.

---

Booklist 26:69 N '29

"In view of the fact that the author's previously translated book, The Rebel Generation, proved so great a success, it would be pleasant to assert that The House of Joy is a worthy successor. This, however, is not the case. The House of Joy is a slighter and more specialized piece of fiction and, while it indubitably shows excellent workmanship, a sound sense of character and an understanding of the deeper springs of life, it has not the same wide appeal. It is interesting throughout, however, and the theme is well sustained."

+ — Bookm 70:203 O '29 380w

"The author just fails to focus clearly the images of the novel. . . The novel is readable. Jenny and her future provide an interest which stops annoyingly at the point where Jenny becomes most interesting."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Jl 21 '29 250w

"The evolution of Jenny is brilliantly, flawlessly presented. . . Dramatic tension is heightened through the device of telling the story from the point of view of a spinster, Jenny's schoolmistress and chaperone, who is idealistic and naive." M. L. S.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 27 '29 330w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p5 Ag 10 '29 120w

"One wonders a little if the members of all dramatic groups, even when they are wedded to art instead of to the box-office, are inevitably actuated by such petty jealousies as the characters in this book. But there is that about the tale which suggests that Jo van Ammers-Kuller knows whereof she speaks; no hint of affectation or pose is to be found in the book; it is as simply convincing as reality." G. A.

New Repub 60:81 S 4 '29 150w

"Van Ammers-Küller has done a highly concentrated piece of work. To the thinking of many, perhaps, too concentrated. . . Because of the fact that every human being harbors psychological contradictions 'The House of Joy' becomes a novel of more than stage life, and belongs to the world and not merely to Holland. The translation, it should be added, seems excellent."

+ — N Y Times p12 Jl 28 '29 580w

"Around the dying glory of the Heysten household a finely sensitive narrative might have been woven. As it is, we are obliged to tag after Jenny as she passes from one physical titillation to another. . . Notwithstanding, the account of the repertory theatre in Holland rings true in every detail. If you like a colorless and unadorned prose, Jo Van Ammers-Kuller's is what you want. There isn't a frill or furbelow anywhere. It is more like a clinical report than anything else." E. M. Benson

+ — Outlook 152:512 Jl 24 '29 180w

"Jenny is an extraordinarily convincing embodiment of her type, and the portraits of her keenly contrasted fellow-players are achieved with a touch no less masterly and revealing. In every essential the novel is a worthy successor to this author's notable 'The Rebel Generation,' and well deserves the attention of discriminating readers."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:64 Ag 17 '29 250w

AMMERS-KULLER, J. V.—Continued

"'The House of Joy' has both vitality and the glamour of backstage life to recommend it."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 8 '29 300w

AMMERS-KULLER, JO VAN. Rebel generation; tr. by M. W. Hoper. 387p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]

29-1965

A study of the revolt of women exemplified by three generations of a Dutch family, the Cornvelts. Beginning in 1840, the age of decorum and parental overlordship, progressing thru the generation which pioneered in freedom for women, the book ends in 1923 with the third generation of leisure and boredom.

Booklist 25:247 Mr '29

"She has presented the problem impersonally and objectively. She creates at all times a convincing atmosphere with her selective use of detail. Her survey of the three generations provokes thought, even though it seldom stirs the imagination." Jean Douglas

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 D 23 '28 1000w

"A sensitively discerning story, one to be read with thanksgiving that it was written." Frances Bartlett

+ Boston Transcript p2 D 22 '28 1750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p47 Mr '29

Reviewed by L. L. Irvine

Nation and Ath 44:556 Ja 19 '29 320w

"It is difficult not to admire the range and variety offered by the canvas of 'The Rebel Generation' and the author's ability to fix each generation indelibly in its time. Mrs. Van Ammers-Kuller's novel often resembles in its substantial characterizations of solid individuals that school of painting for which the Dutch are famous." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p9m D 22 '28 650w

"The author has considerable mental force and the power to develop her thesis logically and unflinchingly. What she needs as a writer is a greater measure of feminine caprice. But there is no weakness in the book: only a certain woodenness." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 147:116 Ja 26 '29 300w

"A solid foursquare sort of work."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:838 Mr 30 '29 130w

"The novel has considerable human understanding and pictorial strength."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '29 250w

"This is a delightful gallery of Dutch portraits, each woman in the group admirably distinct and alive. Mrs. van Ammers-Küller writes with authority, with wisdom and with an excellent sense of humour."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p78 Ja 31 '29 580w

Wis Lib Bul 25:75 F '29

"The author . . . depicts her characters vividly and sympathetically against an authentic background."

+ World Tomorrow 12:425 O '29 70w

AMORY, COPLEY, jr. Persian days. 230p il $4.50 Houghton [10s 6d Methuen]

915.5 Persia—Description and travel 29-26349

An informal record, in conversational style, of a four weeks' motor trip thru the interior of Persia, southward from Teheran. Illustrated from photographs taken en route. Mr Amory was formerly a member of the American legation at Teheran.

"There is one chapter in Mr. Amory's book that should have a definite appeal to many Americans without the desire for travel, even vicarious travel. That deals with the cherished and much sought Persian rug." A. B. Maurice

Bookm 69:xxii Ap '29 280w

"The book is dignified and accurate, but heavy-footed, literal, undistinguished." Vincent Sheehan

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 Mr 24 '29 200w

"He tells the story of their adventures delightfully, mingling sophistication, scientific interest and ingenuous enjoyment after an irresistible fashion. . . Seldom have been given such clear impressions of present-day Persia, or her complicated problems of existence so understandingly and hence tolerantly discussed." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 23 '29 500w

New Statesman 32:266 D 1 '28 120w

Reviewed by L. H. Titterton

N Y Evening Post p6m Je 22 '29 450w

N Y Times p12 Mr 24 '29 230w

Sat R of Lit 5:938 Ap 20 '29 130w

"Making all due allowance for the exigencies of diplomatic discretion, the book is nevertheless needlessly restricted in subject-matter, being concerned indeed, mainly, with the behaviour of 'Nanette,' the motor-car. It contains astonishingly little matter of any general interest, and is moreover, written in a perseveringly flippant conversational style most distressing to the reader. The photographs are, however, very good, though rather small."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p47 Ja 17 '29 80w

Wis Lib Bul 25:125 Ap '29

ANALYTICUS, pseud. See Wise, J. W.

ANDERSEN, KNUD. Brand of the sea [Havet]; tr. from the Danish by Grace Isabel Colbron. 314p $2.50 Century

29-4758

Reinar Graadyb loves the life of the sea. He has a sweetheart in Denmark and a fine friend for a shipmate, and these two help to keep him clear of the usual temptations of the sailor. But in Australia he succumbs to the wiles of a prostitute. As a result, on his return to Denmark he is forced to renounce forever the girl he truly loves.

"This is a wholly unusual sea story, for the adventure this time is more of the spirit; the vigorous action and varied personæ are there as well, a generous gift."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Mr 10 '29 180w

"The suggested romance leaves the reader untouched; it is artificial, secondary in interest, colorless. But the descriptions of the sea are masterly—so are the picture days ashore with their moral let-down—the strong sense of comradeship among members of a crew—the delight of the conquest of the storm-ridden waters."

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Ap 13 '29 280w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 15 '29 110w

ANDERSON, ISABEL WELD (PERKINS) (MRS LARZ ANDERSON). Circling South America. 214p il $4 Marshall Jones

918 South America—Description and travel 29-3432

"An informal account of a tour around South America on a cruise ship. The route passed thru the canal, down the west coast, thru the Straits of Magellan and back up the east coast. Well illustrated."—Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 25:243 Mr '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ap 21 '29 120w

"Mrs. Anderson says in her first chapter: 'Since there were a number of Daughters of the American Revolution on board a chapter was organized which met on repeated occasions for teas and for those discussions so dear to our hearts.' She's that kind of a lady. . . Her descriptions of the various South American peoples and the countryside read like an eighth grade geography text book." G: Joel

— N Y World p11m F 10 '29 100w

Sat R of Lit 5:650 F 2 '29 220w
Springf'd Republican p10 My 22 '29 100w
Wis Lib Bul 25:72 F '29

ANDERSON, LOU EASTWOOD. Basketball for women; with special reference to the training of teachers; with introd. by Frederick E. Bolton. 129p il $1.75 (5s); school ed $1.20 Macmillan

796.32 Baket ball 29-3173

A handbook on the science of basketball for women by an instructor in physical education of the University of Washington. It is designed as a textbook for teachers of physical education and for workers in community centers. With illustrations, diagrams, etc.

Booklist 25:312 My '29

"This is a very readable little treatise on basketball. The author combines the scientific and practical principles involved, expressing them with vividness and brevity."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 30 '29 120w
Cleveland Open Shelf p121 S '29
St Louis 27:201 Je '29

ANDERSON, MAXWELL, and HICKERSON, HAROLD. Gods of the lightning; [and] Outside looking in, by Maxwell Anderson. 187p $2.50 Longmans

812 29-1021

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:239 Mr '29

"Where the play fails is in establishing the two radicals as sympathetic characters and keeping their emotional appeal to the front. So much machinery is required to show them being 'framed' and then tried, so much attention paid to the net which snared them that they are lost as individuals. The theme, indeed, is too large for the drama to handle, unless the dramatists be of exceptional power." W. P. Eaton
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 F 17 '29 170w
Cleveland Open Shelf p137 N '29

" 'Gods of the lightning' is an exciting play. It is mature, hard, honest, aimed specifically at intelligent adults. It is sensational and packed with action. . . Read in cold type, the play itself appears to be considerably less than immortal. One notes at once that the characters of Macready and Capraro are not sufficiently delineated, the authors evidently depending too much upon the willingness of the audience to associate them with Sacco and Vanzetti." Bernard Smith
+ — N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 5 '29 390w

"A vital theme in modern life, told with realism and sincerity, well acted, little tainted with theatrics or sentimentality, praised by the critics—and extinguished by popular indifference." Leon Whipple
Survey 62:69 Ap 1 '29 320w

"Anyone who was stirred by the case would be stirred by the play, and would also find it hard to judge the play on its own merits." Robert Littell
Theatre Arts Mo 13:11 Ja '29 830w
Theatre Arts Mo 13:386 My '29 60w
Wis Lib Bul 25:71 F '29

ANDERSON, PAUL L. With the Eagles. 279p il $1.75 (5s) Appleton

29-6796

"This is a book for the difficult age, when a boy is beginning to feel his years and is afraid of being literary. It is such a good yarn that he will read it eagerly without realizing that he is getting a large dose of Cæsar's 'Gallic War.' Here instead of an impersonal account of group movements, is the story of Cæsar's conquest of Gaul in terms of personality. Thus, while limited in scope, it gains in concreteness. Linguistic difficulties obscure the original narrative for most boys, but here they will find the figures of Cæsar and his generals and all the fascinating mechanism of the Roman army gaining reality through the eyes of a young legionary."—Sat R of Lit

"Boys reading Latin and thinking not too kindly of Caesar will get a more agreeable impression of him from this book." F. L. Robbins
+ Outlook 152:390 Jl 3 '29 50w
St Louis 27:291 O '29

"The style is kept in good classical tradition. The description of Cæsar might come out of Plutarch. The choice of incidents has a dramatic aptness which makes them memorable. The book will, we think, give children some idea of the qualities at the root of Rome's greatness." Catherine Woodbridge
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1153 Je 29 '29 400w

ANDERSON, SHERWOOD. Hello towns! 339p il $3 Liveright

818 Marion, Virginia. Cities and towns—United States 29-10490

Extracts from the two newspapers owned and edited by Mr Anderson in the little town of Marion, Va. Illustrated with pictures of the fire department, the band, and other local celebrities.

Booklist 25:385 Jl '29

Reviewed by L: Gannett
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 My 5 '29 1150w

"Although Mr. Anderson lives on his farm in Virginia, and is the power behind the throne of two local newspapers, his thoughts frequently fly far afield. Thereby he is able to look upon events in Marion with a fresh and unprejudiced eye every time he returns to them. It is obvious that Mr. Anderson quickly caught the proper tone for a country newspaper, but it is also equally obvious that there is a quality all his own both in his way of looking at events and in his manner of chronicling them." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 27 '29 1450w

"Sherwood Anderson has done the job beautifully. But his work has no great distinction compared with that of many of his American fellow-editors in the little towns of the hinterland." W: A. White
+ Nation 128:714 Je 12 '29 930w

"Sherwood Anderson is certainly more human than The New York Times. But only a few things in the book have literary excellence. If only Sherwood Anderson, the country editor, would become the old Sherwood Anderson, the teller of tales! As country editor he sheds a friendly glow over the townspeople. That is much nicer than Sinclair Lewis's malicious light. But you feel he is thinking, 'See how friendly I am!' The style is so consciously artless that it robs the matter of conviction." G. T. Hellman
New Repub 58:365 My 15 '29 450w

"A book that has to do with the most ordinary occurrences in what one would tag as an ordinary American town, 'Hello Towns!' becomes a book that is far from ordinary. For the period of a year Sherwood Anderson projects himself against the scene; the book is a species of autobiography. Yet an unusual species, for although the scene is made of more importance than the author he nevertheless dominates it. Therefore, again, we have the originality of Sherwood Anderson. And again we have it impressed upon us that Mr. Anderson is one of the truly striking figures today in American literature." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p1 Ap 28 '29 1250w

"It is definitely one man's view. And if you yourself know such small towns, well, you can get from the book such a picture of Mr. Anderson as you would not otherwise have. It works both ways. There is a conscious naïveté about much of the book that is sometimes effective, sometimes rather painful, because it seems false." W. R. Brooks
Outlook 152:78 My 8 '29 110w
St Louis 27:205 Je '29

ANDERSON, SHERWOOD—Continued

"It contains a great deal of uninteresting, unresolved material; often the items are mere jottings of names, or belabored accounts of trivialities. Yet his book has a solid interest, and for a solid reason: he has caught, in momentous flashes, in deft, off-hand reporting, the peculiar romanticism of Southern small town life. . . The soft beauty of the Southern landscape, the strange criminal violences of life in a small Southern town, the comic fears, the shabbiness, the endless miseries, are here recorded with a truthfulness at once cruel and tender. Mr. Anderson has not achieved a work of distinction, comparable even with his lesser works, but certainly he writes with a penetrating knowledge, and understanding, of Southern small-town life." Sara Haardt

+ Sat R of Lit 5:974 My 4 '29 820w

"Anderson is, to our way of thinking, the essence of independent, intelligent earth-rooted, human-natured philosophizing, ancient and modernized, in his fiction and out of it. 'Hello Towns' is just a cross section of Anderson." R. W. N.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 12 '29 450w

ANDERSON, VICTOR VANCE. Psychiatry in industry. 364p $4 Harper

658.3 Employment management. Psychology, Applied. Ability—Testing 29-9837

Founded on four years of personnel work in one of the large mercantile establishments of the United States, the book deals with the study and treatment of problem individuals in industry from the viewpoint of the psychiatrist. Should be of use to professional and business men and students interested in personnel problems.

---

"This volume is one of the best illustrations of the intelligent use of psychiatric and psychological tests in industry. The book is sanely written and abounds in well chosen case studies." C: L. Stone

+ Am Econ R 19:460 S '29 200w

Reviewed by E. R. Hayhurst

Am J Pub Health 19:1070 S '29 450w

Booklist 26:15 O '29

Outlook 152:550 Jl 31 '29 150w

"Dr. Anderson's book more than makes good its title. He has been so human in his application of his techniques to selected groups of men and women that his case records and his answers to the wide range of personality problems they cover have a universal application. Very few books published in recent years have so much of immediate practical value to give to the social case worker, the vocational guider, or indeed to the layman. I can't conceive how any normal adult can read through it without being greatly stimulated, refreshed and enlightened." R. W. Bruère

+ Survey 62:456 Jl 15 '29 420w

Wis Lib Bul 25:318 O '29

ANDRESS, JAMES MACE; ALDINGER, ALBERT KURWIN; and GOLDBERGER, ISIDORE HARRY. Health essentials. 481p il $1.72 Ginn

613 Hygiene 28-12726

"A textbook for the teaching of health. The book not only points out the road to healthful living for the high-school pupil but considers those matters which affect the well-being of the community. The major part of the book deals with personal hygiene. Little space is devoted to anatomy and physiology, probably just enough to give an understanding of the basis of modern hygienic methods. The book is written in simple language, and the titles of the sections are such as to appeal to the reader and cause him to enter upon the study of the text with interest. In all cases positive health is stressed. In order to prepare the pupil for future civic life, material on home and community hygiene is included."—School R

---

"We have failed to find any topic undiscussed which boys and girls of the age indicated should understand, and the information given is not only sound but clearly put. The illustrations are plentiful, good, and up-to-date. On the whole the book is well written and its make-up excellent. It can be safely recommended as a text for the class of students for whom it is designed." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 18:1073 Ag '28 400w

Pratt p13 spring '29

"The book will be found a good textbook for health education in the high school." W: I. Fishbein, M.D.

+ School R 37:77 Ja '29 280w

ANDREWS, MARIETTA (MINNIGERODE) (MRS ELIPHALET FRASER ANDREWS). Scraps of paper. 381p il $5 Dutton

973.7 United States—History—Civil war—Personal narratives. European war, 1914-1918—Personal narratives 29-20279

The "scraps of paper" that Mrs Andrews here brings together are letters, diaries and journals of two wars—the Civil war and the World war—written mostly by members of her family connection. Among these intimate records are the journal of a young wife to whom was left the management of a large Virginia estate in 1862-1863; the letters of Charlie Minnigerode, a cavalry officer in the Army of northern Virginia; letters written from the trenches in 1917-1918 by Lieutenant Karl Minnigerode; and letters from Kiev, Russia, by Lucy Minnigerode, a Red cross nurse.

---

"Few examples could better illustrate the essential subjectivity of historical facts than the romantic interpretation that Miss Andrews is able to throw over the stark, unpleasant material that comprises her 'Scraps of Paper.' "

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 24 '29 230w

"Mrs. Andrews is kindly, reasonable, proud of her ancestors (as she should be), but without either rancour or historical prejudice. The World War chapters are interesting and well done, but the charm lies chiefly in Mrs. Andrews's Civil War papers because they are so human and so lacking in hard feelings. Altogether an exemplary and delightful book."

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 2 '29 170w

N Y Times p14 S 8 '29 380w

"Containing some interesting pictures of the non-historic side of both wars."

+ Outlook 153:29 S 4 '29 40w

Sat R of Lit 6:258 O 12 '29 80w

ANDREWS, MRS MARY RAYMOND (SHIPMAN). A lost commander: Florence Nightingale. 299p $3 Doubleday, Doran

B or 92 Nightingale, Florence 29-26417

A somewhat romanticized life of the "angel of Scutari," one of the greatest of modern women, who created the profession of nursing for women. Miss Andrews takes issue with Lytton Strachey for his character sketch of Florence Nightingale in "Eminent Victorians."

---

"The book is competently, at times beautifully, written, but it also bears some of the marks of journalism." J. A. Tobey

+ Am J Pub Health 19:1065 S '29 400w

Booklist 25:356 Je '29

"There are many quotations from Miss Nightingale's letters and from the remarks of her contemporaries, and these help to counterbalance the author's tendency to sound the tremolo."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 Ap 28 '29 170w

Reviewed by C. B. Palmer

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 6 '29 1650w

"This is one of the most readable and sympathetic accounts of her life that have been published. The distinguished author (Bishop Shipman's sister, by the way) has a number of popular novels and fine pieces of literature to her credit." E. A. Cummins

+ Churchman p17 Ap 27 '29 280w

"The book has a weakness in the author's overindulgence in imaginary conversations and scenes. Some of these frank 'supposings' are vivid and entertaining, but in so much as there are too many of them, they tend to detract from the vigor of an excellent and welcome book."

+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 21 '29 1050w

"The new biography fails to erase the impression Strachey left because the author is not so skilful at handling her material. She has done her heroine no good service by attempting to depict her as responsible for all the freedom women enjoy to-day and as a saint as well as a genius. Her exaggeration is much more obvious than Strachey's. Nevertheless, this book is an interesting and most readable example of what is called the old-style biography." D: Loth

+ N Y World p10m Ap 21 '29 500w

"Mrs. Andrews writes with her accustomed ease and warmth. Young reviewers will find 'The Lost Commander' sentimental. Fortunately, however, that will not affect its well-deserved popularity."

+ Outlook 151:511 Mr 27 '29 130w

ANDREWS, MATTHEW PAGE. History of Maryland: province and state. 721p il $7.25 Doubleday, Doran

975.2 Maryland—History. Maryland—Politics and government 29-10034

A complete and well documented history of Maryland from its beginnings as a palatinate under George Calvert, to the present.

---

"Dr. Andrews, a resident of Baltimore and an historian of the first repute, has recorded the absorbing story of Maryland, the endless factions and cross-purposes and dissensions, especially those of the Civil War period, with a brilliant clarity. . . A complete and wholly definite work, this." Sara Haardt

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 My 26 '29 800w

"As a thoroughly documented story of Maryland, this scholarly work could probably not be bettered. Throughout varying points of view are impartially presented rather than arbitrarily 'interpreted.' Provided with excellent maps and illustrations, it will probably take rank as a final and authoritative study of its subject." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p8m My 18 '29 100w

"No small part of the very humanly interesting quality of Mr. Andrews's history is due to the way he has, throughout the narrative, endeavored to background it by and connect it with the ideas, events and personalities that were inspiring and shaping contemporary history in both the New and the Old World."

+ N Y Times p13 S 1 '29 300w

ANDREWS, ROY CHAPMAN. Ends of the earth. 355p il $4.50 (16s) Putnam

915 East (Far East)—Description and travel. Whaling. Hunting 29-20769

As a taxidermist of the American museum of natural history Mr Chapman went on whaling expeditions to the Dutch East Indies and off the coast of China. The explorer also writes of a sealing expedition, some adventuresome happenings in Korea, life in China, and hunting trips in Mongolia and other "ends of the earth."

---

Booklist 26:113 D '29

"From the first paragraph to the last the reader's blood is stirred, his imagination quickened." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 23 '29 850w

"The most pleasing thing about the book is its portrayal of the author as one man, at least, who has been able to devote his life to exactly the kind of work he wanted to do and is happy over the results. Not only have his dreams come true, but their 'realization is greater than the anticipation.' "

+ Nation 129:756 D 18 '29 100w

"Mr. Roy Chapman Andrews's account of his adventurous career is a little disappointing, coming from the author of On the Trail of Ancient Man. Mr. Andrews obviously enjoyed writing that book. Here he becomes by comparison merely conventional."

— New Statesman 34:supx O 12 '29 70w

"His book makes fascinating reading, from the time he began his career scrubbing floors in the taxidermy department of the museum to the time of his famous expeditions to the interior of Mongolia, where he discovered fossils which would seem to prove Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn's forecast that here is the cradle of the human race." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p10m O 19 '29 150w

"In this lively and entertaining book, so full of thrills there is scarcely room for anything else, Roy Chapman Andrews has brought together his adventures in many seas and jungles." H: E. Armstrong

+ N Y Times p46 D 8 '29 1000w

"The book was written hurriedly on trains and ships and a part of it even on an aeroplane; consequently, as might be expected, the construction is loose and spasmodic, and there are few pretensions to literary graces. But it is vivid and has a most admirable flavor of action and adventure. In days when booksellers' shelves are overflowing with the travels of mediocrity, it strikes an authentic note." L. J. Robbins

+ Sat R of Lit 6:516 D 7 '29 900w

Springf'd Republican p14 D 6 '29 600w

"As a whole the book makes inspiring reading; nor is the learning of the scientist allowed to cloud its pages with obscurity. Mr. Andrews's breathless, running sentences seem to mirror his active and questing spirit."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p891 N 7 '29 900w

ANGELL, NORMAN. Money game; explaining fundamental finance; a new instrument of economic education. 204p $6 Dutton [12s 6d Dent]

332 Money 30-421

A practical lesson in economics which explains, by means of a card game, the nature of money, banking, credit, etc. It begins with the telling of the "Sailor's story"—that of a shipwrecked sailor who comes to a populated island with two blocks of gold, by means of which he contrives to support himself thru the development of the island industries. How he does this is explained by the game (which comes in a box with a copy of the book). It consists of a pack made up of 100 cards, or ten suits, with 2 jokers, each suit representing an industry which the sailor (or banker) proposes to establish. There is another pack of smaller cards, which are miniature imitation bank notes. Complete rules and instructions as to how to play the game are given.

---

Boston Transcript p8 D 14 '29 200w

"Mr. Angell does, I think, make out his contention that the games do teach effectively the simplest truths of all—that money is not wealth, and that there ought to be some relation between the creation of money and the creation of wealth. And we can agree that the world would probably go better if even this much knowledge were a firmer part of the mental equipment of the average citizen. So let the makers of books applaud Mr. Angell's ingenuity, and welcome him as an ally!" D. H. Robertson

+ — Nation and Ath 44:418 D 15 '28 650w

"It remains to be seen how far his device will carry the many. There remains also the larger question, whether this method can be pushed further in the educational field. Mr. Angell, while he shows a becoming modesty about his own invention, hints at possibilities. But these are for the pedagogues to consider. For the reviewer it must suffice to say that the Money Game offers amusement for all and is most certainly worth a careful test by teachers of economics."

+ New Statesman 32:332 D 15 '28 380w

ANGELL, NORMAN—Continued
Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 153:387 N 6 '29 100w

"Angell's game puts before us, not theories, but facts; it offers us a concrete case (romantic in its surroundings), instead of an abstract doctrine or policy. We may, as I have said, use it merely as a pastime. But, if we have any brain-stuff in our skulls, it will set us thinking, and we shall, just for amusement and then for their own sake, ponder the problems which the Sailor's dealing with the Islanders suggests to us. So we shall grow in wisdom." Hamilton Fyfe
+ Spec 141:761 N 24 '28 1150w

ANGELL, NORMAN. Story of money. 411p il $5 [2] Stokes
332.4 Money—History 29-25471

"A story, written for the layman, of man's experiences with the device of money: some of the outstanding experiments that he has tried with it, and the results of the experiments; some of the ideas he has had concerning it; some of the mistakes that he has made about it. It is an attempt to tell the story of money in its social relation, to show what money has done to human society, the problems which it has solved and which it has created; and to show briefly, in a final chapter, the nature of the main monetary and banking controversy of the present-day, by indicating where the various authorities stand on the problem of the stabilization of the price level in its relation to our present needs and methods."—Preface

---

"The most nearly comprehensible book on the subject of currency we have encountered." F: F. Van de Water
+ N Y Evening Post p12m D 14 '29 200w

"The layman for whom it is written will find it a lucid and interesting presentation of how and why and when money gradually came into existence as one of the tools of evolving civilization after men had carried on extensive and complicated affairs without it for many centuries."
+ — N Y Times p18 D 15 '29 550w

"Mr. Angell's book is more of an outline than a history, and if the volume does not contain all of the mass of information properly belonging to the subject, enough is supplied to give an adequately illuminating idea of the variegated career of the thing we call money." Gustavus Myers
+ N Y World p11m D 15 '29 850w
Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 153:548 D 4 '29 70w

ANISE, pseud. See Strong, A. L.

ANKER-LARSEN, JOHANNES. Stranger in [2] paradise; tr. from the Danish by Ruth Castberg Jordan. 257p $2.50 Knopf
29-22800

"From childhood on Hans Larsen was doubly endowed—with a brilliant mind and a mystical soul. Even in childhood his goodness and his talent were proverbial, and when he distinguished himself at school it was thought that he would have a brilliant career. But he gave up his career to return home and live a farmer's life, to put his inner vision of humanity's oneness into practice, and in time almost to will his own death so that his life in retrospect might enrich the world in which he had lived. And after his death those who had known him—simple peasants, materialistic farmers, unchaste girls—turned back to him and made over their lives according to his example."—N Y Times

---

Reviewed by P: Terwilliger
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 D 1 '29 550w
+ Boston Transcript p2 D 11 '29 950w

"Here is a novel to disturb the skeptical and worldly in us, which tells the story we so much want and find so hard to believe—the story of a good man with a touch of greatness who lived life in the effort to light up other lives with the mystical kinship of the human spirit—and who succeeded."
+ N Y Times p9 D 15 '29 550w

ANSON, HAROLD. Authority in religion. (Practical Christianity ser.) 197p $1.50 Century
262.8 Authority (theology) 29-4959

"In 'Authority in Religion' Dr. Harold Anson summarizes certain aspects of modern Christian faith from the viewpoint of the Anglican Church. He has chapters on 'Religion and Secular Life,' 'Church and State,' 'Immortality and Psychical Research,' 'Prayer, Magic and Science,' and various other topics that especially concern the English Churchman at the present moment."—R of Rs

---

"These addresses are fresh, frank and fearless discussions of the great themes of religion in a way that appeals to thoughtful folks who refuse to be bound by tradition."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 13 '29 330w

"These popular lectures will appeal to a wide circle of earnest people who seek truth with power to express itself in their lives and satisfy their deepest hungers." A. L. M.
+ Churchman 139:31 Ap 20 '29 120w
Cleveland Open Shelf p119 S '29
J Religion 9:661 O '29 110w
Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:26 Ap '29 70w

ANTHOLOGIA GRAECA. Greek anthology; sel. and tr. with a prolegomenon by Shane Leslie. 234p $4 Appleton [12s 6d Benn]
881.08 Greek poetry—Collections. Greek poetry—Translations into English 29-26783

Two hundred and eighty Greek epigrams have been selected, classified and translated by Shane Leslie, who presents them here with an introductory synopsis of the collection.

---

Booklist 26:22 O '29
Reviewed by Clifford M'Guinness
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Je 2 '29 350w
Boston Transcript p3 My 18 '29 330w

"The Anthology is a huge storehouse of semi-precious material. It contains much paste, false jewellery, many versified trinkets; it also includes some few poems of an undisputed excellence." P. Q.
New Statesman 32:819 Ap 6 '29 1100w

"Almost every emotion or situation which could conceiveably be compressed into epigrammatic form is represented, always with neatness, sometimes with real poetic power. The whole work forms an unparalleled commentary on Greek civilization from its noblest aspects to its basest." A. R. Bellinger
+ Sat R of Lit 6:5 Jl 27 '29 170w

"Mr. Shane Leslie has attempted the impossible in his Greek anthology. His design was to translate a thousand Greek epigrams into English prose. That he has done: his attitude was one of passionate and intelligent admiration for his subject. So saturated, indeed, is he with laudable love for his subject that it infects his English. . . Such transcription of words does not bring the polloi nearer Greek, but only takes them further away from English. . . The exquisite decoration, rich but austere, of Greek epigram, its combined simplicity, and artificiality, have no equivalent in English prose." E. F. Benson
— + Spec 142:sup467 Mr 23 '29 1000w

"Mr. Shane Leslie probably gives us, in plain readable English though with occasional odd, but not unpleasant, Hellenisms in it, all that is most worth saving; and so his book deserves a definite niche in the classical department of the modern man of the world's library."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p313 Ap 18 '29 550w

ANTHONY, KATHARINE SUSAN. Queen Elizabeth. 263p $4 (12s 6d) Knopf

B or 92 Elizabeth, queen of England 29-21116

The biography of Queen Elizabeth, upon which the author has been working for three years, unfolds the life story of the indomitable queen from the cradle to the grave with illuminating touches and not a little humor, using the interpretative method, rather than the narrative.

---

Booklist 26:114 D '29

"Miss Anthony attempted to circumscribe the whole life of Queen Elizabeth and to do it in about two hundred and fifty pages. Such a task of compressions is impossible and the reader feels this before he is half-way through the book. The biographer moves too swiftly; there is facet after facet of the Queen's life that should have been examined more closely; the final effect is that of a 'portrait' with biographical digressions rather than a full-length biography. Yet what there is of Elizabeth is excellently done. The portrait is there and it is complete enough. The prose is serviceable, although it is far from the quality of Mr. Strachey's book, and the color of a period is suggested." Herbert Gorman

+ — Bookm 70:333 N '29 450w

"Miss Anthony's book is only 250 pages; not much more than 60,000 words. It takes drastic simplification to get so great a matter into so little space. Miss Anthony has availed herself of the popular psychoanalytical method of a short-cut. A formula of some kind, any kind, was indispensable. . . Miss Anthony has done an excellent piece of work in tracing the broad outlines of Elizabeth's life and manifest character. Her Elizabeth has the one indisputable attribute of greatness." Isabel Paterson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 O 6 '29 1600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p139 N '29

"In the concluding sentence of this book Miss Anthony says of Queen Elizabeth: 'Her reign was a marriage, and the nation was her child.' If the author, with her inimitably delightful style, had devoted her book to proving this rather shrewd statement, this new life of the Virgin Queen would be one of exceptional value. As it is, the story is disjointed and confusing, giving the reader no feeling of coherence or accomplishment, but rather of abortive efforts and futility."

— + Current Hist 31:829 Ja '30 200w

"For some reason or other this book, so excellent in certain details—bits of characterization, epigrammatic succinctness, and keen observation—does not quite come to life. Perhaps Miss Anthony erred fundamentally in treating the entire life of Queen Elizabeth with something of the terse incisiveness which Mr. Strachey, artistically stingy with his words as always, recently employed on but a few illuminating episodes of Elizabeth's reign. To relate her whole career, and in addition to depict much of the teeming gusto and swagger of the era, would quite certainly exceed the power of compressed suggestiveness of even the greatest of artists. It might further be suggested that, while her book has unity of design, it lacks a corresponding unity of method." R. F. Dibble

— + Nation 130:19 Ja 1 '30 350w

"The omissions are not defects in the present volume. On the contrary, they testify to a principle of selection and exclusion held with extraordinary intelligence and persistence. . . In a sense her study of the Virgin Queen is complementary to her earlier work on Catherine the Great. . . In exposing the character of Elizabeth through her behavior toward those who stood nearest to her, Miss Anthony has given lively portraits of these companions. She is least successful in the case of Mary of Scotland. Essex as a portrait leaves something to be desired. Of Leicester, Miss Anthony gives a more favorable view than does conventional history." R. M. L.

+ — New Repub 60:273 O 23 '29 1800w

"By grace of Miss Anthony's calm, controlled style, thanks to the author's resolution not to thrust herself between the reader and her subject, Elizabeth and the shifty, yielding, unbreakable, unpredictable steel spring of her spirit emerge, comprehensible where comprehension is possible. There are minor defects and maybe they are ours instead of Miss Anthony's. Her book as a whole compensates for far graver offenses." F: F. Van de Water

+ — N Y Evening Post p11m O 12 '29 250w

"With respect to Elizabeth herself, Miss Anthony's account is as clear as any available and must be granted, in view of the difficulties overcome, a considerable measure of success. The welter of historical events which surrounded her reign and conditioned many of her actions is not so competently handled. Some of the vitally necessary backgrounds for her work Miss Anthony presents in a hash of disjointed facts." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Evening Post p12m O 12 '29 800w

"For the full and intimate characterization in which Miss Anthony attains to the highest standards of the new biography there can be nothing but praise. Psychology, though uncertain as science, has contributed not a little to literary insight. But there is no reason why such fuller insight into character should be accompanied by a destructive animus against incidents." P. W. Wilson

+ — N Y Times p5 O 13 '29 1600w

"A fine, compact study of the Queen. . . This is not a full history or biography, but a portrait. The chief events are here; Elizabeth is the Queen, and the book gives her her regal due. Her shortcomings are not suppressed, but the explanation is dignified. Whatever others have tried to do with Elizabeth's baffling character, Miss Anthony has not added another stone to the heap upon her grave." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p14 O 4 '29 850w

"Miss Anthony's work stands firmly on accepted fact, dismisses rumor, and leaves the great and enigmatic personality as great, and in some necessary ways, as enigmatic as before. Her book is delightful reading. Miss Anthony's style is brilliant, forceful and pure, a suitable vehicle for the expression of her clear and concise thought."

+ Outlook 153:229 O 9 '28 430w

Sat R 148:730 D 14 '29 40w

"Miss Anthony has written an interesting and yet, on the whole, disappointing book about Queen Elizabeth. Her study of the Virgin Queen does not fulfil the promise of her first and far more remarkable biography of Margaret Fuller. One finds in it, it is true, certain merits, and some of her approaches to the problems afforded by Elizabeth's character and reign have a distinct originality and justification; but acute observations are found side by side with banal and all too obvious conclusions. The defect of the book is a superficiality too often concealed by pretentiousness. Miss Anthony is, however, intelligent in her general attitude towards Queen Elizabeth and her time. It is her method that is at fault rather than her ideas."

— + Spec 143:783 N 23 '29 450w

Reviewed by Halle Schaffner

Survey 63:438 Ja 1 '30 480w

APPEL, JOSEPH HERBERT. Africa's white magic. 166p il $3 Harper

916 Africa—Description and travel 28-28769

Impressionistic sketches of travels in Africa, illustrated with good camera studies and ending with a description of a successful hunting expedition in the region made familiar by the Martin Johnsons.

---

Am J Soc 35:344 S '29 80w

"The style is that of the diary of a thoughtful and somewhat introspective man, who sees beyond the mere surface of places and people. It is entertaining as well as interesting and valuable, and is much more than a mere chronicle of travel of the usual type. It is illustrated by photographs which add greatly to its attractiveness." R. R. M.

APPEL, J. H.—Continued

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 12 '29 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p69 My '29
Wis Lib Bul 25:72 F '29

APPERSON, GEORGE LATIMER. English [2] proverbs and proverbial phrases; a historical dictionary. 721p $8 Dutton [31s 6d Dent]

398.9 Proverbs

A collection of proverbial sayings, alphabetically arranged either by the most significant word used as key-word, or the word which would relate the saying to a group of proverbs dealing with that special subject. The entries have references to other collections, dates, illustrative quotations and similar matter, the aim being to present a history of each proverb.

"A quite enormous and very serviceable collection of English sayings of proverbial nature."

+ N Y Times p34 N 17 '29 220w

"A collection made by a learned antiquary which has taken years to gather and which shows that, if proverbs have gone out of fashion, they have abundant interest historically. Mr. Apperson does not confine himself to didactic sentences but also includes stereotyped metaphors and familiar similes. The abundant display of examples, following a saying down the centuries, notes where a great writer has helped to keep a proverb alive." Vernon Rendall

+ Sat R 148:443 O 19 '29 1400w

"Mr. Apperson's thorough and picturesque book is a book to live with, and will seldom be consulted without enrichment of mind, and indeed of feeling; for the proverb is peculiarly an 'abstract and brief chronicle' of human experience."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p952 N 21 '29 800w

APPLEGATE, FRANK GUY. Indian stories [2] from the Pueblos; foreword by Witter Bynner. 178p il $3.50 Lippincott

970.3 Pueblo Indians. Hopi Indians. Indians of North America—Legends 29-25487

A number of folk-tales, historical anecdotes, and stories of customs and superstitions of the Pueblo Indians, told in simple dramatic form. Among the most interesting of the tales are The snake priest's trousers, The little fish of San Juan, and The holy water.

"The author has penetrated into the inner life of this strange people and seems able to think Hopi, and also to interpret their domestic life, their feelings, their many ceremonials and their religion to the white man. The illustrations in colors are from the original Pueblo Indian paintings, and seem curiously in keeping with the text."

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 30 '29 250w

Reviewed by Mary Austin
Nation 129:597 N 20 '29 720w

"It is a refreshing book, and a friendly one, unassuming and amusing. If Mr. Applegate had illustrated it with his own drawings or paintings, instead of with Indian, it might have been a more revealing record of how close a white American can come to a red, but he chose to present instead the things one white artist loved of his Indian colleagues' work." Anita Brenner

+ N Y Evening Post p8m N 30 '29 750w

"Told in unornamented prose, these stories have the virtue of rescuing Indian lore, preserving Indian lore from sentimentality and making it instinct with humor and life. Perhaps an outstanding quality is the spirit of comedy in which the Indians regard their white investigators."

+ Springf'd Republican p6e D 15 '29 250w

"In the pleasure of reading the stories, we fail to notice that we are so steadily gaining an understanding of the Pueblo Indian that, when the book is finished, we know him on his most attractive sides. This book, then, because of its thorough understanding of its subject, should not be neglected even by ethnologists." G: P. Baker

+ Yale R n s 19:409 winter '30 650w

APPLIN, ARTHUR (JULIAN SWIFT, pseud.). Chronicles of a gigolo. 288p $2 Liveright [7s 6d T. W. Laurie] 29-16436

Whimsical account of the development of a sentimental boy into a professional dancing partner.

"Julian, the gigolo, is well-drawn; not at all 'hard-boiled', as one might possibly expect. . . It is a much better book than the sensational title indicates."

+ Bookm 70:xxxii N '29 150w

"The substance of Mr. Swift's story is tenuous. There is a fragility to the book that is at once a lack and a charm. Perhaps it is the very quality of the gigolo. Snatches of poignancy mingle with a pale inertia. The book, like its protagonist, is not healthy enough. It has wan patches and a secret weariness." V. P. Ross

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ag 18 '29 350w

"The writer may have played about with gigolos in his spare moments, but he is a trained literary worker with a rare gift for writing artistically and with charm. Human this document certainly seems and partly fiction without a doubt. Still the author must have drifted about London and Paris and seen with his own eyes many pathetic rich lonely women and studied carefully many equally pathetic weak young men."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 31 '29 750w
Nation 129:310 S 18 '29 130w

"Told in a language simple almost to the point of crudeness. Intermingled, however, with the recital of the superficialities of his daily life are a surprising number of penetrating observations on the nature of love and the emotional reactions of the male and female of the species. If it is true, as the publishers hint, that some of the gigolo's old ladies have their exact counterparts in London society, the book should prove an even more interesting tidbit for the curious."

+ N Y Times p7 S 8 '29 530w

"The entertainment value of the book as a whole is high, though the interest lags noticeably towards the close, where Mr. Swift writes as if he were as tired as his character, Julian. A sympathetic and open-minded reader will find the novel very much worth while. Certainly it is an absorbing sociological footnote to the history of our times."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:299 O 19 '29 320w

"The whole thing is unreal, and the various women encountered never take on flesh and blood. The best that can be said for the book is that it has a certain well-sustained whimsicality of humour."

— + Spec 142:603 Ap 13 '29 60w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 20 '29 110w

ARCHER, OWEN, pseud. See Greenwood, A: G:

ARDEN, CLIVE, pseud. See Nutt, L. C.

ARDENNE DE TIZAC, ANDREE FRANCOISE CAROLINE D' (ANDREE VIOLLIS, pseud.). Girl in soviet Russia; tr. from the French by Homer White. 347p $2.50 Crowell

914.7 Russia—Description and travel. Russia—Social conditions 29-15501

A French woman makes a tour of Russia to investigate conditions under the Soviet régime. This book is the result of her three months' survey of all parts of the republic, and she narrates, impartially, the good and the bad features of the new government. Interviews and conversations with people of various types and offices, the customs and occupations of the people, life in the villages and in the cities, the government, schools, the theater, marriage and divorce, the "pariahs," or abandoned children of Russia, and the amusements of the people are among the things she writes about.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 N 17 '29 200w

"Miss Viollis has made an excellent attempt to bring to Western readers the results of her three months' stay in Russia. There appears to be very little that is much different or that has not been presented in earlier works covering the same subject. She writes, however, in an appealing style."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 S 28 '29 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p149 D '29

"This book is a jolly and colorful piece of reporting. The author, a French-woman, wandered about the Soviet Union for three months, and she describes with humor and imagination and fine human feeling her adventures and observations in the cities and villages. In her modest foreword she points out that her narrative is merely a reporter's account, perhaps not always 'deeply accurate' but at least impartial. This merit, unusual in descriptive volumes about the new Russia, the book may justly claim. It is unfortunate that the publication of the American translation was so long delayed. The statistical material given is now three years old. Despite this serious handicap the book gives a well-rounded picture of the Soviet scene."

+ — Nation 129:388 O 9 '29 120w

Reviewed by A. O. McCormick

N Y Times p3 D 15 '29 180w

"For a general impression of what things are like under the Soviets, we recommend it."

+ Outlook 153:29 S 4 '29 40w

"The book is written in a terse, vivacious style, eminently French and well preserved in the translation." W. B. Shaw

+ R of Rs 80:30 O '29 80w

"A very readable book, as good as any for those who want a general impression of present day Russia and are not burdened with too much personal acquaintance with a complex subject."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:486 N 30 '29 230w

ARESBY, RAYMOND, and ARESBY, HELEN, pseuds. Mark of the dead. 313p $2 Washburn [7s 6d Skeffington]

"Parrish Darby disembarks at Honolulu to find himself an unwilling participant in an age-old horror. Sinister forces are at work in gloomy Waimea Bay, and it is only because of his deep-rooted affection for his friend, Hayes Collins, that 'Parry' steels himself to the disagreeable task of ridding a haunted house of its ghosts."—Bookm

"A well-turned mystery story of the Far East."

+ Bookm 69:xxx Ap '29 70w

"The excitement is a good brand of the sort that gives you the creeps and a feeling that you've had your money's worth." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 22 '29 100w

"Unquestionably the motive for the murders is unique. One can only wish that the composition and style of the authors equalled the plot."

+ — Boston Transcript p7 N 9 '29 200w

"Very eerie and horrible. We liked it."

+ Outlook 151:557 Ap 3 '29 120w

ARETZ, FRAU GERTRUDE (KUNTZE-DOLTON) KIRCHEISEN. Queen Louise of Prussia, 1776-1810; tr. from the German by Ruth Putnam. 353p il $3.50 Putnam

B or 92 Louise, queen consort of Frederick William III, king of Prussia 29-7222

A biography of the German princess which gives equal treatment to the personal and the political sides of her life. The list of sources shows that the biography is based on careful documentation.

"The biographer sacrifices nothing to drama and is, in fact, scrupulous in avoiding emphasis and fails to fuse her material into anything more than an honest, careful and rather prosy narrative so that the book is not likely to achieve an independent life of its own. Miss Ruth Putnam's translation is entirely praiseworthy."

+ Bookm 69:viii Jl '29 150w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 My 19 '29 150w

"Here for the first time the story of her life is told with remarkable detachment and sympathetic understanding." G. R. B. R.

+ Boston Transcript p1 My 18 '29 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p122 S '29

New Statesman 33:506 Jl 27 '29 350w

"This Hohenzollern queen deserves a sympathetic, colorful, modern biography, and this Gertrude Aretz has supplied." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 13 '29 100w

"This is an unbiased, if not very spirited account of her life." W. R. Brooks

+ — Outlook 151:520 Mr 27 '29 50w

"Fräulein Aretz, the author of her most recent biography, has purposed to write an unbiased story. To all appearances, she has succeeded. Her treatment is moderate in tone, her judgment is carefully weighted, and is supported by all the available and reliable source material." J: M. S. Allison

+ Sat R of Lit 6:71 Ag 24 '29 680w

"Is written in popular style but based upon sound authority, with a great deal of quotation from the Queen's correspondence. And the combination of German sympathies and at least sympathetic understanding of Napoleon has resulted in an atmosphere of fairness. But the great merit of the book is that, while the Queen is shown throughout as the pure-souled heroine which she was, her weaknesses and mistakes are never concealed."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p427 My 30 '29 660w

ARLEN, MICHAEL, pseud. (DIKRAN KUYUMJIAN). Babes in the wood; a relaxation intended for those who are always travelling but never reaching a destination. 305p il $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hutchinson]

30-32

"Here is Mr. Arlen again, fainting in incredulous delight at the loveliness of a lady, wandering vaguely from Mayfair to Paris to the Riviera, whispering with breathless ecstasy his tales of hopeless, hopeless love. 'Babes in the Wood' contains five longish short stories." (N Y World) Contents: Confessions of a naturalized Englishman; A girl with a future; Portrait of a gentleman; The lost generation; Nettles in Arcady.

"Mr. Arlen is at his lightest in this book, or, perhaps one should say, slightest, for he strings mere incidents out into short stories that depend on everything but the story value for their interest. What saves them, if indeed they are saved, is that cleverness which has always made Michael Arlen easy to take, only, in this case, the cleverness is few, too few, and very far between. . . But somehow, one expects more from Mr. Arlen."

— + N Y Times p6 N 3 '29 420w

"None of these stories is really unsuccessful and yet none of them gets anywhere. Mr. Arlen knows how to write and Mr. Arlen knows how to convey the quality of a strained atmosphere, but Mr. Arlen has nothing to say." Emanuel Eisenberg

— N Y World p11m D 8 '29 580w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley

Sat R 148:520 N 2 '29 40w

"The worst of Mr. Arlen's women is that they are all, especially the five heroines in his latest book of short stories, self- and sex-conscious. They never forget that they are women, and as such the favoured of the earth, to whom, as natural right, should come lovers and cocktails, jewels and silks. Their reflector delights to emphasize their greediness. He hovers between

ARLEN, MICHAEL, pseud.—Continued
cynicism and chivalry as though uncertain which is the more correct quality." B. E. Todd
— Spec 143:641 N 2 '29 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p868 O 31 '29 260w

ARLEN, MICHAEL, pseud. (DIKRAN KUYUMJIAN). Lily Christine. 307p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hutchinson]
28-31018

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:285 Ap '29

"The fault of the book lies in a certain excess of almond icing in the style and in the profusion of accurate but rather boring analysis of psychology. But the whole thing is written with vitality: the author is confident, the characters are true; it is a healthy, amusing, well-managed novel, with some excellent strokes of satire. Lily Christine should establish Mr. Arlen as quite the most readable of our popular novelists." Cyril Connolly
+ — New Statesman 32:533 F 2 '29 800w

Pratt p38 summer '29

"In spite of some artificiality and sentimentality masquerading as Romance, 'Lily Christine' should put Mr. Arlen's reputation as a serious novelist on a firmer footing." L. P. Hartley
+ — Sat R 147:185 F 9 '29 400w

Spec 142:210 F 9 '29 100w

"A cloyingly syrupy story. . . Both Lily Christine and her friends are seen through a veil of theatricality, befogged by Mr Arlen's too glamorous prose."
— Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 3 '29 220w

"In Lily Christine Mr. Michael Arlen has removed himself a prudent distance from the reputation he made for himself with 'The Green Hat.' "
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p116 F 14 '29 350w

ARLITT, ADA HART. Psychology of infancy and early childhood. (McGraw-Hill euthenics ser.) 228p il $2 McGraw

136.7 Child study 28-13372

"A textbook for use in courses in child development in colleges and universities by a professor of child care and training in the University of Cincinnati who has herself contributed largely to the study of the pre-school child. The problems of children of that age are logically presented, including inheritance, common innate equipment, activities, tendencies and emotions, habit formation, sensation and perception, memory, imagination, thinking process, forms of expression, social attitudes and personality development, and individual differences. A brief list of references and class-exercises are given with each chapter."—J Home Econ

Booklist 25:52 N '28

"The book will prove useful in study groups of parents or teachers and will be especially useful as a textbook for undergraduate students preparing to teach in the nursery school, the kindergarten, and the primary grades. Supplemented by directed observation, related reading assignments and elaboration by the instructor, the book will give the prospective teacher an understanding of the most important problems of child development." Alice Temple
+ El School J 29:631 Ap '29 530w

J Home Econ 20:597 Ag '29 110w

"It is perhaps rather technical for the average reader, but there is a tremendous amount of straightforward material in the book which will point the way to train the pre-school child."
+ Nature 122:877 D 8 '28 170w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:551 N '28

ARMSTRONG, ANTHONY, pseud. Secret trail. 283p $2 Macrae-Smith [7s 6d Methuen]
29-2247

On the day of his release from prison Jimmie Rezaire is again involved in crime, but this time on the side of the police. He witnesses a murder, picks up the secret trail of a gang which has stolen an invention important to the British government, and with the help of two ex-crooks, a man and a girl, does some excellent amateur sleuthing.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 F 3 '29 130w

"The story has less of the mystery element than of adventure and thrills."
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '29 200w

"An effective if unoriginal thriller." Raymond Mortimer
Nation and Ath 43:735 S 8 '28 60w

New Statesman 31:770 S 29 '28 50w

Reviewed by E. C. Beckwith
N Y World p11m F 3 '29 100w

Reviewed by Gilbert Thomas
Spec 141:252 Ag 25 '28 80w

"A readable if not very credible yarn."
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '29 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p669 S 20 '28 150w

ARMSTRONG, HAMILTON FISH. Where the [2] East begins. 139p il $3 (10s 6d) Harper

949.6 Balkan states

Chapters on the political situations in some of the countries of the Near East: Jugoslavia, Greece, Bulgaria, Albania and Rumania.

Boston Transcript p4 D 21 '29 600w

"Competent and concise presentation of the subject. With sure and rapid strokes the author traces the domestic and foreign policies that have shaped themselves out of the flux of happenings in Southeastern Europe within the last ten years, the period of time that has elapsed since the new East was released from national and political bondage by the pronouncement of an American President." L: Rich
+ N Y Times p12 D 1 '29 1300w

"Mr. Armstrong is a good observer and, for an American, he has an unusual knowledge of the Balkans. His observations and his knowledge, however, are enlisted in behalf of the party in power in only one out of the five Balkan nations, which makes Where the East Begins mere personal propaganda where it might have been something a great deal better than publicity for the virile Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes." J: Carter
— Outlook 154:72 Ja 8 '30 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p908 N 14 '29 950w

Wis Lib Bul 25:276 Jl '29

ARMSTRONG, MARTIN DONISTHORPE. All in a day (Eng title St Christopher's day). 268p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d Gollancz]
29-5954

A two-character novel the action of which takes place in a single day. Christopher Brade awakens on the morning of his fortieth birthday to a sense of the failure of his life and a realization that the wife with whom he has lived for seven years is a complete stranger to him. After a vain attempt on Christopher's part at the breakfast table to placate Rosamund and break down her relentless antagonism, husband and wife part in anger, both to relive, during the day that follows, the events of their whole lives and the circumstances that have brought them to this impasse.

"Though wholly lacking in action and the high qualities of physical and spiritual drama, and therefore necessarily caviar to the general, the book commends itself to the thoughtful reader who is more concerned with the hidden forces that shape human destiny than with external incidents. . . The prose is firm and dignified and full of those cadences that fall pleasantly upon the inner ear. In the description of the English countryside Mr. Armstrong's style is at its best."
+ Bookm 69:313 My '29 350w

"An effective novel—concrete and individual. It stands on its own feet as a story. And it seems to me an especially interesting story, since it shows, with reasonable objectivity, one variety of marriage in the modern manner which is as common as it is disastrous." Mary Ross

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Mr 17 '29 750w

Boston Transcript p2 My 4 '29 350w

"Mr. Martin Armstrong has written a novel designed like a Palladian façade, severely symmetrical, engaged columns alternating with deepset windows. His style is chaste, his psychology probable, his descriptions accurate. [But] the façade is only a façade, life has got left out. 'St. Christopher's Day' looks a perfect model. But it does not work." Raymond Mortimer

— Nation and Ath 43:795 S 22 '28 220w

"The book misses first rank by something a little too certain in Mr Armstrong's handling. He has had a brilliant idea; he has worked it out astonishingly well; but he never seems to be quite simple with it. He knows, and cannot forget that he knows, how good an idea it is. When he escapes from his sense of his own skill, he attains a depth of feeling and a strength of emotion which his earlier work might have led one to expect; but it has never had it in such overwhelming force." R. E. Roberts

+ — New Statesman 31:760 S 29 '28 360w

"The book is interesting from the psychological point of view but nothing can alter the fact that it is hopelessly, horribly dull."

— + N Y Times p8 Mr 24 '29 620w

"There is not in this book the pulse and purpose of the artist. It is no part of what he has to say to the world. Rather it would seem that the poet required a novel, so a novel the poet wrote; seizing on a likely theme, working upon it urbanely, patiently, with honest industry. Martin Armstrong's prose always has charm."

— + N Y World p11m Ap 28 '29 280w

"The story of this day, which includes all the past, is told with understanding and with some charm, but somehow we feel little sympathy with either of the characters." W. R. Brooks

Outlook 151:480 Mr 20 '29 80w

" 'St. Christopher's Day' is quite up to Mr. Armstrong's standard—a very high and exacting one." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 146:334 S 15 '28 580w

"He has written consistently with delicacy, wisdom and clarity. His insight into the feminine temperament gives 'All in a Day' a sound bid for attention."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:983 My 4 '29 350w

"The book is learned in human nature, experienced in the beauty of the world, and written in a pure, grave English, not unacquainted with winged and piercing movements." R. A. Taylor

+ Spec 141:338 S 15 '28 450w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '29 150w

Wis Lib Bul 25:226 Jl '29

ARMSTRONG, MARTIN DONISTHORPE. Sleeping fury. 279p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Gollancz]

29-21690

Charlotte Mardale married a man she respected but did not love. After several years of married life she met Maurice Wainwright and the two fell in love at first sight. But Charlotte would not leave her husband. She determined, however, that her daughter Sylvia must marry only the man she loved. Lord Mardale was unwilling that Sylvia should marry the illegitimate Eric Danver, but Charlotte, using a bold expedient, succeeded in winning her husband's consent to the marriage.

---

Bookm 70:322 N '29 40w

"The plot and scene are formal; it is in characterization that Mr. Armstrong is strong. He has a predilection for English types, reminiscent of his more popular contemporary, Mr. Hugh Walpole. His prose is old-fashioned and faultless; a gratifying interlude between the jazz-tempo trivia of the Hemingway school and the minor yawping of innumerable would-be Dreisers."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 O 27 '29 280w

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 4 '30 570w

"This story of the everyday life of a fine group of English people is full of movement and tense feeling, although the events are ordinary enough. The life of Charlotte Mardale, in whom smolders the sleeping fury of love which bursts into flame for a few short moments, is one of remarkable beauty both in character and charm." E. D. W.

+ Chicago Daily Tribune p15 N 30 '29 150w

Reviewed by L. L. Irvine

Nation and Ath 45:436 Je 29 '29 180w

"A good novelist has written a bad book." E. S.

— New Statesman 33:372 Je 29 '29 800w

"An apparently quiet and restrained novel which conceals—in order to reveal it at the most effective moment—an astonishing depth and intensity of emotion."

+ N Y Times p6 O 27 '29 700w

Outlook 153:312 O 23 '29 160w

" 'The Sleeping Fury' has flat passages, passages in which Mr. Armstrong's imagination is rather executive than creative; but taken as a whole it is a sincere moving story, beautifully told." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 148:23 Jl 6 '29 630w

"Mr. Armstrong is as satisfying as deep water. There are no profundities of the spirit, no rarities of moral beauty that he does not penetrate. He is one of the few young novelists who do not hate their characters. On the other hand, it is the united sweet reasonableness of Charlotte, her husband, her daughter and her suitor which makes a solution of their problem a little too easy, even mechanical. Where else but in Mr. Armstrong's perfect world were found such characters without original sin?" V. S. P.

+ — Spec 143:26 Jl 6 '29 450w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 29 '29 500w

"Where we find Mr. Armstrong at fault in the recital of this moving history is, first, in a matter of construction. A more serious fault is the difference of character exhibited by Lord Mardale in Book IV. We have sought every excuse for Mr. Armstrong in this matter, but have reluctantly concluded that here he has failed to convince us. These, however, are but small faults in one of those rare novels that can be savoured from first to last with the leisurely enjoyment that comes only from the true literary gift."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p512 Je 27 '29 980w

ART of playwriting; lectures delivered at the Univ. of Pa. on the Mask and wig foundation. 134p $2 Press of the Univ. of Pa.

808.2 Drama 28-29251

"The present book is the result of an experiment at the University of Pennsylvania in the teaching of the art of writing plays. The Mask and Wig Club, a campus organization, in collaboration with the faculty, invited five playwrights—Jesse Lynch Williams, Langdon Mitchell, Lord Dunsany, Gilbert Emery and Rachel Crothers—to the campus for a period of two weeks each, to address a group of students and advise them on writing for the theatre. In addition to a brief foreword, the volume contains only the formal addresses of the lecturers." —Bookm

---

Bookm 69:xii Jl '29 150w

"Naturally, there is some repetition, but also a great deal of practical advice, and one or two surprising revelations, as Lord Dunsany's

ART of playwriting—Continued
that he wrote 'A Night at an Inn' between tea and dinner. Dunsany's whole lecture is casual to the point of being ungrammatical. It was evidently printed from a shorthand report. But it is full, too, of flashes of insight and happy phrase, and well repays reading." W. P. Eaton

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ja 20 '29 150w

"This little volume offers neither rules nor exercises. It does, however, present a background of information on the larger problems of playwrights—their audiences, their choice of themes and material, their ethics, and training and equipment—that should prove of value to the reader whether interested in writing plays himself or witnessing those of others."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 13:944 D '29 200w

ARVIN, NEWTON. Hawthorne. 303p $3.50 Little

B or 92 Hawthorne, Nathaniel 29-20043

The latest biography of Hawthorne is a psychological and critical analysis in which the outer facts of his life seem merely to serve as a framework for the study of the inner man, the subconscious mind of the writer out of which the characters of his novels grew.

Booklist 26:114 D '29

"On the purely biographical side, Mr. Arvin's book is distinguished less by novelty of material than by novelty of thesis. . . To this thesis as a dominant theme he attaches a concise, accurate, and gracefully written account of the familiar facts of Hawthorne's life, and an equally graceful analysis of his works." Lloyd Morris

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 O 13 '29 1050w

Boston Transcript p4 O 19 '29 500w

"Mr. Arvin has had the wisdom and courage to write a study of Hawthorne that relies for its interest on straightforward portraiture and especially on candid and careful literary criticism. Certainly the important task to be undertaken in relation to Hawthorne is the reestimation of his place in American letters and the analysis of his significance for our time. This task Mr. Arvin has done, and done uncommonly well. . . He has that quality so rare among English teachers, a sincere love of literature, and coupled with it is the capacity for discriminating appreciation which only a deep-rooted affection for literary excellence can bring." Granville Hicks

+ Nation 129:554 N 13 '29 650w

"Mr. Arvin sinks himself into his material. His work is thereby itself a monument to the dignity and the tragedy it tries to convey. His book is of the highest critical distinction." Edgar Johnson

+ N Y Evening Post p11m O 12 '29 950w

"Whether one agrees entirely with Mr. Arvin's thesis or not, it is impossible to read his book without having the pleasant experience of seeing new light (or, perhaps, light from an unexpected angle) thrown upon the works and character of Hawthorne. The assiduity and integrity of the critic are never in doubt. If he seems a little cold, a little dry at times, that may be forgiven him for the sake of the matter. Within the limits of his own scheme he has been successful." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p5 O 6 '29 2300w

"One of the most intelligent and well-written biographies that we have recently had in America." Pierre Loving

+ N Y World p11m N 3 '29 880w

"Mr Arvin may dwell overmuch in two chapters on the uncongeniality of New England to a brooding, imaginative, idealistic mind, with a singularly fertile gift of creating ideas, but he at least sees that Hawthorne was no victim of Calvinistic theology and Puritanical 'repression.' . . Mr Arvin's analysis of Hawthorne's literary production is searching, meticulous and sincere, and is marred only by the characteristic American intellectual tendency of the hour to finespun definition and formularization."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 17 '29 1100w

ASBURY, HERBERT. Carry Nation. 314p $3 Knopf

B or 92 Nation, Mrs Carry Amelia (Moore). Prohibition 29-21266

Mr Asbury's is a brilliant interpretation of this extraordinary woman, the "most industrious meddler and busy-body that even the Middle West, hotbed of the bizarre and fanatical, has ever produced." Her biographer shows how her first husband's excessive drinking touched the spark that started her on her career of smashing and destruction and how twenty-four years with her second husband went far to develop her combative nature. While he gets great fun from his subject, Mr Asbury gives Carry Nation credit for the impetus she gave to the anti-saloon movement.

Booklist 26:114 D '29

"Mr. Asbury regards Carry Nation as a freak of civilization and he sets out to explain her through her own divagations. The result is a very good book that alternately amuses and depresses the reader." Herbert Gorman

+ Bookm 70:331 N '29 320w

"Mr. Asbury has written as complete and intelligent a biography as any one could ask. I suspect it will be the final book about her, because nothing of importance has been left out, and when everything of importance has been put in the total result is not as interesting or amusing or exciting as the legend of Carry Nation which we carry about in the back of our minds. Mr. Asbury has used psychoanalysis just enough and not too much, and has been scrupulous about not putting scientific names on vague movements of the soul." Gilbert Seldes

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 S 29 '29 800w

"This is emphatically Mr. Asbury's best biographical work. It is witty, wise and never bitter. He is no longer the man who wrote 'Hatrack,' but his appreciation of the dramatic and sensational elements in Carry Nation's life never exceeds the bounds of good taste. He makes no attempt to ridicule a woman whom thousands of people derided during her saloon-wrecking days; and he makes her career vital and interesting." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p10 N 2 '29 720w

"Mrs. Nation died in 1911, eight years before the great dry victory. But there is no doubt that her soul goes marching on. The spectacle she affords is a dramatic one, and though Mr. Asbury cannot be said to have presented it with any profound philosophy or extraordinary insight he has made it exceedingly interesting." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p4 O 13 '29 1200w

" 'Carry Nation' is one of the funniest biographies of the year. It is not meant to be funny. It tells the story of a very serious old lady who went about smashing saloons in Kansas. And that is just why it becomes so ludicrous, so vastly entertaining. . . But Asbury's book is more than a detailed record of an old lady's tantrums. It is a slice of American life, a side light on mob psychology." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p17 O 2 '29 1000w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 153:589 D 11 '29 100w

"Mr. Asbury's biography is a fascinating account of her background and activities, straightforwardly written, and not the burlesque one might have expected from a 'modern' biographer of so odd and obsessed—if not actually crazy—a person as Carry Nation was." Coley Taylor

+ Survey 63:173 N 1 '29 550w

ASHBURN, PERCY MOREAU. History of the Medical department of the United States army; with an introd. by Merritte W. Ireland. 448p $5 Houghton

353.6 United States—Army—Medical department. United States Surgeon-general office 29-12663

Into this history of the army medical corps is written a stirring record of achievement. Compiled by the librarian of the Army medical library, the book contains quotations concerning the medical department from documents and personal accounts of the Indian wars, the Spanish American war, and so on down to the European war, giving also a record of the peace time achievement of the medical corps and biographical sketches of its surgeon generals.

---

"Every present and former member of the Medical Department of the U. S. Army ought to read this book, which is the first comprehensive and satisfactory history of this extremely important branch of our military forces." J. A. Tobey

+ Am J Pub Health 19:1273 N '29 400w

Boston Transcript p5 Jl 6 '29 520w

"A book of the greatest consequence for all officers of the United States Army, and especially for those of the department with which it deals, Colonel Ashburn's volume ought also to have no small appeal for civilian medical men, while for the lay reader it is full of many and varied interests. The author has put into it so much enthusiastic interest, and has unearthed and brought together so great a quantity of rich and significant material, that wherever one dips into it he discovers something worth reading for its facts and fascinating because of its human qualities."

+ N Y Times p15 Je 16 '29 420w

ASHBY, THOMAS. Some Italian scenes and festivals. 179p il $2.50 Dutton [6s Methuen]

914.5 Italy—Description and travel. Festivals

29-28815

An English resident of Rome describes in this book characteristic festivals and processions held in different sections of Italy, in rural and mountain districts, to mark the observation of certain holy days. The illustrations depict scenes during the observances.

---

"Aside from the information it offers to students of comparative religion and of folklore, this little volume of Dr. Ashby's contains much that can be read with appreciation by the average reader. . . In each case the description is clear and colorful and portrays with precision the gayety and the drama of the occasion."

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 21 '29 150w

Reviewed by Sylva Norman

Nation and Ath 45:sup137 Ap 27 '29 100w

"Dr. Ashby, out of long residence in Italy, has written with precision and color of the festivals and processions which delight the traveler in Italy, giving details of their history and significance as well as descriptions of their performance."

+ Outlook 152:672 Ag 21 '29 30w

"The value of the work is enhanced by copious references to the literature of the various subjects treated, but it owes its chief value to the unrivalled knowledge of its author, one of our chief authorities on ancient and medieval Italy. The enterprising tourist in Italy will pick up many a hint for new excursions well out of the beaten track. This is a book to buy and keep by one for reference."

+ Sat R 147:514 Ap 13 '29 110w

"Apart from descriptions of quaint customs and passing references to the more striking and elaborate processions, surprisingly little has been written on the subject of recent years; and those who have sought in vain in the guidebooks for accounts of the festivals of different regions will therefore appreciate Dr. Ashby's scholarly work."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p175 Mr 7 '29 1120w

ASHLEY, MABEL PIERCE. Other crowd. 231p $1.75 Harcourt

29-20013

Sally Hunter went to spend the summer in Maine with her cousin Susanne. She found that Susanne belonged to a lively crowd of very modern young people whose pleasures consisted in bridge, tea, dances and much automobiling. Then there was the other crowd, led by Jerry and Carol, who spent their days sailing and picnicing and playing tennis. Sally liked both crowds and spent a happy summer vibrating between the two.

---

Reviewed by O. M. Fuller

N Y World p11m D 8 '29 30w

Sat R of Lit 6:462 N 23 '29 80w

"A lively book for girls."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '29 80w

ASHLEY, SIR WILLIAM JAMES. Bread of our forefathers; an inquiry in economic history. 206p il $4.25 (12s 6d) Oxford

338.1 Bread. Grain trade—Great Britain. Agriculture—Great Britain [28-18753]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"The present volume is a contribution to the history of agriculture of outstanding and permanent significance." A. P. Usher

+ Am Econ R 19:104 Mr '29 400w

"This posthumous volume is of great value to the student of agricultural history, partly because of the information it gives, but even more because of the critical analyses of sources and the suggestions for further research in the field. . . The sources used by Sir William Ashley are many and varied and show the breadth and depth of his reading and the patience of his search for evidence." A. L. Dunham

+ Am Hist R 34:320 Ja '29 700w

"The book is a very pretty bit of learned historical research, a fitting capstone to the work of this distinguished economic historian."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 4 '28 220w

"Its unusual information regarding food products, the sidelights it throws on social customs, and its copious references to literature, medieval and modern, suggest its value to students of such subjects."

+ J Home Econ 21:131 F '29 50w

ASHMORE, EDWARD BAILEY. Air defence. 179p il $3.40 Longmans

940.44 European war, 1914-1918—Aerial operations. Aeronautics, Military 29-17538

"General Ashmore was responsible for the defence of London during the last two years of the Great War and invented the system of control known as the 'L. A. D. A.' which still exists at the present day." (Spec) The book shows the general tendency of raiding and defence, especially from 1915 to 1918. There is a chapter on German and French air defence, a table of airship raids, one of aeroplane raids, and an index.

---

"He has written an excellent little book, lucid, temperate, and convincing; and his analysis of the effect of defensive measures, more especially the balloon 'apron,' contains much that will be new to most of his readers." C. E. Fayle

+ Nation and Ath 46:260 N 16 '29 160w

"Major-General Ashmore has given us a lucid and authoritative account of what British airmen and gunners did to repel the air raiders. His book is unusually interesting for its keen analysis of air defence as a problem in military science."

+ — New Statesman 34:60 O 19 '29 850w

Spec 143:549 O 19 '29 260w

ASHTON, HELEN, pseud. See Jordan, H. R.

ASHTON, JAMES M. Ice-bound. 235p il $3.50 Putnam

919.8 Arctic regions. Siberia—Description and travel 28-25334

The author is a trader in the Siberian Arctic. The book contains the story of his personal experiences among the Eskimos and other peoples of the Arctic, and an additional record of his travels in the photographs and map of the course followed by his ship, the Iskum.

---

Booklist 25:207 F '29

ASHTON, J. M.—Continued

"This is a book by a man who used his eyes and lacked that objectionable 'superiority' which colors most popular books about primitive peoples. He met natives on the basis of their common humanity, as individuals to be studied, learned from, traded with fairly and helped when possible. His amateur doctoring is a nice little story all by itself."
C. L. Skinner
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 F 24 '29 360w

"Mr Ashton's book is interesting in its easy study of the ethnological conditions in the Arctic, it is entertaining in showing what a cruise in such unfamiliar seas develops and it is well worth reading for all its varied contents." J. S. B.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 5 '29 500w
Cleveland Open Shelf p70 My '29

"Without making any claims to being a literary or scientific production the narrative is readable and, at points, distinctly valuable."
Nation 128:sup491 Ap 17 '29 130w

"A travel book of decidedly unusual merit."
+ New Statesman 32:644 F 23 '29 150w

"Mr. Ashton had remarkable opportunities for observing native life at first hand, from the building of the native houses to the informal and polygamous family life within. He noted many interesting habits and customs among these simple, hardy and self-reliant folk."
+ N Y Times p44 D 2 '28 480w
Pratt p29 spring '29

ASHTON, MARY GRACE. Shackles of the free. 324p $2.50 Stokes [7s 6d Murray]
29-5704

Diana is a dea ex machina to her friends who reward her unfailingly with their adoration. She persuades Sir Gavin, whose son has disappointed him by becoming a priest, to release another youth from a monastery and start him off on an art career. She persuades Ruth, whose husband is incurably ill, that it is no sin to love the young artist. But in the end the religious convictions of all these others prove stronger than Diana's blundering if well-meant machinations.

---

"Give the author five years and she will have experience to round out her uncanny observation; then her characters will not float in a void, giving out a pale melodramatic light."
— + Bookm 70:xxiv S '29 110w
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 16 '29 120w

"This story is altogether—or almost altogether, moral—but there is just one defect in it. It is too dull."
— Boston Transcript p4 My 11 '29 260w

"A story of deadly earnestness. The locale is England, evidently modern England, but the characters and episodes are tinged with a faintly pervasive Victorianism."
N Y Times p14 Je 23 '29 400w

"Her novel is cumbersome and its characters suffocated with ideas. Numerous characters shackled to a confusing variety of shifting passions grope their circuitous way through a plot revealing a complicated assortment of interrelations. Simple fiction of style and theme would have made for more artistic work."
— Sat R of Lit 5:1057 My 25 '29 120w

"This is a serious book, and seriousness is a quality to be prized; but Miss Ashton has not succeeded in imparting to her problem enough of the universal to make it generally interesting."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p738 O 11 '28 200w
Wis Lib Bul 25:323 O '29

ASHTON, WINIFRED. See Dane, C., pseud.

ASHTON-WOLFE, HARRY. Crimes of violence and revenge. 360p il $2.50 Houghton
364 Outlaws. Crime and criminals 29-10751

The author as interpreter at the British and French courts and associate of the famous Bertillon writes from personal knowledge of the deeds of violence which he describes, crimes committed in Italy, Corsica, France, Spain and Hungary. Contents: Nonce Romanetti, the bandit of Corsica; Carmen Perez de Silva, the beloved bandit: a story of Mexico; Pianetti, the chamois hunter: a tale of the black hand; Jules Bonnot and Octave Garnier, the Paris motor bandits; Donatelli: a romance of Naples and Calabria; Jean Cavaillac: the terror of Marseilles; Red Lopez and Jack Harley: a tale of the West; Dimiran the monster; Nietzsy and Michael: a romance of the Carpathians; The tragedy of Schorle and Hencker, the bandits of the Black forest; El Lobo, killer of bulls and men: a tale of sunny Spain.

---

"Far more interesting than the clever plots devised by detective story writers."
+ Bookm 69:xxvi Je '29 60w

"The author hardly provides so much as a date to lend conviction to tales which sadly need documentation, factually true as they undoubtedly are."
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ag 18 '29 160w

"Being true, they are more exciting, more unbelievable than any fictitious set of adventures could be without exciting the suspicions of the reader. It is a book for those who delight in blood and thunder and gory action. Neither the plots nor the characters are moderate. On the other hand, they are vivid, well told, and full of the most exciting kind of adventure."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 29 '29 180w

"Mr. Ashton-Wolfe has a capable and effective pen for the writing down of such tales as these about the desperate criminals with whom he has come in contact."
+ N Y Times p14 My 5 '29 380w

"Ashton-Wolfe has again delivered an entertaining collection of stories. Of all the men who thumb through criminal records for material he seems to be able to find the most interesting stuff. His fine journalistic style gives a freshness to his stories that is often missing in crime books." G: Joel
+ N Y World p11m My 5 '29 100w

ASHTON-WOLFE, HARRY, and LOCARD, EDMOND. Invisible web; strange tales of the French Sûreté. 284p il $2.50 Stokes [18s Hurst]
364 Crime and criminals—France 29-21513

Stories of crime founded, according to the authors, Ashton-Wolfe and Locard, upon actual police documents supplied from Lyons, France. The tales comprise the adventures of detectives in the French Intelligence department—the "invisible web" spread over the country to catch criminals. The volume contains eight episodes of thrilling crime-cases, with photographic illustrations.

---

"Both authors are expert criminologists. One does not find here the carefully balanced detective-fiction plot, but stories weird almost beyond credibility."
+ Bookm 70:xxxiv O '29 50w
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p31 N 24 '29 100w
Cleveland Open Shelf p151 D '29

ASQUITH, LADY CYNTHIA MARY EVELYN (CHARTERIS), comp. Funny bone; new humorous stories. 303p $2 Scribner [7s 6d Jarrolds]
Short stories—Collections 28-27587

For this new anthology Lady Cynthia Asquith turns to the field of the humorous short story and gathers samples from the works of P. G. Wodehouse, E. F. Benson, I. A. Williams, George A. Birmingham; Compton Mackenzie, E. E. Somerville and Martin Ross, Denis Mackail, Stacy Aumonier, J. Storer Clouston, D. B. Wyndham Lewis, Alfred Sidgwick, Elizabeth Bowen, L. P. Hartley, Hilda Hughes, Helen Simpson, Norman Venner, J. B. Morton, Lady Cynthia Asquith.

---

Booklist 25:213 F '29

"The main thing about a funny story is that it should be funny and with one or two exceptions (perhaps too subtle) these are."

+ — Christian Century 46:1040 Ag 21 '29 50w

"For a series supposedly funny, these are the least likely to cause side-splitting of any stories seen anywhere for some time. The situations are, in many cases, quite humorous, but the authors have depended entirely on these to carry the tales. All the writers represented are strangely alike in the unhumorous manner of their telling."

— N Y Times p13 D 30 '28 220w

"None of the stories has previously appeared in book form, and together they offer a rare feast of varied entertainment."

+ Spec 141:463 O 6 '28 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 20 '29 180w

Wis Lib Bul 25:31 Ja '29

ASQUITH, LADY CYNTHIA MARY EVELYN (CHARTERIS), and others, eds. Shudders. 268p $2 Scribner [7s 6d Hutchinson]

Short stories—Collections 29-24380

A collection of tales of the supernatural, for the most part, tending slightly more toward the romantic or sentimental than the horrible for the sake of terror-exploitation. The fifteen authors represented are English.

---

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 N 24 '29 150w

"An excellent collection." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 153:350 O 30 '29 50w

"A better collection could hardly have been brought together. They include every variety of horror. . . . The Cat Jumps, by Elizabeth Bowen, is probably the most horrible in the book, since it is the most realistic, but there are also stories by Cynthia Asquith, Walter de la Mare, L. P. Hartley, and others, which should leave the nerves of very few utterly unwrung."

+ Spec 143:504 O 12 '29 150w

"Lady Cynthia has collected some unusual and rather harrowing stories."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p900 N 7 '29 230w

ASQUITH, HERBERT. Roon. 308p $2.50 Scribner [7s 6d Hutchinson]

29-11647

The heroine, Roon Harnis, is steered by her practical aunt into marriage with a rising young politician. Roon's heart remains untouched but she proves a dutiful wife and does her utmost to further Shandon's ambitions. Love comes to her in the person of Dick Napier, a soldier, but not for long. Dick is killed in the war and Roon drowns herself.

---

"There is none of the endless discussion of politics so often met in the English novel. Mr. Asquith's descriptions of the English countryside have a quiet sincerity about them that bespeaks more than a desire to do 'fine' writing."

+ Bookm 70:xxi S '29 190w

"Despite the dramatic theme, the drama misses fire. There is a certain elegance about Mr. Asquith's writing. But there is also a constraint, a stilted weight to his words that comes between the reader and Roon."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 23 '29 400w

"Mr. Asquith's pen lacks magic. It is a slowly moving, blunt pen, and is dipped in pale ink."

— Boston Transcript p2 Je 26 '29 320w

" 'Roon' is a blameless book. . . . The characters never come to life. Mr. Asquith's best quality is an acute visual sense, which gives a burnish to everything he describes." Raymond Mortimer

— + Nation and Ath 45:112 Ap 27 '29 350w

"There is little originality in the characters; and the writing, though it sometimes enforces conviction by its unassumingly low tone, more often depresses by a respectable flatness." E. S.

— New Statesman 33:184 My 18 '29 160w

"A smooth and competent piece of work, with all the virtues and some of the faults that we are accustomed to regard as peculiarly English. It is not so much colorless as evenly and neutrally colored. It has a stillness and restraint, and a careful abstention from overstatement, which sometimes threaten the reader's interest. Yet, there is strength and drive in it, partly accumulated by the restraint, partly curbed and directed by it."

— + N Y Times p9 Je 2 '29 470w

"Mr. Asquith's new novel is like a picture—an English landscape with figures in the foreground; and his art, though not exactly pictorial, has many of the limitations and possibilities of the painter's. . . . To many, the characters in 'Roon' may seem too insubstantial; but they have to be, or the picture could not contain them. For Mr. Asquith, the setting is nearly as important as the people, the inanimate as the animate. . . . He slightly dehumanizes them in order to make them more like flowers; and what they lose in nature, they gain in beauty, the beauty that informs every page of his book." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 147:649 My 11 '29 680w

"The conversation is priggish, and the story proceeds awkwardly. The war episodes, however, are alive; and a certain amiability of temper invests some of the book with a gentle charm, for all its imperfections." R. A. Taylor

— + Spec 142:sup706 My 4 '29 100w

"The virtues of the novel lie in the grave, leisurely unfolding of the tale, which moves onwards like a very slow river between flat banks. In the rather quiet melancholy with which Roon's story proceeds an authentic piece of English life—a little unrelievedly the life of 'country house' people—is woven before our eyes. . . . What is wanting to this novel throughout is the iron of necessity: an element for the absence of which no amount of casual beauty and pathos compensates."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p358 My 2 '29 420w

ASTLEY, HUGH JOHN DUKENFIELD. Biblical anthropology; compared with and il. by the folklore of Europe and the customs of primitive peoples. 262p $4.50 (12s 6d) Oxford

220.857 Anthropology, Biblical 29-15728

In the opening chapter Dr Astley thus states the purpose and scope of his book: "Our endeavour will be to discover the bearing of Anthropology and the traces left by Animism and Totemism on the pages of the Old Testament."

---

"His latest book throws light on many passages in the Bible which would else remain obscure, as well as upon that general trend of Hebrew traditions which shows the extent to which they were influenced by the ideas of primitive man."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 24 '29 550w

"It has to be said that Dr. Astley covers ground which has been covered very thoroughly by other writers."

New Statesman 33:128 My 4 '29 160w

N Y Times p11 Ag 18 '29 290w

Sat R of Lit 6:546 D 7 '29 400w

"Repetition, discursiveness and a looseness of phraseology usually characterize books composed of articles which have already appeared in periodicals, and Biblical Anthropology is not an exception. The uninstructed reader may be interested, but the anthropologist will ask what necessity there is to plough afresh a field already well cultivated. There is a good deal of confused thinking, and frequent digressions do not make for clear exposition."

ASTLEY, H. J: D.—Continued
— Spec 142:716 My 4 '29 120w

"We have wondered, as we have read the book, whether it might not have been an improvement if the author had broken away from the original form and, while using the older material, had worked the subject up into a more systematic form. The origin of the book in occasional articles has led to undue repetition at some points."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p732 S 26 '29 1200w

ASTON, SIR GEORGE GREY (GEORGE SOUTHCOTE, pseud.). Biography of the late Marshal Foch. 483p il $5 Macmillan [24s Hutchinson]

B or 92 Foch, Ferdinand. European war, 1914-1918—Campaigns—France 29-27648

A complete biography of Foch. "The records are mostly English, and it is no minor tribute to the French generalissimo that he should appear so lofty a character and his command of the allied troops so magnificent a performance when looked at 'through English eyes.'" (N Y Times)

---

Boston Transcript p2 D 18 '29 1050w

"A singularly uninteresting book. There is nothing in it about Foch which has not long been known. . . Of a biographer we ask something more than a tribute to Foch's militant patriotism and strategic skill. We want to learn something of Foch the man. For all his singleness of purpose and astounding lack of other than military interests, there must be something human about him. But one looks for it in vain in this 'authentic biography.'" F. R. Dulles
— N Y Evening Post p13m D 21 '29 500w

"General Aston has written the first complete biography of Marshall Foch in English. M. Recouly, French journalist, was among the first of the Marshal's friends and confidants to produce a record of his private thoughts on the war and the peace. The two books faithfully confirm and support each other, both as to a knowledge of the character of Marshall Foch and as to the peculiar qualities of his leadership." L. V. Updegraff
+ N Y Times p5 D 8 '29 1500w

"Sir George Aston's biography has the high merits of clarity and 'readability'—difficult virtues when the canvas is so vast that it stretches a thousand miles in a material sense, and, imaginatively, beyond living ken. . . He has written a thoroughly satisfactory and useful book; not, perhaps, the final biography of the great Marshal, but one without a dull page."
+ Spec 143:723 N 16 '29 750w

Springf'd Republican p6e D 15 '29 120w

"Sir George Aston's book is a complete biography of Foch. It is written with imagination and insight, and though a popular work would be a valuable one had it been done more carefully. As it is, it has the air of having been 'slung together.'"
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p886 N 7 '29 400w

ASTROV, NIKOLAI I. Municipal government and the all-Russian union of towns. (In War and Russian government) $3.50 Yale univ. press

352.047 Municipal government—Russia

"Beginning with a sketch of the history of Russian municipal government from the time when, in 1758, Catherine II formally recognized municipal rights and privileges, Mr. Astrov goes on to assemble a mass of information regarding municipal finance, the history of the All-Russian Union of Towns and the widely varied war work carried on under municipal auspices. The record of the towns in such matters as public health and sanitation, hospital service in all its forms, relief of refugees and soldiers' dependents and the provision of munitions, food, clothing and medical supplies, bears comparison well with similar local activities in the other belligerent countries. To most students of the war far the larger part of the data presented will be absolutely new."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"Mr. Astrov, formerly Mayor of Moscow, opens an unfamiliar field in his remarkable study of the Russian towns during the war period." W: MacDonald
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ag 4 '29 180w

Boston Transcript p8 My 18 '29 280w

ATHERTON, MRS GERTRUDE FRANKLIN (HORN). Dido, queen of hearts. 384p $2.50 Liveright [7s 6d Chapman & H.]

Dido, queen of Carthage—Fiction 29-22919

With a wealth of detail, Mrs Atherton tells the tragic story of Queen Dido, the beautiful princess Elissa of Tyre, who founded a great city and had her way in all things except her luckless love for Æneas.

---

"In writing about a recent novel Hugh Walpole says that he began it with the conviction that 'This is well written and it is going to be dull.' For 'Dido,' the verdict may be precisely reversed, for it is always interesting and never well written. This latest addition to that imposing list of successes continues its author's triumphant disregard of nuance and subtlety, both in thought and phrase. It revives the old guess that never in her life has she listened to a sentence nor esteemed a word as something in itself of value. But what matters a word or the structure of prose to vitality such as hers? And if she has not a good ear she has an excellent eye. She has a gift for the concrete." Lorine Pruette
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 D 15 '29 900w

Reviewed by W: E. Harris
Boston Transcript p2 D 21 '29 1500w

"The book has no high spots; it is merely the competent work of an author who has done much better things. It should, however, prove entertaining and instructive to high-school students struggling through their Virgil, especially since Mrs. Atherton shares with most of them the opinion that the pious Aeneas was something of a prig, and was unconscionably long-winded in his narrations."
— + Nation 130:51 Ja 8 '30 180w

"Combining the worst features of each, her prose style here is a blend of the archaic and the arch. Nor is she more successful with characters. I cannot imagine who would enjoy this novel." Rolfe Humphries
— New Repub 61:119 D 18 '29 250w

Reviewed by Margaret Wallace
N Y Evening Post p11m N 9 '29 750w

"Mrs. Atherton avoids the current fashion of turning the legends of the race into vehicles for sophisticated satire, and elects instead to sing of arms and the woman. . . She turns what was intended as a piece of sentimental propaganda by a political poet into the basis for a lurid and feministic romance."
+ — N Y Times p26 N 10 '29 720w

"Outside of the really gorgeous scenic and costume effects, the jewels, the slaves and the fountains, Dido's story seems thin. Somehow we wish Mrs. Atherton had chosen a more original and creative subject on which to hang her sumptuous style. Ever since John Erskine did archeological work on Helen of Troy novelists have been digging up old mythological and Biblical chestnuts and have been spicing them for modern consumption. Enough of this sort of thing is enough." Marie Luhrs
— + N Y World p11m N 3 '29 300w

"Mrs. Atherton's version of the Dido legend makes an absorbing story, a more interesting novel than The Jealous Gods. Dido becomes, in her hands, a human as well as a tragic figure." F. L. Robbins
+ Outlook 153:427 N 13 '29 360w

"Æneas appears shorn of glamour, for though the Carthaginians admit he is goddess-born, and much is made of it, Mrs. Atherton's attitude towards him is agnostic and her scepticism infects us. The story has no wings, it remains earth-bound. But we must admit that Dido's history was probably like this, though we would fain have it otherwise." L. P. Hartley

Sat R 148:618 N 23 '29 200w

"The portrait of Dido is well drawn and well sustained; but she is a less passionate creature than Virgil's creation. The thin-blooded Anna and the hot-blooded Tadmalek, too, are well drawn. The minor characters are less convincing."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p1078 D 19 '29 550w

ATHERTON, MRS GERTRUDE FRANKLIN (HORN). Jealous gods; a processional novel of the fifth century, B.C. (concerning one Alcibiades) (Eng title Vengeful gods). 452p $2.50 Liveright [7s 6d Murray]

Alcibiades—Fiction 28-25179

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Booklist 25:164 Ja '29

Cleveland Open Shelf p76 My '29

Reviewed by E. G. Grady

N Y World p11m N 11 '28 300w

Pratt p38 summer '29

"It is uniformly informative, and it owes its interest, which waxes and wanes, rather to its information than to its narrative-power, though there are times when it is nourished by both. . . An excellent historical novel, not inspired, but adequate, representative, and complete." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 147:20 Ja 5 '29 660w

"As in 'The Immortal Marriage' the archaeological fidelity is more industrious than inspired. In a second printing, the reiterated errors in the spelling of proper names should be corrected. But the canvas is large, the purpose is serious, the material is important. If the great masters are not at hand, Mrs. Atherton's picture of Alcibiades deserves recognition." A. C. E. Allinson

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:621 Ja 26 '29 700w

ATKINS, GAIUS GLENN. Making of the Christian mind. 336p $3 Doubleday, Doran [8s 6d Heinemann]

270 Christianity. Church history 28-30693

The author, professor of homiletics in Auburn theological seminary, studies the development of Christianity and the Christian ideal from its source in the preaching and teaching of Christ through its changing phases, doctrinal, institutional, mystic, monastic, humanitarian, till today.

---

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 10 '29 420w

"I have no hesitation in recommending this as a book well worth buying, reading and keeping for reference and study. . . It will be most intelligible and most valuable to those who are already well acquainted with the external history of the church and with the details of the history of Christian thought. For all such it will afford an extraordinarily valuable organization and interpretation of the development of Christianity." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 46:143 Ja 31 '29 800w

"While he does not profess to be a specialist in Christian history, Doctor Atkins shows that his knowledge is both broad and accurate enough for his purpose. His thought is vigorous and fresh, and his style modern without loss of dignity. No Christian reader can fail to receive from the book valuable stimulus and an enlargement of his mental and spiritual horizon. It is a book to keep by one and reread at intervals, one of the books that Bacon says should be 'chewed and digested.' " H: C. Vedder

+ Crozer Q 6:370 Jl '29 280w

"Atkins calls his volume a contour history of Christianity, and a better description would be hard to find. His approach is sympathetic. People who wonder how the church got that way ought to read this book." C: S. Brown

Survey 62:145 Ap 15 '29 110w

ATKINS, GAIUS GLENN. Reinspecting Victorian religion; a back to normal critique; being the Samuel Harris lectures on literature and life given at Bangor theological seminary in nineteen hundred and twenty-eight. 151p $1.75 (7s 6d) Macmillan

821 Browning, Robert. Tennyson, Alfred Tennyson, 1st baron. Religion in literature 28-22175

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"Those who, like the present reviewer, expected in this volume a stimulating historical study such as Dr. Atkins gave in his splendid 'Modern Religious Cults and Movements,' will be somewhat disappointed. This book deals, as the original title of lectures clearly stated, with the reaction of two Victorian poets to the great drama of life. It has little if anything to say of the general religious conditions of the Victorian age, or the steps that led from the religion of that period to the religion of our own." J. G. Gilkey

Christian Century 46:17 Ja 3 '29 550w

" 'Reinspecting Victorian Religion' exhibits appreciation of literary values, an understanding of philosophical matters, and a pleasing gift of expression." J. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 19 '29 780w

ATTENBOROUGH, GLADYS MARY. Rich young man; a comedy with digressions. 309p $2.50 Stokes [7s 6d Cassell]

29-21218

The story of Samela Mallassy, whose best friend and adviser is the learned Mr Twig, from whom she receives her knowledge of books and culture in general. Then she meets the rich young man—Roy Melincourt—to whom she says, "I should like to marry the rich young man after he had sold all that he had and given it to the poor." And she did.

---

"A mental background is fine equipment for a writer. But a background need not come to the fore. It is not necessary to cram a book with quotations and references and epigrams culled from the somber perusals of academic years. It is not necessary; more than that it has a stifling effect. . . If 'The Rich Young Man' could be passed through a strainer it might leave a limpid, rich residue." V. P. Ross

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p41 S 29 '29 380w

Boston Transcript p4 N 9 '29 420w

"I have read many bad novels in the last six years, but none I thought so objectionable as 'The Rich Young Man.' The whimsicality of Mr. Locke and the washy idealism of Mr. A. S. M. Hutchinson are combined in a novel compared to which Mr. Frankau's books seem intellectual, and Mr. Arlen's honest. . . No student of the modern novel should miss 'The Rich Young Man.' It is unique in its vulgarity." Raymond Mortimer

— Nation and Ath 45:114 Ap 27 '29 120w

" 'A comedy with digressions' is what G. M. Attenborough calls 'The Rich Young Man.' Unfortunately, there are more digressions than there is comedy—and more propaganda than either."

— N Y Times p18 N 3 '29 220w

" 'The Rich Young Man' has an illusive charm. Its sub-title, 'A Comedy With Digressions,' indicates its whimsical delicacy. In the first place, it conforms to the requirements of a simple novel; it has a plot carried to its logical conclusion; its characters are real men and women; the movement is sufficiently rapid to hold the interest of the reader although it is not exciting enough to keep one up all night to finish it. The style and technique are good." K. C. Pierce

+ Portland Evening News p5 D 4 '29 350w

ATTENBOROUGH, G. M.—Continued

"The story is pleasantly written and amusing, but Samela's endless utterance of mouldy platitudes as if they were words of iconoclastic wisdom tends to grow a little wearisome."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:256 O 12 '29 250w

"Samela's literary erudition and her unflagging whimsicality are an irritation that destroys all enjoyment."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p364 My 2 '29 140w

ATWATER, MARY MEIGS. Shuttle-craft book of American hand-weaving. 275p il $6.50 (28s) Macmillan

677.028 Weaving. Textile industry and fabrics. Textile design 28-23648

A handbook of the art of weaving in America fully illustrated with full page reproductions of early patterns, and with detailed diagrams and instructions for the use of the modern weaver.

---

Booklist 25:150 Ja '29

J Home Econ 21:56 Ja '29 70w

Pratt p22 winter '29

"Although the book contains a great deal of technical information it nevertheless attracts the attention and interest not only of the weaver, novice or expert, but also has an appeal for everyone interested in American art and handicraft."

+ School Arts M 28:648 Je '29 160w

"An important addition to the books on hand weaving. . . The directions for setting up, dressing the loom and weaving are clear and concise."

+ Wis Lib Bul 25:26 Ja '29

AUBREY-FLETCHER, HENRY LANCELOT (HENRY WADE, pseud.). The Duke of York's steps. 350p $2 Payson & Clarke [7s 6d Constable]

29-26900

Sir Garth Fratton, English financier, was known to have suffered from an aneurism of the heart, so it was no surprise to his physician when Sir Garth collapsed and died on the Duke of York's steps. But when it leaked out that the financier had died after being jostled by a strange man the case began to assume other proportions. It took some time to sift the evidence and trace the murderer.

---

Bookm 70:xxxiii O '29 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 8 '29 130w

"Mr. Wade, in his story, holds tight to reality and in consequence his book, we think, is one of the best mystery tales of the year." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p4m S 14 '29 100w

+ N Y Times p32 O 6 '29 220w

"As in most detective stories, the characters are unreal and unconvincing, and we feel little interest in what befalls them. The plot's the thing, and the plot here is good but not remarkable. A readable story, but we expected something more original from Mr. Wade." L. P. Hartley

— + Sat R 148:54 Jl 13 '29 90w

"Mr. Henry Wade has already two excellent detective stories to his credit, and in The Duke of York's steps he adds yet another. The final test of this type of tale lies of course in the reader's feeling as to the adequacy or otherwise of the explanation which sooner or later—the later the better—dissolves away the last elements of mystification. There can be no doubt but that this book passes that test with colours flying."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p534 Jl 4 '29 300w

AUBRY, OCTAVE. Phantom emperor; the romance and tragedy of Napoleon III; tr. from the French by Frederick H. Martens. 351p $2.50 Harper

Napoléon III, emperor of the French—Fiction 29-20594

Fictionized biography of Napoleon III, nephew of the first Napoleon. The book pictures him as a kindly man, not the sinister influence his enemies considered him.

---

"All the facts are historical, but the interest and the method of presentation are those of romance. . . Few lives lend themselves better to novelistic treatment than that of Napoleon III. He aspired, attained and suffered almost in the same degree as his uncle; and he was both more mysterious and more human. He requires far more delicacy of touch and sympathetic insight, and these rare qualities Octave Aubry possesses. Even to the Empress, whom he considers as the evil genius of the regime, he is scrupulously fair." Albert Guerard

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 D 29 '29 1150w

Boston Transcript p10 N 16 '29 900w

"The author has written biography like fiction and given a clear and often colorful picture of the politics and ideas of the Second Empire, but it seems a little doubtful whether those ideas justified the rather minute treatment Aubry has given them." Gustavus Myers

N Y World p11m D 15 '29 150w

AUFRICHT-RUDA, HANS. Case for the defendant; tr. by Bernard Miall, with an afterword by Jacob Wassermann. 308p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Allen & U.]

La Roncière, Emile François Guillaume Clément, comte de—Fiction 29-7072

The story is based on an historical incident which occurred in 1834 in the garrison town of Saumur, France. A neurotic young girl, the daughter of a general, writes incriminating notes to herself and signs them with the initials of a young officer of the garrison. On the evidence of the notes, the officer is arrested and convicted, making no effort to defend himself.

---

"Herr Aufricht-Ruda has reconstructed from his own imagination many elements that might plausibly have led up to such an affair. This task he has accomplished with no small skill. . . Modern Germany has turned out few pieces of fiction as powerful as this."

+ Bookm 69:xxiv My '29 110w

"Mr. Aufricht-Ruda's psychology is subtle and penetrating, his literary style powerfully impersonal. His creations are unusually instinct with life, and it is to be hoped that more of his novels will be published in this country."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p36 Ap 14 '29 180w

"Hans Aufricht-Ruda has molded a dramatic psychological analysis of a most searching nature. . . The deftness with which the author depicts and explains the mental gymnastics of his characters suggests the skill of a specialist in psychopathy."

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 25 '29 230w

"A convincing and restrained picture of the abnormal mental processes of an overwrought girl."

Cleveland Open Shelf p111 Jl '29

"The author pitchforks his characters with such nonchalance into this pathological jungle that it is difficult not to accept it as a piece of reality. The characters themselves from time to time start into action so vivid or speech so lucid that the confusion and tongues in the intervening spaces are almost pardoned. It is an ungainly piece of work, something caught at an unhappy stage, growing out of its coat while you watch it." L. D. Irvine

+ — Nation and Ath 44:692 F 16 '29 180w

"He tells his story with no explanations except those that are implicit, no theorizing, no psychoanalytical jargon. The two people he has created are probably very different from the two that actually took part in that horrible affair; but we recognize them both as real. And, by the delicacy and sympathy of the observation, the story even ceases to be horrible and becomes humanly pathetic." L. S. Morris

+ New Repub 59:79 Je 5 '29 350w

"The book is written in a formal, clipped style which tends to lessen its effectiveness. The formal syllables are a barrier to the development of that essential sympathetic kinship between reader and character."
— + N Y Times p19 Je 9 '29 430w

"With an admirable simplicity, a rare economy of effort, the facts of the narrative are made to speak for themselves." Garrett Mattingly
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1067 Je 1 '29 1000w

AUGUR, pseud. See Poliakoff, V.

AUSLANDER, JOSEPH. Hell in harness. 41p il $1.75 Doubleday, Doran

811 29-18876

A narrative of underworld life, in rhymed verse. The story is told in brief episodes by its hero, The Kid; Father Caffery, chaplain of Sing Sing; and the author. The Kid is in a gun-fight in an East Side joint, and Spike the Rat's girl runs off with him. Later there is another fight, the Rat is shot and the Kid sent up to Sing Sing for execution.

For biographical sketch of the author see Boston Transcript p1 Ag 3 '29

"There is a specific kind of vitality and red-blooded merit in the kind of thing Mr. Auslander does in 'Hell in Harness.' Whether everyone would consider it the best material for poetry is another question; at any rate, I am certain that no one but a real poet could write it as Mr. Auslander does." Ruth Lechlitner
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 O 13 '29 620w

" 'Hell in Harness' defeats the intention of the author. For he has talent enough to make this material into a remarkable low-life epic. Instead he has given us merely the ingredients of an unsavory stew which tastes no better than it smells." D. F. G.
— Boston Transcript p2 S 18 '29 730w

"All the qualities that make Mr. Auslander a thoroughly good poet are present in it—the intensity of vision and expression, the vigor, the consummately clever manipulation of technique. It is fast in its narrative, dramatic in its incident. Yet the poem fails of worth. This failure one must ascribe to Mr. Auslander's attitude toward his subject." Lionel Trilling
— + N Y Evening Post p7m S 21 '29 650w

"The poem is a damning accusation against much of the present social order, and it gains effectiveness by the fact that its crusading aspect is entirely accessory to its purpose of telling a dramatic story." F: G. Fassett, Jr.
+ Portland Evening News p5 O 8 '29 500w

AUSLANDER, JOSEPH. Letters to women. 85p il $2 Harper

811 29-24225

Literary appreciations of certain women poets and other famous women, written in the form of letters to the ladies. The women so honored, in lines that give a vivid and penetrating analysis of character, are Elinor Wylie, Amy Lowell, Eleanora Duse, Emily Dickinson, Virginia Clemn, Fanny Brawne, Sappho, and Lot's wife.

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 D 1 '29 800w

Boston Transcript p8 D 28 '29 600w

"Most revelatory is the architectural letter to Amy Lowell. In the virile—often startling—free verse of that amazing New England priestess of the new poetry, he piles up flashing image upon acrid irony to reconstruct the poet's home; deftly he wafts frail puffs of atmosphere across our fancy; probes to the essential core of loneliness underneath the gatherings and all the talking; and we finish that letter with a more sympathetic view of Amy Lowell. It was easy, no doubt, for Mr. Auslander to write understandingly of Amy Lowell, a contemporary, whom he knew. But perhaps because Sappho and Lot's Wife are so distant as to be almost legendary, he does not so adequately reflect their glamour. The letter to Lot's Wife in particular seems less satisfactory than the others." M. L.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 N 9 '29 630w

Cleveland Open Shelf p154 D '29

"The 'Letters' make a pleasing collection as letters. As poems they suffer from Mr. Auslander's fluency in rhythm, rhyme, and phrase. Good poetry has to be pulled from deeper roots and more rocky soil. The only ease allowable to a poet is that ease which comes after the full circle of struggle for exact and emotional statement has been made. One never feels this struggle back of Mr. Auslander." E. L. Walton
+ Nation 130:49 Ja 8 '30 260w

"His genuine and disciplined virtuosity is elaborate enough to range from Lot's wife to Elinor Wylie with a form and color suitable to each address. The letter to Amy Lowell, for example, is a new 'Critical Fable,' witty and garrulous, alive with the tactility of surfaces hard, bright, edged or suave. He has incorporated Sapphic fragments in a letter to that priestess with excellent effect; and the message to Emily Dickinson, but for its sentimental pivoting on a single factor in her life, transmits some brave sense of that small, bright, New England Pantheist and her 'puckered phrase.' The 'Postscript' is urbane enough to remind one of Congreve. Mr. Auslander sometimes plays waspish Alexander Pope to our age; but the age will survive." Vincent McHugh
+ N Y Evening Post p13m D 14 '29 350w

"Joseph Auslander is an adept at poetic fabrication, and his volume of 'Letters' is a volume of considerable variety. It is possible that the poems appear to promise more than they fulfill, but this is not entirely the author's fault. He has deliberately projected himself into a field of many pitfalls. The moment one displays a poem dedicated to a person, whether living or dead, one has evoked more than the usual curiosity. Before passing judgment, therefore, it is necessary to allow for disappointment from such inflated curiosity. And when this has been done these 'Letters to Women' are seen to be uncommonly good, both as poetry and as sagacious comment."
+ N Y Times p35 N 24 '29 530w

"The letter to Amy Lowell is best, but one cannot easily forget the sparkling incisiveness of the letters to Elinor Wylie and Emily Dickinson or the romantic beauty of the letters to Sappho and Lot's wife. Mr. Auslander still lacks discipline, but as his imagination grows in power, and as his hurtling phrases shine with increasing accuracy and originality and power, the absence of discipline becomes less and less lamentable." Granville Hicks
+ N Y World p10m N 24 '29 250w

"The news is getting about that Joseph Auslander's 'Letters to Women' has in it much more than meets eye and ear. These flowing, melodious lines which Auslander writes with apparently no effort tell a story, or write a memoir, in one case at least, of one woman who was a great force in American poetry of this generation—Amy Lowell. Auslander has drawn not only on her poetry but on his recollections of her personality as she revealed it to her friends at Sevenels, in Brookline, Mass." Harry Hansen
N Y World p16 N 29 '29 950w

"Letters to Women by Joseph Auslander is disappointing. The poems are not so much to as about eight women of renown. . . Many readers will wonder why the poet, with such splendid material, has not shown more good taste or originality of thought." L. T. Nicholl
— Outlook 153:509 N 27 '29 140w

AUSLANDER, JOSEPH, and HILL, FRANK ERNEST, comps. Winged horse anthology. 669p $3.50; educ ed $1.50 Doubleday, Doran

821.08 English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections 29-12709

A companion volume to their story of poetry entitled "The winged horse" (Book Review Digest, 1927) which gathers together examples of the great poetry which that book celebrated.

Booklist 25:385 Jl '29

"'The Winged Horse Anthology' seems designed for the use of younger readers who have still to climb the slopes of Parnassus and older readers who neglected to climb them during their youth. For these two classes, it can be very highly recommended. For readers more familiar with great English poetry and for all those who have ceased to pursue culture as an end in itself, the present collection will not supersede 'The Oxford Book of English Verse.'"

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 4 '29 320w

Cleveland Open Shelf p154 D '29

Nation 129:500 O 30 '29 180w

"This is an age of imposing facades, of culture spread thin, of people who genuinely crave the best poetry in tabloid form, along with the best in sports wear and bathroom fixtures. For such readers, 'The Winged Horse Anthology' can be highly recommended. For others, whose tastes are humbler, there is still 'The Oxford Book of English Verse.'" Malcolm Cowley

— + New Repub 59:346 Ag 14 '29 750w

"A collection which is something more than merely good. It has a kind of integral charm which actually enhances the pleasure of old and beautiful verse. For the reader who is unfamiliar with poetry, 'The Winged Horse Anthology' offers a liberal education; for the lover of poetry it should be a profoundly exciting experience." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Evening Post p6m Je 22 '29 800w

"The volume of over 600 pages is a notable collection for daily service broad in scope and rich in texture. The selection from the moderns is fairly large, running to just over 100 pages. For reasons outside the collection, this section is not so satisfactory as other parts of the volume." Percy Hutchison

+ — N Y Times p2 Je 23 '29 300w

AUSTIN, ANNE. Black pigeon. 311p il $2 Greenberg

29-8835

"Ruth Lester, secretary to 'Handsome Harry' Borden, unscrupulous promoter and man about town, finds her employer dead on the floor beside his desk on Monday morning. Suspicion points to several people who would gladly have murdered him, among whom, besides herself, is her financé, Jack Hayward. Her father, famous criminal lawyer, had trained her mind to pick out the essential facts of criminal cases, and it is by this faculty that she is able to find the murderer."—Bookm

"This mystery story is unique both as to plot and execution."

Bookm 69:xxvi Je '29 100w

"No less a critic than Bob Davis deposes that this one is 'a masterpiece of dramatic dialogue, intricate complications, rare emotional moments and genuine thrills.' Carolyn Wells was 'drawn into the vortex of its plot as swiftly and surely as if by the tentacles of an octopus.' What's more, both found it lacking in the crude and hackneyed tricks that spoil so many thrillers, and so did this reviewer." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ap 7 '29 80w

"Miss Austin is a competent craftsman with a good sense of color and rhythm and readers who enjoyed her first novel will find this second book justifying all their anticipations, although it is so markedly different in theme and treatment."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 25 '29 230w

"It is only once in a blue moon that one finds a detective story so closely knit, so devoid of tricks and so skillfully told as this one."

+ N Y Times p16 Je 2 '29 280w

AUSTIN, FREDERICK BRITTEN. Saga of the sea. 287p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Benn]

Sea stories 29-9878

In a progressive series of short stories Mr Austin evokes a panorama of the maritime history of the world from the rovings of Odysseus to the battle of the Merrimac and the Monitor.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 30 '29 100w

"Here are important and vivid chapters in the history of the arts of navigation and war. The thing is done with smashing power, and with a strong grasp on the facts."

+ Christian Century 46:839 Je 26 '29 100w

"One can never quite escape the pedagogical purpose. Information is lugged in wherever possible and no one ever used adjectives harder in order to get much into little space. In spite of all this the author does convey reasonably accurate 'atmosphere' and often his narrative is thrilling."

— + Hist Outlook 20:306 O '29 90w

"The stories are vividly told and the human lives in the foreground blend well with the historic seascapes against which they are projected." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p9m Je 1 '29 130w

"Mr. Austin has the imagination of a true artist, and presents his facts not only with vigor, but with plenty of well-absorbed historical and local colour."

+ Spec 142:633 Ap 20 '29 100w

"Mr. Austin is curiously convincing in his polished and intimately detailed pictures of ships and of shipmen, their fighting and their love-making."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p562 Jl 11 '29 480w

Wis Lib Bul 25:324 O '29

AUSTIN, FREDERICK BRITTEN. Saga of the sword. 322p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Arrowsmith]

[28-20573]

By picturing incidents of famous historic battles Mr Austin traces the footprints of Mars across the world from the days of the cavemen to the war of 1914.

"A rather monotonous record of blood-spilling."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Je 9 '29 100w

"A history which is so cleverly interwoven with romance that it is never dry or didactic, but full of interest and alive with the glory and the horror of war." G. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 11 '29 320w

"Here are important and vivid chapters in the history of the art of war. The thing is done with smashing power, and with a strong grasp on the facts. The story of war becomes an unanswerable denunciation of it."

+ Christian Century 46:839 Je 26 '29 150w

Hist Outlook 20:306 O '29 90w

"Mr. Austin has vitality, color in his writing, and more than that a talent for swift and thrifty narration. The small incidents that might halt a story by the wayside are merged in the general sweep and forward movement of the book. Mr. Austin has accomplished what he set out to do with great success."

+ N Y Times p7 My 5 '29 450w

"Mr. Austin has been at great pains to ensure the accuracy of his detail. This scrupulous obedience to his conscience as an historian has had the effect of making his narrative seem, at times, overloaded—but there is recompense in every chapter to those who will read patiently."

+ Sat R 145:844 Je 30 '28 200w

"It is a combination of fact and fiction usually unconvincing, but here rather skilfully welded. The stories of chivalry, friendships, loyalties, are often stirring, and the social and military history behind them undoubtedly authoritative. The 'saga' is readable and informing."
+ Sat R of Lit 6:499 N 30 '29 360w
Springf'd Republican p8 O 14 '29 350w
Times [London] Lit Sup p360 My 10 '28 200w
Wis Lib Bul 25:324 O '29

AYER, FRED CARLETON, and BARR, ARVIL SYLVESTER. Organization of supervision; an analysis of the organization and administration of supervision in city school systems. (Appleton ser. in supervision and teaching) 397p $2.25 (8s 6d) Appleton

379.15 School superintendents and principals. School management and organization. Teaching 28-15573

"One of Messrs. Appleton's series in supervision and teaching. The authors are respectively Professor of Educational Administration in the University of Texas and Associate Professor of Education in the University of Wisconsin, and their aim is to present a systematic treatment of the facts, problems and present day practices that enter into the administration of supervision in the public schools of the United States."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 F '29

"The authors have presented an excellent statement of typical organizations and present practices in supervision as found in large city systems. They have summarized a great deal of data and educational literature on supervision not generally accessible to school officers and students of education." C. V. Good
+ El School J 29:149 O '28 730w

"The book performs a definite service in giving perspective and some coherence to the generally complicated supervisory situation. It is a factually adequate record of supervision up to 1928." J: L. Bracken
+ School R 37:68 Ja '29 650w
Times [London] Lit Sup p649 S 13 '28 60w

AYMAR, GORDON CHRISTIAN. Introduction to advertising illustration. 236p il $4 Harper

740 Advertising. Drawing 29-26565

In question and answer form the art director of a well-known advertising company gives practical advice to beginners on drawing, lettering, reproducing, and marketing work.

Booklist 25:383 Jl '29
St Louis 27:284 O '29
Wis Lib Bul 25:319 O '29

AYRES, CLARENCE EDWIN. Holier than thou; the way of the righteous. 240p $2.50 Bobbs

177 Ethics. Social ethics 29-5506

A satirical survey of the ways of the righteous, particularly the smugly self-righteous, in which Mr Ayres undertakes to show that righteousness is, like fashions in dress and etiquette, dependent on what the neighbors think, be the neighbors academicians or bushmen. In the last chapters he refers to Jesus's denunciation of the holier-than-thou's.

Reviewed by Clarence Britten
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Ap 28 '29 1400w

"This is a fine piece of cynicism, sarcasm and smartness applied to the behavioristic interpretation of morals. The author is perfectly sure that he is smart and has contempt for other poor mortals who differ from him, and the men who differ from him are simply Pharisees or fools."
— Boston Transcript p2 Mr 27 '29 150w

"Mr. Ayres's method is not that of the scholar. He does not prove his assertions; he rivets them with an epigram or tacks them on with an epithet, but so effectively that his words do break bones. Smart he is, and sharp, but not superficial. His aim is large, his concern philosophic, and his subject matter not the transient stupidities of the Americana but something which is a permanent phenomenon of the human animal in a social group." Eliseo Vivas
+ Nation 129:228 Ag 28 '29 320w

"The book is entertaining and provocative of searching thought, a useful gad-fly for those who are inclined to take their morals and religion glibly." E. S. Ames
New Repub 59:132 Je 19 '29 500w

"This book suffers a little from its own cleverness and its fascinating facility at analogy. The organization of Mr. Ayres's theme is now and then seriously threatened by a tendency to yield to tempting bypaths of speculation. His points are always amusing, but sometimes notably impertinent." Margaret Wallace
— + N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 9 '29 400w

AYRES, QUINCY CLAUDE, and SCOATES, DANIELS. Land drainage and reclamation. (McGraw-Hill publications in agric. engineering) 419p il $4 McGraw

627.5 Drainage. Reclamation of land 28-24455

"Although the term 'reclamation' is usually understood as including both the irrigation of dry lands and the drainage of wet lands, this book deals only with the drainage and clearing of land. It covers also surveying and legal matters relative to drainage work. The book is intended primarily for agricultural students and may be useful as reference for practicing engineers, but curiously enough the 'agricultural engineer' is not mentioned specifically, although in fact the book is for him quite as much as for the 'drainage engineer,' who is mentioned. It is also suggested that the book will be of value to the farmer, but its scope would seem rather beyond even the 'progressive farmer.'" —Eng N

Booklist 25:235 Mr '29

"The value of the book is largely in the line of farm drainage, and it is therefore more particularly useful for agricultural and drainage engineers and students in these branches of engineering."
Eng N 101:928 D 20 '28 380w
St Louis 27:93 Mr '29

AZUELA, MARIANO. Under dogs; tr. by E. Munguía, jr.; preface by Carleton Beals. 225p il $2.50 Brentano's

Mexico—History—Revolution, 1910—Fiction 29-18151

A stark story of the Mexican revolution, by a man who was once a revolutionist himself. There is little formal plot. A horde of rebels led by Demetrio Macias sweep thru victories and lootings until Macias becomes a federal general and meets defeat at the hands of a band not unlike the one with which he had started out.

"You may have read a score of books about Mexico—for and against, political, sociological economic, artistic, religious—all the kinds of solemn nonsense with which we delude ourselves into believing we are analyzing and understanding. But since Jack Reed, playboy of pre-war America, rode down to Villa with romance in his heart, no one has seemed so certainly to paint Mexico in words. Mariano Azuela writes with the cold realism of a heart broken by a decade of continuous revolution. He does not hate these men; he knows them too well; neither does he romanticize them. They are not heroes and not villains; just human beings, the stuff of which all armies and literature are made." L: Gannett
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ag 25 '29 1400w

AZUELA, MARIANO—Continued

"Mariano Azuela has set down a vivid, swiftly moving word picture that is assembled from actual experiences. He has spared nothing to present what seems to be the first real account of that volcanic epoch." J. R. T.

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 11 '29 450w

Reviewed by Ernest Gruening

Nation 129:689 D 4 '29 500w

"The translated title 'Underdogs' is a mistake. 'Los de Abajo' is the term for the humble, in a Catholic language—the humble, from whom salvation is to be expected. The word 'Underdogs' lacks this overtone which is the spirit of the story. But the translation on the whole is excellent. The book is well joined as a Greek ode. A story of indescribable confusion, it has the body of an inner order. The terrible materials of this chaos which Azuela describes are integrally related: seen as a whole, they fall into place, its esthetic form proves that this chaos is on the way to being an organic world: the book depicts the ignorance and horror of the Mexican struggle; but within them, plainly, is wisdom and revelation. You might admit that no man could record so low a story and make it beautiful, who was not a great man. I prefer to insist that no man could have done this who did not belong to a potentially great people." Waldo Frank

+ New Repub 30:275 O 23 '29 1000w

"A very remarkable book grown out of the soil of the Mexican revolutions. . . Azuela has given us a most vivid picture of these fighters of low caste. In simple language he paints one phase of the Mexican turmoil of fifteen years ago so truly that his book is not only good literature, but also a historical document." Frans Blom

+ Sat R of Lit 6:179 S 28 '29 880w

AZURE cities: stories of new Russia. by Romanov, Pilniak, Seifullina, Ivanov, Zoshchenko, Liashko, Shaginian, Shishkov, Tolstoy, Babel, Neverov, Volkov, Lidin; [tr. by J. J. Robbins; ed. by Joshua Kunitz]. 320p $2.50 Int. pub. [17s 6d Modern books]

Short stories, Russian 29-4207

Short stories from the literature of the new Russia since the revolution, with biographical notes on the authors.

---

"The introduction is a most helpful survey of the confused movements and bizarre personalities of the first few years of revolutionary ferment. It is a dizzying spectacle that makes one marvel at the final emergence of so much intelligible and promising work." Dorothy Brewster

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ap 7 '29 200w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '29 150w

"The stories are a clear product of the Bolshevik environment. In one way or another they reveal something of the change that has come over Russian life. There is in them nothing of the introspective morbidity that was written deep into the stories and novels of Goncharov, Dostoevsky, and Tolstoy. Introspection has given way to action. . . The style of the new school, the style of these stories in 'Azure Cities,' as is indicated in the excellent introduction by Mr. Kunitz, is a dynamic style, staccato, hurried, and spirited." V. F. Calverton

Nation 128:675 Je 5 '29 420w

"The stories in this volume like much else that comes out of Soviet Russia, are interesting—even important—somewhat beyond their purely literary and artistic deserts. They reflect the influences of the Revolution, not only on the dozen writers represented, but also on the mass of people who compose their background and supply their subjects." M. P. L.

+ — New Repub 60:80 S 4 '29 280w

"The later Russian writers are forsaking romanticism and returning to the classical methods. Their work is more prosaic than that of the earlier rebels, less glamorous, but more genuine and more permanent." Bernard Smith

N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 13 '29 180w

"Their hopeless darkness impresses and oppresses one to such an extent that one draws a sigh of relief after having finished them." A. L. Nazaroff

+ — N Y Times p2 Je 9 '29 230w

"On the whole, the tone of these stories is notably more vigorous and extroverted than that of Russian literature before the revolution."

Sat R of Lit 5:837 Mr 30 '29 160w

"The volume, as a whole, is specially interesting to the English reader for its significant indication of the broad changes in the life of the common people effected by the progress of events since 1917. But the stories themselves are by no means negligible on artistic grounds."

Times [London] Lit Sup p290 Ap 11 '29 1000w

B

BABCOCK, MRS BERNIE (SMADE). Lincoln's Mary and the babies. 316p $2 (7s 6d) Lippincott

Lincoln, Mrs Mary (Todd)—Fiction 29-7204

A sentimentalized picture of the home and family life of the Lincolns, in Springfield and in Washington, based on authentic sources.

---

"Mrs. Babcock has already received recognition for other Lincoln books. She has a woman's intuition and imagination and she uses them both in her picture of Mary. Behind the imagination, however, is a vast amount of research and there is substantial historical background for what she writes."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 23 '29 250w

"Mrs. Babcock's book does not pretend to offer a serious biography. It is an amiable, rather sentimental tale of the human side of a great man. With the wealth of material on Lincoln available it is a pity that she did not write a more discriminating and more significant volume on this subject."

— N Y Times p30 Mr 17 '29 180w

"There is too much childish prattle and 'small town' gossip. The reader feels that he should be treated to unadulterated Lincoln—a natural desire in view of the latter's complete supremacy."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p560 Jl 11 '29 260w

BABEL, ISAAK EMMANUILOVICH. Red cavalry; tr. from the Russian by Nadia Helstein. 213p $2.50 (6s) Knopf

[29-17889]

"Stories mainly about the sufferings of the Jews and Poles, and of the Cossacks themselves in their unsuccessful Polish campaign of 1920. Babel's treatment of this theme is violent, fragmentary and episodic."—Spec

---

"At a superficial glance he seems to write crudely, even carelessly. All of his work has a fragmentary quality. And yet it exhibits the nicest precision, alike in the choice of incident and vocabulary. None of his contemporaries can match him for vigor, for speed, for the taut, strained character of his prose, for its lyricism. His style is as terse as algebra, and yet packed with poetry." Babette Deutsch

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 O 27 '29 900w

"Babel's is to a large extent a chronicle of brutality and atrocity, a study of the dark violence which proceeds from want and ignorance, but he writes with a clear-eyed and comprehending pity which brings a universal significance to the least of his episodes and makes them literature."

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 7 '29 170w

Reviewed by L. L. Irvine

Nation and Ath 45:46 Ap 13 '29 230w

"These stories by a Jew who served with the Cossacks, are studies in horror, brutality and physical nausea, and the author has gone far beyond the 'slice of life' school. Here we have life hacked off by the butcher's hatchet and distinctly bloody. . . Mr. Babel is a vivid, realistic reporter who flinches at nothing, but he is not an artist and his book is greatly overrated."
— + New Statesman 33:supx My 4 '29 230w

"These stories are not so much imaginative fiction works as snapshots of things actually seen, and Babel is a recorder above all. Only comparatively few of them deal with actual fighting; for the most part, they unfold scenes of the army's everyday life. In these scenes there are humorous, human touches, but, in common with much of Soviet literature preoccupation with the horrible and cruel is the prevailing note."
— + N Y Times p28 N 24 '29 350w

"To his credit it must be said that he is a short-story writer of talent, accomplished, original, and commendably short." L. P. Hartley
+ Sat R 147:582 Ap 27 '29 370w

"The artist in Babel is in almost every story submerged by his passion for crude, photographic detail. . . Babel is more convincing when his humanity softens his detachment. We can only conclude that some of his finer shades of matter and style have been lost in translation."
Spec 142:709 My 4 '29 250w

BABSON, ROGER WARD. Storing up triple reserves; success is secured by developing financial, physical, and spiritual reserves. 364p $2 (8s 6d) Macmillan

174 Success. Conduct of life 29-6425

Originally conceived as material for discussion in men's Bible classes, the three sections of the book deal with problems that all men must face—how to store up reserves of money, health, and spiritual power.

Booklist 25:376 Jl '29
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 9 '29 160w
Boston Transcript p5 Ap 6 '29 600w
Cleveland Open Shelf p137 N '29

"He is entitled to the praise of doing very well what he set out to do. And there can be little doubt that it was worth doing, especially what is set forth in parts two and three. Part one will seem elementary to business men of any experience, though it is all sound and good." H: C. Vedder
+ Crozer Q 6:372 Jl '29 630w

"The book will serve a useful purpose as a guide for study by groups of men. It is healthy-minded. It strongly emphasizes the simple virtues of honesty, thrift, courage, loyalty, service, etc. In its treatment of religion, however, it rather too easily assumes that the practice of Christian virtues will assure business success." C: T. Holman
+ — J Religion 9:655 O '29 620w

"The author's world is as attractive as a frozen turnip. The life which Mr. Babson represents as ideal is totally devoid of charm. It is so air-tight in striving after security that there is not the smallest cranny in it which would admit a ray of humanity. There is no hint of suffering, of sympathy, of genuine joy, of emotional abandon. There is no knowledge of those who work and no smell of sweat. There is no insight into the complexity of a social problem or the latent tragedy of the individual life." Max Lerner
— N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 16 '29 750w

"All of the subjects are rather elementary in their exposition, but into each one of them has gone wide observation, much thinking and a considerable amount of reading. Mr. Babson is modern in his outlook, keen-minded, and there is always in his advice and suggestions plenty of shrewd and solid common sense."
+ N Y Times p18 Ap 28 '29 400w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:16 Ap '29 180w
St Louis 27:303 N '29

BACCHELLI, RICCARDO. Devil at the Long bridge (Il diavolo al Pontelungo); a historical novel; tr. with an introd. by Orlo Williams. 346p $2.50 (7s 6d) Longmans

Bakunin, Mikhail Aleksandrovich—Fiction 29-6798

A vein of comedy runs thru the first part of this story which is based on an episode in Italian political history. In 1873, Bakunin, a Russian agitator, settles in Locarno and plots with Cafiero, his wealthy backer, and other bizarre enthusiasts, to stir up a world revolution. In the second part of the novel the scene has changed to Bologna where the short-lived revolution takes place.

"The charm of this novel lies in its reflection of the Italian temperament. The principal characters are historical, and the author has aimed at reality in his treatment of them. He has succeeded admirably in his purpose."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Je 16 '29 100w

" 'Il Diavolo al Pontelungo' published in 1927 and now issued in expurgated and abbreviated form in an English translation by Orlo Williams, is not a great book nor even a consistently good book. But it is of considerable importance as marking a stage in the development of modern Italian literature and it should be of great value to foreigners who desire to see behind the screen of Italian politico-esthetics." Percy Winner
+ — N Y Evening Post p8m My 25 '29 800w

"Perhaps the individualities of the persons involved may come alive to a reader already intimate with their place in Italian history; but to some one who meets them for the first time they seem decidedly incompetent to carry out anything demanding certainty of plan, action and execution, as does a social revolution."
— + N Y Times p24 Je 9 '29 220w

"The story, which ends, as it begins, on a fine note of irony, is a clever and uncommonly sensitive study of the revolutionary mind and temper."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p274 Ap 4 '29 450w

BACHELOR, JOSEPH MORRIS, and HENRY, RALPH LEDYARD, eds. Challenging essays in modern thought. 399p $2 Century

814.08 American essays—Collections. English essays—Collections 28-27679

"This is a collection of 32 modern essays and 32 student themes intended for use in composition classes to prod the student's intellect and guide his thought through channels of liberal thinking. The essays were chosen because they have proved to be provocative of discussion in the class-room."—Publisher's note

Booklist 25:275 Ap '29
Boston Transcript p7 D 22 '28 250w

BACON, SIR REGINALD HUGH SPENCER. Life of Lord Fisher of Kilverstone, admiral of the fleet. 2v il $10 Doubleday, Doran

B or 92 Fisher, John Arbuthnot Fisher, baron. Great Britain—History, Naval 29-29384

"The life of the powerful old sea dog who modernized the British navy and 'thus gave to the country on the eve of the great war a weapon which ensured the safety of our Empire.' . . In this biography one can trace the growth and transformation of the British navy; one can see a most stormy era in world politics through realistic naval eyes; one can understand the way in which political interference prevented the realization of the British navy's largest opportunities and, finally, one can come into contact with the most vigorous and fascinating character of 'old Jacky Fisher' himself."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"The book is written by a brother officer and is naturally and properly sympathetic in tone. But the treatment of controversial incidents seems most fair and the only serious criticism to be made is that the material has not been well assembled and that careless repetition occurs rather frequently. But it is certainly a book which students of international politics should read." H: C. Lodge

BACON, R. H. S.—Continued

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ja 5 '30 1850w

"It is much less biography than it is special pleading for Lord Fisher. The account of his life is but a minor part of its text, in comparison with the pages of unbounded admiration from an enthusiastic follower, who can see no wrong in Lord Fisher. This attitude, on the part of Admiral Bacon, has led him to take a controversial stand at all stages. . . Admiral Bacon has been so much in earnest that his book is vivid and interesting. But we cannot help seeing that this is a case of a partisan who has felt obliged to 'protest too much.' " T: G. Frothingham

— + Boston Transcript p1 D 14 '29 1000w

"A good specimen of the official biography. Its author, no doubt a trained and expert seaman, has about as much idea of how to write a book as an experienced author has of how to navigate a battleship. . . The picture of Lord Fisher drawn by Admiral Bacon is of a centauric monster with the foreparts of a superman and the hinder parts of an angel, with the brain of a Newton and the heart of Little Dorrit. The author is, no doubt, a trained and expert seaman; he is a simple-minded psychologist." Leonard Woolf

— Nation and Ath 46:109 O 19 '29 1200w

"It is a pity that the senile vagaries of a very great man should have been recorded at such length by his official biographer. As professional head of the Navy in war, Fisher was a failure. In the same position when he was a younger man he was an almost incredible success, one of England's very greatest assets in modern times. Why should that very late and brief period of failure be dwelt upon at such length?"

— New Statesman 34:88 O 26 '29 1350w

Reviewed by H: E. Armstrong

N Y Times p14 D 22 '29 2000w

"The author has spoiled, by too much special pleading, what might have been a final judgment upon one of the most interesting and outstanding figures of the present century. The incessant carping at almost every politician whose name he mentions lessens the force of his arguments. The first volume is a great deal better than the second, and the account of the changes in the Navy between Fisher's entry into it and his retirement is valuable, but the absence of all pretence at impartiality when we come to more recent times is a mistake. Admiral Bacon has merely added fresh fuel to the controversies that rage round the conduct of the war."

— Sat R 148:514 N 2 '29 900w

Spec 143:547 O 19 '29 1000w

"Much of the book is more like a polemical pamphlet than a biography. The balanced judgment we expect to find in biography is absent. Praise is unrestrained until that sad time when even those who loved and admired Fisher most could no longer praise his conduct. All the evidence that favours his subject is produced and exploited with as much reiteration as Fisher himself employed in his many utterances."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p803 O 17 '29 1300w

BADGER, RALPH EASTMAN. Badger on investment principles and practices. 915p il $6 Prentice-Hall [21s Pitman]

332 Investments. Securities 28-18301

"This is a book not on investment principles but on security investments. The author treats not only securities but the institution or business behind the securities. For example, he attempts a brief description of banks and insurance companies as the basis for his discussion of bank and insurance stocks; likewise public utilities as the basis for their securities."—Ann Am Acad

"The book is a noteworthy addition to the newer literature in this field. While it is designed as a textbook, it is so comprehensive in its scope as to constitute almost an encyclopedia of the subject." R. G. Rodkey

+ Am Econ R 19:289 Je '29 720w

"On the whole the book is one of the best treatments of stock and bond investments available. It deserves a wide reading, especially now when so many persons are buying securities blindly." A. S. Keister

+ Ann Am Acad 143:385 My '29 220w

Booklist 25:104 D '28

Pratt p11 autumn '29

St Louis 27:158 My '29

BADGER, WALTER LUCIUS, and BAKER, EDWIN MYRON. Inorganic chemical technology. (Chemical engineering ser.) 228p il $2.50 McGraw

661 Chemicals—Manufacture and industry. Chemistry, Technical. Chemistry, Inorganic 28-28951

"The authors have written a brief textbook on the technology of the heavy chemical industries. It is an outgrowth of their teaching experience and of an evidently careful consideration of the developments of the field at a number of institutions. The presentation is with the viewpoint of meeting the needs of the chemical engineering student and, to a lesser degree, those of the industrial chemistry student and the chemical engineer. Current American practice is described to the almost entire exclusion of foreign practice. The book contains nine chapters with headings as follows: Common Salt, Sulfuric Acid, Nitric Acid, Minor Acids, Sodium Carbonate, Caustic Soda, Chlorine, Bleaching Powder, and Miscellaneous Products. A limited number of references are given at the close of each chapter and every chapter but one is followed by a list of problems."—Ind & Eng Chem

Booklist 25:271 Ap '29

"Messrs. Badger and Baker have compressed much useful information into their volume; they seem to have relied more on original information and less on shears and library paste than has been the case with some of the other works on inorganic chemical manufacture. To some extent this has resulted in an uneven treatment of materials. . . The process descriptions are unusually accurate." A. E. Marshall

+ Chem & Met Eng 36:299 My '29 500w

"The authors have accomplished well their purpose of writing a textbook for the chemical engineering student. It will be of almost equal value to the industrial chemistry student. The subject matter is developed very satisfactorily and it is well written. Some, no doubt, will feel that the presentation as a whole is a little elementary and that the opportunity for illustration was not given sufficient consideration. The book is, however, a distinct contribution to its field." W. F. Coover

+ Ind & Eng Chem 21:1303 D '29 250w

St Louis 27:130 Ap '29

BAIKIE, JAMES. History of Egypt; from the earliest times to the end of the XVIIIth dynasty. 2v 426;403p $10.50 Macmillan [36s Black]

932 Egypt—History

A history of Egypt for both layman and scholar, beginning with the first signs of life in Egypt and carrying the story to the end of the eighteenth dynasty. Illustrated with photographs.

"His book is sound, sufficiently comprehensive without any repellant intricacy, attractively written, and well-balanced according to its aim."

+ Nation and Ath 46:111 O 19 '29 1000w

"Dr. Baikie, though obviously a very learned and, what is rarer, a very cautious student of Egyptology, has chosen in this book to write in a style quite different from that to which we are accustomed in most historical works, and especially in works dealing with ancient civilisations. As a rule, excavators use a pen almost as weighty as a spade, and pile up sentences like Babylonian zikkurats. But Dr. Baikie is breezy and unconventional, and writes as if he were talking to an audience of private friends. . . Whether Dr. Baikie will gain the approval of devotees of the 'dignity of history' by all this, we do not know; but we do know that he has produced a work which is vigorous and fascinating from the first page to the last, and which has the great merit of making these dead people live before us."

+ New Statesman 34:92 O 26 '29 1000w

"Apt quotations from Egyptian records add colour to a narrative which flows easily, if at rather a sober tempo, and there are sufficient illustrations to convey an idea of Egyptian art and architecture. The social and economic aspects of Egyptian culture have perhaps been unduly neglected, but for the reader who wants more, an abridged bibliography should meet all his requirements."

+ Spec 143:692 N 9 '29 200w

"Frankly, Mr. Baikie is not sufficiently equipped for the task he has set himself. He tells us that his aim has been so far as possible to let the Egyptians speak for themselves. His main resource for this excellent plan is Breasted's 'Ancient Records.' But these are over a quarter of a century old, and it is no aspersion on their compiler to say that in many places they now need re-editing. Mr. Baikie does not offer to do this. But one expects a historian at least to read his original sources correctly, and Mr. Baikie's failure in dealing with them is nowhere more glaringly shown than in his spelling of the king's name Smenkhkarē, from which in every instance he omits the second 'k'."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p990 N 28 '29 900w

BAILEY, HENRY CHRISTOPHER. Merchant prince. 281p $2.50 Dutton

A novel with an historical setting—the period of the Wars of the Roses—which describes the career of Hugh Camoys, a poor boy whose shrewdness in marketing his mother's fine broideries starts him upon the road to success as a merchant prince. The book successfully reflects middle class life in fifteenth century England.

---

Bookm 70:xv Ja '30 50w

Boston Transcript pl Ja 4 '30 400w

"The reader who expects from 'The Merchant Prince' more subtlety or profundity than from any other tale of the Gadzooks school, is foredoomed to disappointment. Nevertheless, it is a swift and vigorous story, and H. C. Bailey deserves a great deal of credit for keeping it founded so solidly upon the probabilities. It is rarely one finds a historical novel whose economics are so sound." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Evening Post p8m N 30 '29 750w

"The story moves rather slowly, and has few blood-quickening moments, while Hugh, for all his many virtues, is not a particularly sympathetic person. Yet the tale has plenty of atmosphere, and one feels that its picture of the daily life of the seaport is an accurate one."

+ — N Y Times p9 D 15 '29 650w

"The tale is exciting enough and plausible, and the hero's character is cleverly developed. But the book is best for its fully colored picture of middle class life in fifteenth century England. It is well written, without tiresome mannerisms, and with a sprightly use of dialogue, and we commend it to lovers of historical novels." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 153:547 D 4 '29 230w

BAILEY, HENRY CHRISTOPHER. Young lovers. 312p $2.50 Dutton

29-2468

Young Squire Lavington had just got Mary's promise and quarreled with his cousin, when he found himself rudely kidnapped and bustled off to France. The cousin turns up too, and the two hot-headed young men become furiously involved with each other and the Napoleonic wars. Later Mary arrives. A great many things happen in a short time, and at the end of the mêlée of events, the young lovers have changed partners.

---

"There are enough historical and fictional personae to furnish a most pleasing, bravely costumed gallery. 'The Young Lovers' abounds, too, in properly stirring incident."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Mr 31 '29 110w

"This is a capital yarn, full of action and plentifully besprinkled with love interest."

+ N Y Times p37 Mr 17 '29 90w

"Uncommonly interesting historical novel."

+ N Y World p11m Mr 10 '28 80w

"Mr. Bailey's characters have a turn for repartee which pleases us, but which we feel they indulge too much in this story. Otherwise we have no complaints to record." W. R. Brooks

+ — Outlook 151:160 Ja 23 '29 120w

"The narrative suffers somewhat from incoherency."

— Sat of Lit 5:814 Mr 23 '29 180w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 10 '29 170w

BAILEY, JOHN CANN. Shakespeare. (English heritage ser.) 208p $1.40 (3s 6d) Longmans

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Criticism and interpretation 29-20681

One of the first volumes in the English heritage series, this study of Shakespeare and his work is not concerned with matters of theory or controversy, but is written with the aim of adding to the ordinary reader's enjoyment of Shakespeare. The author goes thru the poems and the plays, keeping as close to the text and meaning of Shakespeare as possible.

---

"His is the work of a man soaked in Shakespeare, not lecturing us upon him, but sharing him with us and concealing how much more he knows about him than we do."

+ New Statesman 34:161 N 9 '29 180w

"Mr. Bailey, who can be as acute and subtle as the best, is never afraid to take the plain, conventional, average view when he thinks it is right. He knows what the learned and the super-subtle and the fantastic have written about Shakespeare; and he uses his knowledge not to darken counsel for the plain man, but for the enrichment of the plain, straightforward view which comes on a first acquaintance with the plays."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p815 O 17 '29 800w

BAILEY, TEMPLE. Burning beauty. 318p $2 Penn [7s 6d Hurst]

29-20969

"The sweet Southern heroine possesses a perfection of character and a beauty which are almost fabulous. Her selfish brother is the quintessence of thoughtless egotism. Her rival suitors embody precisely the right virtues, with just that preponderance of merit apportioned to one to insure his eventual success."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

Booklist 26:118 D '29

" 'Burning Beauty' belongs to the pattern. Every character is cut to fit into the orderly mosaic of the story, and every incident is colored to harmonize with the general scheme of a tested formula. Perhaps Miss Bailey's readers will be able to predict the outcome rather early in the proceedings, but that also is part of the compact and in accordance with the formula."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p28 D 1 '29 170w

BAILEY, TEMPLE—Continued

"This story is certainly the most interesting and well written of all Miss Bailey's novels. She introduces us to several original characters, provides us with a complicated plot, and eventually supplies a very convincing end to a delightful story. . . It is an exceptionally keen study of youthful temperaments and their problems." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 26 '29 500w

BAILLIE, JOHN. Interpretation of religion; an introductory study of theological principles. 477p $4 Scribner [14s T. Clark]

201 Religion. Religion—Philosophy 28-30166

"Mr. Baillie interprets religion as a way of escape, although he does not call it that and probably would not admit it. There are three ways of escape from nature. The first is through 'inner experience.' This is the way followed by Mr. Baillie. The second is by proud disdain and scientific control; the third is the way of free fancy and artistic constructions of imagination. . . The burden of the book is to demonstrate the rightness of [the way of] Kant and Ritschle, and the wrongness of the others."—New Repub

---

"Surveying the whole field of the history of theology Mr. Baillie attempts a fresh evaluation of the nature of religion. While he may have added no new insight to the vexing problem of religion he has done more than give us a mere historical survey of conflicting theologies. . . Mr. Baillie has made the best defense of the Kantian position in our generation." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 My 26 '29 500w

Reviewed by E. E. Aubrey
J Religion 9:636 O '29 1200w

Reviewed by H: N. Wieman
New Repub 58:75 Mr 6 '29 1100w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p8 Ap 28 '29 520w

"It may seem to some that Professor Baillie concedes too much to the anthropologists and allows too little to the distinction between origin and validity when he owns to the return of misgivings as to the ethical import of investigations into primitive cults; but this, like all the not very numerous points on which some sympathizers may be disposed to differ from him, is unessential and detracts not at all from the value of his sincere and distinguished work."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p940 N 21 '29 1350w

BAKER, MRS CHRISTINA (HOPKINSON). Story of Fay house. 135p il $2 Harvard univ. press [9s Oxford]

376.8 Radcliffe college. Fay house 29-11531

" 'The Story of Fay House' presents the history of Radcliffe's oldest building and the site on which it stands. The book has little to do with Radcliffe; instead, it creates something of the flavor of old Cambridge, and of a Boston that was closer to Harvard college than the Boston of today. In tracing the story of this former dwelling and describing the persons who lived in it, Mrs Baker brings an interesting period of social history piquantly before our eyes."—Springf'd Republican

---

"Just fifty years ago, Radcliffe College was founded. Among the many memorials of a triumph this fiftieth anniversary emphasizes, none will be more prized as none can be more appropriate than this story Mrs. Baker describes of the most delicately picturesque phases of that New England life now as completely vanished as the snows of yesteryear." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 22 '29 1200w
Springf'd Republican p8 Je 8 '29 400w

"The book contains some very amusing and attractive scraps of social history which any reader can dip into with pleasure."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p638 Ag 15 '29 350w

BAKER, GEORGE PHILIP. Hannibal. 332p il $3.50 Dodd

B or 92 Hannibal 29-25946

A biography of the famous Carthaginian general, whom the author ranks "among the half dozen great soldiers whose work broke down barriers and cleared the way for larger ideas of civilization."

---

"One of the most stimulating biographies that have appeared this year. Although the book suffers from an irritating typographical mannerism—the frequent separation of groups of sentences by groups of four periods—as meaningless as it is recurrent, that is the only taint of the technique of the New Biography. 'Hannibal' is, in its own right, a straightforward study of the melodramatic career of one of the most significant figures in Occidental history." J: Carter

+ N Y Times p29 N 24 '29 1400w

"This biography is a moving but not sentimental chronicle of a defeat immortalized in the three words which sum up what most of us know about Carthage. It is a Song of the Vanquished. But it is also rich in those little ironies inevitable in any true account of human proceedings on this earth." Mary Shirley

+ Outlook 153:467 N 20 '29 550w

BAKER, GEORGE PHILIP. Tiberius Cæsar. 322p $3.50 Dodd [18s Nash]

B or 92 Tiberius, emperor of Rome. Rome—History—Empire, B.C. 30-A.D. 476

28-29971

Mr Baker writes an account of the life and achievements of Tiberius Caesar which is interesting and easy to read. The author considers Tiberius the greatest psychological problem in history. "He is Hamlet and Lear and Othello rolled into one; and he is more than this."

---

"Mr. Baker has told his story compactly and well. His book is just and scholarly, if not inspired; his style dignified and in keeping with his aim." R. E. Larsson

+ Bookm 68:702 F '29 200w

"G. P. Baker has written a very readable book without exciting the tempo of a legitimate style, or resorting to lurid coloring. He knows the sources, comprehends the political climate of first-century Rome and, without visibly straining after originality, gives a freshly persuasive interpretation of the emperor and of several of the important actors."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 F 10 '29 230w

"His style is good and lends itself to rather pleasant reading. 'Tiberius Caesar' relates in dramatic and readable style, the story of the career of one of the great tragic figures of history."

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 26 '28 250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p61 Ap '29

Reviewed by Padraic Colum
Dial 86:515 Je '29 750w

"Mr. G. P. Baker has brought a lively historical imagination and a vivacious literary style to his interpretation of the 'Caesar' of the New Testament."

+ Nation and Ath 45:403 Je 22 '29 150w

"He treats his period with knowledge and imagination, and his speculations with regard to the policies adopted by Tiberius and their alternatives are as arresting as they are acute."

+ New Statesman 33:222 My 25 '29 750w

"It is of great interest to look at this man as an individual and as an administrator in a strictly modern and impartial way as Mr. Baker has done." L. V. Updegraff

+ N Y Times p11 D 30 '28 1300w

"There are a few mannerisms in the style which are irritating. But these are minutiæ. The book has a very real appeal to the scholar who is not hopelessly prejudiced on the great Tacitean question." C. W. Mendell

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:916 Ap 20 '29 450w

"We do unreservedly commend this same analytical study of a curiously complex character, but we would just suggest that future editions should correct Brevarium Imperii (thrice repeated), and that the genealogical table might be more fully and carefully constructed."

+ Spec 143:226 Ag 17 '29 320w

BAKER, OLAF. Panther magic. 312p il $2.50 Dodd

28-27613

The adventures of a half-breed Indian, Thunder Boy, and his best friend, a panther. In his attempt to save his father Thunder Boy nearly loses his life, but Manoo, the panther, intervenes. Told for older boys and girls.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:468 F '29

Booklist 25:289 Ap '29

St Louis 27:63 F '29

"The character of the Indian Thunder Boy is well drawn, the character of Manoo the panther subtly understood. Nothing is over done, nothing artificially heightened as is so often the case with animal figures in fiction. The forest background is completely mastered, and the author has happily resisted the impulse to instruct which so often afflicts the writer who makes the outdoor scene an item in the plot of his story."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:672 F 9 '29 250w

BAKER, PHILIP JOHN NOEL. Present juridical status of the British dominions in international law. (Contributions to international law and diplomacy) 421p $7.50 (21s) Longmans

354.42 Great Britain—Colonies. Imperial federation. International law and relations

[29-15948]

The author, professor of international relations in the University of London, explains the complex relationship between the British Empire and its member nations, the essential facts about the unity of the "Commonwealth." His conclusion is that "the Dominions of Great Britain are separate persons of international law, but persons who are in a 'special relationship' with one another not known by other international persons." This partnership makes of them when they act together as a group, a single entity in the society of states, known as the British Empire.

"Through the legal complexities of the post-war British Empire Constitution, Professor Baker threads his way with lucidity, accuracy, and common sense. His book, whatever some legal authorities may think of some of his conclusions, is certainly a complete guide to the problem itself." Philip Kerr

+ Nation and Ath 45:766 S 14 '29 1000w

"We commend this to the puzzled delegates at Geneva, and the book as a reference work to all students of international affairs."

+ Spec 143:347 S 14 '29 250w

BALDWIN, EDWARD CHAUNCEY. Types of literature in the Old Testament. (Nelson's English ser.) 218p $1.50 Nelson (N.Y.)

221.8 Bible.Old Testament—Literary character

29-16388

The types of literature represented in the Old Testament,—myth and legend, poetry, essay, drama, short story, are popularly treated in this little volume intended for an undergraduate course in the literary study of the Bible.

Boston Transcript p7 N 2 '29 180w

"A compact and readable textbook prepared by a professor in the University of Illinois for the use of students in an under-graduate course in biblical literature, but equally valuable for personal use in less academic circles."

+ Christian Century 46:1379 N 6 '29 30w

BALDWIN, FAITH. See Cuthrell, F.

BALDWIN, MARGUERITE R. Dark weather. 253p $2.50 Dutton

29-19784

" 'Dark Weather' is a book of pictures in monochrome; not pleasant pictures, but vivid ones. Although we are told that Styxtown, the scene, is in the Pennsylvania mining country, the characters seem to exist without environment. They are boys and girls from a stratum of society that has no thought or wish beyond the satisfaction of physical needs, and their lives are a sad and sordid round of Ford petting parties, bad liquor and untimely babies."—Outlook

"It is not a book for the squeamish—the characters are shown in all their cheapness and vulgarity—but Miss Baldwin subtly reproduces the feverish atmosphere of the town and makes one feel the sordid tragedy of these pleasure-mad youngsters."

+ Bookm 69:xxiv Ag '29 80w

" 'Dark Weather' has occasional moments of terse and well-handled incident, but they are separated by longer intervals where the narrative sags and flounders and the style becomes labored and sultry." Lisle Bell

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ag 11 '29 350w

"Marguerite Baldwin confronts her material with conscious detachment, and creates her object by suggestion. The theme of the loves and death of the slavey in a small-town inn is not new, but treated with discernment and penetration, with knowledge and art, it places 'Dark Weather', high in the regional literature of America."

+ Nation 129:98 Jl 24 '29 180w

"The dialogue is authentic, and the characters and scenes, many of them painfully brutal, appear to be taken from life. It is quite evident that the authoress has made a close study of her subject, and is emotionally involved in it. Unfortunately, her style lacks both the vigor and the fineness which would have made her book poignant."

— + Outlook 152:270 Je 12 '29 200w

BALDWIN, ROGER NASH. Liberty under the soviets. (Vanguard studies of soviet Russia) [new ed] 272p 75c Vanguard press

947.084 Russia—Politics and government

29-2912

Mr Baldwin describes those departments and activities of life within Soviet Russia in which there is freedom and those which are under political control. In the first group Mr Baldwin includes the economic freedom of the peasants, the new freedom of women and the revolution in education,—setting against these "the facts of universal censorship of all means of communication and the complete suppression of any organized opposition to the dictatorship or its program."

Reviewed by B. C. Vladeck

Bookm 68:603 Ja '29 80w

"A book of importance, though inevitably biased, is Roger N. Baldwin's analysis of the Bolshevik brand of liberty. The author is a Harvard graduate of the class of 1905, and his fame rests on his work as a pacifist and libertarian. From his opposition to the World War and his avowed radical principles one could surmise the nature of his thesis, though he strives seriously to view his problem objectively." J. S. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p7 Mr 16 '29 1800w

Reviewed by Jessica Smith

Nation 128:744 Je 19 '29 180w

BALDWIN, R. N.—Continued
"Mr. Baldwin's book is the fairest statement of the facts of freedom in Russia that has yet been made; supporters of either side of the eternal argument will find it an arsenal of ammunition."
+ N Y Times p20 Ap 21 '29 380w

Reviewed by Bernard Smith
N Y World p10m Mr 3 '29 100w

"On the whole, the book presents an excellent description of the different methods of governmental control in Russia, and it is a genuine contribution to a profounder understanding of Russia under the dictatorship of the proletariat." A. Epstein
+ World Tomorrow 12:235 My '29 250w

BALDWIN, WILLIAM HENRY. Shopping book. 301p $2.50 Macmillan

640 Shopping 29-17332

The purpose of this book is to aid the housewife in judging and buying merchandise. Relative merits of different materials, brands, etc. are discussed, from furniture and clothing to package groceries.

---

Booklist 26:57 N '29

"The woman who reads this book will learn to look bargain counter offerings over and under; she will learn to buy economically."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 N 24 '29 230w

Boston Transcript p7 O 26 '29 300w

"There is serious question as to whether the author has succeeded in writing a book which will be of any great value to the person wishing to buy intelligently. Some facts are presented which are helpful, but there are some erroneous statements made, as in the discussion of household scales. There is also a considerable body of material which is practically worthless to the housewife-purchaser. The woman who tries to shop intelligently is left still wishing for a book which will succeed in giving more specific information—such, for example, as the Consumers' Club provides for its members." Day Monroe
— J Home Econ 21:856 N '29 350w

"Here is a book that is both unique and useful. In a book world so densely populated that one would have thought it must already contain every possible variety, Mr. Baldwin can congratulate himself on having produced one that is wholly new and different and also so much needed that it will doubtless make its way quickly to the hands of many welcomers. For it is meant for that great army of women who do most of the family buying and disburse in so doing millions of dollars every year."
+ N Y Times p26 Ag 25 '29 330w

Reviewed by F. M. Williams
Survey 63:357 D 15 '29 270w

BALL, ELSIE. Story Peter told. 144p $1.75 Holt

232 Jesus Christ—Juvenile literature 29-6026

The story is a "narrative designed to give the young child something of an understanding of the impression made by Jesus upon His contemporaries, and of the continuous influence of His life upon the stream of historical events."—Preface

---

Christian Century 46:460 Ap 4 '29 20w

"Here is a new and an excellent approach by way of the adventurous days of the early Christians in Rome when meetings had to be held secretly in the catacombs in order to hear Peter tell about his Master. Here is an introduction likely to arrest the imagination of the youngster in the harum-scarum years from eight to twelve when the philosophical side of Christianity makes no appeal but the hero worship side is very strong."
+ Sat R of Lit 6:99 Ag 31 '29 200w

BALL, WALTER S. Carmella commands. 277p [2] il $2 Harper

29-20653

The struggles of a little Italian girl, Carmella, who preferred to be called Kid Kate, to Americanize her family. Carmella was a sturdy, far-seeing individual and she succeeded in her aim.

---

"With sympathy and penetration and in a distinguished literary style the winner of the Harper prize for the finest juvenile for girls, tells the story of a daughter of Italian immigrants growing up in modern New York, and of the many questions of Americanization, reconciliation of school and home standards, and of domestic and social interests which arise in the life of this young girl. The illustrations of the defiant and resourceful Carmella in her varied situations are clever and pointed."
+ Nation 129:601 N 20 '29 120w

N Y Times p12 N 17 '29 100w

"A breezy tale of a girl of the Italian quarter in New York. She is an aggressive, impudent, self-reliant young person who acts as interpreter for her father in his business. Her management of his affairs is somewhat of a strain on our credulity; but she is an original character and realistically presented." M. A. Fontaine
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:418 N 16 '29 170w

"Walter S. Ball, former Springfield newspaperman, now of Providence, has written more than an interesting story for girls. It is a striking portrait of conflict between the old and new generations, the Americanized child and the parents still living according to old-country ideals. The author knows his Little Italy. The story of Carmella, 14-year-old diplomat and business wizard, is as absorbing for adults."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '29 230w

BALMFORTH, RAMSDEN. Problem-play and its influence on modern thought and life. 155p $1.75 Holt [6s Allen, G.]

809.2 Drama—History and criticism. Theater—Moral and religious aspects 29-2458

The thesis of the book, that the ethical and aesthetic aspects of all great drama are scarcely distinguishable, is carried out largely by stating the opinions of the great writers of the theater. The aspects covered are: Dramatic art in its relation to ethics; The problem-play in relation to social and economic problems; The problem-play in relation to sex and marriage problems; The problem-play in relation to ethical and religious problems; Religion and the drama.

---

Bookm 69:xv Jl '29 170w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p40 D 2 '28 260w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey 62:70 Ap 1 '29 160w

"If Mr. Balmforth, instead of setting up the drama as a schoolmaster, had made some attempt to portray the interchange of effects between life and the theatre, he would have written a wider and truer book. As it is, he has merely ensnared the high emotions of good theatre and given them a subjectively ethical implication. It is a wordy and slightly pompous effort."
— Theatre Arts Mo 13:388 My '29 130w

BAMESBERGER, VELDA CHRISTENA. Appraisal of a social studies course in terms of its effect upon the achievement, activities, and interests of pupils. (Contributions to educ.) 91p $1.50 Teachers college

375.3 Social sciences—Study and teaching. Courses of study 29-4710

"This investigation reports the appraisal of a sixth grade activity type social studies course in terms of certain outcomes of instruction; namely, (1) the achievement of pupils as measured by subject matter tests; (2) the extent to which desirable leisure reading habits were established; (3) the type and extent of interests aroused by the subject matter presented; and (4) the extent to which constructional activities related to the social studies were carried on outside the classroom. Complete lists of the books read, the interests reported, the construction work attempted, the tests used, and a sample unit of work from the course of study are included in the report."—Publisher's note

Reviewed by Franklin Bobbitt
Am J Soc 35:340 S '29 130w

"As one reads the description of the experiment, one is impressed with the fact that methods of teaching are being compared rather than courses of study. In fact, the author's first general conclusion relates wholly to methods of instruction. It would seem that the author has merely compared the results obtained by the formal textbook method of instruction with those accomplished by the unit-mastery method. What she discovers does not surprise one familiar with current methods of instruction. Why shouldn't one get better results from a good method of instruction than from a poor method?" R. M. Tryon
— School R 37:315 Ap '29 350w

BANG, HERMAN JOACHIM. Ida Brandt; tr. from the Danish by Arthur G. Chater. 311p $2.50 (7s 6d) Knopf 28-25957

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:213 F '29

"Bang possesses one great, almost magnificent, gift: he can handle masterfully a group of rather ordinary middle-class people engaged in simple, unpolished conversation. . . One tends to skip the plot and concentrate on the aimless but delightfully exact bourgeois gossipings scattered throughout the book." C. P. Fadiman
+ — Bookm 68:590 Ja '29 160w

Reviewed by T. S. Matthews
New Repub 57:356 F 13 '29 160w

"Herman Bang appeals to one's intellect rather than to one's emotions. One admires his superb craftsmanship, his flawless style, his erudition, but he fails to stir one's imagination. He is the story-teller with no story to tell." Karsten Roedder
— + N Y World p11m D 2 '28 120w

Pratt p39 summer '29

"Ida is an attractive heroine of the Solveig kind; but even the minor characters in this novel are very much alive." R. A. Taylor
+ Spec 142:870 Je 1 '29 200w

BARBE-MARBOIS, FRANÇOIS, marquis de. Our revolutionary forefathers. 225p il $3.50 Duffield

917.3 United States—Social life and customs 29-3155

Letters written to his fiancée in France by the Marquis de Barbé-Marbois during his residence in the United States as secretary of the French legation, 1779-1785. The writer was a warm admirer of America and his letters are full of friendly comments on the ways of life in the thirteen states at the close of the Revolutionary war.

Booklist 26:24 O '29

Reviewed by H: S. Commager
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 F 24 '29 580w

Cleveland Open Shelf p71 My '29

"Excellent reading. One regrets only the parts deleted. . . The Marbois papers are not confined to observations of feminine charm or masculine lack of sobriety. They contain an exceedingly vivid picture of life in the thirteen States immediately after the Revolution, when life was of a Spartan simplicity, when individual freedom was possessed to a degree that dumbfounded even a liberal Frenchman." Edwin Seaver
+ N Y Evening Post p8m F 2 '29 650w

"The book adds a volume of real value to our small collection of keen, sympathetic, vivid comment from highly intelligent, friendly and observant foreigners. . . A veritable mine of original and authentic study of the life of our forefathers." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p10 Mr 17 '29 1150w

"A picture of revolutionary America that deserves its own uncrowned place on the line. We have far too little such history." W. P. Beazell
+ N Y World p4e F 24 '29 660w
St Louis 27:205 Je '29

"This volume of letters gives François Barbé an important place with the numerous French writers of American memoirs and travels during this period." Allan Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1072 Je 1 '29 470w

BARBOUR, RALPH HENRY. Boys' book of dogs. 238p il $2 Dodd

636.7 Dogs 28-29319

Fetchingly illustrated with drawings by Morgan Dennis the book tells the boy about dogs of many kinds and includes a number of anecdotes and stories about dogs.

Booklist 25:289 Ap '29
St Louis 27:63 F '29

"A breezily written and decidedly interesting compendium of the Canidae. This admirable dog primer ends with an idea sometimes overlooked: that it is just as well for the dog owner to be worthy of his dog."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:672 F 9 '29 180w
Wis Lib Bul 25:104 Mr '29

BARBOUR, SCHARLIE. On with the dance. 104p il $1.25 Sully

793.3 Dancing. Balls (parties) 29-2038

An entertainment book for dancing parties. Suggestions for novel masquerades, stunts, choosing partners, giving out favors, unusual costumes, etc. are given.

Booklist 25:273 Ap '29
Cleveland Open Shelf p90 Je '29

"The ratio of brains to feet in the book is about the same as on the dance floor."
Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 25 '29 120w

BARBUSSE, HENRI. I saw it myself; tr. by Brian Rhys. 251p $2.50 Dutton

940.49 European war, 1914-1918 28-28888

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Ja 27 '29 120w

"The authenticity of all incidents is vouched for by the author, but there are occasions when the credulity of the reader is somewhat strained. Some of the incidents would not seem easily susceptible of proof, and often the minuteness of detail raises further doubts in the reader's mind. However, his indictment of militarism in Europe generally, and France specifically, is a serious one." J. C. G.
Boston Transcript p5 Ja 26 '29 450w

"A lesser artist than the author of 'Under Fire' would have made the telling of the tales less effective by overstating them." W: Seagle
+ Nation 128:375 Mr 27 '29 520w

" 'I saw it myself' is an example of the inevitable failure of propaganda so bitterly pure that it differentiates only on the lines of its own bias. . . The truth of the stories is vouched for by the author: in many cases real names are used. In a sense they are not only actually true, but typical, and yet—they do not convince. Only in a few cases do the tales manage to arouse wrath or horror. For the rest, they are too isolated, too far removed from the world in which we live." M. P. L.
— New Repub 28:56 F 20 '29 210w

BARING, MAURICE. Coat without seam. 325p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Heinemann]
29-11281

"The hero is angular, hot-tempered and poor, and, owing to a catastrophe of childhood, feels himself at odds with the world. The consequence is that though he is extremely clever and though several charming and high-born ladies fall in love with him, he never does anything worth doing. His love affairs all end badly and when he is killed in the war his life is to outward appearance a failure. Christopher Trevenen is throughout his life haunted by a legend of the Seamless Coat of Christ which he regards as in some way part of a symbolic interpretation of existence; a symbolism which makes its meaning clear to him on his death-bed and from which he draws consolation."—Sat R

"Less interesting as a story than some of Mr. Baring's previous novels, but worth reading as a character study of a man whose life was a series of futilities."
+ — Booklist 25:394 Jl '29

"Mr. Baring's world is at no time brilliantly vivid, but it is always with him. It may be dim, but it never flickers. The extent of his panorama, the variety of the people who move across his scene, is Russian in its effect. . . In Christopher Mr. Baring accomplishes an unforgettable portrait of a man, and this against a background that touches practically the whole of civilized Europe." Florence Haxton
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 My 19 '29 820w

"Christopher Trevenen's story is for the few. For them it will hold an illimitable appeal, and for the others—there are other books." H. F. McDade
+ Boston Transcript p3 My 18 '29 1300w

"Like the postal card the style is too concise, too constrained to tell the whole story. There is no invention in the handling of the material. Christopher's experiences are listed like the items of an inventory and are equally uncorrelated. While the variations of the legend of the 'Coat' are of interest in themselves they make clumsy transitions between episodes."
— Nation 129:151 Ag 7 '29 200w

"This novel does not provide a good shop-window for Mr. Baring's talents. The inferiority-complex of the hero is the centre of interest, and Mr. Baring has failed to make this either convincing or illuminating."
— Nation and Ath 45:314 Je 1 '29 100w
+ New Repub 59:242 Jl 17 '29 200w

"This is not one of Mr. Baring's best novels, but it has the rather pale distinction of all his work." G. W. S.
+ — New Statesman 33:16 Ap 13 '29 230w

"We like Mr. Baring's novels. There is no attempt to dazzle with cleverness and spurious erudition. They are civilized without being self-conscious, and sophisticated without being smart." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 152:190 My 29 '29 130w
St Louis 27:272 S '29

"Though Mr. Baring's books are like each other, they are not like the books of anyone else. His merits are as persistent as his shortcomings. He seldom falls below his own high level. His latest effort, 'The Coat Without Seam,' certainly maintains it." L. P. Hartley
+ Sat R 147:543 Ap 20 '29 400w

"Not until the very last page of the book are we allowed to see the design as a whole, to interpret the allegory and to appreciate the subtlety of the very beautiful pattern that Mr. Baring has woven out of the threads of his own imagination. The author, as usual, holds the attention throughout the length of a long and fascinating novel." B. E. Todd
+ Spec 142:433 Mr 16 '29 130w

"It is a sad little story, reflecting the life in several European capitals before the War, giving an interesting picture of persons and opinions, never distorting probability, never unfairly exploiting emotion, yet indubitably pallid. . . Mr. Baring has his own principles of composition, and carries them out with great dexterity; but we do not believe that they have ever been the principles of great imaginative composers."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p274 Ap 4 '29 700w

BARKER, MRS ELSA. C. I. D. of Dexter Drake. 302p $2 Sears
29-22053

"Mrs Elsa Barker, who created Dexter Drake, the master detective, in 'The Cobra Candlestick,' supplies entertainment to lovers of detective fiction in a second book, This is a series of detective yarns, somewhat like the Sherlock Holmes stories in construction, with Paul Howard as the Dr Watson. Every story has a mystery apparently insoluble which is unravelled in due time by the clever Dexter Drake."—Springf'd Republican

"Those familiar with Drake's solution of the Cobra Candlestick case last year will be keenly interested in his newest exploits."
+ Bookm 70:xxx D '29 80w
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 O 27 '29 120w
N Y Times p22 N 3 '29 130w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 17 '29 100w

BARKER, MRS ELSA. Cobra candlestick. 293p $2 Sears
29-1199

"The crudeness of a simple family quarrel is relieved by the introduction of tangled threads of possible motives of an Italian doctor, a wealthy neighbor, a previous murder mystery in Boston, a black hand found on a pillar of the porch. Only on the arrival of the famous Dexter Drake do the clues resolve themselves into clarity."—Boston Transcript

Bookm 69:xxx Mr '29 50w

"It is an interesting tale, well told to delight the guessing proclivities of mystery-story lovers."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 19 '29 170w
N Y Times p34 N 25 '28 250w

"We guess the plot is all right, but we couldn't seem to get excited about it. We've read so many detective yarns lately that we have to have our suspense drawn pretty taut, and the rubber in this one was weak." W. R. Brooks
— Outlook 150:1294 D 5 '28 150w

"Of baffling interest in spite of being unevenly written. The conception of the crime and its unique setting make the story good of its kind."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 31 '29 150w

BARNARD, MISS. See Eldershaw, M. B., pseud.

BARNES, CARMAN DEE. Schoolgirl. 240p $2 Liveright
29-11282

This is an adolescent school girl's bald account of life in a boarding school. Crushes among the girls in school and sex escapades with boys outside are the chief materials of the story.

"The telling of this story is extremely and engagingly—young. 'Schoolgirl' is written lushly, with conscious daring; and all the egotism and vanity indicated for a temperament necessary to produce such a volume are here. But imitative and glib at the take-off, the story, once launched, settles down to pretty honest narrative: thenceforth the emotion is genuine and the problems are real." Florence Haxton
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Je 2 '29 1300w

"Written with the startling self-assertion that so frequently masquerades as candor, the book, wittingly or unwittingly, touches on a psychological point that has recently been the cause of much controversy. It is a subject that, when discussed by an accomplished and mature writer, earned nothing but recrimination and abuse."

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 10 '29 280w

Reviewed by F: F. Van de Water
N Y Evening Post p7m Je 15 '29 100w

"'Schoolgirl' is amusingly compounded of sophistication and naïveté, but it has movement and charm."
+ — N Y Times p9 Je 23 '29 520w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 23 '29 180w

BARNES, HARRY ELMER. In quest of truth and justice; de-bunking the war guilt myth. 423p il $3.50 National historical soc., Steuben bldg., Chicago

940.31 European war, 1914-1918—Causes
28-26934

"Professor Barnes has prepared the present volume in the hope of reaching a wider group of readers than were touched by his 'Genesis of the World War' by offering them a briefer statement of the case for the revisionists on the question of war guilt."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 25:156 Ja '29
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 F 10 '29 250w

"While Fay's book has, for the time, put all other writings on war origins into the shade, students of the subject should not overlook Professor Harry Elmer Barnes's 'In Quest of Truth and Justice.' The author has long since taken his place among the leading writers on the question and has waged a courageous fight against staggering odds in this country. . . He has reduced many of his opponents ad absurdum and the process is highly illuminating and instructive. Of particular importance is the new light thrown on the Austrian attitude and policy." W: L. Langer
+ Nation 127:sup624 D 5 '28 330w

Reviewed by Ferdinand Schevill
New Repub 59:53 My 29 '29 430w
World Tomorrow 12:187 Ap '29 50w

BARNES, HARRY ELMER. Living in the twentieth century; a consideration of how we got this way. 392p $3.50 Bobbs

909.82 Civilization. Progress. Twentieth century
28-22009

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:156 Ja '29

"The value of Professor Barnes' summary, critique and evaluation of recent cultural, economic and social progress lies partly in the vast amount of pertinent information which he presents in sprightly style, partly in the author's suggestive comments upon the tendencies of modern thought and civilization, and partly in the number of his judgments which provoke dissent and stimulate the reader to formulate and defend his own interpretations of phenomena of contemporary life. The table of contents suggests, by its comprehensiveness, the Encyclopedia Britannica." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 45:1429 N 22 '28 680w

"Readers of Dr Barnes's previous books know that he possesses amazing erudition, vigorous critical powers, and a style that rivals the best pamphleteering efforts of H. G. Wells. In manner, 'Living in the Twentieth Century' represents a synthesis of all these qualities. In content, too, the book achieves a synthesis, being a comprehensive and integrated account of the social forces which have transformed civilization during the last hundred years." C: L. Snider
+ Nation 128:204 F 13 '29 260w
New Repub 58:26 F 20 '29 70w

"As an attempt at a genetic analysis of the more immediate origins of contemporary civilization, the book is extraordinarily successful. The name of the author is a sufficient guarantee of a comprehensive, informed and scholarly synthetic account. Professor Barnes has curbed his propensity to strew his pages with lists of names; the references are largely confined to well-selected and lengthy bibliographies. Even his vigorous opinions have been sub-ordinated to descriptive analysis, and crop out only occasionally, in his polemics against Jahweh and against the democratic ideal. The volume as a whole is to be heartily commended as the best brief survey of the genesis of contemporary industrial society." J: H. Randall, Jr.
+ Pol Sci Q 44:436 S '29 1300w
Pratt p31 autumn '29

"It is the work of a thoroughly alert and exceptionally well-informed mind, which is never tired of emphasizing the significance of novelty. In its way, the book is a very considerable tour de force which no one can read without profit. . . If he will only say what he has in him to say without giving us reference to men who only repeat his own phrases with sound and fury, his books will be much less formidable in appearance and much more attractive to read." H. J. Laski
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:750 Mr 9 '29 1100w

BARNES, HARRY ELMER. Twilight of Christianity. 470p $3 Vanguard press

270 Christianity
29-21377

"Professor Barnes is convinced that religion as we have known it in the past, by which he means man's 'interpretation of the nature and import of the hypothetical supernatural world,' is passing away before the all-conquering advance of contemporary scientific culture. . . What is today happening to Christianity is certain sooner or later to happen to all the great religions. So he deals with Christianity in its two phases of Catholicism and Protestantism, and in both sees the twilight of the gods."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"What we have in this book is a complete and thoroughgoing statement of the collapse of orthodox Christianity under the impact of the new knowledge of our time. Professor Barnes comes to his task with a scholarly equipment of amazing range and depth. His familiarity with the past achievements of science in all branches of inquiry is matched only by his familiarity with what is being said and done by our best scholars in many fields at this very moment. . . But if twilight comes, can day be far behind? Professor Barnes's book is least satisfactory in its consideration of 'the religion of tomorrow.' Here his knowledge suddenly narrows and contracts, his vision wavers. . . Dr. Barnes has not yet prepared himself to write the second book on the new religion to come, which should properly follow this first one on the old religion now happily dead and gone. As it is, he has cleared the ground with superb efficiency." J: H. Holmes
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p30 D 1 '29 850w
Boston Transcript p5 D 7 '29 1050w

"A brilliantly stated, critical study, interesting and readable, of religion in general and Christianity in particular. Despite the endeavor to put upon religion the blame for most of our human dilatoriness in arriving at utopia, the criticism of orthodox elements in Christianity and of supernatural elements in religion are in the main well founded; but the author is unsympathetic with religion as an expression and lacks understanding of it. There are subtler, more imponderable things in religion than he allows for in his discussion, and towards some new expression of these things the modernists, against whom he rages, are reaching. This, in fairness to a sincere and scattered group of workers for a new order, ought to be said; for of their aim and spirit he seems to have no real comprehension." S. B. Snow
+ — Christian Century 47:49 Ja 8 '30 1450w

"In this somewhat formidable volume—it runs beyond 130,000 words—Dr. Barnes displays all his virtues and all his defects. He is, on the credit side, immensely industrious in assembling facts, shrewd in discerning their implications, and courageous in stating those im-

BARNES, H. E.—Continued
plications without evasion. On the debit side he is constantly over-prolix, often repetitious, and not infrequently somewhat vague. His book gives me the impression of having been put together in a hurry. If more time and labor had been expended upon it, it would have been 30 per cent shorter and at least 100 per cent better." H. L. Mencken
+ — Nation 129:722 D 11 '29 880w

"The well-read man will find a good deal in the book not new to him; but by its focusing and arrangement it is stimulating. Perhaps the most original parts are those in which the author discusses specially the actual obstructions to free thought and intelligent action which religious obscurantism sets up. The constructive part of the book, as is inevitable, is less convincing. The 'secular social religion' of the future which shall make impressive and potent love, justice, beauty, seems a little thin and unsatisfying to those, at least, who have found some of the older faiths emotionally comforting. . . . In style and purpose the book is bold and vigorous." H. A. Eaton
+ — New Repub 60:379 N 20 '29 800w

Reviewed by H. J. Laski
Sat R of Lit 6:600 D 28 '29 1050w

BARR, A. J. Let tomorrow come. 269p $2.50 Norton
29-8003

"A sombre episodic narration of prison life is this novel by A. J. Barr. All the hapless creatures that are washed behind the walls of jail and penitentiary troop through these pages and do their miserable little stunts for the reader. . . . A great many propaganda books have been written on the subject of prison reform, but it is doubtful whether their cold logic and scientific arguments are half as effective as this bald and simple narration of prison life."—N Y World

"Readers who have enjoyed Dostoevsky and Gorki, those who have responded to the grim humor, the wild gusto, of tortured but courageous humanity, will probably find this book profoundly poetic and intuitive. To other readers, it will be very depressing and unpleasant. However, upon any reader it is certain to make an indelible impression which may change opinions concerning the present day penal system and capital punishment. It is simply written and frank with that degree of restraint which always makes for an intense emphasis."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 27 '29 250w

"This is writing of a very high order. There is a Gorki-like strength in some of these pictures. Barr has achieved an original style and one that seems to have been born right out of the heart of prison experiences. When deftness is wanted he has it; when strength, he has strength. Luckily he is now out of prison, and is perhaps devoting his energies to other subjects." W. D. Lane
+ Nation 128:590 My 15 '29 800w

"Whether or not the book happens to be a 'true confession' is of little importance. If you talk to any man who has served time you will find that this book is an accurate exposition of the life that he has spent behind the bars." H. G.
+ N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 27 '29 450w

"In spite of the terrible depravity of the characters in this book—humor, irony, sympathy creep through in grotesque and feeble forms."
+ N Y World p11m Mr 24 '29 150w

"This is a startlingly vivid and altogether horrible story—autobiographical, probably—of prison."
Outlook 151:556 Ap 3 '29 20w

"His style is rough, but has the merits of sincerity and force; he sees the constant play of drama in the monotony and cruelty of prison life, and he has told his story in a series of succinct sketches, all the more effective because curt and elliptical. The result is nearer the level of Jack London than of Gorki, but with both a horrifying expertness and an undertone of compassion that London seldom revealed." Allan Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1051 My 25 '29 480w

"The author has shown himself a master at characterization." Ann Blanchet
+ Survey 62:456 Jl 15 '29 170w

"Altogether a thrilling and powerful story, though at times a repellent one."
+ World Tomorrow 12:426 O '29 90w

BARR, CECIL. Suzy falls off. 320p $2 Boni [7s 6d Long]
29-22148

"The story of Suzy—nineteen, pretty, and one of those blondes whom gentlemen prefer—and the difficulties in which she became involved through her kindhearted attempt to place a chance-met acquaintance's money on a horse at the Longchamps races."—Outlook

Bookm 70:xxxi O '29 50w

"In place of plot is a series of picaresque episodes. Characters appear only to vanish, and there is a feeble attempt at a mystery. The jacket promises naughty entertainment, and it contains weak lemonade."
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p38 S 29 '29 100w

"Perfect after its kind. Gay, sophisticated, at times thrilling, the narration speeds along like a smart roadster over a perfect road."
+ Boston Transcript p2 N 6 '29 250w

"The tale is softly risque, light fiction of the second grade, brightly written, fairly entertaining and never dull."
+ — N Y World p11m O 13 '29 170w

"Mr. Barr handles indelicacies very adroitly in this light, amusing tale."
Outlook 153:70 S 11 '29 120w

"The situations that are meant to be piquant seem only unpleasant, and the facetious asides and innuendoes 'knowing' rather than witty."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p293 Ap 19 '28 120w

BARRES, MAURICE. Sacred hill (La colline inspirée); tr. from the French by Malcolm Cowley. (Transatlantic lib.) 269p $2.50 Macaulay
29-20105

The story of the three brothers Baillard, who were priests and who built up convents and a great following in Lorraine. Their pride and their greed and love of power led them to certain practices of which the Church disapproved, and they were driven out of Lorraine to found a new cult on the hill called Zion-Vaudèmont. But they were unable to achieve all the aspirations of their new religious fanaticism.

"This book has aroused great respect in men for whom we have great respect, and the publishers are to be commended for their courage in issuing it. It is not likely to win wide favor with the American public. To people raised among no religions or many religions, the central theme of 'The Sacred Hill,' the psychology of heresy, can supply little categorical excitement. A book, to affect a zero public, must appeal by its more strictly 'literary' virtues. Of these, Barrès possesses several. High among them is his great ability at localizing his narrative, drawing it out of a well documented background. And still higher is his grasp of an assertive diction which places him squarely in the traditions of Rome." Kenneth Burke
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 N 10 '29 1000w

"Beyond being merely well-written exposition, 'The Sacred Hill' demonstrates undeniable nobility and power." A. C.
+ Boston Transcript p5 N 9 '29 380w

Reviewed by Florence Codman
Nation 130:50 Ja 8 '30 550w

Reviewed by Pierre Loving
N Y Evening Post p10m D 7 '29 730w

"Barrès is still a formidable personality in French letters. 'The Sacred Hill' is the best of his dozen novels, the most classically perfect of them all, a grave and profound recreation of a religious fanaticism set between two beautiful meditations. There is a universality in the situation that removes it from the peculiarities of time and place; yet 'The Sacred Hill' is thoroughly French. It is this power of suggesting universals and yet remaining national that heightens the effect of 'The Sacred Hill' and makes it unique among modern French books."

+ N Y Times p7 O 20 '29 800w
Sat R of Lit 6:624 Ja 4 '30 500w

BARRETT, EDWARD JOHN BOYD. While Peter sleeps. 321p $3 Washburn
282 Roman Catholic church 29-9350

"The author of 'The Jesuit Enigma' discusses the need of reform in the entire Roman Catholic Church. Essaying the spirit of Erasmus, he sets forth his program of therapeutics. Dr. Barrett would eliminate hell, eradicate the fear of God from the training of children, liberalize the church laws of marriage, particularly in regard to mixed marriages, free the clergy from celibacy and wipe away such devotional excesses as Lourdes. He would, in brief, bring Catholicism into step with modern life."—N Y Evening Post

Booklist 26:7 O '29

"Mr. Barrett's book, written with a subdued fervor and stirring with an indignation which never becomes intemperate, is significant of the unsettlement that may exist in the most disciplined of churches, and possibly prophetic of remonstrances that will trouble the stately Pax romana in the years to come." W: L. Sullivan
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ap 28 '29 450w
Boston Transcript p4 Je 15 '29 800w

"Dr. Barrett has written a book which is unique in two particulars: it combines a thoroughness of information gained by twenty years of experience as a Jesuit and a priest, with a critical temper and an absence of animosity; and it brings to bear on the subject the training of a modern psychologist and psychoanalyst." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 46:553 Ap 24 '29 530w

Reviewed by F. L. Palmer
Churchman 139:28 My 4 '29 220w

"'While Peter Sleeps' is gratifyingly informative, and for that reason an uncommonly interesting book to read. Only incidentally is it intended to edify those without the fold. Its expressed purpose is to demonstrate to Catholics the need for reform. Dr. Barrett, writing sometimes as a sufferer from Jesuit harshness and narrowness, sometimes as a trained psychologist, and almost always as an intelligent and reasonably emancipated observer, aims, on the one hand, at the modernization of the church, and, on the other, at its purification by the abolition of a number of practices that, in his opinion, are not only unwise but also without sound authority in tradition." Granville Hicks
+ Nation 128:428 Ap 10 '29 630w

"'While Peter Sleeps' is both modernistic and idealistic. . . More interesting to us than the well-planned, progressive iconoclasm of Dr. Barrett's attack upon his Church's tenets and practice is the evidence, offered by 'While Peter Sleeps,' that the leaven of insurgency, enlightenment, revolution, reformation is at work in the oldest and most conservative branch of Christianity as well as in the younger churches." F: F. Van de Water
+ N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 23 '29 230w

"An excellent presentation of the program of the advanced element in the Church. Dr. Barrett writes interestingly and has chosen his material well. He remains the critic throughout the work, but invariably the fair one." Byron Darnton
+ N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 30 '29 830w

Reviewed by A. M. Sholl
N Y Times p3 Ap 21 '29 620w

"He discusses the point where reform can and should come with dispassionate intelligence."
+ Outlook 151:514 Mr 27 '29 40w

Reviewed by E. B. Chaffee
Outlook 152:108 My 15 '29 40w
St Louis 27:193 Je '29

"It is a pity that his book is more likely to be read by Protestants who will be strengthened by it in their prejudices, than by Catholics who might profit from its criticism."
+ Sat R of Lit 6:546 D 7 '29 450w

BARRETTO, LARRY. Horses in the sky. 338p $2.50 Day
29-19782

The rôle of four young men in the war, and their psychological reactions to it, with emphasis upon Jerry Tower's experiences and his romantic affair with Renée, a French girl.

Bookm 70:xiv Ja '30 80w

"Mr. Barretto's novel of life among a group of American ambulance men in the World War is pitched in a quieter key than most of the current books that deal with the same essential subject matter. It furnishes a picture of war from still another angle, the angle of the men whose duty it was to bring in the human wreckage. If one chose to look too closely for flaws in Mr. Barretto's well told and readable story it would be easy to say the ending is too mathematically correct." Herschel Brickell
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 D 15 '29 800w

"Told with romantic fervor, yet never losing its clipped clarity and remarkable insight, Mr. Barretto's story recalls most vividly those agonizing days. There is breadth of sympathy and understanding in the author's handling of his theme." H. F. M.
+ Boston Transcript p6 N 27 '29 300w

"Mr. Barretto has profited by the changing mode in war novels. He has taken the substance of his experience as an ambulance driver on the Aisne and fashioned it into a novel that has the romantic elements of the traditional popular novel with the realistic treatment of the martial episodes that the age demands for a background."
+ N Y Times p7 O 20 '29 600w

"The novel has force in isolated passages, but as a whole it lacks high sincerity. It will do very well for those readers who cannot stomach the unrelieved grimness of many current war novels."
— + Sat R of Lit 6:459 N 23 '29 250w

BARRIE, SIR JAMES MATTHEW. Plays. 871p $5 Scribner [21s Hodder & S.] 822 29-2144

A complete one-volume edition of the plays of J. M. Barrie, including Peter Pan and others not previously published. Contents: Peter Pan, or, The boy who would not grow up; Quality street; The admirable Crichton; Alice sit-by-the-fire; What every woman knows; A kiss for Cinderella; Dear Brutus; Mary Rose; Pantaloon; Half an hour; Seven women; Old friends; Rosalind; The will; The twelve-pound look; The new word; A well-remembered voice; Barbara's wedding; The old lady shows her medals; Shall we join the ladies?

Booklist 25:255 Mr '29

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p6 F 9 '29 300w

"He has a very astute sense of the possibilities of the stage; and his dialogue is brilliantly adapted to dramatic effect."
+ Nation and Ath 44:658 F 9 '29 180w

"Read in close succession, their sentimentality tends soon to cloy the palate even of the most appreciative of the author's admirers. But how wonderfully clever they are! No English dramatic writer during the past generation, except perhaps Pinero, has approached the level of Barrie's instinctive stagecraft. For there is something about all his work that seems to be instinctive. He gets his effects without any sign of effort."

BARRIE, J. M.—Continued
+ — New Statesman 32:363 D 22 '28 180w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p8m D 29 '28 130w
Pratt p26 summer '29

"Sir James Barrie's greatest strength lies in his sense of the scene—invisible, of course, to a reader; not in his thought or in character drawing, though that is often subtle and always clear. And although there are many passages in his plays which in print deliver up completely their content, there are many others which not only require acting to carry them off, but without it strike the reader as mere exposures of the manner in which the dramatist had proposed to move us. . . But Sir James Barrie has known exactly what he was about. His instinct for the stage has been so sure and subtle that he has enlarged its possibilities, gradually making room for his own peculiar imagination, one which before him would have been considered as 'undramatic.'" Desmond McCarthy
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1139 Je 29 '29 2600w
Springf'd Republican p10 F 28 '29 200w
Wis Lib Bul 25:27 Ja '29

BARRINGER, LESLIE. Joris of the Rock. 318p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Heinemann] 29-6347

Joris of the Rock is a powerful outlaw of the fourteenth century kingdom of Gerfalcon. Spurned by Red Anne, a great beauty and renowned sorceress, he wreaks vengeance on men and women alike. The first half of the story concerns the love of Joris and Anne; the second half describes the overthrow of Joris by an accidental son grown to manhood.

"It is really a fine tale and flames with color and life. All of the characters are real enough in action and the style glows with a luminous poetry; but one does feel that there is too much corroborative detail." Donald Douglas
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Mr 17 '29 350w
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 17 '29 130w

"A thrilling, picturesque tale of runes and rebels, of hard riding, hard fighting, treason and deeds of derring-do."
+ N Y Times p9 Mr 3 '29 350w

"Some of the book is so good, that one wishes it were more equally wrought. But the conversation is often much too stilted; and the two fierce protagonists lose our interest before the end." R. A. Taylor
+ — Spec 141:460 O 6 '28 120w

"The chief fault of his characters is that they are too many. Ingolard the gleeman, on page 308, said that his hearers 'grumbled most vilely if more than six people came into the story.' So Mr. Barringer, who gives us at least sixty, must not be surprised if readers grumble. The map makes sixty places clear, but you cannot map people."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p836 N 8 '28 250w

BARRINGTON, E., pseud. See Beck, L.

BARROWS, ESTHER G. Neighbors all; a settlement notebook. 218p $2 Houghton
331.852 Boston.South End house. Social settlements 29-18086

A "settlement notebook" in which Miss Barrows has written down some of the experiences of her twenty years' residence in South End House, Boston, under the leadership of Robert A. Woods.

Booklist 26:54 N '29
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 N 17 '29 120w

"A faithful picture of the friendly relations between the workers and the neighbors. Much of Miss Barrows's own part in bringing cross-town ideas and ideals of culture and sanitation to the South End is omitted. But it takes only a little imagination to read between the lines and discover that hard work and eager self-sacrifice were her part." B. B.
Boston Transcript p2 S 11 '29 420w

BARRY, CHARLES, pseud. Clue of the clot. 288p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Hutchinson] 29-5705

Sergeant-Major Buchan is the first on the scene of the murder of Sarkisian. The sergeant's active hate of the dead man and satisfaction at his end is echoed by most of the others who enter the case. The sum total of the dead man's villainies increases as the plot unfolds.

"A well constructed story of intrigue."
+ Bookm 69:xxvi Je '29 30w

"Readable shocker." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 26 '29 120w

Reviewed by Francis Birrell
Nation and Ath 43:680 Ag 25 '28 130w

"It is distinguished by quite the most incredible American dialect yet to appear in an English novel. This alone is so unconsciously funny as to make the book almost worth an hour's time on a dull day." M. J.
N Y Evening Post p6m Je 15 '29 100w
N Y Times p19 Je 16 '29 150w

"The book is way above the mystery story average in writing." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 152:118 My 15 '29 130w

"Mr Barry, as in his other novels, cleverly conceals the identity of the actual murderer until near the end of his story, in the meantime leading the reader on many false scents, and throwing suspicion on many parties who, while not exactly what might be called 'innocent,' are nevertheless guiltless of the actual shooting."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 29 '29 190w
Times [London] Lit Sup p689 S 27 '28 240w

BARRY, CHARLES, pseud. Corpse on the bridge. 270p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Methuen] 28-25552

A dead man is found on Waterloo Bridge and several lay brothers are reported missing from the Alderborough monastery. Inspector Gilmartin connects the two cases and with some desperate sleuthing solves them.

Bookm 69:xxx Ap '29 80w

"Mr. Barry's dodges are no staler than most; and his setting is unconventional." Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p36 D 2 '28 100w

"Out of meagre details Mr. Barry has fashioned an exciting and quite unusual story which carries us in and out of an amazing number of complicated and dangerous situations before Gilmartin succeeds in solving it."
+ Boston Transcript p8 Mr 9 '29 300w

"Monks and detectives plot and counterplot for the production of a very satisfactory yarn." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 150:1258 N 28 '28 110w

Reviewed by W: Bolitho
Sat R of Lit 5:453 D 8 '28 250w

BARRY, FREDERICK. Scientific habit of thought; an informal discussion of the source and character of dependable knowledge. 358p $3.50 Columbia univ. press
507 Science—Methodology. Logic, Symbolic and mathematical 27-24398

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"Dr. Barry is eminent as a scientist, and is equally trained and able in the history of science. His experience and knowledge should fit him peculiarly well to study scientifically scientific thinking; but the reader who anticipates such a treatment in this book will experience keen disappointment. Dr. Barry gives us, instead, a number of essays, constructed and written in true essay form. This type of approach accomplishes his expressed aims but scarcely measures up to one's hopes." Herbert Blumer

+ — Am J Soc 34:935 Mr '29 310w

"Prof. Barry's work is well and usefully done in a book of four chapters, and everyone, expert or layman, would be the wiser for following the author's footsteps. But a word of warning, though not of discouragement, is called for. It is not an easy book. It might have been improved for its wholly admirable purpose if the author had broken it up more, used more illustrative instances, and a simpler and more direct style of writing." F. S. Marvin

+ — Nature 122:762 N 17 '28 1050w

BARRY, IRIS (MRS F. A. PORTER). The last [2] enemy. 320p $2.50 Bobbs

29-20010

"What happens when, in a wide area south of London, village vital statistics reveal that there have been no deaths in two, then three, weeks. The panic that ensues when the expectation of natural death is removed reveals that death is the foundation of life, law and happiness, the kindly friend not the enemy of man."—Cleveland Open Shelf

---

"This book is based on an extraordinary idea—a more extraordinary idea than I have come across in any other recent novel. In that much the author reminds one of the earlier Wells. But in no more; for whereas Wells would have extracted the last ounce of sensational dramatics out of such a notion, Miss Barry's handling of her theme is notable for quietness, reticence and a total absence of the fantastic or the mannered. . . Miss Barry has a remarkable knowledge of people and a remarkable power of vivid, unrestrained description." R: Hughes

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 N 3 '29 1500w

"This bizarre theme is handled with quiet skill and absence of sensationalism and the story as developed has strong character interest and much homely pathos."

+ Cleveland Open Shelf p157 D '29

"As a theme, it presents immense possibilities, just because of the elements of the absurd and the incredible which are necessarily mingled with the concept. And since the book might have proved exceedingly piquant, it is quite unforgivable that Miss Barry's efforts should have fallen so short of their promise. [It is] difficult to pardon her graceless treatment of a subject so rare and so tempting."

— + N Y Times p26 D 8 '29 280w

"Some of the characterization is really good. But on the other hand much of the characterization is merely typical, sketched quickly for its perfunctory services in the plot. The style has the same unevenness. The story's the thing in this book."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:608 D 28 '29 350w

"The Last Enemy is a novel of distinction for two reasons: the theme around which it is written is both original and fecund; and the people with whom it deals are so ordinary as to be remarkable. . . Although Miss Iris Barry has not worked out her exceptionally brilliant idea as fully and as powerfully as she might have done, The Last Enemy is a book which cannot fail to grip the reader."

+ — Spec 143:784 N 23 '29 180w

BARRY, PHILIP. Holiday. 205p $2 French

812 29-7881

A comedy in three acts, which contrasts the people whose end and aim in life is to make more and ever more money, and those people who look at life and find it good without the aid of millions.

---

Booklist 25:385 Jl '29

"The whole world of character and emotion, relationships and human crises is seen with delicacy and exactness, never vulgarized with the underscoring or pushed into the common glare of the usual popular comedy of American life. 'Holiday' is delightful comedy. What defects it has come first of all from a certain fluency; the dialogue pours from Mr. Barry so easily that it is sometimes without enough substance." Stark Young

+ — New Repub 57:96 D 12 '28 1350w

"'Holiday' is a literary play in the sense that a great deal of its charm and wit are verbal and depend on the felicity of expression of its clever author. The book reads as enjoyably as it plays." Edgar Johnson

+ N Y Evening Post p11m My 11 '29 220w

Pratt p27 autumn '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:158 My '29

BARRY, PHILIP BEAUFOY. Sinners down the centuries; from Cleopatra to Cora Pearl & from Ovid to Edmund Kean, 69 B.C.—A.D. 1886. 281p il $5 Macrae Smith co. [18s Jarrolds]

920 Biography [29-24866]

The lives of thirteen famous courtesans, adventurers, and libertines. Contents: Cleopatra; Publius Ovidius Naso (Ovid); Abelard and Heloise; François Villon; Ninon de Lenclos; Aphra Behn; John Wilmot, Earl of Rochester; Francis Charteris; Giacomo Casanova; Jeanne du Barry; Christian VII of Denmark and his queen; Edmund Kean; Cora Pearl.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p38 D 1 '29 160w

"There is no plan or meaning in his book. The author might have arrived at an equally coherent result by writing the names of a thousand or so sinners on a sheet of paper, and shutting his eyes and stabbing at it with a pencil. His narrative, however, is lively enough. He does not seem to have gone very deeply into the history of his various 'sinners,' and he quite fails to convince us that there is any reason for putting this particular group in the pillory together; but he does point the contrast between their different vices, and he does manage to keep us interested to the last page."

— + New Statesman 33:92 Ap 27 '29 140w

Spec 142:712 My 4 '29 120w

"An incongruous company, but perhaps by some elastic definition they can come together in the covers of a book as people who lived dangerously."

Times [London] Lit Sup p341 Ap 25 '29 100w

BARSTOW, ROBBINS WOLCOTT. Getting acquainted with God; a book of devotions for use in homes where there are children. 115p $1 Macmillan

249 Devotional exercises 28-21657

"A simple ritual for family worship, with New Testament selections drawn from Goodspeed's American translation. Author is pastor of the First Congregational Church in Madison, Wisconsin."—Wis Lib Bul

---

"This little book is admirably fitted for its purpose. Family devotions with its use will become real, vital and uplifting."

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 20 '28 160w

Christian Century 46:460 Ap 4 '29 30w

"Presented with true insight into the needs of the child and the value of the New Testament in developing his religious experience." Rittenhouse Neisser

+ Crozer Q 6:132 Ja '29 130w

St Louis 27:7 Ja '29

Wis Lib Bul 24:340 D '28

BARTH, KARL. Word of God and the word of man; tr. by Douglas Horton. 327p $2.25 Pilgrim press [8s 6d Hodder]

230 Christianity 28-29577

"The eight addresses by Professor Karl Barth here translated for the benefit of American and English readers cover a period of seven years (1916-1923). Professor Barth is attached to the University of Münster, and his reputation in East Switzerland and Germany stands so high that he is spoken of by no less an authority than Keyserling as 'the one hope of Protestantism.'" (Times [London] Lit Sup) Contents: The righteousness of God; The strange new world within the Bible; Biblical questions, insights, and vistas; The need and promise of Christian preaching; The problem of ethics today; The word of God and the task of the ministry; The doctrinal task of the Reformed churches; The Christian's place in society.

---

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Christian Century 45:1523 D 13 '28 2000w

"The lectures are so much the product of a penetrating preacher interpreting his time to his contemporaries, that the apocalyptist, the mystic, the rationalist, the social reformer—all will find in The Word of God and the Word of Man congenial anchorage for their faith." M. G. Evans

+ Crozer Q 6:247 Ap '29 800w

"This book will enable readers unacquainted with German to make themselves familiar with the much talked-of 'Crisis-theology,' of which Barth is one of the best-known spokesmen."

J Religion 9:498 Jl '29 100w

"There is no doubt that in Professor Barth the 'Reformed' Churches possess a preacher and thinker of exceptional power and insight. His philosophic affinities, both explicit and implicit, are with the lofty visions of Plato, Kant, and to some degree, Hegel."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p122 F 14 '29 300w

BARTLETT, LANIER, and BARTLETT, VIRGINIA STIVERS. Adiós! 309p il $2.50 Morrow

29-12618

" 'Adios' is a dramatic and romantic story whose scene is California immediately after the American acquisition. The story, told with considerable verve and color and audacity, revolves around the character of Pancho Delfino, a young Californian of Spanish descent, who refuses to accept the fact of the American conquest and takes to outlawry in protest. Known as the Puma, he organizes a band of desperadoes and proceeds to harass the hated gringos and to befriend his own countrymen. Pitted against the bandit is Captain Harry Howard, the good American ranger. Much of the Bartletts' story, we are told, is historical."—N Y Evening Post

---

" 'Adios' is a notably good action novel. The feeling and atmosphere of the crimson and gold California fifties is picturesquely caught, the narrative stream runs swift and vivid, and the old, very pre-movie Los Angeles will please many who know only the modern city of the 'talkies.' "

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Je 30 '29 250w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 19 '29 520w

"Fiction or history, the story makes exceptionally good reading." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p6m Je 15 '29 120w

"It is a lively, colorful tale, written in a somewhat amateurish style, but with plenty of spirit."

+ — N Y Times p19 Je 9 '29 460w

"The story has color, action and excitement."
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 14 '29 220w

BARTLETT, VERNON. Calf love. 277p $2.50 Lippincott [5s Constable]

29-18547

John Hardie at seventeen leaves England for a visit in Germany, where he stays for some time with a German family. His various adolescent love-affairs with the girls of the family, Gretchen and Friedel, his romantic dreams, his sensitive stages of depression, joy, and disillusion, form the material of the novel.

---

"Once you are by that dreadful title you find yourself in the course and tide of a lucent stream reflecting all the prismatic radiance of adolescence. . . It is to Mr. Bartlett's fine credit that he is never sentimental and he is never funny. He is a humanist and not a showman. He is a poet because a poet is the only man who knows anything about life." Donald Douglas

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p36 D 1 '29 450w

Boston Transcript p2 D 18 '29 370w

"Calf Love is one of the best descriptions of a boy's unexceptional love-affairs that have been written. An unpretentious and very well-written book. It has an air of extraordinary freshness and sincerity that one does not often find in novels about schoolboys. It is a relief, too, to find an episode like this treated, as it deserves to be, by itself and not as the dim prologue of an interminable saga." G. W. S.

+ New Statesman 33:15 Ap 13 '29 500w

"The author ignores the bizarre manifestations which make—or used to make before this age of gin-bred sophistication—the period of calf love so distressing to bystanders, and weaves into his tranquil tale pathos and pain and a real loveliness." F: F. Van de Water

N Y Evening Post p11m N 9 '29 220w

"Throughout, the novel is written with an insight, coupled with a sense of humor, that makes the calf-love days very real to the reader who can grin in sympathy with this impressionable boy. If John Hardie is ever ridiculous, it is a familiar ridiculousness that we all feel kin to, and while there is idealism aplenty in his love, it is never the saccharine idealism that has made other novels of young love inferior to this one."

+ N Y Times p30 N 10 '29 480w

"The story is slight but significant; the emotions it portrays are obviously less tragic than the characters imagine, but they have their importance and are not a mere storm in a teacup. The effect of lightness is produced by the quotations from John's diary, with its boyish overstatements, its efforts to impress the diarist with a sense of his own sorrows. Among the few novelists qualified to write about Love Mr. Vernon Bartlett takes high rank: 'Calf Love' is an enchanting story." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 147:412 Mr 23 '29 350w

"The psychology of the earlier part of the story is unremarkable; but, after John's holy moment of beauty before the sleeping Friedel has been misunderstood and blighted, the jangled misery of his young soul is delicately touched. And the conclusion, when the passionately desolate boy suddenly rejects the easy comfort offered him, is touching and fine." R. A. Taylor

Spec 142:485 Mr 23 '29 100w

"Mr. Bartlett tells his story with unusual economy, even in too bare a style here and there; but his writing is always informed by candour and laughing common sense."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p258 Mr 28 '29 450w

BARTLEY, NALBRO ISADORAH (MRS HORACE LERCH). Queen Dick. 317p $2 Doubleday, Doran

29-6792

As in "The fox woman" Mrs Bartley again chooses a most unpleasant woman as her central character. Adele Monroe is a cold, self-centered woman who has built up an illusion of perfection in her husband's eyes. The story describes his inevitable awakening and his love for an unconventional young woman.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ap 28 '29 130w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 5 '29 320w

"Mrs Bartley, in 'Queen Dick', has drawn an able portrait of a feminine Babbitt. . . a rotary wife with a husband and friends who refuse to allow her to think for them."

+ N Y Times p17 Ap 21 '29 130w

BARTON, SIR DUNBAR PLUNKET. Links between Shakespeare and the law; with a foreword by James Montgomery Beck. 167p $4 Houghton [12s 6d Faber & G.]

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Knowledge—Law. Shakespeare, William—Contemporaries [29-17100]

"Sir Dunbar is not so much interested in proving that Shakespeare was not a lawyer as in showing that his legal terminology was part of the tradition of a litigious age; and that the use he made thereof was at once more reserved and subtler than that of his contemporaries. . . The tenor of the whole book is that law and legal matters were far more freely talked about and understood then than to-day, and poets enlarged their vocabulary as willingly from that source as from any other."—New Statesman

---

"Sir Dunbar's knowledge of the law enables him to interpret obscure allusions to what are now obsolete points of practice. For the most part he retraverses oft-trodden ground; but he is able to shed some new light on the subject (particularly with reference to the famous 'Shelley's Case') and throughout his discussion he maintains an attitude of scholarly impartiality."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 S 15 '29 300w

New Statesman 33:54 Ap 20 '29 770w

"An admirable contribution to this controversy. It is admirable for the knowledge of Shakespeare's works, of Shakespeare's times and of the law of England on which his conclusions are based, and it is doubly admirable for the temper in which these conclusions and the evidence which supports them are set out."

+ Sat R 147:579 Ap 27 '29 1200w

"Sir Dunbar examines the legal allusions in the plays and has no difficulty in showing that most of them were current coin in Elizabethan literature and that their significance has been wildly exaggerated by Lord Campbell, Mark Twain and other prejudiced commentators. The little volume is very charmingly illustrated with Elizabethan portraits."

+ Spec 142:756 My 11 '29 110w

"It was time that a competent Elizabethan scholar, who is also a very learned lawyer, should sweep away the exaggerations that Lord Campbell and Lord Penzance, and some modern writers who have drawn upon the mid-Victorian lawyers, have formulated with respect to Shakespeare's law. Sir Dunbar Plunket Barton's book, first printed serially in the Law Journal, has already run the gamut of legal opinion."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p451 Je 6 '29 1450w

BARTON, GEORGE. Walks and talks about old Philadelphia. 349p il $2 Reilly, P.

917.481 Philadelphia—Description 28-29392

A second book of anecdotes of famous people and descriptions of famous buildings in Philadelphia. The first book "Little journeys around old Philadelphia," appeared in 1926.

---

Boston Transcript Ja 12 '29 150w

"Walking with Mr. Barton about old Philadelphia is a most pleasing and an educational diversion, and he talks easily of many people and many events."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 16 '29 170w

"Philadelphia is rich in colorful historic memories and Mr. Barton has woven out of them a charming book, gossipy and informing, which notwithstanding its deplorable proofreading, ought to yield much pleasure alike to citizens and visitors of the city which had so prominent a part in the early history of America."

+ — N Y Times p15 Je 30 '29 400w

"Readers who remember the entertaining volume, 'Old Philadelphia,' by George Barton, will welcome a new book with still more about the Quaker city when it was young."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 28 '29 230w

BARTON, RALPH. God's country; a short history. 338p il $3.50 (10s 6d) Knopf

817 United States. History—Humor, caricatures, etc. 29-6438

Ralph Barton makes merry with his country's history, choosing those scenes which best lend themselves to caricature and burlesque and illustrating them with drawings in the same spirit of buffoonery.

---

"I must say a great deal of Mr. Barton's fun-making is not much fun, and that some of it makes me just a little bit sick. His illustrations are on the other hand, quite wonderful." Robert Littell

— + Bookm 69:334 My '29 400w

"The hand that guides Mr. Barton's pencil is always light. The hand that drives his pen is often heavy. His commentary seldom cuts deep. His pictures do it again and again." Carl Van Doren

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Mr 3 '29 620w

"Mr. Barton gives a series of verbal cartoons, in many cases repellent, in a few others more or less appealing because of the kernel of truth embedded in their exaggeration and ridicule." F. B.

Boston Transcript p6 Mr 16 '29 680w

"The book is entirely negligible except as an indication of what now constitutes common form in American satirical writing. Barton's satirical impulse may be powerful, but his imagination is so feeble that he can invent no framework for his story, merely following administration after administration, calling the President 'the Mister,' and the Republic the 'Public Thing.'" Gilbert Seldes

— + New Repub 60:52 Ag 28 '29 1100w

Reviewed by J: Chamberlain

N Y Times p4 Mr 3 '29 1400w

"Flippancy for the sake of flippancy, even though it may not particularly offend us, becomes after a hundred pages or so, rather dull. And we are sorry to say that we believe you will get all the amusement the book is capable of affording you out of the first hundred pages. The drawings with which Mr. Barton illustrates the text are delightful. It is the letter that killeth." W. R. Brooks

— + Outlook 151:400 Mr 6 '29 100w

St Louis 27:289 O '29

BARTON, WILLIAM ELEAZAR. Lineage of Lincoln. 419p il $7.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham. Lincoln family. Hanks family 29-9284

Dr Barton, Lincoln's biographer, has spent years of patient research in building up a reliable genealogy of Lincoln on the paternal and the maternal sides, tracing both the Lincolns and the Hankses back to their English homes and incidentally disposing of "no less than five ladies who have been trustfully accepted by previous Lincoln genealogists."

---

"For the most part a solid piece of work, the book at times wanders into gossip."

— + Am Hist R 35:179 O '29 80w

BARTON, W: E.—Continued

"The dean of Lincolnians, best antiquary of them all, is being infected by the genealogical views. It is a pity that Dr. Barton cares to reproduce in an appendix of this volume another 'Alleged Royal Descent of Lincoln.'" N. W. Stephenson

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Je 30 '29 700w

"Of the great value of this volume there can be no dispute. It is certainly a book of surprises, not a dry-as-dust genealogy, but a story of human interest at every stage and wholly similar to the other volumes of Lincoln which Dr. Barton has written with so general commendation. Material from these previous volumes has been freely appropriated, but presented in more connected and documented form." F. P. H.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 8 '29 1000w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p5 Jl 13 '29 80w

"Dr. Barton has qualified well in matters touching the lineage of Lincoln. This special study embodies his pertinacious research to discover and record a veracious account of Lincoln's forbears, English and American, and to correct errors that have previously been accepted as history." L. E. Robinson

+ Nation 129:148 Ag 7 '29 530w

"Such work leaves, not only the reader, but the biographer, quite cold. For Dr. Barton belongs to the school of scholarship which indulges itself in unlimited draughts of minutiæ, large mouthfuls of carefully prepared and discreetly served nothing. Perhaps it is unkind to so painstaking a worker to belittle his work, but it is difficult to understand what possible value there can be in knowing what particular parts of England the Lincoln and Hanks families came from." Raymond Holden

— + New Repub 60:107 S 11 '29 330w

"There is a solid satisfaction in coming upon one of Dr. Barton's growing list of books about Lincoln. He is so thorough, and he is such a blood-hound after facts. This time he takes up a subject about which there has been more humbug written than any other concerning Lincoln." C: W. Thompson

+ N Y Times p5 My 12 '29 750w

Pratt p35 autumn '29

St Louis 27:313 N '29

BASHFORD, HENRY HOWARTH. Harley street calendar. 272p $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d Constable]

926.1 Physicians. Great Britain—Biography 29-29678

Biographies of eleven English doctors: Gilbertus Anglicus and John of Gaddesden, of Chaucer's time; Thomas Linacre, who founded the Royal academy of physicians; William Harvey, discoverer of the circulation of the blood; Thomas Sydenham; Sir Hans Sloane, whose collections formed the basis of the British museum; John Hunter, father of modern surgery; Edward Jenner, who discovered the principle of vaccination; James Simpson, who introduced the use of chloroform; Joseph Lister, founder of antiseptic methods in surgery; and William Osler, the medical humanist.

---

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 80:16 D '29 60w

"One need not be particularly concerned with the science or art of medicine to appreciate these chapters, fragrant with humanity and character. Arresting personal touches are on every page." H. R.

+ Sat R 148:392 O 5 '29 250w

"He has many intimate and little known anecdotes to tell of his subjects; he writes with simplicity and directness; and his book will be as much enjoyed by the general reader as by the man with a special interest in medicine."

+ Spec 143:607 O 26 '29 100w

"Pleasant and well-written sketches. . . All are very readable and contain a number of little-known facts, anecdotes and allusions."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p750 S 26 '29 200w

BASKERVILL, CHARLES READ. Elizabethan jig and related song drama. 642p $5 Univ. of Chicago press

822.09 English drama—History and criticism. Singspiel Dancing. Ballads, English 27-27940

"Charles Read Baskervill tells us that his exhaustive study of 'The Elizabethan Jig' was in progress 'intermittently' for fifteen years, a study that embraces not only the extant English examples of the species, but considers those afforded by Germany, Holland and Scandinavia."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

Bookm 69:xii Je '29 180w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Je 16 '29 220w

Nation 129:638 N 27 '29 80w

St Louis 27:311 N '29

"This book is a valuable contribution to the records of the English stage. The student of drama and of cultural history will find here much material that he can not afford to overlook. Professor Baskervill is judicious in his opinions and theories; he is clear and interesting in presenting his material, and indefatigable in his researches. This volume will remain the authority on the subject." E: B. Reed

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1174 Jl 13 '29 500w

"In spite of the length of Mr. Baskervill's book, one parts from it with reluctance. The jig is a good subject. He has treated it with variety and spirit. And in the texts that he has taken great pains to collect there is plenty of homely fun as a relaxation from the labours of study."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p399 My 16 '29 1100w

BASS, ARCHER BRYAN. Protestantism in the United States. 364p $3 Crowell

284 Protestantism. Christian union 29-4599

This is an extensive and careful canvass of the situation of Protestant churches in the United States today. Dr Bass, a former pastor of the Clinton Avenue Baptist Church, Newark, N.J., points out among other things the over-lapping activities of the churches, and suggests closer interdenominational co-operation to overcome it. His book is in effect a plea for such co-operation.

---

Booklist 26:7 O '29

"The book is crowded with information and moved by a noble spirit—most emphatically a book to be read by everybody who has concern for the fate of religion in America." J: H. Holmes

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Je 16 '29 80w

Boston Transcript p5 My 4 '29 550w

"Some weaknesses in this otherwise excellent work must be mentioned. One feels that the author too often makes use of magazine articles for his statements rather than the minutes or other reports of associations or conventions of religious bodies. . . There is also a laxity in the use of terms or the making of statements that detracts from a complete reliability upon the work as a whole. . . Such mistakes and inconsistencies as these and others that may have been mentioned, tend to raise doubts as to the trustworthiness of all statistics quoted and statements made. The book, however, is a very timely and helpful contribution in the study of American Protestantism." R. E. E. Harkness

+ — Crozer Q 6:237 Ap '29 700w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 79:26 Ap '29 100w

St Louis 27:193 Je '29

"Bass writes a doctor's thesis, bristling with page after page of fact and figure and carefully tabulated material. . . Over and under and around the facts there flows a calm and sober judgment, weighing and measuring and interpreting them." C: S. Brown

+ Survey 62:203 My 1 '29 180w
Wis Lib Bul 25:272 Jl '29

BASSO, HAMILTON. Relics and angels. 286p $2.50 Macaulay

29-17261

Tony Clezac comes back from Europe to act as vice-president in his grandfather's factory, the largest shoe manufactory in the South. But Tony is a dreamer by nature and finds business in the modern sense distasteful. He is also a romanticist and a gentleman in the strictest southern family tradition. Because of this his love affairs do not conclude in the modern manner. When he falls in love with his sister's friend, Camilla Thorne, he finds himself unable to marry her because, as he believes, he has got a factory girl into trouble. He has meanwhile left his position, and the novel ends upon a note of complete defeat for Tony in his battle with reality.

---

" 'Relics and Angels' is earnest, well intentioned and a little dull. It is told rather in the modern manner with frequent stream-of-consciousness passages and 'cut-backs' to childhood scenes, most of which impede rather than clarify the narrative. The author writes rather well —his lower-class dialogue is particularly good— but he has not yet learned that being eloquent, being original, being perceptive are all as nothing when one is not also convincing."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 S 8 '29 380w

"This first novel, by a young man in New Orleans, is rather immaturely conceived and rather vaguely constructed, but it has a grace, a charm and a distinction which seem to mark the author as an artist rather than as just another young man who has written a novel. . . New Orleans is not typically American—and in nothing is it less typically American than in its ability to produce and to nourish a talent as sensitive and unemphatic, yet as poetic and alive, as Mr. Basso's." Edmund Wilson

+ — New Repub 60:274 O 23 '29 650w

BATES, ERNEST SUTHERLAND. Friend of Jesus. 218p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

232 Judas Iscariot. Jesus Christ 28-22373

Mr Bates has written the gospel according to Judas. In his new version of the story of Jesus, Judas is the real hero, who betrays his friend to save him from a misguided allegiance to an evil Jehovah—as the God of the Old Testament seems to Judas.

---

"The kind of book to arouse discussion, and more than that, a book that deserves to be read. . . It is quite consciously a shocker, and a little overcharged with novelty and defiant impishness. It leaves practically no admirable characters for us except Adam and Eve and Delilah, who were great in that they defied Jehovah and followed the light in them and in the Serpent." M. E. M.

Boston Transcript p2 O 24 '28 720w

"The entire volume is a blasphemous attack upon God in the Old Testament, and a blasphemous travesty of the life and teaching of Christ in the New."

— Cath World 128:509 Ja '29 150w

"The ethical and essentially religious core of it is sound. Yet the book is startling. As an interpretation of the Jehovah of the Old Testament, Jesus and Judas on the basis of the records, [it] is fantastic. As a statement of the truth that pure religion and undefiled is spiritual and humanitarian, not institutional and ritualistic, it is quite sound."

Christian Century 45:1370 N 8 '28 230w

Reviewed by B. W. Bacon
New Repub 57:169 D 26 '28 130w

"Mr. Bates's version of the tale is interesting chiefly because no one has yet written a good defence of Judas."

— New Statesman 33:60 Ap 20 '29 290w

"The author of this finely printed book has undertaken to write an anti-Bible, yet one may well feel that he has not risen to his opportunity. . . There is abundant material here for a profound philosophical study, but one is not convinced that Dr. Bates has adequately used it."

— N Y Times p20 Mr 24 '29 620w
St Louis 27:124 Ap '29

Reviewed by W. H. Worrell
Sat R of Lit 5:723 Mr 2 '29 880w

BATES, FRANK GREENE, and FIELD, OLIVER P. State government. 584p $3.75 Harper

353.9 State governments 28-16294

A college textbook in state government based on several years' experience in the classroom. State constitutions and federal and interstate relations are treated in detail, also questions of legislation and finance.

---

Reviewed by M. B. Lambie
Am Pol Sci R 23:205 F '29 750w

"The material here presented has a freshness and concreteness which is a welcome corrective to the traditional American legalistic attitude toward government in general. On the other hand, it is possible that the teachability of the book would have been increased by a somewhat briefer treatment of certain topics and by the inclusion of more periodical material in the chapter bibliographies." L. W. Lancaster

+ — Ann Am Acad 141:278 Ja '29 200w
Booklist 25:105 D '28

"The present work represents the first formidable competitor to Professor Holcombe's work in exactly the same field. [It] seems to savor of just a little more readability than does that of the eminent Harvard professor, and for that reason some instructors, with a view to the facility of notetaking by students, might prefer Bates and Field."

Boston Transcript p6 Jl 18 '28 250w

"It may be said of the present volume that it is well-arranged, sensible, and up to date, and that the student who masters it will have learned a great deal."

+ Nation 127:500 N 7 '28 300w

BATES, HERBERT ERNEST. Catherine Foster. 307p $2.50 Viking press [7s 6d Cape]

29-18944

This rather slight triangle novel is the story of a woman who loves her husband's brother. With no knowledge of herself or the insensitive tradesman whom she marries, Catherine Foster awakens to the possibilities of her ardent, passionate nature when she meets Andrew Foster, her worthless young brother-in-law. An intense love affair ensues, but Andrew soon tires of Catherine, falls into debt and abandons her. There is nothing left for Catherine but to go back to her corn-merchant.

---

"It has delicacy, warmth, and a style the grace of which is more than surface perfection. Its characters are clearly and truly drawn, if a bit unsubstantial; its drama poignant, if not essentially contemporary or fresh." F. C. Simpson

+ Bookm 70:319 N '29 180w

" 'Catherine Foster' is primarily a work of art. It delights by invoking the esthetic appreciation of the reader rather than by making him live the life it portrays. The texture of the narrative is made of brightness—sunlight over woods and gardens, a regatta, a circus—and of revolting details." Frank Streight

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 O 13 '29 500w
Boston Transcript p5 O 19 '29 230w
Nation 129:782 D 25 '29 80w

BATES, H. E.—Continued

"It is written with too much self-consciousness, too patent a preoccupation with words and niceties of phrasing ever to achieve more than the promise of a style; the observation is banal, and the people are too flat and commonplace to be interesting even if they were better done." H. C. C.

— New Repub 30:279 O 23 '29 200w

"There are entire pages here so sensitive to the essential mystery in which things exist that to read them is an actual and not a vicarious experience. This is a book to cherish, and E. H. Bates is a man to remember." Leonard Ehrlich

\+ N Y Evening Post p6m S 21 '29 430w

"In a setting only half discerned, three people, never wholly flesh and blood, live through an incident involving the age-old triangle, and sink again into obscurity. . . The feeling of nothingness left at the completion of the book is a tribute to the author's purpose; he wants to give the impression of a flame flaring up suddenly and then dying down again. But there is something lacking—the flame is too pale."

\+ — N Y Times p28 O 6 '29 480w

"Mr. Bates's latest novel has a lacy quality—it is light without being trivial and delicate without being insubstantial." P. D. Stong

N Y World p11m O 13 '29 450w

"Mr. Bates had already exhibited in 'The Two Sisters' a powerful imagination capable of unifying, in a remarkable degree, the diverse facts of experience. With this imagination went an immaturity of outlook and an awkwardness of style which one hoped the author would outgrow; but he has not. And he has lost certain qualities. Drawn more closely from life, it shows up the author's weak grasp of external facts. And the awkwardness of style, which occasionally achieves happy effects through its own clumsiness, persists." L. P. Hartley

— + Sat R 147:620 My 4 '29 200w

"There is very little action in this drowsy and beautiful book: long chapters are devoted to days spent on the river, to days in the woods and evenings of music. The writing throughout is exquisite. Mr. Bates has much of the 'capturing quality' of Katharine Mansfield: what he sees he makes his own, and holds out to us. But the conversations fall short of the general high level; they are stilted and choppy." B. E. Todd

\+ — Spec 142:630 Ap 20 '29 330w

"Mr. Bates can write well, and he can at times write very badly. And Catherine, Andrew, and Charles are bores whom no amount of intensity will make anything else."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p384 My 9 '29 320w

BATESON, FREDERICK NOEL WILSE. English comic drama, 1700-1750. 158p $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford

822.09 English drama—History and criticism [29-14407]

"A critical study of the rise of sentimental comedy and another of the many attempts to explain why stage comedy, in a great age, was so relatively feeble."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"Another merit of this little book is its appreciation of Cibber, who as late as the past year has suffered from a singularly uncritical and unappreciative biography." W. P. Eaton

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 30 '29 80w

"Mr. Bateson's study of comedy in the first half of the eighteenth century is scholarly without being pedantic, concise and at the same time thorough, in fact, the best book that has yet been written about a rather lifeless subject."

\+ Nation and Ath 45:sup142 Ap 27 '29 540w

"Mr. Bateson has read through some scores of the most unreadable plays in the language, made excerpts from them, appraised them, and even remembered them. They are perhaps the dullest things ever invented till the days of the golfing egoist. If these dry bones are to be galvanised into a semblance of life, it is as well that Mr. Bateson should do the work; for his book, considering its subject, is remarkably readable, and packs a great deal into a laudably small space. His criticism is almost always sound, and often expressed in very illuminating language."

\+ New Statesman 33:17 Ap 13 '29 800w

Reviewed by Edwin Clark

N Y Times p2 Ag 18 '29 680w

"His treatment is popular, rather than scholarly; appreciative rather than expository or argumentative. Mr. Bateson shows clearly that he has steeped himself in his subject, gained a most intimate knowledge of the plays quoted and analyzed, and thoroughly enjoyed the authors as human beings, lifted out of their pages." W: E. Schultz

\+ Sat R of Lit 6:289 O 19 '29 1000w

"At the outset of his unusually able book, Mr. F. W. Bateson gives a brilliant picture of the change between the Restoration period and the Augustan age."

\+ Spec 142:514 Mr 30 '29 480w

"It begins with an analysis of 'sentimentalism' and continues with a series of essays on the more prominent playwrights of its barren period—Colley Cibber, Steele, Mrs Centlivre, Gay, Carey, and Fielding. These chapters are well documented, scholarly, and appreciative." Carl Carmer

\+ Theatre Arts Mo 13:787 O '29 320w

"Mr. Bateson's excellent and witty study of comic drama in the first half of the eighteenth century will certainly stimulate interest in a period that is commonly supposed to have neglected the stage. It can be confidently recommended to anyone who wishes to avoid such details as dates, lists of actors, and records of performances, and confine his attention solely to the merits of the plays themselves."

Times [London] Lit Sup p291 Ap 11 '29 1850w

BATSELL, WALTER RUSSELL. Soviet rule [2] in Russia. 857p $6 (25s) Macmillan

354.47 Russia—Politics and government. Bolshevism—Russia. Soviet 29-18310

"The purpose of the book is to present an analysis of the structural system of the Soviet Government and to examine the manner in which its various parts actually function. It is thus an anatomical and physiological survey of Russian government, and as such it leaves little to be desired. . . Over 300 of the 850 pages consist of selected documents illustrative of the text. There is an extensive bibliography; there are nine diagrammatic charts with appended explanations; there is an adequate index; and there is throughout ample footnote documentation. It is definitely a scholarly treatise written for scholars."—Current Hist

---

"Mr. Batsell's book would be noteworthy if only as basic information on his subject. His skillful arrangement and use of that information makes it far more than that." J. B. Brebner

\+ Am Hist R 35:367 Ja '30 900w

"This book will be read only by serious students of government. For them it supplies a mass of information of great value. It is the product of several years of careful study of official documents obtainable only on the spot. . . It is the unwillingness of the author to limit himself to a description of the Russian Government and an examination of how far it achieves the purposes of bolshevism that constitutes its chief defect. The purpose of the book is definitely stated to be 'to serve as a foundation for studies of how Soviet Russia is ruled.' This purpose is generally preserved throughout, but occasional disparaging sentences or paragraphs are interjected which clearly disclose the author's prejudice." W. J. Shepard

\+ — Current Hist 31:437 D '29 1250w

"Mr. Batsell exhibits a careful and accurate scholarship, unfortunately combined with a lack of understanding of the aims of Communism and the Soviet government." M. P. Levy
+ — New Repub 61:121 D 18 '29 280w

"Those who have the time or inclination to study the ingenious system of government of the various component parts of the vast unit, the U.S.S.R., will find all that they want in Mr. Batsell's book."
+ Spec 143:822 N 30 '29 100w

BAU, MINGCHIEN JOSHUA. China and world peace; studies in Chinese international relations. 194p $2 Revell

327.51 China—Foreign relations 28-15604

"Dr. Bau, professor of political science in the National university at Peking, adds to his distinguished 'Foreign Relations of China' a new volume which outlines the terms on which questions between China and other states such as extraterritoriality, tariff autonomy, concessions and settlements, and other disputes embedded in the old treaties, can be settled. Dr. Bau can be taken as representing the viewpoint of the western educated Chinese."—Christian Century

---

"It is a moderate and documented statement of the Chinese case. . . There is nothing new in the book, but it is a calm and reasoned, if thoroughly pro-Chinese, statement of what seems an irrefutable case."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 16 '28 230w

"The chapter on the Shanghai Affair alone will make this book worthwhile for anyone interested in the present Chinese dilemma."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 18 '28 300w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson
Christian Century 45:857 Jl 5 '28 70w

" 'China and World Peace' is interesting from the Chinese point of view. It would be difficult to label it propaganda, but the wide divergence in the respective statements of Dr. Bau and various Western commentators may be laid to inaccurate information of one side or extreme partisanship of both." L. T. Griswold
Outlook 149:475 Jl 18 '28 80w

BAUMANN, EMILE. Saint Paul; tr. from the French by Kenneth Burke. 316p il $3.50 Harcourt

225.92 Paul, Saint 29-9123

This study by a Frenchman of Saint Paul as man, apostle and saint is a dramatic version of his story which accepts the miracle of his conversion on the road to Damascus and treats his career from that time onward as divinely inspired.

---

Booklist 26:7 O '29

Reviewed by J: Chamberlain
Bookm 70:104 S '29 580w

"The historical background of the Pauline epic is patiently and realistically reconstructed. The message of Paul is heard in its relation to classical literature and his life is portrayed against the background of a pagan civilization in which the marks of decadence were beginning to reveal themselves." Reinhold Niebuhr
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Jl 21 '29 300w

"A picture—painted with fervor and admiration by one who takes the New Testament literally. Yet it is in a way a modern picture, made for today, interesting, warm, readable." T. C. R.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 12 '29 430w

"The translation is not faultless, but on the whole the brilliant style of the original has been carried over into English." J. I. M.
+ Cath World 129:630 Ag '29 200w

"There are magnificent descriptions of Asia Minor and Palestine throughout the book, many sections not infrequently rising to the heights of poetry. It is a noble work of a devout student of the great Apostle to the Gentiles. His summing up of St Paul is admirable." S. L. T.
+ Churchman 140:17 Jl 6 '29 280w

"Paul comes from the pages of his book a great and a noble figure, his very defects enhancing his qualities. Unfortunately for M. Baumann, however, Paul's personality and life do not lend themselves aptly to the rhapsodical method. Paul may be great, but he is unbeautiful. . . M. Baumann adds nothing to the historical evidence, omits much and is far from convincing in 'disclosing the emotions and procedure of one who felt himself in partnership with God.' " Percy Winner
N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 6 '29 700w

"The St. Paul pictured by Emile Bauman does not present any novel aspects of character or mentality. No new light is thrown on the colossal figure of the first apostate Jew who came to be regarded as the second Jesus. The latest effort to picture the evolution of the thirteenth apostle adds little to the sufficiency and nobility of conception one gains of Paul after reading his epistles and the Acts of the Apostles. The character study based on the material found in the canonical books is no improvement on the original story as given in the New Testament. The self-contained yet warm clarity of the style, its limpid luminosity, which may be due to the subject, strikes at least one reader as excelling Mr. Burke's achievement in his translations from the German." L: Rich
— + N Y Times p23 Ag 25 '29 1000w

Reviewed by E. B. Chaffee
Outlook 152:108 My 15 '29 100w

"His book, Saint Paul, has reached its eightieth edition in France and has been translated into several languages besides English." W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:12 S '29 180w

"Baumann aspires to do for St. Paul what Papini did for the story of Jesus. The process is not mysterious. It consists of the violent rejection of all the attempts of critical scholarship to write history in order to retain and if possible enhance the dramatic effects of story."
Sat R of Lit 5:1061 My 25 '29 220w

"Perhaps the best feature of the book is the effectiveness with which it is written. There are many vivid passages. Baumann knows how to delineate character." J. M.
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 20 '29 360w

"Delightful study."
+ World Tomorrow 12:378 S '29 20w

BAZIN, RENE. Juniper farm (Il etait quatre petits enfants); tr. from the French by Margery Williams Bianco. (Children's classics) 180p il $1.75 Macmillan

28-22312

Story of four children on a farm in France. The book was written shortly after the World war by a member of the French academy.

---

Booklist 25:169 Ja '29

"A distinguished French author has made a simple and convincing record of French peasant life."
+ Nation 127:552 N 21 '28 60w
St Louis 27:102 Mr '29

"There are still readers in this sophisticated age who find the simple line of growth in a child-soul more interesting than the most intricate web of adventure, and René Bazin knows his child-soul." Amelia von Ende
+ Sat R of Lit 5:713 F 23 '29 530w

BEACH, REX ELLINGWOOD. Son of the gods. 392p $2 Harper [7s 6d Hutchinson]

29-4643

Sam Lee, a young Chinese student of an American college, has wealth, culture and breeding, yet is the victim of race prejudice manifested even by his social inferiors. In China his case is as bad, for his own people consider him an alien. After taking his hero thru several unhappy affairs the author takes pity on him and removes the obstacles to marriage with the American girl he loves.

---

BEACH, R. E.—Continued
For biographical sketch of the author see Boston Transcript p1 Ap 13 '29

Booklist 25:359 Je '29

"The story winds through much unavoidable melodrama to a story book conclusion, which is of itself inconclusive. It has humor in it. It has beauty. It has the good fortune to end with a most artistic last page. It is something different and quite worth while."
+ Boston Transcript p10 My 11 '29 230w

"The main trouble with this novel is that no one, except the characters in the book, is likely to believe the sorely tried and noble-hearted Sam Lee is a Chinaman."
N Y World p11m My 12 '29 180w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 3 '29 80w

BEACH, STEWART. Short-story technique. 260p school ed $2; trade ed $2.50 Houghton

808.3 Short story 29-12001

Not every one can write a short story. But every one can learn how short stories are written, and for those interested Mr Beach has explained in this book—adapted from lectures given at New York university—the technique of the typical magazine short story.

"It would be difficult for a solitary beginner to lay his hands and spend his time on a more concise and clear-headed technical guide and text. So entirely is the book written with the serious beginning student in mind, that there are carefully listed and assorted questions at the end of each chapter."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 3 '29 260w

"Mr. Beach's book is good of its kind, simple and—when not too simple—informing, and on the whole rather more intelligent than most such books."
+ N Y Evening Post p4s Je 8 '29 500w

"The thing we like best about this book is its frank admission that it offers no magic short cut to the pages of the big popular magazines, that short-story writing is both a craft and an art, and that only the craft can be taught." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 152:393 Jl 3 '29 120w
St Louis 27:310 N '29

BEACONSFIELD, BENJAMIN DISRAELI, 1st earl of. Letters to Lady Chesterfield and Lady Bradford; ed. by the Marquis of Zetland; foreword by André Maurois; v 1, 1873-1875; v 2, 1876-1881. 410;426p il $10 Appleton [42s Benn]

B or 92 Chesterfield, Anne Elizabeth (Forester) Stanhope, countess. Bradford, Selina Louisa (Forester) Bridgeman, countess

29-19894

When Mary Anne, countess of Beaconsfield, died, leaving Disraeli grief-stricken, he turned to two sisters, friends of his youth, for consolation. He was already seventy. Lady Chesterfield was two years older than he and Lady Bradford fifteen years younger. As Disraeli confessed to Lady Bradford he had the misfortune of a heart that would not grow old, and this heart he poured out, especially to Lady Bradford, in letters full of ardor and sentiment. The letters, 1600 in all, written hastily in the stress of exacting official life, are interesting alike for the history they contain and for the intimate view they afford of the prime minister.

Booklist 26:114 D '29

"Many of the letters to the famous sisters already have been published in Monypenny and Buckle's monumental 'Life of Disraeli,' and they have been drawn upon by all subsequent biographers. But there are hundreds of letters in these two volumes which will bring infinite pleasure to those who are interested in the most fascinating of Victorian statesmen. They reveal the true temperament of Disraeli very much more clearly than any biographer can, however gifted. The letters have been ably edited by the Marquis of Zetland and the foreword by André Maurois, the most understanding of the Disraeli biographers, admirably interprets the whole idyll as the pretext of Disraeli's last dreams." A. L. Sachar
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 D 29 '29 850w

Reviewed by Edmund Noble
Boston Transcript p4 O 26 '29 1900w
Christian Century 46:1579 D 18 '29 230w

"The best letters that have been published for many a day. They have so many and such various merits that it is difficult to think of any type of reader to whom they would have no appeal. Dizzy was a born writer and a natural letter writer. His psychological and political indiscretion, at any rate to these two correspondents, is colossal. In consequence, not only does he allow one to see pretty deep into one of the strangest minds and hearts that have ever found themselves in the same human body, but he writes page after page which, at this distance of time, are politically and historically intensely interesting." Leonard Woolf
+ Nation and Ath 46:17 O 5 '29 1100w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 61:106 D 18 '29 2050w
New Statesman 34:17 O 12 '29 1500w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p12 O 6 '29 1900w

"These letters will throw no new light on Victorian diplomacy, or even solidify in the twentieth century mind a personality already so definitely crystallized as that of Disraeli, but they are full of urbane and mature charm and humor. They will be read with delight in spite of their writer's preoccupation with what M. Maurois calls 'the naïve concerns of adolescence.'" Mary Shirley
+ Outlook 153:228 O 9 '29 1000w

"The greater part of the letters in these two volumes must have been tiresome to the lady, as they are wearisome and irritating to the reader of to-day. . . Mr. Buckle saw these letters more than ten years ago, before he published his fifth volume, and with his literary tact and good feeling selected a few as a flashlight upon character, to be almost immediately turned away. But in these two volumes 'the follies of the wise' are literally shovelled out upon the public. Lord Zetland has crossed the line between what may and may not be published, without the slightest consideration for the feelings of Lord Beaconsfield's relatives." A. A. B.
— Sat R 148:375 O 5 '29 860w

"It is inevitable that these letters should be read mainly as a puzzling study in friendship, but the reader will find much else in them—lightning descriptions of men and affairs by a very brilliant man who was directing the storm as he wrote. In this sense they have historical importance."
+ Spec 143:466 O 5 '29 1400w
Times [London] Lit Sup p763 O 3 '29 1700w

"The Marquis of Zetland, who as Lord Ronaldshay recently completed his imposing biography of Lord Curzon, has linked this correspondence together in a pleasant, running narrative, though with slight elucidation of obscure matters. Buckle printed the most important of the letters in his part of the monumental 'Life of Disraeli,' and seems to have used all the significant ones; but readers will find it most agreeable and convenient to have them in this handsome collection." Eleanor and Raymond Turner
+ Yale R n s 19:424 winter '30 1100w

BEALS, CARLETON. Destroying Victor. 384p $2.50 Macaulay

29-20106

Professor Henry Proctor Scrogin, of the Romance language department of a California university, academic and self-righteous, falls in love with Yvonne, a French actress who has come to play Medea in the Greek theatre. A passionate romance in Italy follows. Upon Yvonne's return to America a spurned former lover, Maples, murders her in a fit of jealousy, and Scroggin is accused of the crime. Tho acquitted later, he loses his job, his good name, and his wife—but after several years of hardship, he steps from the editorship of a radical newspaper into politics, and from politics to big business. He and his former wife are remarried, he regains community standing and respect; but he never finishes his cherished manuscript on Victor Hugo.

---

"The plot is exciting and interesting, but the style is sometimes adolescent."
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 O 27 '29 380w

"Mr. Beals is well known as a correspondent in Latin America and to Spain. This adventure into the realm of fiction, while not the outstanding success that distinguished his interpretation of Mexico, does show his powers of observation and of objective description which are his salient characteristics." G. R. B. R.
+ — Boston Transcript p7 D 4 '29 500w

Reviewed by Malcolm Logan
N Y Evening Post p12m O 19 '29 500w

"Not so long ago 'Destroying Victor' might have merited more extended praise than it is possible to bestow upon it here. Mr. Beals's novel has been outmoded time and again. He is not yet at ease in this form."
— + N Y Times p7 N 24 '29 480w

BEARD, CHARLES AUSTIN. American party battle. (World today bookshelf) 150p $1.50 (6s); pa 80c Macmillan

329 Political parties—United States. United States—Politics and government 28-22424

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"It is a work which achieves distinction within its chosen compass; the perils of oversimplification have, however, not been entirely avoided. The style is brisk and lively, admirably adapted to the requirements of the general reader." C. H. Wooddy
+ — Am Hist R 34:654 Ap '29 150w

"A brief but extremely readable volume."
+ Am J Soc 35:160 Jl '29 100w

"The book may well be described as a vest-pocket Rise of American Civilization." C. A. B.
Am Pol Sci R 23:220 F '29 100w

"So brief and so comprehensive that it deserves not merely a place upon the shelf reserved for books on political matters, but a position at the right hand of anyone who finds it necessary frequently to look backward into the past, whether to stimulate his memory, or to give himself new information upon one of the many disputed points in our political history." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 19 '29 260w
Christian Century 45:1370 N 8 '28 100w

Reviewed by J. D. McGoldrick
Hist Outlook 21:36 Ja '30 350w

"Here is historical realism at its best."
+ Nation 129:49 Jl 10 '29 50w

"Although Dr. Beard has, perhaps, oversimplified matters in presenting our party battle as essentially one between capital and agriculture, nevertheless the argument is masterful and the thesis certainly tenable. The fact that much of this material has been presented before both in the author's American Government and Politics and in the Rise of American Civilization in no way detracts from the brilliance of the performance or the value of the little volume." S. C. Wallace
+ Pol Sci Q 44:31 Je '29 120w
Pratt p8 winter '29
St Louis 27:45 F '29

"He omits to say anything about the State regulation of party methods and organization—actually one of the most far-reaching differences between the American and English political systems. On the whole, however, this is an excellent and useful little volume."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p387 My 9 '29 240w

BEARD, CHARLES AUSTIN, and RADIN, GEORGE. Balkan pivot: Yugoslavia; a study in government and administration. 325p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

949.7 Yugoslavia—Politics and government 29-6474

An analysis of the political structure of Yugoslavia and of its national, political, and economic problems.

---

Reviewed by A. I. Andrews
Am Hist R 34:880 Jl '29 400w

Reviewed by M. W. Graham
Am Pol Sci R 23:1020 N '29 420w
Booklist 25:344 Je '29

"No detailed study of administration and of politics can be exciting. Nevertheless, the authors have produced a valuable monograph. If the same sort of thing could be done for the other countries of the world we would have the foundation for a science of comparative government." R. L. Buell
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Mr 31 '29 1000w
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 24 '29 360w

"Although the book shows signs of haste and superficiality, surprising from the pen of Professor Beard, it accomplishes its purpose of analyzing adequately the political and economic life of Jugo-Slavia and of putting in clear perspective the terms of the conflict which threatens the very existence of the nation." Percy Winner
+ — N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 23 '29 350w

"Their book is scholarly, authoritative and readable. Occasionally one wishes that they were less restrained; if they had been so they might have helped to contribute the result of their great historical erudition and knowledge of local conditions to the solution of Yugoslavia's problems." Emil Lengyel
+ N Y Times p8 Ap 7 '29 920w

Reviewed by W. T. Adee
Outlook 151:388 Mr 6 '29 230w
Pratt p33 summer '29
Times [London] Lit Sup p615 Ag 8 '29 650w

BEARD, CHARLES AUSTIN, ed. Whither mankind; a panorama of modern civilization. 408p il $3 (12s 6d) Longmans

901 Civilization. Progress 28-25938

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"Anyone who wishes to stimulate his mind with the most advanced thought on the most important integral features of modern civilization would do well to add this scholastic treatise to his reading list." J. A. Tobey
+ Am J Pub Health 19:343 Mr '29 340w
Am Pol Sci R 23:514 My '29 350w
Booklist 25:156 Ja '29

"A book of remarkable unity. There are many distinguished contributors to the volume, most of whom have clearly found assignments congenial to their habits." C. R. Walker
+ Bookm 68:598 Ja '29 230w

"It is remarkable that neither the editor nor any of his coadjutors venture to present a criterion of values. It need not be repeated, in concluding, that the one question to which no serious answer is attempted in the whole volume is 'Whither Mankind'?" J. M. G.
— Cath World 129:625 Ag '29 1600w

"Almost everyone will find in this book more or less from which he will dissent. Its contributors do not all agree with each other. How can anyone agree with them all? But assuming a sufficient background of knowledge to make it intelligible, and some capacity for considering critically its brilliant generalizations, I can give no better advice to one who wants to chart the recent course of civilization and forecast its future than to read this book." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 45:1326 N 1 '28 650w

BEARD, C: A., ed.—Continued
Reviewed by C. D. Burns
Int J Ethics 39:365 Ap '29 300w
J Home Econ 21:132 F '29 50w
Reviewed by H. G. Townsend
+ J Philos 26:388 Jl 4 '29 700w
Outlook 150:1291 D 5 '28 280w
Pratt p28 winter '29
St Louis 27:30 Ja '29

"Whither Mankind is a bargain in wisdom, and I think the most important book of recent years. Dr. Beard has worked a miracle in presenting not an agglomeration of personal views, but an ordered attack on a stated problem." Leon Whipple
+ Survey 61:310 D 1 '28 500w
Wis Lib Bul 25:28 Ja '29

"The result is a stock-taking of first magnitude. Almost every chapter contains ample material for an evening's profitable discussion. . . Those who recognize the enormous contributions to Western thought that have come from the great religions and philosophies of the East will be unsatisfied with the volume's almost cavalier assumption of the 100 per cent 'superiority' of Western civilization." E. E: Eubank
+ — World Tomorrow 12:91 F '29 380w
Reviewed by W. C. Abbott
Yale R n s 18:806 summer '29 100w

BEARD, MARY. Nurse in public health. (Harper's public health ser.) 217p $3.50 Harper
610.73 Nurses and nursing, Public health
29-12584

Written by the assistant director of medical education of the Rockefeller foundation, this book has been planned for instructors of public health nursing organizations, trustees of hospitals, and state and county health officers. It reflects Miss Beard's conclusions as a student of public health nursing thruout the United States, Great Britain and on the Continent.

Booklist 26:15 O '29

"A competent and inclusive treatment of all the practical problems."
+ Survey 63:111 O '29 50w
Wis Lib Bul 25:318 O '29

BEARDSLEY, MRS GRACE MAYNARD (HADLEY). Negro in Greek and Roman civilization; a study of the Ethiopian type. (Johns Hopkins univ. studies in archaeology) 145p il $3.50 Johns Hopkins [16s Milford]
709.37 Negroes in literature and art. Negroes in Greece. Negroes in Rome. Art, Greek. Art, Roman 29-12729

"The negro type was always rendered with the greatest realism in Greek art. It was barred from sculpture and the finer arts, but it was a great favorite with the potter, gem-cutter, and bronze-worker. Dr. Beardsley in this monograph proves that the type originated at Naucratis and that from this colony it was introduced into Athens toward the close of the sixth century. . . Dr. Beardsley in a very systematic way describes the development of the type and gives an exhaustive list of works of art in the museums of Europe and America representing negroes."—Class Philol

"Miss Beardsley seems well acquainted with her subject, and many of the theories she advances upon the probable origins and purposes of the various bronzes and plastic vases under discussion, appear, even to a lay reader, more plausible than the contentions of other authorities, which she frequently contradicts. The book is well illustrated and indexed, and it contains a large catalogue of museum and private pieces employing the negro type."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 31 '29 250w

"Dr. Beardsley's work is a valuable contribution to our archaeological knowledge and offers important material to the student of the private life of the ancient Athenians." G. E. Mylonas
+ Class Philol 24:423 O '29 260w

"This book is a useful contribution to the study of the Ethiopian and kindred races in Greek and Roman culture."
Times [London] Lit Sup p748 S 26 '29 280w

BEAUCLERK, HELEN. Love of the foolish angel. 271p $2.50 Cosmopolitan bk. [7s 6d Collins]
29-18160

"Form and content equally with manner belong to ancient legend, and the background throughout, whether it be Heaven or Hell, Antioch or Babylon, is formal rather than impressively real. Tamael is an angel who, by error, is cast into Hell with Lucifer. But he is unhappy there, unapt at torturing the damned, and so is sent to earth to try his hand at the tempting of human souls. He finds himself in the Syria of early Christian days, and at Antioch is bound by a magician to the seduction of a maiden. To his distress he falls in love with her and desires only to save her. The story is, in the main, an account of his trials and temptations."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"The story of Tamael's inefficiency as a devil and self-sacrificing love for a human woman is told with absolute simplicity and a sublime indifference to literary chic. Miss Beauclerk makes only the mildest claims to humor or irony and trusts her tale entirely to a stream of gentle, guileless prose. It seems probable that a good many people will find this cloying. Yet if they persist, they will discover that the limpid sentences have real power to create a mood and that the picture of a bewildered, unwilling devil with an angel's love of purity and a man's longing for comfort is strangely appealing." M. C. Dawson
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 S 8 '29 630w

"It is an exquisite story and limpidly written, but mention of it in the same breath with 'Thais' does not mean that it is worthy of comparison. Miss Beauclerk lacks the breadth of vision and the irony of France, and in spite of its 'Golden Bough' sophistications and its allegorical significance, her tale is first of all a very sweet love story as richly charged with sentiment as 'Paul and Virginia' itself."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 O 5 '29 300w

"There are moments when the author seems about to grasp one of the various situations the book offers her. Perhaps the most fertile is the conjunction of Antioch's mourning for the death of Adonis with Tamael's Christian abhorrence of his own quite theological wickedness. There are also moments when one seems inclined to grant the contention of a reviewer charitably trying to give point to the book, that liking for it depends on 'the quality of your feeling for the age and the art of faith,' concluding that one is to read it in the spirit with which one approaches Fra Angelo and St. Francis." A. B. Parsons
+ — Nation 129:358 O 2 '29 270w

"Take a pint of extract of Anatole France, strain carefully for impurities, add an equal quantity of sugar, then dilute, and serve in an archaistic style with garnishings of Dulac, the result is 'The Love of the Foolish Angel.'" Raymond Mortimer
+ Nation and Ath 45:114 Ap 27 '29 40w

"If in certain scenes of debauchery the author's style follows her subject and runs to some excesses, becoming too nearly lithographic in its brilliance, it can be forgiven in view of the quiet, intelligent humor which enlivens many of the other pages." C. A. Chapman
+ New Repub 60:329 N 6 '29 230w

"Has a very considerable charm not associated with the artificiality of its plan or derived from the example of its predecessors. It is a fantasy of a curious and lovely order, unmarred by the discrepancies and failures of the usual fantasy. Helen Beauclerk has told the story of Tamael in a pure and beautiful prose, which is liquid without being diffuse, and poetic without self-concious mannerism." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Evening Post p5m S 14 '29 520w

" 'The love of the Foolish Angel' is fraught with tenderness and beauty and childlike wisdom. . . In decoration, typography and format it is a distinguished piece of work. While it may not entirely deserve the unmeasured praise which has been—and will be—given it, here and in England, it is well worth the attention of those who appreciate sound literary form, a clear style, and a point of approach which is as far removed from satire as it is from irony and which yet bites into the stuff of life as the acid bites into the plate of an etcher." J: Carter

+ N Y Times p2 S 29 '29 1300w

"The author solves all problems involved in managing the complicated machinery of heaven, hell and this world by the simple device of ignoring difficulties and getting ahead with the story. The prose is good, the touch is deft. No effort is made to be profound on problems of human destiny, but amid all the unreality of fantasy the girl Basilea is exceedingly human, and the love story does at times induce the beginnings of an excusable lump in the throat." Shaemas O'Sheel

+ N Y World p11m O 13 '29 450w

"Her delightful book belongs to all who can bring to it a love of delicate writing and a taste for subtle philosophy. Best of all for the writer's fortunes, The Love of the Foolish Angel need not depend solely upon an audience of the elect. Its excellently contrived story should carry it far and wide among general readers."

+ Outlook 153:67 S 11 '29 240w

"An unusual and successful combination of fable, love-story, and historical romance. The realism with which these scenes are treated is out of keeping with Miss Beauclerk's purposely naïve and unsophisticated conception of Heaven and Hell. But she has her subject thoroughly under control, she writes extremely well, and her book is one not to be missed." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 147:650 My 11 '29 130w

"Miss Beauclerk has written an extremely well sustained fantasy, which reads quite satisfactorily as a story, and which, as has been suggested, is not without its deeper meanings." Herschel Brickell

+ Sat R of Lit 6:232 O 12 '29 950w

"There are rare moments in this book. Such a theme might have been handled by the author of Thaïs, but Miss Beauclerk's lucid tempera is most unlike his thick rich impasto. This exquisite book is of the finely premeditated kind. These fair and darkling shapes have grown slowly till they have taken the perfection of white lilies and black iris. The whole story has the sweet solemnity and purified colour of a rainbow." R. A. Taylor

+ Spec 142:833 My 25 '29 420w

"Of its somewhat unusual kind—whatever one may think of that kind—this book is an unusually satisfying example, a creation complete and of an almost flawless loveliness. Not of beauty, indeed, for it is too remote, too untroubled to partake of the vital quality of beauty. In the positive grace of the prose, in the ease and care of its manipulation, the reader is made aware of an attitude subtly mannered; the effect, taking the book as a whole, is one not of vividness or energy, but of a languorous monotone, like the rising and falling but unchanging song of a fountain, interposing a delicate silver mist between the spectator and that which he witnesses."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p312 Ap 18 '29 650w

BECK, MRS LILY (MORESBY) ADAMS (E. BARRINGTON, LOUIS MORESBY, pseuds.). Garden of vision; a story of growth. 421p $2.50 Cosmopolitan bk.

29-22425

A wealthy English girl, Yasoma Brandon, becomes thoroughly sick of the extravagant excesses of her London set, and advised by her one intellectual friend, an Englishwoman who has turned Buddhist, goes to Japan. There in the Zen-Buddhist "garden of vision" Yasoma has a spiritual awakening and comes to an understanding of the wisdom of the East.

"Apart from its literary merit, the highest yet attained by Mrs. Adams Beck, 'The Garden of Vision' is of great value to those interested in what we call, lacking a better word, the personality of the Japanese." J. W. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 20 '29 950w

"The book is earnestly and sincerely written, and contains many lovely descriptions of natural beauty, but it is an exposition of Zen-Buddhist philosophy rather than a novel."

N Y Times p33 N 17 '29 550w

BECK, MRS LILY (MORESBY) ADAMS (E. BARRINGTON, LOUIS MORESBY, pseuds.). Laughing Queen. 307p $2.50 Dodd [7s 6d; lea 10s Harrap]

Cleopatra, queen of Egypt—Fiction 29-15483

A romantic retelling of the story of Cleopatra in which the Queen of Egypt appears a warmly human little figure, knowing herself to be a disturbing combination of goddess, woman, child.

Booklist 26:69 N '29

" 'The Laughing Queen' is not exactly a biography in modern dress. The customs and conversations of the great historic personages are embellished with a flavor of antiquity. Yet, through this glamorous veil there permeates the modern mania for humanizing history. In an effort to grow away from the distilled facts the author enhances her picture with fulsome and rather cloying psychology. This process is like the making of a well known novel into a 'movie.' One deplores her choice of subject. She has skill and enthusiasm and curiosity. Then why not search the records for some more obscure charmer, as she did in 'The Divine Lady'? She would not have to risk comparison nor compete with peerless masters." V. P. Ross

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Jl 28 '29 1000w

Reviewed by J. W. Maury

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 20 '29 1400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p143 N '29

"The book is necessarily rather sketchy, which is perhaps one reason why it conveys so little of the atmosphere and feeling of the ancient world. Here and there the language is rather Elizabethan, but for the most part modern colloquialisms are employed. It cannot be said that E. Barrington has shed any very new or strong light upon any of these, but her tale of 'The Laughing Queen,' is a very feminine, entertaining and easily read romance of the popular type closely associated with her name."

+ — N Y Times p18 Jl 21 '29 650w

Pratt p36 autumn '29

"This novel, like the others from the hands of this popular author, may be called the cream of history whipped up with a sprightly coloring matter. In some such way, certainly, a critic of literary form would describe it, nor would a historian or a psychologist consider it a serious contribution to a study of Cleopatra." A. C. E. Allison

— Sat R of Lit 6:232 O 12 '29 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p924 N 14 '29 460w

BECK, OTTO WALTER. Self-development in drawing, as interpreted by the genius of Romano Dazzi and other children. 281p il $5 (21s) Putnam

741 Drawing—Instruction. Drawings. Dazzi, Romano 28-28505

The author compares the conventional method of teaching drawing in the school room, with the natural method discovered by the child left free to experiment for himself. The results of the two methods are illustrated from samples of children's work, but particularly from the drawings of the self-taught young genius Romano Dazzi. Romano's development is analyzed as the supreme example of the success of the method commended by the author.

BECK, O: W.—Continued

"Although the text of Mr. Beck's book is interesting, the plentiful illustrations contain even more that is valuable. Most of the plates are drawings by Romano Dazzi, a Roman prodigy, now a grown young artist; in fact the book is built upon the ideal development of his ability from his earliest scribble to his latest finished work. Romano is used to illustrate the proper way of learning to draw." A. H. S.

Boston Transcript p2 D 22 '28 600w
St Louis 27:131 Ap '29
Times [London] Lit Sup p767 O 3 '29 250w

BECKER, MRS MAY (LAMBERTON). Books as ² windows. 289p $2 Stokes

028 Books and reading 29-22221

How to read with vision is the theme of this collection of informal literary essays on books and their authors by the conductor of the Readers' guide in the Saturday Review of Literature. In each chapter the author has grouped kindred books for discussion to illustrate a specific point of view, subject-matter, or study-interest, such as Patterns in fiction, Social England, and Telling about a novel. A selected bibliography for reference follows each of the discussions.

Booklist 26:109 D '29
Cleveland Open Shelf p153 D '29

" 'Books as Windows' contains some quite stimulating papers on reading and writing. As a reader's guide Miss Becker's interests are varied and liberal; her enthusiasm and her devotion to good books contagious. For those who do not live in books as a fish in water, but who, nevertheless, do not choose to sign their reading lists with an illiterate X, Miss Becker's essays should provide considerable guidance and impetus to intelligent reading." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p9m D 7 '29 80w

"May Lamberton Becker, it need hardly be remarked in these columns, has been one of the most valuable pieces of cultural steering gear of our period. . . The present volume gives a very fair indication of the professional equipment that has established her as the Mr. Foster of contemporary literature. Further, 'Books as Windows' distinctly possesses the quality of engaging reading; abounding in the happy line, it holds the comfortable tone of as between one reader and another. And, touched throughout with simple anecdote and the warmth of personal living, it is steeped in human wisdom as well as literary values." R. C. Holliday

+ Sat R of Lit 6:504 D 7 '29 400w

BECKER, MRS MAY (LAMBERTON), ed. Golden tales of our America; stories of our background and tradition; with an introd. 336p il $2.50 Dodd

Short stories—Collections 29-9936

America as it used to be lives again in these "golden tales" drawn from colonial times to the more recently vanished days of Bret Harte's wild West.

Booklist 25:394 Jl '29
Reviewed by F. L. Robbins
Outlook 152:391 Jl 3 '29 150w
Pratt p36 autumn '29

"Her selections are intended to illustrate the mind, customs, and life of the American folk in various environments and eras; and so well has she succeeded that the volume, if attentively read, will teach as much about our social history as many a formal treatise. . . Altogether, it is a catholic, comprehensive, and original collection."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1046 My 25 '29 450w
Wis Lib Bul 25:276 Jl '29

BECKETT, SAMUEL J. Fjords and folk of Norway. 2d ed 311p il $3 Dodd [7s 6d Methuen]

914.81 Norway—Description and travel 28-26750

A second edition of an English work, which has been corrected and brought up to date. The book makes an attractive, small-sized guidebook to Norway, with chapters on the land, the people and the history of the country. An "Index" lists and describes in alphabetical order the principal places of interest in Norway.

Booklist 25:85 N '28
Cleveland Open Shelf p43 Mr '29
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:587 N '28
Wis Lib Bul 24:190 Je '28

BECKETT, WALTER. Dearest idol. 284p $2 Bobbs

29-6452

A lad who has been satisfyingly idolized by his mother, his aunt, his friend Boris, and his young wife—and is nonchalant toward all of these except Boris—is dismayed to learn after a few years that his wife is in love with his friend. It is bitter medicine, but salutary in effect.

"The process by which a normal, pleasant boy can be tricked into pompous middle age by his loving friends has been made cruelly clear, but without fanfare and with a good deal of sly humor."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p35 Ap 14 '29 350w

"With unusual power and restraint in an age given to strange displays of the sex instinct the author has handled delicately the love of a boy for a boy as contrasted to that of a boy for a girl." W. E. H.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 13 '29 300w
N Y Times p16 Je 23 '29 150w

"Why isn't this a better book? Triviality of subject cannot account for it entirely. The only reason this distressed reviewer can find lies in treatment of character. One feels that Matilda is real; Tony is a nice piece of analysis, but not wholly convincing as a person; Maisie is inconsistent, and Boris is a figurehead."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:934 Ap 20 '29 230w

BECKWITH, MARTHA WARREN. Black roadways; a study of Jamaican folk life. 243p il $3 Univ. of N.C. press

917.292 Negroes in Jamaica. Jamaica—Social life and customs. Folklore—Jamaica. Superstition 29-17106

"Black Roadways is a book on folk life in Jamaica, at least as interesting and factually more valuable than Seabrook's Magic Island, so popular last winter. Although Seabrook wrote of Haiti, the two books deal with much the same material. But where Seabrook's book was deliberately sensational, Mrs Beckwith's is written simply and with great restraint. Mrs. Beckwith has based her work on careful study and reference reading as well."—Outlook

"Miss Beckwith went to Jamaica for the gathering of folktales and songs and riddles, and in the last ten years she has returned again and again, learning to know her Jamaican natives in that special way which is open to the collector of tales, who comes to the native with enthusiasm not for boring questions but for the very thing he loves best, his tales. It is a subtle flattery that lays an excellent basis for understanding." Ruth Benedict

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 S 22 '29 800w

"Miss Beckwith provides a notably detailed and documented background for her study. She has not been content with personal observation, but has given her findings perspective by checking them against an impressive list of sources, set down in a splendid bibliography and including works of fiction as well as ethnological and folk-lore works." J: Crawford

+ N Y Evening Post p6m S 7 '29 420w

"Any one who wishes to pursue the study of Negro folklore will find her detailed description of folk-art, prayers, music (with notation and lyrics), incantations, funeral rites and so forth most valuable. And the casual reader, interested in the curious, will find it entirely readable."

+ Outlook 152:671 Ag 21 '29 180w

Reviewed by N. N. Puckett

Sat R of Lit 6:339 N 2 '29 450w

"It is a pleasant, imaginative, readable account of some of the practices and beliefs of a little-known negro peasant class, with particular reference to its superstitions and practical wisdom. The book is an admirable introduction to West Indian negro folklore."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p823 O 17 '29 200w

BEDDOW, BRUCE. Coals from Newcastle (Eng title The coal merchant). 323p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Cassell]

29-19783

George Rudd, a successful coal-seller, was short, fat and in no romantic sense appealing to women. But in spite of his meanness in his dealings with men, he had a weakness for beauty, and the beauty of young Jo Taylor he determined to win for himself at any cost. He forced her to marry him; he gave her a fine house; but she tolerated him only for the sake of their child. When she runs away with the young gardener her husband has employed, George refuses to let her see her baby, and Jo dies. George thereupon marries a woman with whom he has previously been in love.

---

"It is a compelling tale despite its sordidness, its dull flaming background of suffering miners and relentless tragedy. Mr. Beddow knows his country and his people well and in background and character he is convincing. The plot weakens toward the last." G. R. B. R.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 N 9 '29 500w

"This is a story of human character written by a first-rate novelist who is comparatively unknown. But if Bruce Beddow continues to write with the ability he showed last year in 'Black Country' and now in 'Coals from Newcastle,' he will soon find his audience."

+ N Y Times p6 N 10 '29 700w

"Mr. Beddow's gifts do not appear to advantage in his new novel. . . There is a good deal of unnecessary unpleasantness in this book. Mr. Beddow makes a mistake in his use of sordid detail."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p340 Ap 25 '29 300w

BEDEL, MAURICE. Molinoff; or, The count in the kitchen; tr. from the French by Lawrence S. Morris. 252p $2.50 Viking press [7s 6d Duckworth]

29-11675

With a light and charming touch M. Bedel rehearses the sad history of Count Ivan Molinoff, reduced by the Russian revolution to the position of cook to the ostentatious new owners of Fontecreuse. Next door are two fresh and lovely young French girls whom he meets by accident and to whom he is made known under his proper title. There ensues for the unhappy Molinoff, cook by day, count, social lion, and lover by night, a period of alternating rapture and despair.

---

Booklist 25:394 Jl '29

"Some of the humor is too topical to be fully appreciated by any but a French audience, but on the whole M. Bedel manages to be fairly universal and tremendously amusing. Moreover, the qualities of the book are admirably preserved—perhaps even improved—in the translation by Lawrence S. Morris. 'Molinoff' is the sort of novel one carries along on a week-end trip. It is skillful, delicious, quite digestible, and at the end there is even a touch of calculated pathos." Malcolm Cowley

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 My 26 '29 760w

Cleveland Open Shelf p111 Jl '29

"In his latest book the author of 'Jerome' shifts the latitude of love from 60° to 45°, and romance, shorn of frost and farce, grows lighter."

+ Nation 129:231 Ag 28 '29 60w

Reviewed by L. L. Irvine

— + Nation and Ath 45:767 S 14 '29 50w

" 'Molinoff' is a distinct disappointment after 'Jerome, or The Latitude of Love.' "

— New Repub 59:349 Ag 14 '29 120w

"Mr. Bedel belongs to a small group of wise French writers who thoroughly understand the difficult technique of clever light writing, an art, by the way, that is very like walking a tight-rope with ease and assurance and with a bright smile on the face. There is decided suspense, there are surprises, the characters are all delightful, and the ending is unexpected and Gallic."

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 4 '29 480w

"To read Molinoff is to laugh intelligently. Maurice Bedel's effortless wit flashes so merrily that the real penetration and ironic discernment of Molinoff may not at first be apparent, but it would be a casual reader indeed who failed to appreciate the craftsmanship by which, with strict economy of means, the author creates a society futile and absurd, yet somehow a little grand." Mary Shirley

+ Outlook 152:188 My 29 '29 350w

"The author of 'Jerome, or The Latitude of Love' shows the same gaiety, wit, and charm that delighted the critics in his earlier novel, and the same satire that is not less keen for being so delicate." Basil Davenport

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1126 Je 22 '29 500w

"The idea is, of course, a well-worn one, but M. Bedel by his sprightliness has made the most delicious farce out of Molinoff's dilemma. The story glitters with that feline Gallic malice, and leaves in the spirit a slight and charming sense of tragedy." V. S. Pritchett

+ Spec 143:312 S 7 '29 210w

"M. Bedel's witty and lively comedy has been translated very well by Lawrence S. Morris, who betrays an American origin by his use of the words 'fall' and 'squash,' but by very little else."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p725 S 19 '29 240w

Wis Lib Bul 25:195 Je '29

BEDFORD-JONES, HENRY (JOHN WYCLIFFE, pseud.). This fiction business. 178p $2 Covici

808.3 Fiction—Technique. Short story

29-18660

"Mr. Bedford-Jones does not believe any one can be told how to write stories. But he advises any one who wants to make the attempt to take it up as a business proposition, decide what kind of fiction he would rather do, and then go at it with the best he can put into the work. He must get, by constant practice, if he does not have it to start with, a sense of word-values, and he must be able to make character, individuality, shine through all his work. If these things do not come by nature, the author tells him, perhaps he can achieve them by hard work."— N Y Times

---

Booklist 26:61 N '29

"As a fiction writer it will be seen that Mr. Bedford-Jones functions in the manner of a steam engine and is prolific in the fashion of a guinea-pig. And for those who aspire to authorship along similar lines his advice is eminently practical and to the point. He knows his stuff."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ag 25 '29 180w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver

N Y Evening Post p7m Ag 3 '29 400w

BEDFORD-JONES, HENRY—*Continued

"He is wholly practical in his viewpoint and in his defense of it he points to his own not inconsiderable commercial success as an author, saying that under his own and several pen names he has had published forty books of diverse kinds, well over a hundred booklength novels, as many novelettes and some hundreds of short stories and that, with the exception of perhaps half a dozen stories, he has sold all he has written. Commercially, therefore, it must be admitted that he knows what he is talking about."

N Y Times p8 Jl 28 '29 450w

BEEBE, ELSWYTH THANE. See Thane, E., pseud.

BEEDING, FRANCIS, pseud. of JOHN LESLIE PALMER and HILARY AIDAN ST GEORGE SAUNDERS. Five Flamboys. 308p $2 Little [7s 6d Hodder]

29-13890

The five Flamboys are up to mischief on an international scale. Granby of the Secret service impersonates McGuffie who has an appointment with the Flamboys in Europe. A young secretary of the League of nations takes a hand in the game, which grows perilously warm when the Flamboys discover that the real McGuffie is dead.

---

Bookm 70:xxv S '29 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Jl 14 '29 100w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 31 '29 260w

"It is a swiftly moving story and the suspense is admirably maintained to the not unexpected end. . . Ingenuity of detail and smooth writing combine to make this an enjoyable addition to the list of stories that combine mystery and adventure."

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 7 '29 250w

+ Sat R of Lit 6:192 S 28 '29 380w

"The dialogue throughout is lively and maintained just at that tone which distinguishes fiction from nature. 'I travel with the body,' 'I take to the bottle': here are two chapter headings which in themselves have the effect of an appetiser."

+ Spec 143:344 S 14 '29 240w

BEEDING, FRANCIS, pseud. of JOHN LESLIE PALMER and HILARY AIDAN ST GEORGE SAUNDERS. Pretty sinister. 317p $2 Little

29-4642

"With two sets of crooks out for the same prize and with Colonel Granby of the British Secret Service seeking to outwit both of them, the plot of this story would be intricate enough even if it were told in a straightforward manner. To make it more difficult, the author has chosen to begin in the middle and work both ways."—N Y Times

---

"Mr. Beeding's queer time scheme, his skippings about from gang to gang and his perilous skirtings of burlesque made his story hard going." Will Cuppy

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 10 '29 80w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 9 '29 350w

"It is necessary to read several chapters before one has more than the faintest glimmering of what it is all about. It is rather a pity that this is so, for after the story gets under way it has thrills aplenty."

— + N Y Times p22 Mr 3 '29 130w

N Y World p11m F 17 '29 130w

"There is battle, murder and a high percentage of sudden death. But it's all so involved that after a while when you hear a pistol shot you just don't care." W. R. Brooks

— Outlook 151:351 F 27 '29 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p145 F 21 '29 200w

BEER, THOMAS. Hanna. 325p $4 Knopf

B or 92 Hanna, Marcus Alonzo 29-24016

"Mark Hanna, who lives in the memory of the American people as a fat, pudgy man who wore an oversize suit covered with dollar signs, stands forth as a human being in the most remarkable of Thomas Beer's writings, 'Hanna.' Here he stands squarely upon his feet with his heavy figure, his loose fitting clothes, his quiet, appraising look. He stands against a background of tobacco smoke from countless political meetings, against the flare of light from countless torchlight processions and the whirling arms of orators on unnumbered flag-draped platforms. [This is] a portrait—neither eulogy nor condemnation, neither whitewashing nor indictment." —N Y World

---

For biographical sketch of the author see Boston Transcript p1 O 11 '29

---

"Mr. Beer gives the impression always of having almost mastered his style. In his next book he will subdue it, we say, and the next book arrives, and again Mr. Beer is at intervals mounting stilts and walking off from his reader and afterwards compensating for the labored fine writing by 'writing rough' for a page or two. . . He will have to curtail some of his posturing, but he will gain in power, and make us feel him as a force as well as appreciate him as a Memory." G. B. Munson

+ — Bookm 70:452 D '29 700w

"Mr. Beer makes a living and appealing figure of Mark Hanna. The result is not so careful and scholarly a record as Mr. Croly's, but it is a gay picture of Mark Hanna's generation, told in Mr. Beer's vivid cinematographic style." L: Gannett

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 N 3 '29 1000w

"As a study of Hanna it goes far toward giving us an affection for him, in which the conservative and very appreciative narrative of Mr. Croly somewhat fails. As a brilliant if garrulous epitome of a long period it is sometimes an aggravation but more often a delight." S. L. Cook

+ — Boston Transcript p2 N 9 '29 1600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p148 D '29

Reviewed by J. T. Gerould

Current Hist 31:829 Ja '30 30w

"It is an appreciation, a realistic appreciation, which Mr. Beer has written rather than a biography. He has written, as always, with great charm; a charm which transcends even his over-devotion to adjectives." H: F. Pringle

+ New Repub 61:202 Ja 8 '30 700w

"Not only Hanna's humor but Beer's own wit enlivens this tale of a man who might otherwise have gone into history weighted down with the gold he amassed and the gold he helped America garner. Easy, indeed, to have told an interesting story of Hanna's long political service for 'protection' to industry, for McKinley, for Roosevelt, for the Panama Canal, and easy, no doubt, to have recited his personal characteristics and anecdotes of audacious campaigns and stratagems, but to have combined them all was the work for an artist, an independent artist such as Mr. Beer, as free with color as a Florentine painter." Lloyd Lewis

+ N Y Evening Post p10m N 2 '29 1700w

"Mr. Beer has produced another thoroughly readable book. He has embraced in it a substantial contribution of information concerning Hanna which the future biographer or historian treating the same subject cannot ignore. If, after the manner of Mencken, he orchestrates his work with cadences of laughter at Homo Americanus entangled in the intricacies of politics, one may reflect, after all, it is Beer's way." A. S. Will

+ — N Y Times p3 N 3 '29 1800w

"Here Thomas Beer rises magnificently to his opportunity. A just appraisal usually means a eulogy. But Beer asks, in effect, why apologize for being human? Hanna was a creature of his time, and when viewed as Beer views him, he seems, despite his faults, somewhat bigger in stature than the men who postured in the limelight. . . Beer proves effectively that a recital of American political acts in the nineties and nineteen hundreds can be colorful and picturesque without distortion." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p16 N 1 '29 1200w

"Mr. Beer's genius and knowledge enable him to achieve a convincing revelation of the taciturn politician and a brilliant interpretation of the garrulous era between the Civil and Spanish-American wars." Johan Smertenko
+ Outlook 153:549 D 4 '29 400w

BEERS, LORNA DOONE (MRS C. R. CHAMBERS). A humble Lear. 381p $2.50 Dutton
29-12768

An aging Minnesota farmer has given himself to his land and to his family, expecting in return some measure of gratitude and love. Only at her death does his delicate wife appreciate the quality of this man of the earth. As for his sons, the elder is selfish, greedy,—the younger careless, disappointing. With his daughter Adam has never been on sympathetic terms. She does, however, give him honest and dutiful service, if not love. Yet for all his disappointments and sorrows, in old age Adam looks back on life and finds it worthwhile.

---

Booklist 26:32 O '29
Bookm 69:xxiv Ag '29 100w

"The minor personages, which supply a compensating element of humor, are as well painted as the dour and inarticulate Adam. The story has vitality and realistic force, but Miss Beers indulges in poeticized descriptions and repetitious transcripts of the characters' thoughts, which sometimes slow down the action to an irritating dawdle. A ruthless pruning would have improved the book." R. C. B. Brown
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Je 9 '29 280w

"The story is sincere and realistic."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 22 '29 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p125 S '29

"It is a setting that the author knows, even to the smudgy fingerprints on the scenery and the worn place in the back-drop, and she has reproduced it with meticulous detail. More than that, she has animated it with familiar memories until the reader knows it, too. . . 'A Humble Lear' is a book that is absorbing because it is real."
+ N Y Times p8 Je 2 '29 630w

"Mrs. Beers has shown courage in selecting a well-worn theme, in handling her 'Middle-Westerners' with warmth rather than with desiccating analysis, and in allowing pity and tenderness to soften the edges of her sharp perceptions. She has unusual talent for characterization and narrative. Her book has both strength and beauty."
+ Outlook 152:229 Je 5 '29 300w

"The story reminds the reader somewhat of Martha Ostenso's novel of the country farther north—'Wild Geese.' The characters here are not as fully drawn, but the treatment is candid and forceful."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 23 '29 400w

BEGBIE, HAROLD (GENTLEMAN WITH A DUSTER, pseud.). Laslett affair. 384p $2 Macaulay [7s 6d Mills & B.]
29-2738

A brilliant career has always been predicted for Stephen Laslett. His great gifts combined with his father's wealth are sufficient to make up for any lack of social prestige. But his father loses his fortune and Stephen dissipates his gifts, heedless of the advice and warnings of his greatest friends—the football hero he has idolized and the girl he has loved. This story of youth in modern England is largely a picture of Stephen's deterioration.

---

"Far from the facetiousness and superficiality suggested by the author's pseudonym, the spirit of the book is somewhat like Wassermann's The World's Illusion."
Bookm 69:xxiv Je '29 70w

"It will be the reader's fault if he doesn't lead a nobler life after plowing through this cautionary tale of the good and bad Etonians and the evils that beset people who try to make money and fame and drink gin."
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 12 '29 100w

"This is a keen piece of character sketching, on a well drawn background of contemporary English life. And the painter understands backgrounds as well as portraits." T: C. Richards
+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 23 '29 1100w

"Not since Sandford and Merton has the worldling been told more didactically 'where he gets off,' yet despite the plethora of its sermons the story is not uninteresting."
+ New Statesman 31:740 S 22 '28 170w

"Exhaustingly overwritten, making its slightest point with a sledgehammer, this book has an air of being one continuous evangelical sermon based on case notes collected by a social service worker among English university men."
— N Y Times p26 F 17 '29 600w

"A big book and a busy book. 'The Laslett Affair' will lure the most avid craver of action unsuspectingly through paragraph after paragraph of extemporaneous speeches on esthetics, athletics, morals, industry, politics, and every other subject on which human beings are wont to disagree."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:838 Mr 30 '29 330w

"It is an odd story—a wandering improvisation rather than a neatly-patterned narrative. But it is vigorously written, and, amid much that is extravagant, it presents a great variety of true scenes of modern English life, as well as many of those penetrating reflections on social and religious matters in which this gifted writer always excels."
+ Spec 141:309 S 8 '28 200w
Springf'd Republican p5e Je 2 '29 220w

"The book ends with Hugh in the arms of Susan, Stephen bound for Broadmoor, and the reader wondering why a writer with the capabilities of 'The Gentleman With a Duster' should not be able to construct a novel with more force and point."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p668 S 20 '28 250w

BELASCO, DAVID. Six plays; with an introd. by the author, and notes by Montrose J. Moses. 503p il $4 Little 812 28-23326

Six of the best and most successful of the Belasco plays, with notes on the stage history of each. Contents: Madame Butterfly; Du Barry; The darling of the gods; Adrea; The girl of the golden West; The return of Peter Grimm.

---

Booklist 25:153 Ja '29

"These plays deserve a place in our dramatic library, as most of them hold it in our memories." W. P. Eaton
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 F 10 '29 150w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p6 F 9 '29 1000w
Cleveland Open Shelf p27 F '29
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:636 D '28
Pratt p26 summer '29
St Louis 27:24 Ja '29

"Belasco's plays were written for the theatre, not for the library. Between the covers of a book they lose their splendor as spectacles and their twisting grip on the emotions. Meant to be played behind footlights or on an emotion-organ as the clavilux plays color, they become melodramatic, sentimental, implausible under a reading lamp."
Theatre Arts Mo 13:156 F '29 270w
Wis Lib Bul 24:343 D '28

BELL, BERNARD IDDINGS. Beyond agnosticism: a book for tired mechanists. 170p $2 Harper

230 Christianity. Faith. Agnosticism 29-10040

The warden of St. Stephen's college sets forth his profession of faith. His testimony is that without loss of intellectual honesty or denial of the results of modern science a reasonable faith is possible.

---

Booklist 25:376 Jl '29

"Dr. Bell has the gift of a gracious and simple style, and the higher one of recommending with sweet reasonableness his own discovery of a faith to others. That there must be a discovery as well as a search if life is not to be frustrated is his fundamental postulate, and it is a good one."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 9 '29 230w

"It impresses this reviewer that the argument about the apprehension of Reality (that is, God) in terms beyond knowledge, and therefore independent of sense, seems suddenly to evaporate in the presence of a simultaneous argument for the necessity of sacraments on the ground that 'always there is the physical touch to make the spiritual truth perceptible.' The tired mechanist had better go fishing to rest his mind and then think some more when his mental energy has been recovered, rather than seek satisfaction by processes which are independent of rationality." W. E. Garrison

— + Christian Century 46:868 Jl 3 '29 950w

"A vigorous, vivid, excellently written protest against cynicism, pessimism, and superficiality."

+ J Religion 9:661 O '29 70w

Reviewed by Clarence Britten

Nation 129:200 Ag 21 '29 150w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres

New Repub 59:48 My 22 '29 300w

N Y Evening Post p7m Jl 27 '29 420w

St Louis 27:328 D '29

"The work proceeds into two grievous errors. First, a complete separation of the comprehending and the apprehending modes of knowledge. This division a modern philosophy cannot accept. There is a truth known only to the seer, to the lover, or the partner, but that knowledge can be in part assisted, described, and tested by the reasonable processes of 'science. Scientific method must be accorded a far more thoroughgoing place in the judgments of religious philosophy than is here admitted. Secondly, the assumption of points at issue and the leaping of great gaps in the argument in order to postulate the whole framework of Christian orthodoxy." Von Ogden Vogt

— Sat R of Lit 6:204 O 5 '29 560w

Wis Lib Bul 25:317 O '29

BELL, BERNARD IDDINGS. Common sense in education. 321p $2.50 Morrow

370 Education 28-23452

"This study of the needs of modern education begins with a chapter devoted to a definition of the word. The educated man, Dr. Bell finds, is one 'who has been helped to something of four understandings: of himself, of his world, of that super-rational reality and purpose which men call God, and of the relationship of these three to one another.' Education must include artistic nurture, scientific instruction, contemplative training and philosophic culture."— N Y Times

---

" 'Common Sense in Education' should have been called 'Religion in Education,' or, better still, 'A High Churchman's Ideas About Education.' Whether or not you see 'common sense' in this book is perhaps dependent upon your belonging to one of the three Catholic persuasions. He believes in ritualistic training for small children (and gives good reasons), which rules him out for the majority of Protestants. He denies that a conception of God as a divine principle rather than as a person has any meaning, which rules him out for others. Even aside from this, his endeavor seems futile." Margery Mansfield

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 21 '28 380w

Boston Transcript p4 D 29 '28 230w

"The author affords real help in judging the merits of the new and the old in educational theory and practice, and gives good chapters on public schools, private schools and colleges. Unfortunately he does not discuss military schools."

+ Christian Century 46:298 F 28 '29 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p25 F '29

"Most books about education are written for teachers. Here is a volume addressed to parents. That is the thing that first distinguishes Dr. Bell's latest book. Its second mark of distinction is a quality which will send it far on its fine and useful way—it is absorbingly interesting. We prescribe it heartily to parents, but not as a task: it will be read, enjoyed and profited by; it is a wise book of marked importance."

+ N Y Times p24 O 14 '28 400w

St Louis 27:47 F '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:97 Mr '29

BELL, SIR CHARLES ALFRED. People of Tibet. 319p il $7 (21s) Oxford

915.15 Tibet—Social life and customs 29-26164

"What Tibetans eat and drink and smoke, and how they do it; how they treat their women; how they farm up there on the Himalayas, higher than the Alps; how a Tibetan noble spends his day and what he wears; what games Tibetans play—such are the topics Sir Charles discusses with an intimacy such as no previous English writer has had with Tibet."— Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

Booklist 25:244 Mr '29

Bookm 69:xiv Ag '29 100w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 F 24 '29 150w

Pratt p30 autumn '29

"If there is any living man who can interpret this strange community to the modern Western world it is Sir Charles Bell." W: B. Shaw

+ R of Rs 79:10 My '29 120w

"Eighteen years spent in Tibet and Sikkim and a knowledge of the Tibetan language enable Sir Charles Bell to speak with authority. His 'Tibet, Past and Present' published in 1924 and his new volume are, in fact, the most authoritative works on Tibet. Others have visited it on some hurried military expedition, or, like Dr. McGovern and Savage Landor, in disguise, and have brought back little that was new."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:938 Ap 20 '29 400w

"He gives a far more genial account of the people than we have found elsewhere. . . The book is well illustrated and will at once become a classic."

+ Spec 141:789 N 24 '28 250w

"The book, with its seventy-five illustrations and three maps, is one which the general reader should not pass by. Every aspect of Tibetan life is laid bare by an authority who has had a rare intimacy with the people and who possesses a sympathy and style to attract all readers."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p845 N 15 '28 1500w

BELL, CLIVE. Proust. 104p $1.50 Harcourt [5s Hogarth press]

B or 92 Proust, Marcel 29-4803

Mr Clive Bell's witty book is the first in English to be devoted entirely to Proust. It may well be read in connection with Mr Edmund Wilson's article on Proust appearing in the New Republic of March 21, 1928.

---

Booklist 25:318 My '29

Boston Transcript p7 Mr 16 '29 600w

Reviewed by Francis Birrell
Nation and Ath 44:362 D 8 '28 800w

"It is odd how many of Proust's admirers are compelled to adopt a hesitant, apologetic manner; it seems almost wrong that Mr. Bell, on whom the manner sits very awkwardly, feels himself obliged to adopt it. Apology either for himself or his admirations is the last thing we expect from Mr. Bell, yet all through this book he is excusing himself for his admiration for Proust. His essay of course, is exceedingly intelligent; in some passages, in which he is stating and agreeing with what he believes to be Proust's philosophy of life, Mr. Bell attains real eloquence and passion." R. E. Roberts

+ — New Statesman 32:224 N 24 '28 1400w

"For one who really desired to learn something illuminating about Proust I should advise reading Edmund Wilson's five or six-page essay, published at the time 'Le temps retrouve' appeared. As a contribution either to criticism or art, Mr. Bell's 'Proust' is negligible." Edgar Johnson

— N Y Evening Post p10m F 16 '29 700w
N Y Times p2 Mr 24 '29 730w

"In spite of certain misstatements of fact, it is the best introduction to the French novelist's work the Landscaper has seen. It is simple, brief, and sensible, and gives an interpretation of Proust in connection with his work that will help anyone to a better enjoyment of the great novel which is still in process of publication." Herschel Brickell

+ — No Am 27:adv Ap '29 130w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Outlook 151:272 F 13 '29 900w
Pratt p27 summer '29

"When he deals straightforwardly with Proust what Mr Bell has to say is sound enough, if rather commonplace, but Mr Bell is too often struggling for epigram or paradox or smart originality."

— + Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 24 '29 180w

"Mr. Clive Bell is to be congratulated upon having written the most intelligent commentary upon Proust since the publication of 'Le Temps Retrouve' a year ago. While he gives us the fruits of ten years' meditation upon the first volume he is equally appreciative of the last; and his book is no less enlightening upon Proust in that it is largely expressive also of its author. He gives us, with some errors and exceptions, the whole of Proust in eighty-five minute pages."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p58 Ja 24 '29 580w

BELL, FLORENCE EVELEEN ELEANORE (OLIFFE) lady. Landmarks; a reprint of some essays and other pieces published between the years 1894 and 1922. 227p $3.50 Liveright [10s 6d Benn]

824 29-25019

With the dedication "to my grandchildren—these comments on life," Lady Bell has gathered in this collection a group of essays on her personal interests and appreciations, two articles reprinted from La science sociale, and a group of poetical fables in French and after Fontaine.

---

"Lady Bell has zest; her mind is open to the new. She comes to the novel idea, the novel subject, not with eyes closed, but sympathetically eager to understand it, to pass it through the sieve of accumulated experience. The result is the presence in all she writes of a singular quality of levelheadedness."

+ New Statesman 33:382 Je 29 '29 140w

"Throughout these essays the standpoint is of an older generation with which it would do many people no great harm to be better acquainted. It is well illustrated in the little paper called 'Some Thoughts on Old Age.'"

+ Sat R 147:869 Je 29 '29 530w
Spec 142:873 Je 1 '29 90w

"What this farseeing, sensible, wide-minded observer has to say about the influence and example of the well-to-do who merely 'drift' is as true to-day as it was in the days of reconstruction. And so with the papers on public school education, which Lady Bell wrote in French for a French periodical thirty years ago. . . Reverence, understanding and affection make up her sketches of two women, Mrs Humphry Ward and Miss Elizabeth Robins."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p351 My 2 '29 800w

BELL, GEORGE KENNEDY ALLEN. Brief sketch of the Church of England. 180p $1.60 Morehouse [4s Student]

283 Church of England

An account of the growth, character, and organization of the Church of England today, by the Bishop of Chichester.

---

"It would be hard to find in the same compass so comprehensive, succinct, lucid and yet authoritative statement of the Church of England's position, organization, claims, methods and purposes as this single volume contains."

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 27 '29 220w

"A book which is full of such information as an intelligent Churchman desires to have and usually finds difficult to secure. Dr. Bell has rendered them a signal service by this book. His sketch of the Church's history and present position is at once clear and judicious, and the account of its present activities makes this a most useful handbook for all who wish to have reliable information on matters affecting the Church's life at the present time."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p799 O 10 '29 300w

BELL, HELEN GRISCOM. Winning the king's cup; an account of the "Elena's" race to Spain, 1928. 135p il $3.50 Putnam

797.14 Elena (yacht). Yacht racing 29-1645

The yacht "Elena" won the king's cup in the 1928 race from New York to Spain. This is the story of the "Elena's" dash across the Atlantic, illustrated from charts, maps, and photographs, and written by the daughter of the owner of the winning yacht.

---

"Helen Bell has caught on paper the excitement, the hardship and the nerve-racking strain of a transatlantic yacht race. It is just the book true yachtsmen will shout over."

+ Bookm 69:xiv My '29 60w
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Je 30 '29 220w

"An engaging account of this race across the Atlantic against four other large yachts. Starting with the preparations for the race and including a description of the stores they carried and of the vessel itself, Miss Bell gives a highly interesting tale of an epic contest." E. B. S.

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 16 '29 380w

"Miss Bell, daughter of the Elena's owner, tells the story of the race in a vivid narrative which carries the reader along as one of the Elena's company." R. J. Davis

+ N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 2 '29 450w

"Should prove interesting to all yachtsmen."

+ N Y World p11m Mr 3 '29 80w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Belinda; a tale of affection in youth and age. 188p $2.50 Harper [6s Constable]

29-9485

An elegant trifle depicting in the flowery phrases of the eighteenth century the stately wooing of a maid of classic purity by a poor but highborn hero, the scurrilous intervention of the villain, and the triumph of the virtuous young lovers.

---

Booklist 25:359 Je '29

Reviewed by Clarence Britten
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 My 19 '29 700w
Boston Transcript p2 Je 5 '29 260w

BELLOC, HILAIRE—Continued

Cleveland Open Shelf p127 S '29

"It is frankly, a joke; a pastiche of the Victorian novel. I cannot say that I find it very amusing, and I regret that Mr. Belloc's talents should not have been more worthily employed." V. Sackville-West

Nation and Ath 44:416 D 15 '28 70w

"A little cameo, rose-tinted and finely cut." A. H. O.

+ New Repub 59:81 Je 5 '29 170w

"Belinda is, together with The Path to Rome and Esto Perpetua, the finest piece of sustained prose Mr. Belloc has written. It is not, as in those cases, his own prose—that is to say, it is deliberately written in a convention which limits, though it never conceals, and, indeed, often reinforces, the instinctive movements of his mind"

+ New Statesman 32:567 F 9 '29 1500w

"It is an exquisite 'period piece,' lovingly finished off to the last minute detail: a modern reproduction of so deft and delicate workmanship and such formal perfection as to delight both the literary antiquarian and the 'natural' connoisseur." Florence Haxton

+ N Y Evening Post p10m My 4 '29 600w

"If one likes to chuckle quietly to himself under his own reading lamp, 'Belinda' is just the material to provide the chuckles. . . Artificial as the characters are, obvious as is the plot, wooden as is the dialogue . . . the book is sheer delight."

+ N Y Times p8 My 19 '29 650w

"A delicious contribution to the season's entertainment."

+ N Y World p11m My 12 '29 160w

"It appears on closer reading to be a lovely piece of prose as well as a delicious parody, and a book which must have been great fun to write. . . The studied artificiality of the writing is a delicate satire upon contemporary literature."

+ Outlook 152:28 My 1 '29 280w

"It is a simple tale, full of artificiality and sensibility, and only capable of being told as Mr. Belloc tells it. Had he not let his humor get the better of him, he might have made a beautiful story of 'Belinda;' as it is, he has produced an amusing hybrid, too moving to be a good joke, and too near a joke to be really moving. But such is the charm of his prose, it imparts a unity strong enough to include these diversities of treatment." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 147:82 Ja 19 '29 300w

"There simply is no use writing about 'Belinda,' for the author has turned a lovely trick that must be witnessed at first hand. It is Mr. Belloc's bright garland at the feet of other times."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1165 Jl 6 '29 110w

"As a freak book, Mr. Belloc's is very amusing, and it is a pity to think that all the swan-like creatures, who would have found it more passionately absorbing than we do, are no longer in a position to appreciate it."

+ Spec 141:933 D 15 '28 300w

"Mr. Belloc in his wildest extravagances of mirth, is always contained by his Latin love of form and grace; and so it turns out that his mimicry of the old-fashioned society novelist's pompous style is not, like Dickens's, a mere piling-up of turgidities but a gorgeous structure in rococo, with an indisputable beauty of its own. . . The antiquarian details of the story are deliciously illusive."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p984 D 13 '28 620w

Wis Lib Bul 25:160 My '29

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Conversation with an angel, and other essays. 298p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d J. Cape]

824 29-8740

Essays reprinted for the most part from the New Statesman and The Saturday Review. Partial contents: On poverty; On getting rid of people; Dickens revisited; On labels; On epigrams; On 'Vathek'; On laughter; On Renan; On the books that change the world.

---

Booklist 26:109 D '29

"Mr. Belloc's prose attains a fine quality of pedestrianism, straightforwardly easy or archly ironical. Never serious on the question of politics, he sobers instantly when he comes to discuss matters of literary workmanship. There is, finally, a genially professional air about Mr. Belloc's essays that easily captures the reader. He is too old a hand to make any lost motions. He writes because it is his trade and does not care if you know it. Every week he brings a given quantity of writing, playful, intelligent, diverting, and when his half hour is over, he takes his hat and leaves with an effective exit." G: F. Whicher

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ag 11 '29 720w

"The essays that masquerade under the exalting title, 'A Conversation with an Angel' are sly, ironical, witty and serious. He does not annoy us with problems of political life or with dogmatic utterances on ethics and metaphysics. Simply little bits of shrewd opinion and humorous experiences that beguile bewitchingly one's time and mellow one's appreciation of this interesting world." T. S. L.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 10 '29 750w

"Those of us who like to read essays—and who does not?—will have our fondness for them increased if we look into Mr. Belloc's 'A Conversation with an Angel and Other Essays,' whether we simply glance at its pages here and there, or whether we read it line by line from its beginning to its end." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 11 '29 580w

"Mr. Belloc knows that if you are Mr. Belloc almost anything you say is important, however old the news."

Nation and Ath 44:154 O 27 '28 250w

"Mr. Belloc's pen is the weapon of a master. That is one thing the reader is aware of whenever he takes up a Belloc book, and no less clearly if it be a volume of reprinted essays—than if it be a new excursion into history. Mr. Belloc's essays, one would guess, cost him, as a rule, a minimum of labour; though there are notable exceptions, among which we may reckon the pointed discussion included here of the translator's task." S. K. R.

+ New Statesman 32:130 N 3 '28 210w

"Mr. Belloc is (to use a word he probably abominates) engaging. He persuades his reader along with him, and it is only when the charmed and disarmed reader reaches the conclusion of the essays and pauses to think his own thoughts that he discovers that Mr. Belloc has not really told him anything important and that, indeed, what he did have to say was not so far from the ordinary." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p2 Ag 11 '29 380w

"Mr. Belloc's mind is like a well-organized, well-disciplined and well-furnished army. He can move it where, when and how he pleases, and bring it onto the battlefield in good condition. It is because he is so firm and sure that he can play the fool with such devastating irresponsibility. Of late the old note of exuberance has been a little missed in his occasional essays. In this new collection it bubbles out again." E: Shanks

Sat R 146:505 O 20 '28 340w

"One could better enjoy Mr. Belloc's fertile wit, and his style so easy and yet so finished, if he were a little more amiable, a little less 'set,' not quite so candidly omniscient."

— + Sat R of Lit 6:250 O 12 '29 430w

"Mr. Belloc has said of himself that, 'His sins were scarlet, but his books were read.' At times, however, his humour tends to become heavy and morose, so that while we agree that his books will be read, we cannot but feel that his sins may sometimes be not so much scarlet as a dull chocolate hue; they are so in A Conversation with an Angel."

— Spec 141:654 N 3 '28 150w

"Mr. Belloc is happiest when he is driving at something; while he is capable of play with ideas, and humorous lucubration, his mind possesses a nervous edge which needs something to bite on."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 25 '29 760w

"In this book he is in opposition most of his time, and in consequence the book abounds in lively and vigorous writing. His detachment, his gift of unexpected observation and his revealing simplicity of expression, display themselves to the full in the topics which have caught his eye either because he has something to say about them which does not usually get said or because they invite the attack of his mordant wit."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p773 O 25 '28 580w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Richelieu; a study. 392p [2] il $5 Lippincott

B or 92 Richelieu, Armand Jean du Plessis, cardinal, duc de 29-28658

Mr Belloc's study makes little attempt at portraiture and sketches only the main events of the great cardinal's career. The purpose of the book is to prove the author's thesis that Richelieu's policies were chiefly responsible for two significant developments in European history—the division of Christendom into two opposing cultures, Protestant and Catholic, and the growth of the nationalistic state.

---

"Belloc gave us a picture on the grand scale, but strangely ill-proportioned and blurred. Passages treated with loving minute realism stand out in odd contrast with the misty background. The result is not safe history: but it never is commonplace and never dull: truly a Bellocian performance." Albert Guerard

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 D 22 '29 750w

"One needs to have something very definite to contribute to the already overfull shelves devoted to the study of this maker of destinies, to undertake a new biography of the great cardinal, Mr. Belloc qualifies. . . It is portrayal rather than history that makes this erudite and brilliant volume a permanent contribution to an already overwritten but understudied century." G. R. B. Richards

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 30 '29 1600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p148 D '29

"As a biography, Mr. Belloc's study of Richelieu must be accounted a success. With masterful clarity and logic he has reconciled the apparently irreconcilable facts of the Cardinal's life and character. The result, while still imposing, is nevertheless human and understandable." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Evening Post p13m N 23 '29 800w

"The book makes excellent reading. The reader is swept forward irresistibly, an admiring and docile follower of the author as he illumines the yesterdays in which Richelieu lived and wrought. The most suspicious reader begins to wonder whether after all, Mr. Belloc is not quite right, and the great cardinal, who has so commanded his admiration, was not, as his admirer sees him, a man whose career had no parallel in all history. What more could a biographer desire?" T. R. Ybarra

+ N Y Times p11 D 1 '29 1750w

"Not even an urbane and unfaltering arrogance are competent to mask philosophic and historical deficiencies of what is, all in all, a rather dull and consistently unveracious piece of biography. . . Perhaps he tells a true story of Richelieu's life—the passages in which he describes that great man's personality and career are brilliant and convincing. He does not tell a true story of Richelieu's period." P. D. Stong

— + N Y World p11m D 22 '29 850w

Outlook 153:466 N 20 '29 380w

"All in all, the book is a stimulating, thought-provoking work."

+ R of Rs 80:20 D '29 80w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Shadowed! with thirty-seven drawings by G. K. Chesterton (Eng title But soft—we are observed!) 312p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d Arrowsmith]

29-1803

The central situation of this gentle farce in the best manner of the two famous collaborators, is that of an innocent West Indian who in the year 1979 arrives in London for a first visit, and being mistaken for the key man in a land deal devoutly desired by the government—now manned by women—is greeted with effusion by official London and to his embarrassment and pain is indefatigably shadowed by the police. The mystification in the story is confined to Scotland Yard, the lady prime minister and their bewildered victim; it does not extend to the reader.

---

"The Chesterton drawings are, as usual, perfect; and the Belloc text as full of miscellaneous vintage fun. 'Shadowed!' is sure to be loved by its special audience." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ja 27 '29 130w

"The humor is not of the horse-play variety. Nor need one be more than casually cognizant of diplomatic and political methods to appreciate Mr. Belloc's generous burlesque. Never was governmental red-tape more completely derided." W. M. T.

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 2 '29 660w

"Author and artist have evidently enjoyed themselves as much in composing the book as any reader can hope to do in perusing it. Mr. Belloc seems to be at his best in this kind of writing."

+ Cath World 129:508 Jl '29 130w

"One could scarcely ask for more in the way of entertainment from Mr. Belloc and Mr. Chesterton. They present here not only an illustrated travesty on the standard mystery novel, but a compendium of what Mr. Belloc thinks about half the aspects of modern life. The collaboration, in their own terms, is perfect."

+ N Y Times p4 F 10 '29 600w

"Mildly humorous for the most part, but particularly good in the sly fun it pokes at the eccentricities of the contemporary detective story." E. C. Beckwith

+ N Y World p11m F 3 '29 160w

Pratt p39 summer '29

"Mr. Belloc's humour does not lose itself (as sometimes) in burlesque: it remains fresh and delightful to the end. Mr. Chesterton's illustrations could scarcely be bettered." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 146:736 D 1 '28 130w

"As a burlesque mystery story, a gorgeous, breathless farce, a good humored (or usually good humored) satire on politicians, millionaires, detectives, and the devious ways of high finance, Mr. Belloc's book leaves nothing to be desired."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:727 Mr 2 '29 340w

"The whole thing is swift, and gravely absurd, and truly hilarious. Mr. Chesterton's illustrations are as funny as ever, and of an amazing verisimilitude." R. A. Taylor

+ Spec 141:460 O 6 '28 230w

"It drags, though every now and then a good joke illuminates a naughty world. It is too sour and monotonous in tone for farce and too pontifical for railing, and its complications are not neat enough for it to hold the attention as a detective story."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p761 O 18 '28 170w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Survivals and new arrivals. 219p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Sheed & W.]

282 Roman Catholic church 29-18532

An essay outlining the position of the Catholic church. The survivals of old forms of attack upon the church are first given; then the forces which make up the main opposition today: nationalism, anti-clericalism and the "modern mind"; and finally, the new paganism.

---

BELLOC, HILAIRE—Continued

"His knowledge of history has given him a poise and a perspective, together with a sense of philosophical humor. Winds of doctrine play about him, but they do not uproot him. His perceptions are not blurred by novelty. He has a healthy contempt for limping logic, while grandiose, but illicit, generalizations evoke his utter disdain. He is a penetrating analyst." J. T. B.

+ Cath World 130:369 D '29 480w

Reviewed by E. B. Chaffee

+ Outlook 153:271 O 16 '29 150w

"A model of lucid, concise and vigorous polemical writing, it deserves to be read by every student of contemporary events and not merely by those who, in devotion or enmity, are exercised about the present status of Roman Catholicism."

+ Sat R 147:801 Je 15 '29 800w

"There is a peculiar charm about the brazen bigot, the man who blandly assumes that what he means by using certain terms every one else must mean—and that, in any case, his is the only true interpretation. As a champion of 'the True Church . . . wrapt in the old miasmal mist' (the quotation is from Mr. T. S. Eliot in 1920), Mr. Belloc is supreme—impayable, as his Gallic friends would say."

Spec 143:256 Ag 24 '29 420w

Springf'd Republican p10 O 15 '29 480w

Times [London] Lit Sup p507 Je 27 '29 1680w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Towns of destiny (Eng title Many cities). 238p il $5 McBride

914 Cities and towns—Europe. Cities and towns—Africa 27-24256

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"It is not only in the description of cities that he excels; in his incidental sketches of landscape he enjoys an equal power of evocation." V. Sackville-West

+ Nation and Ath 42:942 Mr 24 '28 520w

"If ever you have gone sight-seeing with someone who understands the past, the ideas and forces which created the building or the scene before you, you will understand the attractive quality of this book."

+ New Statesman 30:563 F 11 '28 1400w

"A cool certainty of statement, a keen zest for history and the joy of travel: when Mr. Belloc talks like this we wonder why he was ever allowed to write anything but travel books—until we remember that we have felt the same about his history, his satire, his verse."

+ Sat R 145:195 F 18 '28 540w

"This is a travel book in a thousand. If the reader is inclined at all to history, to romance, to good writing, or to attractive illustrations, let him buy or borrow Many Cities. Mr. Warre's sketches blend with the style and adorn many a memorable phrase; further, they are very delightful in themselves."

+ Spec 140:235 F 18 '28 750w

"The tone of his musings is here gentler than usual, he attacks old foes without his accustomed zest, but his writing is none the less vigorous and stimulating. Indeed, his treatment of thorny subjects such as the relations of France and Germany in the Rhineland gain very much from his moderation, and are marked by sound philosophy as well as historical knowledge. His prose, it need hardly be added, has the combined directness and dignity which we look for in his work."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p89 F 9 '28 810w

BEMIS, SAMUEL FLAGG, ed. American secretaries of state and their diplomacy. 10v v 6-10 il ea $4 Knopf

327.73 Cabinet officers—United States. United States—Foreign relations. Statesmen, American (27-8473)

Contents: v 6, John Middleton Clayton, by M. W. Williams; Daniel Webster (second part), by C. A. Duniway; Edward Everett, by Foster Stearns; William Learned Marcy, by H. B. Learned; Lewis Cass, by L: Einstein; Jeremiah Sullivan Black, by R. F. Nichols; v 7, William H Seward, by H. W. Temple; Elihu B. Washburne, by J. V. Fuller; Hamilton Fish, by J. V. Fuller; William M. Evarts, by C. G. Bowers and H. D. Reid; James G. Blaine, by J. B. Lockey; v 8, Frederick T. Frelinghuysen, by P. M. Brown; Thomas Francis Bayard, by L. B. Shippee; James Gillespie Blaine, by J. B. Lockey; John Watson Foster, by W: Castle, Jr.; Walter Quintin Gresham, by Montgomery Schuyler; Richard Olney, by Montgomery Schuyler; v 9, John Sherman, by L: M. Sears; William Rufus Day, by L. B. Shippee and R. B. Way; John Hay, by A. L. P. Dennis; Elihu Root, by J. B. Scott; Robert Bacon, by J. B. Scott; Philander C. Knox, by H. F. Wright; v 10, William Jennings Bryan, Anonymous; Robert Lansing, by Julius W. Pratt; Bainbridge Colby, by J: Spargo; Charles Evans Hughes, by C: C. Hyde.

---

"Volume VI fully maintains the high standard set by the earlier volumes of the series. It covers, moreover, a period less completely known than that of the first three, and so conveys fresher material." C. R. Fish

+ Am Hist R 34:361 Ja '29 620w (Review of v 6)

"One feels generally, and probably inevitably, in these later sketches as compared with those of earlier volumes, a sense of formality and unreality. Mr. Brown's F. T. Frelinghuysen, Mr. Shippee's T. F. Bayard, Mr. Castle's J. W. Foster, and Mr. Schuyler's Richard Olney, combine to make a valuable and interesting volume. All are well suited to their purpose and present clearly basic facts; all give the best extant accounts of their respective subjects." C. R. Fish

+ — Am Hist R 34:620 Ap '29 550w (Review of v 7 and 8)

"One problem has been handled better than before: the fixing of responsibility for action among the various persons concerned, secretaries, presidents, and others, officials and outsiders. In another respect there is a woeful deficiency. Background is largely ignored, as the anti-American economic reaction in Europe at the end of the nineteenth century, and the attitude of Latin America throughout the period. One wonders why secretaries make tours, uniformly successful, among our southern neighbors." C. R. Fish

+ — Am Hist R 35:143 O '29 950w (Review of v 9 and 10)

"The series as a whole is excellent. One feels, now and then, the need of such a corrective as Garner's Foreign Policies of the United States. Certainly, to understand the foreign policy of the nation one must study other characters in addition to the titular heads of the departments. The Roosevelt and Wilson administrations are perhaps the best example of this. But the designers of the series set their own task—to bring into strong relief the secretaries of state. This has been done creditably, and the series will be found indispensable to the student of American foreign policy and to the general reader." J. S. Reeves

Am Pol Sci R 23:747 Ag '29 1250w (Review of v 4-10)

Booklist 25:9 O '28 (Review of v 6)

Booklist 25:105 D '28 (Review of v 7 and 8)

Booklist 25:232 Mr '29 (Review of v 9)

Booklist 25:307 My '29 (Review of v 10)

Reviewed by Donald Williams

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ja 13 '29 1200w (Review of v 6-8)

"Mr. Bemis's series as a whole merits hearty commendation. No two critics would be likely to agree about the allotment of space in so extended an undertaking, but there is little overlapping, the distinction between biography and history is well observed, old material has been thoroughly worked and a good deal of new material utilized, personal or partisan bias is rarely in evidence, and the literary quality is exceptionally high." W: Macdonald

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ag 4 '29 650w (Review of v 10)

Boston Transcript p8 S 15 '28 260w (Review of v 6)

Boston Transcript p4 F 23 '29 450w (Review of v 9)

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 24 '29 780w (Review of v 10)

"All of the sketches in these volumes—most are by competent historians—are adequate. Some are more than adequate. Their too favorable verdicts will not be repeated by later non-biographical historians. Limitations of space have persuaded many of the authors to understress the personalities of the Secretaries, their training for the office that they held, their knowledge of and views on international politics, and to consider almost exclusively the problems with which the government dealt while they headed the Department of State." Lindsay Rogers
— + Nation 128:561 My 8 '29 1600w (Review of v 1-9)

"The present series, although it does not approach perfection, represents a worthy contribution to American historical literature. Although literary style varies with the several contributors, it is almost uniformly interesting and readable; and for the student there are indispensable appendices in the form of bibliographical and explanatory notes, as well as an index, to each volume." E: M. Earle
+ New Repub 59:41 My 22 '29 1880w (Review of v 1-10)

"The sixth volume of this series is among the most brilliant yet offered, chiefly because it is concerned with the second incumbency of Daniel Webster as Secretary of State and with the activities of Edward Everett and Lewis Cass in the same post. All of the volumes have been characterized by a rare combination of sound scholarship and a gifted capacity to humanize the intricate details of statecraft." R. M. Field
+ N Y Evening Post p8m O 27 '28 950w (Review of v 6)

"The last volume in the series, dealing as it does with men whose character and achievement are familiar to the reading public, is perhaps the most appealing. . . The whole series is admirably designed for the use of the ordinary citizen whose interest has been aroused in foreign affairs. While various authors have contributed to the whole, Mr. Bemis, as editor, has evolved unity and an unmistakable integrity in the general point of view." R. M. Field
+ N Y Evening Post p7m Jl 13 '29 1050w (Review of v 10)

"The authors of the last volume in the series have made a worthy effort to exhaust available sources of new material, including archives of the department published as late as last year. Dr. Bemis deserves credit for preserving unusual consistency in a work which is the product of so many authors and for his selection of these authors." A. S. Will
+ N Y Times p6 Je 23 '29 1150w (Review of v 10)

"The very considerable task which the writers of this series have set for themselves has been, on the whole, commendably done. Most of the authors appear to have made a fresh examination of the authorities, and the files of the Department of State, together with the manuscript collections of the Library of Congress, have made it possible to include in some of the biographies substantial additions to former knowledge. . . It is to be regretted that Professor Bemis's series, packed as it is with the fruits of sound scholarship, should not have brought out more clearly the political influences that have made the office of Secretary of State what it is. . . No one, surely, can read these ten volumes without learning a great deal about American international relations, but there is a history of the office still to be written." W: MacDonald
+ Sat R of Lit 6:204 O 5 '29 1400w

"While there are faults of execution as well as of planning in these volumes they are, like their predecessors, indispensable to all students of American foreign policy."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p71 Ja 31 '29 820w (Review of v 7 and 8)

"It is evident that this series will remain for long the most elaborate and successful attempt to provide the average educated American with a survey of his country's foreign policy, which combines the too often disjointed qualities of scholarship and readableness. In a series like this the last volumes, written of a period where so much is still unknown or only partially known, are bound to lack the authority of the first; but the 'Secretaries of State' has been a notable enterprise on which Professor Bemis and his associate editors are to be congratulated."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p582 Jl 25 '29 1000w (Review of v 9 and 10)

World Tomorrow 12:183 Ap '29 150w (Review of v 1-8)

BENDA, JULIEN. Belphégor; tr. by Sarah J. I. Lawson; with an introd. by Irving Babbitt. 165p $2 Payson & Clarke [7s 6d Faber]

194 France—Intellectual life. Philosophy, French. French literature—History and criticism 29-9634

"Benda, introduced to American readers by 'The Treason of the Intellectuals,' published last fall, is a stalwart opponent of certain modern tendencies, especially such as are evidenced in the arts and in the public's attitude toward them. He is the foe of Rousseauism and, more immediately, of Bergsonism. The conclusion reached in 'Belphégor,' addressed to French readers, before the War, is applicable enough, here and now. It is an attack upon the prevalent 'thirst for immediacy' and for 'emotion through art.' "—Outlook

---

For biographical sketch of the author see Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 D 29 '29

---

"The chief defect of this book, and of 'The Treason of the Intellectuals' as well, is the manner in which the author labors his arguments. He has, after all, no very penetrating explanation of the origin of Belphegorism, and he is too gloomy to bother much about remedies. His method is merely to state the assumptions and conclusions of contemporary romanticists in such a way as to reveal their absurdities. The method is a useful one, but unfortunately it leads M. Benda to repeat and elaborate and explain at unconscionable length." Granville Hicks
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 My 5 '29 620w

Boston Transcript p2 My 8 '29 400w

"A wide reading of 'Belphegor' should contribute to the reestablishment of the intellect in the place of primacy." C. H. Grattan
+ Nation 129:95 Jl 24 '29 920w

"His is a fearless, honest, and serious book, yet written with a gaiety which leavens the whole, and makes it pleasant reading. The quotations and examples by which he proves his argument up to the hilt, are extraordinarily amusing as well as enlightening; and he spars up and down, dropping here and there shrewd and entertaining comments: he is never for a moment dull and nearly always convincingly sound." Bonamy Dobrée
+ Nation and Ath 46:176 N 2 '29 750w

New Statesman 34:196 N 16 '29 780w

"Even Benda, profound, scholarly, and writing in the clearest and most mathematical of tongues, trips and tumbles over his own ideas. He crowds his pages with innumerable parentheses and footnotes and devotes a considerable part of the small volume to notes. The shadow of the malignant god Belphegor has fallen upon him as well." Paul Eldridge

N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 6 '29 560w

N Y Times p7 Ap 7 '29 600w

BENDA, JULIEN—Continued

"This book would be worth owning if only for the brilliant introduction by Irving Babbitt which discusses Benda's polemic with such penetration as to leave little for a reviewer to say. . . It is possible to disagree with M. Benda. It is even possible to accuse him of an emotional approach, himself. But it is not possible to read his book without interest and profit."

+ Outlook 151:547 Ap 3 '29 460w

"He commands our unqualified admiration for the efficiency with which he disposes of the ghost of Bergsonism, and the succinctness he displays in putting his finger on the possible causes of that philosophy's extensive acceptance."

+ Spec 143:473 O 5 '29 210w

"M. Benda's diagnosis is extremely acute; but his scale of values is too simple, and his main assumption, that since it is intellect that distinguishes man from the brutes the intellectual pleasures are 'higher' than the emotional, is, after all, arbitrary; and, like many zealots, he regards dissent as evidence of degeneracy, thus by a closed circle making all discussion impossible."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p912 N 14 '29 1000w

BENDA, JULIEN. Treason of the intellectuals (La trahison des clercs) (Eng title Great betrayal); tr. by Richard Aldington. 244p $2.50 Morrow [7s 6d Routledge]

320.1 Intellectuals. Nationalism and nationality. Philosophy, Modern 28-23313

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"As disinterested inquiry it is negligible. As propaganda for intellectual discipline and the disinterested love of truth, it is rather a horrible example. There is no peace in it; it makes a case rather that states a problem. . . If this book had been written by an American, publishers would have ignored it. They would have been wise." Irwin Edman

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ja 13 '29 600w

"The book is clever and original, and its thesis, if true, is important." Leonard Woolf

Nation and Ath 44:468 D 29 '28 1050w

"The book is so lively, so provoking in its great central thesis, that it is a pity that its method is virtually indefensible from any intelligent standpoint. . . The points raised by M. Benda are so interesting, however, that his myopic, almost blind, method may be minimized."

+ — N Y Times p15 Ja 6 '29 1200w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd

Outlook 151:191 Ja 30 '29 880w

"The book is written with vigor and occasional outburst of almost religious fervor. Mr Benda's diatribe has its element of truth, but is somewhat overwrought."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 S 5 '29 130w

BENES, EDVARD. My war memoirs; tr. from the Czech by Paul Selver. 512p $7.50 Houghton [21s Allen, G.]

943.7 Czechoslovak Republic. European war, 1914-1918—Czechoslovak Republic [29-5722]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Reviewed by H. H. Fisher

Am Hist R 34:833 Jl '29 900w

"This volume, like Masaryk's larger World Revolution, belongs not only with the prime sources for the history of Czechoslovak resurrection, but also with the best and most interesting war literature in the broader sense. . . The book reflects the author's attractive personality, and is written with unusual grasp and understanding. A man like Beneš, writing on an epic subject, could hardly fail to produce a narrative of importance, interest, and fascination."

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:227 F '29 200w

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 23 '29 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p139 N '29

Reviewed by W. C. Langsam

Hist Outlook 20:192 Ap '29 800w

"He has told his story with proper impersonality and with great dignity of style." R. L. Buell

+ Nation 129:280 S 11 '29 600w

"The 'memoirs' are as free of sentiment as 'The Prince,' but this Machiavelli tells of actual successes in a justifiable cause, and his textbook in political realism, without hypocrisy or illusion, is a revelation of the immense abilities of the leaders of the new state." Lyman Bryson

+ New Repub 58:286 Ap 24 '29 440w

"The memoirs of Benes ought to put his well-rounded character in a truer light. These pages, packed tightly with brief, bare statements of the most adventurous matters, ought to dispel any doubts that, though young, he possessed a large endowment of philosophic detachment, together with an ability to think coolly before leaping in the dark." H. F. Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 5:643 F 2 '29 750w

BENET, LAURA. Noah's dove; a book of poems. 50p $5 Doubleday, Doran

811 29-7108

A second slim volume of poems revealing anew the artistry and the delicate fantasy which distinguished Laura Benét's first collection, Fairy bread.

"Miss Benét is an imagist without any of the static languor which marked that school in its prime; she adds to the program a humor, a nervousness and an exotic coloring which make her work now decidedly worth watching."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ap 21 '29 150w

"Exquisite fragments of verse, clear and cold as crystal, form this little collection. The poems are mostly upon things out-of-doors. They are full of sound and of color, but have nothing of introspection or of meditation in them."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 27 '29 100w

"The charm of Miss Benét's poetry is to be found, if anywhere, in her imagery. Whether such an imaginative quality is unnatural and forced, or whether it is uniquely vivid, must be left to the reader to decide." J. D. Tasker

+ Nation 129:254 S 4 '29 60w

"Laura Benet's very slender volume discloses a real perception of poetic values. Properly speaking, the lyrics included here are finger exercises in words and rhythms. She is looking for the exact word, the exact tone to express an exact emotion or describe a specific emotional landscape. Although her range is limited, larger ranges are implied." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 30 '29 100w

"In her poems there is a singleness of mood, a delicacy of apprehension fittingly expressed with the utmost delicacy of image. Her images are sharp, concrete and brilliant. Her poems are smoothed and polished until they become definitive statements, as unalterable as a flawless diamond." Granville Hicks

+ N Y World p11m Ap 7 '29 180w

"Miss Benét achieves good lines, fanciful rather than imaginative images, but lacks, at times, good taste in details." E. L. Walton

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:884 Ap 13 '29 30w

BENJAMIN, LEWIS S. (LEWIS MELVILLE, pseud.). Not all the truth. 286p il $5 Doubleday, Doran

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 29-17953

Reminiscences, by an English actor, clubman and raconteur, of Max Beerbohm, Clark Russell, Israel Zangwill, Augustine Birrell, Edmund Gosse and many other literary personages.

"As actor, journalist, and clubman, Mr. Melville seems to have been steeped in fragments of after-dinner speeches and saturated in anecdote. At the least provocation they ooze from him just as they must have oozed originally out of greenrooms and banquet halls. Some are fairly untouched by time, but a good percentage have been frayed by years of handling, both in London and New York. The promise of 'candid and witty reminiscences' with 'intimate pictures' of Max Beerbohm, Israel Zangwill and Edmund Gosse (writ on the jacket) is somewhat snowed under. Instead, there are numerous recollections of life in Soho before the war, and some frank disclosures of the unroseate side of the actor's life in days gone by."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 N 24 '29 130w

"Mr. Melville is a very charming and candid raconteur, his friendships have been extensive and varied, and in his leisurely, reminiscent vein he succeeds admirably in painting 'the trappings rather than the soul' of London's theatrical, literary and club life before the war." E. S.

+ N Y Evening Post p7m Ag 17 '29 250w

"A witty, rambling history of friendships, covering his life-time. . . The author takes himself pretty seriously, and that does not detract from the diverting quality of his book."

+ Outlook 152:672 Ag 21 '29 80w

BENJAMIN, LEWIS S. (LEWIS MELVILLE, pseud.). Stage favourites of the eighteenth century. 288p il $6 Doubleday, Doran

927.9 Actors and actresses 29-17954

The stage-careers of eight famous eighteenth century actresses; Anne Oldfield, Lavinia Fenton, Catherine Clive, Hannah Pritchard, Charlotte Clarke, Peg Woffington, Susannah Cibber, and George Anne Bellamy.

Booklist 26:66 N '29

"For the most part there is little in this book which has not long been available and familiar elsewhere, and much of the material was more entertainingly set forth recently by Otis Skinner. There are fewer than three hundred pages, and the illustrations are merely common halftone reproductions of old engravings, except for a colored frontispiece. The book is not too well printed, either. Yet it sells for a high price, which may help to explain why many people nowadays are annoyed by the cost of books and refrain from buying them." W. P. Eaton

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 S 15 '29 280w

"Mr. Melville has taken to the paste and scissors form of composition. A good part of his chapter celebrating the fortune of Oldfield as an actress is made up of long quotations from Colley Cibber, Steele, Horace Walpole, Fielding, Swift, Curll, Pope, Savage, Genest and Davies. As a symposium of what these various men thought of Nance, it is not without interest. But as an estimate of this histrionic actress by Mr. Melville, it is a very pale performance. . . Withal, 'Stage Favorites' is a witty and gay book of the stage because some of the ranking wits and writers of that period are generously represented."

+ — N Y Times p15 O 6 '29 500w

Sat R of Lit 6:458 N 23 '29 120w

BENKARD, ERNST. Undying faces; a collection of death masks; note by Georg Kolbe; tr. by Margaret M. Green. 112pl;118p il $12 Norton [30s Hogarth]

730 Masks (sculpture)

"This volume, which principally consists of over a hundred plates of death masks, is of immense interest. Surprisingly, we learn that it is the first work of its kind. The masks chosen for illustration date from the fifteenth to the twentieth century and they are widely representative. Among them are the masks of Bernard no de Siena. Saint Antonino, Oliver Cromwell, Peter the Great, Swift, Lessing, Napoleon, Beethoven, Hegel, Dostoevsky, Wagner, Nietzsche, Tolstoy, and Lenin. Far the greatest number are of the nineteenth century. . . A useful historical sketch is prefixed."—Sat R

"It is a book to linger over and enjoy, to turn over during the long summer evenings, or the equally long fireside evenings of winter; a good book to keep a man away from his work." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Nation and Ath 45:512 Jl 13 '29 1000w

"The curious thing about this book, indeed, is the strange thrill of reality which it gives, a feeling of centuries overleapt and of being brought literally face to face, in a manner beyond even the power of history, with the figures of the past. It might easily form the text for innumerable sermons on mortality, and yet, for all its contents, it is a very living document."

+ New Statesman 36:756 S 28 '29 550w

"This book is, so far as we know, the first of its kind, and of unique value."

+ N Y Times p10 O 27 '29 1600w

Sat R 148:77 Jl 20 '29 300w

"This is one of the most curious and interesting books we have seen for some time."

+ Spec 143:161 Ag 3 '29 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p553 Jl 11 '29 1200w

BENN, SIR ERNEST JOHN PICKSTONE, bart. Return to laisser faire; the foundation of prosperity. 221p $2 Appleton

330.1 Individualism. Laissez-faire. Socialism in Great Britain. Great Britain—Economic policy [29-7714]

This Englishman discredits socialism and all its works. He presents individualism as a system of life and philosophy of government, the only basis upon which the ideal state can be erected and the only foundation for a system of economics with a prospect of wealth for all.

Am Pol Sci R 23:521 My '29 60w

Boston Transcript p2 My 25 '29 350w

"We have only one criticism to make of Sir Ernest Benn's book—that it has not been published, as it should have been, with illustrations by Mr. Gluyas Williams."

+ Nation and Ath 44:332 D 1 '28 750w

New Statesman 32:366 D 22 '28 180w

Reviewed by S. B. Clough

Pol Sci Q 44:634 D '29 350w

"Sir Ernest Benn has written an interesting volume, full of pregnant parables and illustrations which make his discussion of unemployment and housing and combines very entertaining."

+ — Sat R 146:854 D 22 '28 550w

"One turns to this book with some eagerness, hoping to have discovered at last a satisfactory rejoinder to the arguments of our prolific socialist writers. In this hope, he is soon disappointed; but as he reads on he finds compensation in the entertaining style, the caustic wit, the arresting illustration with which the author develops his thesis. . . One need not share in the author's convictions to find merit in his argument. The book by no means disposes of the socialist's case. But it serves the purpose of compelling the reader to re-examine the fundamentals of the reform programs, and incidentally contributes a fresh and buoyant tone to an over-serious subject."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:1008 My 11 '29 200w

Spec 141:550 O 20 '28 800w

BENNETT, ARNOLD. Accident. 315p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Cassell]

29-1802

Alan Frith-Walter is traveling on the express to Rome. He is uncomfortably aware of his daughter-in-law's presence somewhere on the train, and dreads meeting her and hearing directly of the rumored quarrel with his son. Alan's uneasiness increases when his son boards the train. It mounts to temporary panic when an accident occurs to the train itself. The story is chiefly concerned with the mental reactions of Alan and the young couple to their problem.

BENNETT, ARNOLD—Continued

Booklist 25:247 Mr '29

"Even a rather unimportant book like 'Accident' shows Arnold Bennett in his continuous task of revealing the commonplace as the frame and setting of the unusual. Almost all of 'Accident' takes place in a railroad trip and it's the most exciting railroad trip in literature. The narrow house of the compartment holds the skies and the sea and the pathos of all human life." Donald Douglas

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ja 13 '29 650w

"If the reader feels that there has been much ado about little, that is Mr. Bennett's method of doing things. His is the gift of gracious words, and if there is sorrow for the years that are gone, there should also be gladness that, whatever Arnold Bennett has lost in the creeping years, it is certainly not his ability to tell his tale with a gentle irony and an unabated zest." H. F. McDade

\+ — Boston Transcript p3 Ja 19 '29 1550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p46 Mr '29

"The guiding imagination of Mr. Bennett fumbles. But the shell of the novel is cleverly fashioned. The conjuror rubs his hands together—'Just a little railway journey, just a day and a night in the train!'—draws his hands apart, and out flutter individuals, families, quarrels, nerves and superstitions, passions and reconciliations." L. L. Irvine

Nation and Ath 44:551 Ja 19 '29 280w

"The mind of Alan Frith-Walter is not the vehicle which can bring home to the reader so truthful and painstaking a study of the beauty of personal relations. Again, the author has missed the real beauty, the lyric wail of modern travel; only once, in the description of a night halt in a wet station, does he really catch it. Yet all the way through one is struck by sentences of admirable crispness, by an accuracy of observation, and an economy of style that are unrivalled; the book is strewn with phrases that are intimations of the author's immortality, but intimations and nothing more." Cyril Connolly

— + New Statesman 32:470 Ja 19 '29 1700w

"Certainly 'Accident,' Mr. Bennett's latest narrative, is not to be entered on the scroll of his great victories. But it is far from a defeat. A general may lose his power to force a siege and sack the town and yet remain a master of strategy. And that is what Bennett has retained—his ability as a strategist. One may close the book, and wonder whether the spoils were sufficient recompense, and still be forced to admit that a master of story-telling conceived and executed the advance."

\+ — N Y Times p9 Ja 13 '29 1100w

" 'Accident,' which should be read not by a reviewer but by a man with freedom of choice and leisure to enjoy its urbanity, its humor and its quiet understanding, gives also intimations of immortality. It intimates, quite briskly, that the Arnold Bennet of 'Buried Alive' has not been dead these years but only sleeping."

\+ Outlook 151:109 Ja 16 '29 250w

Pratt p39 summer '29

"Not to be ranked with 'The Old Wives' Tale,' the Clayhanger trilogy, or 'Riceyman Steps,' nor even with 'Mr. Prohack,' 'Accident' is nevertheless an entertaining trifle, wise, amusing, and unusually well-written for so slight a venture." Grace Frank

\+ — Sat R of Lit 5:681 F 16 '29 550w

" 'Accident' is simply one of Mr. Bennett's entertaining gestures. The slight story is supported by many light bright dialogues, and scenes of much vivacity. But the author's tumultuous vocabulary becomes alarmingly limited, and his mannerisms take on a mechanic ring." R. A. Taylor

\+ — Spec 142:57 Ja 12 '29 600w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 24 '29 550w

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p26 Ja 10 '29 700w

BENNETT, JESSIE MERLE. Roadside development. (Land economics ser.) 265p il $5 (21s) Macmillan

710 Roads. Trees. Landscape gardening 29-17014

A manual on the design, construction and maintenance of roadsides. The author is superintendent of parks and forestry for Wayne county, Michigan. Illustrated with photographs and diagrams.

Booklist 26:57 N '29

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 80:20 S '29 160w

St Louis 27:307 N '29

"While Mr Bennett's book is suggestive, rather than exhaustive, it offers precisely the practical suggestions, and examples of work done, needed to stimulate public attention."

\+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 16 '29 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p850 O 24 '29 50w

BENSON, ALLAN LOUIS. Daniel Webster. 402p il $5 Cosmopolitan bk.

B or 92 Webster, Daniel 29-19706

The life and political career of Daniel Webster as here told falls into the class of dramatic biographies. The author does not psychoanalyze or novelize his subject, but without loss of historic accuracy heightens as far as possible its human and dramatic values.

"Throughout the book the stress is upon the private affairs and the personality of this great American, in his relationships with others, at the expense of those public events which afforded him the opportunity to achieve greatness. In consequence, the reader is often faced with assertions by the author rather than with evidence. The impression steadily grows as one proceeds with the narrative that it is more of special pleading, at which Webster himself was so expert, than of objective portrayal. . . This biographer of Daniel Webster has not given adequate study to the history of his time." A. B. Darling

— + Am Hist R 35:421 Ja '30 450w

"The narrative is colloquial, anecdotal to an almost excessive degree and innocent of historical interpretation. Mr. Benson's biography affords the reader a faithful and at times charming portrait of America's foremost orator and the Squire of Marshfield. But almost a century after his death Daniel Webster still awaits a biographer who will interpret him—his splendid virtues and his ignoble failings, his magnificence and his heart-breaking shortcomings—upon the background of his era." H: S. Commager

\+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 N 3 '29 900w

Reviewed by Edmund Noble

Boston Transcript p3 O 11 '29 1600w

"Mr. Benson's book is a frank piece of hero-worship, though tempered by a palliated acknowledgment of some minor shortcomings in his hero. The results of Mr. Benson's enthusiasm are apparent in the very engaging qualities of the biography. The more critical student of American history, however, while appreciating the charm of Mr. Benson's book, will not be able to accept it without grave objections. He will find that the author at times attributes to Webster an influence upon the course of our politics which is hardly justified by the documentary evidence; that he sometimes puts an interpretation upon Webster's public utterances which is not consistent either with the actual facts or with Webster's own words; that he attributes to Webster's undeviating devotion to principles behavior which is clearly the counsel of expediency; that he draws inferences as to the results of some of the most important of Webster's actions from a presentation of the case which either ignores or touches only lightly upon the most pertinent factors." D: S. Muzzey

— + Current Hist 31:637 Ja '30 1300w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 61:47 D 4 '29 1000w

Reviewed by J: N: Beffel
N Y Evening Post p10m D 28 '29 430w

Reviewed by C: W. Thompson
N Y Times p1 O 20 '29 2000w

"As a tale of the man's life it is excellent; as an interpretation of his character it is merely fair; as an interpretation of the times it is poor. But its main judgments are unexceptionable." Allan Nevins
+ — N Y World p10m D 22 '29 1200w

"Benson, if not a profound biographer, is at any rate a sympathetic one and in several instances is more reasonable than some of his predecessors." W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:22 N '29 200w

"Mr Benson's book, though not lacking flaws, is a spirited and responsible portrayal of Webster's life, not an historical interpretation or a psychological one. In arrangement and style it drives for popular appeal. The author means to be fair to Webster and tolerant of his faults, but his chief aim is to produce a colorful narrative. The book does not need to be judged by severe standards, but it should be said that Mr Benson is a writer capable of making better use of his material than many who employ the same method. . . As an examination of Webster's statesmanship and eminence at the bar, this book of Mr Benson's is far from notable."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e O 6 '29 1200w

BENSON, EDWARD FREDERIC. Life of Alcibiades, the idol of Athens. 324p $5 Appleton [12s 6d Benn]

B or 92 Alcibiades [29-781]

This biography of Alcibiades, idolized by the Athenians for his beauty and the brilliance of his gifts, is written "in the hopes of realizing for modern readers some semblance of his charm, no less than of attempting to do justice to one of the most gifted and unprincipled men who ever lived."

---

Booklist 25:391 Jl '29

"The prose is light and rapid; and there are pleasant idiomatic surprises to give it the flavor of contemporaneity, without turning it into journalese." E: Dahlberg
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Je 2 '29 550w

"It is one of the most readable biographies of the year, marked as it is by a rare combination of literary charm and historical insight."
+ Boston Transcript p3 My 4 '29 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p93 Je '29

"A serious life of that insolent Athenian. Written with considerable skill, and well worth reading."
+ Nation and Ath 44:450 D 22 '28 40w

"It is a good, if an unedifying, story, and it is told with zest by Mr. Benson. He follows the classical authorities—mainly Thucydides and Plutarch—very conscientiously, and when he artfully fills in details on which they are silent he seldom offends our sense of probabilities. He does not ask us to admire Alcibiades, but only to recognise the good as well as the bad in him—which some modern historians have been loath to do."
+ New Statesman 32:supviii N 3 '28 930w

"This is a book to be welcomed and read with gusto." L: Sherwin
+ N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 13 '29 900w

Reviewed by Elmer Davis
N Y Times p11 My 12 '29 1500w

"Mr. Benson's interpretation is interesting and somewhat novel."
+ Outlook 151:549 Ap 3 '29 70w

Pratt p35 summer '29

"Will not someone give us a plain and unpedantic story of his career? Mr. Benson writes so brightly and agreeably that he might have done without his touches of slang and sentiment."
+ — Sat R 146:580 N 3 '28 600w

"Either the fact or the fiction might dominate: Mr. Benson has tried to hold the balance even, and the result is neither a good novel nor a good biography. It is not a good novel because the fiction is too scanty and generally too slight to add very much to what is contained in the historical sources or to create a character which is a true work of art. Moreover, the style is repetitious and hyperbolic and sometimes cheap." A. R. Bellinger
— Sat R of Lit 5:1189 Jl 20 '29 1250w

"It is a splendid significant story, and Mr. Benson tells it well. Moreover, he has interspersed it with a readable account of that most complicated era, the Peloponnesian War. He has taken the Greek point of view, drowning his disapproval of Alcibiades' faults in his admiration for his brilliancy and charm. He is wise, for Alcibiades' power lay primarily in that charm, which never left him, from the gaiety of his youth to the stark tragedy of his end. There Mr. Benson is at his best."
+ Spec 141:548 O 20 '28 830w

"Mr. Benson seems to be at the same time anxious to be in the movement of cynical biography and, quite inconsistently, concerned to remedy the 'scant justice' which he says has been done to Alcibiades by previous writers. . . A comparison of passages is enough to show that Mr. Benson is emancipated from any fetters of consistency: and his use of the original authorities is equally free and easy. . . Mr. Benson fills in the outlines of Alcibiades's career with the lively and amusing style his readers know well."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p933 N 29 '28 880w

BENSON, EDWARD FREDERIC. Paying guests. 329p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hutchinson]

29-14379

"The author of Dodo is here seen in an unfamiliar role, as the quiet observer of a group of middle-class people living in a private hotel at an English Spa."—New Statesman

---

Booklist 26:69 N '29

Bookm 70:xxx O '29 110w

"To say that Mr. Benson in it does for English life and human nature what Booth Tarkington does for like phases of the American brand of masculine and feminine eccentricities would be to do it only partial justice. As expositors of its humorous aspects both these story-tellers are unsurpassed. And in 'Paying Guests' Mr. Benson seems to have surpassed himself." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 6 '29 1300w

"Mr. Benson's humor is always good natured, even when he is making sport of the peculiarities of the devotees of mental healing, and it must be a sensitive spirit indeed that would resent a satire that is so light and sparkling. Anyone who enjoys Booth Tarkington's portraits of American character will be certain to take no less pleasure in Mr. Benson's portraits of English character. Each has its own elements of distinctive national traits, but each in its way is humanly universal." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p5 Jl 20 '29 270w

"There is little of Mr. Benson, the castigator of the smart, to be discovered in these pages, which are devoted to a kindly humour and gentle ridicule of the more harmless snobberies indulged in by men and women leading trivial and hampered lives. It is quite an agreeable book and one that is easily read."
+ New Statesman 33:26 Ap 13 '29 100w

"We turn from 'Dodo,' Benson's pale performance, with a weariness that amounts almost to pain. . . Mr. Benson retrieves the small doings of these uninteresting people with the amiably excited air of a puppy rushing back with the stick that his master has thrown. There is only friendliness in his manner. Though his people are stupid, with small incomes, and imaginations centered about their own limited egos, he does not blame them for that. The acid of satire has turned weak in him, and he is too indolent for any wild extravagances. 'Paying Guests' is lazy, low tide." Florence Haxton

BENSON, E: F:—Continued

— N Y Evening Post p7m Ag 10 '29 400w

" 'Paying Guests' is comedy of the sort one sees too seldom. It is the product of a fertile but unrestrained invention and a sense of quiet drollery. It is inherent in the characters themselves, rather than in artificial situations."

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 7 '29 530w

"Mr. Benson's wit is spiced with cruelty; but his invention is so fertile and resourceful that one is always more aware of the wit than of the sting." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 147:484 Ap 6 '29 130w

"There is no plot in the novel, no implied comment upon life. But there is great good fun, and, what is more, intelligent fun. High brows need not sniff at 'Paying Guests'; low brows will not find much of the comedy over their heads. . . . Mr. Benson has produced a widely acceptable light novel of boarding-house foibles in a British health resort."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:262 O 12 '29 300w

"Mr. Benson is at his very best in Paying Guests and we are grateful for his malice." B. E. Todd

+ Spec 142:433 Mr 16 '29 130w

"This author has found better material before than he finds here in the inhabitants of 'Wentworth.' . . . The stage at times becomes a rather empty exploitation of obvious humors."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p204 Mr 14 '29 350w

BENSON, STELLA (MRS J. C. O. ANDERSON). Worlds within worlds. 308p il $3 Harper [8s 6d Macmillan]

910 Voyages and travels. East (Far East)—Description and travel. United States—Description and travel 29-3743

There is a good deal of autobiography in these travel sketches and stories of experiences in China, Japan, and the United States, written with the charm and spirit of Mrs Benson's earlier books and illustrated with suggestive drawings from her own pen. Almost all of the articles which make up the book have appeared elsewhere, chiefly in English periodicals.

---

Booklist 25:280 Ap '29

"The author is often charming, sometimes gently ironic, sometimes provocative, and much more consistently diverting than any reader has a right to expect of an author of 308 pages of the whimsical." Blair Niles

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 F 10 '29 580w

Boston Transcript p7 F 23 '29 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p67 My '29

"The dancing, jerking, lumbering life which Miss Benson sees so freshly, she describes with humor, which if sometimes a little facile is at least unforced. At times she shows that rare quality, wit, chiefly in the quickness and neatness of her phrases. She knows when to stop and when to stop short, and belongs to the modern group of women writers, of whom Katherine Mansfield is the greatest and whose literary creed is Induction."

+ Nation and Ath 44:420 D 15 '28 420w

"Stella Benson is that most perfect of travel-authors—a thoroughly subjective observer; she is never lost in her surroundings either of scenery or of people, and never blind to them, thus enhancing tremendously the enjoyment of her readers. This new volume is not quite so rich or so full as was The Little World; but it contains some sketches equal to the best in that volume, and is as instinct with the author's spirit of adventure."

+ New Statesman 32:364 D 1 '28 650w

"Her studies offer shrewd glimpses of exotic human life and thought under a surface of lighter descriptive comment." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p9m F 9 '29 100w

"A book which arouses and stimulates—and, incidentally, vastly amuses. . . 'Worlds Within Worlds' is an excellent job of travel reporting."

+ N Y Times p6 F 3 '29 800w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 227:adv Mr '29 140w

"You will comb its pages in vain for a statistic, for a Significant Fact, for any of those things which traveling journalists usually seek. Here are only vivid, witty sketches of unimportant things and people—carved cherry stones which will, however, give you a clearer picture of the orchard in which they grew than any detailed description, with maps." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 151:232 F 6 '29 100w

St Louis 27:204 Je '29

"Miss Benson, like Katherine Mansfield in her lifetime, stands a little apart. It is as though a shadow, not of a darker but a brighter world, had thrown a golden noose round her. She stands in her ring of light, and what she says suffers transmutation by invisible fire as it crosses to us." Humbert Wolfe

+ Sat R 146:772 D 8 '28 500w

"Stella Benson has a gift that is all her own, for she offers us reality—the unmistakable, hard-boiled thing—but she offers it with a difference. She feels and gets through to us the eeriness that is always implicit for sensitive minds in the commonplace of life." L. W. Dodd

+ Sat R of Lit 5:580 Ap 6 '29 550w

Springf'd Republican p6 F 11 '29 320w

"Compared with her last sketches of travel—amusing as they were—we should say these had perhaps even more fun, if less beauty. . . As we go on from one to another of these sketches—unequal, but irresistible at their best—there are now and then, though too sparsely, those flowerlike and lovely glimpses of things of which Miss Benson has the secret."

Times [London] Lit Sup p956 D 6 '28 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 25:100 Mr '29

BENSON, THEODORA. Salad days. 287p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d Cayme press] 29-26490

The mild and gentle story of a bright English girl. Felicity's first days in boarding school, her letters to her loved sister, and her wistful pangs of unrequited love for a charming young poet friend make up a refreshing tale.

---

Booklist 25:359 Je '29

"This altogether delightful and refreshing book is absurd and quite satisfying. It is so youthfully sophisticated, so youthfully innocent, and Felicity and Viola are as engaging English girls as one can find."

+ Bookm 69:xxii Je '29 120w

Reviewed by Garreta Busey

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 17 '29 280w

"Despite faults a gay, amusing, and rather endearing piece of writing. First love, girls' schools, and debutantes' dances are not very rich material, and the authoress has done the best with them that she could. She shows a sense of style and a sense of humour, and the heroine is pleasantly detached from her sheltered life." Cyril Connolly

— + New Statesman 32:327 D 15 '28 260w

"The story is not always handled smoothly—in fact, sometimes reads like a series of stage directions—but it is more than redeemed by the situations and conversations. From her letters and absurd poems Felicity emerges as a very real and colorful girl." Muriel Asher

+ N Y Evening Post p10m F 16 '29 400w

"The author should be praised for this not too revoltingly clean, or not too odiously charming book. It has sense, humor, understanding and a nice appreciation for the use of good English."

+ N Y World p11m Mr 10 '29 200w

"In these days when books that are not bad are still so very likely to be boring, 'Salad Days' should slip into a pleasant little niche."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:814 Mr 23 '29 300w

"The novel is marred by superficial cleverness, especially in the conversation, and many passages are sentimental rather than emotional. However, the writing is very good, being clear, restrained, and graceful: and Miss Benson has a nice touch for the lighter portions."
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:935 Ap 20 '29 300w

"This is an uncommonly natural story, quite free from sentimentality, yet illuminated by the touch of poetry appropriate to its theme."
+ Spec 141:558 O 20 '28 70w

"A book in which wit and good sense are only very occasionally spoiled by laboured facetiousness."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p784 O 25 '28 230w

Wis Lib Bul 25:101 Mr '29

BENSON, THERESE, pseud. Unknown daughter. 323p $2 Dodd

29-926

Following his divorce from his expensive young wife, Goodhue retreats to northern Africa with his little daughter. Years later the girl visits her mother in New York. She creates a sensation in Park Avenue circles with her naive tales of life in Africa and her now Mohammedan father and his harem. The slight story ends with a family reunion in Marakesh.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 24 '29 250w

"This book is irritating, because the large, flabby plot gets so hopelessly mixed up."
— N Y Times p22 Ja 20 '29 480w

"The publishers assure us at the outset that 'The Unknown Daughter' is the work of a well-known author hiding her real identity under a pen name. Perhaps it is just as well that she conceals her identity, for this is not the novel to bring further fame to a writer with an established reputation. While the plot and the writing both show signs of technical adroitness such as comes only from considerable experience in writing, the novel itself belongs unmistakably to the movie genre. The action of the story is confusingly intricate."
— Sat R of Lit 5:737 Mr 2 '29 100w

BENT, NEWELL. American polo. 407p il $6 ² (25s) Macmillan

796.353 Polo 29-16932

After an introductory chapter on the origin and early history of polo in Persia, the book gives the history of American polo from its beginnings, and polo as played today in both North and South America. There is a chapter on the breeding of polo ponies. Mr Devereux Milburn's famous article, The science of hitting in polo, is included in the chapter on Hints for the beginner.

---

Booklist 26:108 D '29

"Thorough and comprehensive history of the game in America."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 N 10 '29 150w

"A well-known player of polo and an authority on the game, Newell Bent, has written a book about its theory and practice that polo enthusiasts of both the active and the passive varieties will find very interesting."
+ N Y Times p34 N 17 '29 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p1039 D 5 '29 180w

BENTHAM, JOSEPHINE. Outsiders. 296p $2.50 Henkle

29-11750

"Paul, who is a dull, prudish scion of weath, addicted to the voicing of pious platitudes, falls in love with and marries mad-cap, gin-drinking Leslie, daughter of a cheap actor. Their inevitably untenable life together provides Miss Bentham with the opportunity for a shrewd study in conflicting temperaments."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"This is Miss Bentham's second novel. It is remarkably able. The story is vividly interesting . . . The minor characters, too, are clear and alive. Miss Bentham's style is racy, easy and interesting. The only trouble with the novel is that it appears indefinably 'studied.'"
+ Bookm 69:xxv Jl '29 150w

"This is an adroit story of an ill-fated matrimonial venture. Miss Bentham reveals a graceful, facile style and a talent for social satire."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 21 '29 130w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '29 330w

"Paul and the other characters are not made sufficiently integral to the theme to afford the necessary contrast; they are too casually introduced and poorly handled. The episodes, also, lack all structural connection and the prologue and scenes in the first chapter are inexcusably awkward and unsatisfactory. In fact were it not for the dialogue the style of the book would be negligible. Fortunately, the conversation is vigorous, personal, and idiomatic."
— + Nation 129:310 S 18 '29 150w

"The book is a cool, detached, very clever study of two totally different people, and their respective friends. . . A tale which, despite the author's evident bias, is a thoughtful and unusually well balanced bit of human comedy."
+ N Y Times p22 Ap 7 '29 480w

"Miss Bentham not only sees farther and more clearly, and with more subtle discrimination, than most writers, but she knows how to write. Her style is so unobtrusively felicitous that you never think of how the story is being told, but are only agreeably and half-consciously aware that it is being told well; its conclusion is compulsory, convincing, and permits a glimpse of the universal through the particular." Elmer Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 5:905 Ap 20 '29 400w

BENTLEY, PHYLLIS ELEANOR. Partnership. 294p $2.50 Little

29-23798

Lydia, coldly intellectual in type, and Annice, the rosy-faced, good-natured servant girl whom she engages as a maid, form a team in character-contrast thruout the story. Annice's love affair with Eric, her marriage and her children, and her renewed affair with a former soldier acquaintance, all rouse the despair and envy of Lydia, whom, apart from a tepid love affair with her cousin Wilfrid, life passes by.

---

Bookm 70:xx N '29 60w

"Miss Bentley's style is clean and fresh, revealing occasionally a humor that yet is congruous with the subtle tragedy of her story. a tragedy indubitable but perhaps so masked that many readers will agree at the end with Lydia, and therefore enjoy 'The Partnership' as a strong drama confirming Louise's comfortable and annoying platitude to the effect that it takes all kinds of people to make a world."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 O 27 '29 330w

N Y Times p7 S 22 '29 700w

"Though her analysis is keen and her characterization life-like, Miss Bentley's fairness might be challenged. Is there no middle ground between a prude and a baggage? Love is not for faint hearts, to be sure, but is impulse in itself divine? The novel is clever and the questions it raises are of moment." F. E. Dunn
+ — Portland Evening News p10 O 15 '29 230w

"A competently written and thoughtful novel."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 6 '29 280w

BENTLEY, PHYLLIS ELEANOR. Spinner of the years. 350p $2.50 Henkle [7s 6d Benn]
29-4995

"Life becomes stale for Imogen Armitage after the suicide of her lover. From sheer weariness and inertia, she marries a rich but uncouth manufacturer—the best matrimonial bargain her small English town affords. One follows, thereafter, the slow disintegration of her character, the wrecking of her marriage, its final dissolution in tragedy."—Bookm

"This first novel suffers from stiffness but it is at times curiously moving."
Bookm 69:xxiv Ap '29 70w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ap 7 '29 300w

"There is much of grim virility and little of beauty in this lengthy first novel. . . All of the characters suffer from some moral or physical weakness that foredooms them to early extinction. It is a truly relentless saga, destroying many long cherished illusions regarding the sanctity of that solid British institution—the family."
— + Boston Transcript p10 My 11 '29 250w

"In spite of its sprawling form, its impossibly dull, aristocratic characters and its turgid, heavy style, Phyllis E. Bentley's 'The Spinner of the Years' deserves mention as the better sort of first novel. Miss Bentley, however, needs a little leavening in her dough. Let her be as earnest about literature as she seems to be about life and her style may become more digestible without losing anything of its substance." Edwin Seaver
+ — N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 2 '29 80w

"A first novel of extraordinary calibre. It contains none of the awkwardnesses, none of the uncertain fumbling for effect which one ordinarily associates with first novels. Technically, there is no fault to be found with it on any other ground than that of personal taste. It is completely what it was meant to be. You may not like the sprawling, confused, amorphous plan of the book, but it is impossible to deny its suitability. It is in itself expressive of the formlessness and confusion of life as Miss Bentley sees it."
+ — N Y Times p8 F 24 '29 640w
N Y World p11m Ap 21 '29 100w

"Its faults are undeniable: it is humorless, at moments it seems naïve and heavy, and it is written in an awkward, stilted style. But all the same it leaves an impression on the mind different from that left by the average 'good' novel." L. P. Hartley
+ — Sat R 145:471 Ap 14 '28 220w

"The story is told with a steady sincerity and a good sense that more than make up for the lack of any sudden brilliance to startle and delight the reader."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p292 Ap 19 '29 300w

BERAUD, HENRI. My friend Robespierre; tr. from the French by Slater Brown. 298p il $3 Macaulay

B or 92 Robespierre, Maximilien Marie Isidore de 28-21496

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Cleveland Open Shelf p42 Je '29

"The best passages of the book are occasional approaches in the modern psychological manner into the privacy of Robespierre's mind. But the penetration never lasts long or goes far. Like so many predecessors in this field, the author prefers to signify his awe for his subject by remaining at a respectful distance. By this attitude Robespierre inevitably takes on the cloudy proportions of an enigma and prompts a treatment implying his more than human stature." Ferdinand Schevill
— New Repub 57:223 Ja 9 '29 260w

"It is a very readable volume; one might wish it had some other qualities, but a judicial detachment is not the quality of a devotee, and we must not reproach the author with the lack of it, for that is no part of his purpose." W. C. Abbott
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:679 F 16 '29 520w

BERCOVICI, KONRAD. Crusades. 315p il $5 [2] Cosmopolitan bk.

940.18 Crusades. Templars 29-22811

A vivid story of the first three Crusades. The first of these, dominated by the personality of Peter the Hermit and adventurers such as Godfrey de Bouillon, Saint Gilles Bohemond and Robert of Normandy, was motivated chiefly by the desire to obtain riches and power. Much the same spirit of aggrandizement characterized succeeding crusades, costing Europe several million lives. An interesting chapter of Mr Bercovici's book deals with the origin and development of the Knights Templars, and a brief concluding chapter is devoted to the Children's crusade.

Boston Transcript p7 N 16 '29 900w
Cleveland Open Shelf p148 D '29

"His purpose has been to write a popular, vigorously and colorfully told history of the Crusades, and so the panorama which he thus moves across Europe and the Holy Land through a dozen or more decades becomes under his hand a vitalized picture. He likes to indulge in purple patches now and then, and he has little sympathetic feeling for the spiritual forces that made these marvelous movements possible. His summing up of the results of the crusades would be considered superficial by many students of the period."
+ — N Y Times p34 N 17 '29 200w

BERCOVICI, KONRAD. Nights abroad. 315p il $4 Century [12s 6d Cayme press]

914 Europe—Description and travel 28-27607

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:616 My '29

Booklist 25:158 Ja '29

"He has uncommon descriptive powers."
+ Bookm 68:xii Ja '29 50w

" 'Nights Abroad' is neither a guidebook nor yet a book on travel. It gives the impression of being well chosen pages from an intimate journal, for it is human and subtle and written with a certain style and an elegance. . . It is kaleidoscopic, entertaining and extremely romantic."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 F 17 '29 220w

Cleveland Open Shelf p44 Mr '29

"Everything that Mr. Bercovici touches he inflames with imagination and intertwines with plot. He makes fiction out of commonplace realities and writes travel sketches like short stories. The book is more than a travel book—it is travel written with imagination." Stoyan Christowe
+ N Y World p11m Ja 20 '29 320w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 34:15 F '29

"It is not a book which reveals much sense of delicacy in its author, as may be seen in his descriptions of his hosts abroad which never reach much beyond the standards of the paragraphist." J. B. S. B.
— Sat R 147:802 Je 15 '29 230w

Spec 142:916 Je 8 '29 60w

"The adventures he recounts are not particularly interesting, but such as will occur to a man of artistic temperament who is driven by the inexhaustible curiosity and restlessness of his kind to turn day into night continually, and to visit all the cabarets and night haunts of whatever town he may happen to visit. But they are told with vigour and vivacity, and they are the adventures of an artist."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p541 Jl 4 '29 320w

Wis Lib Bul 25:28 Ja '29

BERCOVICI, KONRAD. Story of the gypsies. 294p il $4 Cosmopolitan bk.

397 Gipsies 28-22362

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Christian Century 46:298 F 28 '29 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p109 Jl '29

"Mr. Bercovici's book is as immoderate and picturesque as most books on the subject are, and, but for the peculiar advantages of his nationality and early experience, one might distrust much of his knowledge. It is not as an historian, but as one who has had exceptional opportunities for knowing the gipsies in most parts of the world, that Mr. Bercovici is interesting."

+ New Statesman 33:54 Ap 20 '29 630w

St Louis 27:12 Ja '29

"Mr. Bercovici's book is a valuable addition to gypsy lore."

+ Sat R 147:514 Ap 13 '29 180w

"There is no great continuity in the history of the Gypsies, as Mr. Bercovici tells it, but so little is known of them, and they know so little of themselves, that a strictly accurate history would surely be impossible to write. The book is rich in bright sketches which make one share the author's affection for the most colourful and elusive people in the world."

+ Spec 142:546 Ap 6 '29 550w

BERKELEY, ANTHONY, pseud. See Cox, A. B.

BERLIOZ, HECTOR LOUIS. Evenings in the orchestra; tr. from the French by Charles E. Roche; with an introd. by Ernest Newman. (Borzoi musical ser.) 366p $5 (21s) Knopf

780.4 Music—France. Music—Addresses, essays, lectures 29-19529

"Berlioz's most important journalistic volume, 'Soirées de l'Orchestra,' originally published in 1853, is a compilation of articles on a host of widely varied subjects; they are held together by the quasi-dramatic thread that they are supposed to be conversations between the author and the members of an orchestra during the performance of operas that do not matter—the great bulk, it is suggested, of the Parisian repertory."—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Booklist 26:115 D '29

"Perhaps the most remarkable characteristic of the book is its amazing virtuosity, its almost incredible versatility. Apparently with no effort Berlioz turns from romance to serious and worth-while criticism (carried on, it is true, in a light vein). . . 'Evenings in the Orchestra' was never intended as a serious contribution to musical criticism, but it does yield good entertainment on almost every page for every one, whether musical or not." H: W. Simon

+ Nation 129:753 D 18 '29 650w

"There is not a page that does not contain some brilliant witticism or some profound words of criticism or some still amusing story. The fertility of his invention is astonishing. . . One could go on for ever quoting from this extraordinary book, whose variety of sense, humour and fantasy has never been compassed in any other single volume of musical criticism."

+ New Statesman 34:194 N 16 '29 1050w

"Berlioz had indeed a gift for words such as has been possessed by no other musician, and these pages show it in full measure and over and over again."

Times [London] Lit Sup p721 O 10 '29 700w

BERNAYS, EDWARD L. Propaganda. 159p $2.50 Liveright

301 Propaganda. Public opinion 28-28779

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"Light in touch, spirited, with a wealth of specific examples to illustrate his points, but with not a few blithe generalizations that one might well challenge, the author nevertheless presents a book that those concerned with public opinion will read with interest." E. P. H.

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:517 My '29 230w

Booklist 25:192 F '29

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 F 24 '29 420w

Reviewed by Gerald Goode

N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 5 '29 550w

"Mr. Bernays has a mind that is keen and quick in analysis, that delves and probes and classifies, and is equally vigorous and clear-sighted in practical application. He has had both theoretical and practical training in individual and mass psychology, and he has studied his subject on all its sides and endeavored to visualize its possibilities."

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 6 '29 440w

St Louis 27:157 My '29

"Mr. Bernay's story of the way the public's mind is made up for it is a highly entertaining book, and as it is copiously documented with modern instances, most of which the reader will undoubtedly recognize, it is equally an informative one." E. E. Calkins

+ Sat R of Lit 5:682 F 16 '29 600w

Springf'd Republican p10 Je 5 '29 350w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey 61:743 Mr 1 '29 190w

BERNFELD, SIEGFRIED. Psychology of the infant; tr. by Rosetta Hurwitz. (Lib. of educ. psychology) 320p $4 Brentano's [15s K. Paul]

136.7 Child Study. Infants 29-27804

"Dr. Bernfeld studies the psychology of the child from birth to weaning. This period is the most difficult of all for psychological understanding. Normally, no memories of the crises and experiences of the first year survive in the adult, and introspection can contribute little to their interpretation. . . Dr. Bernfeld's volume is a survey and critique of modern literature on his subject. He deals comprehensively with almost every aspect of the period—birth itself, sleep, crying, nursing, the development of the senses and of movement; laughing, weeping and fright; grasping and striking; sitting, crawling, standing and walking; consciousness of the body, of the ego and of objects."—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Bookm 70:x N '29 100w

"This book is almost if not quite unique in the field of child psychology. In dealing with the first year of life, from birth until weaning, it studies a period with respect to which there is a minimum of factual material, and therefore it is essential that the author should indulge in speculation and hypothesis quite freely. . . The book is a highly important effort in the direction of clarifying the processes of the infant psyche."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 N 17 '29 550w

"His treatment of the subject is decidedly Freudian, and may be classified in the meta-psychological group. With an outstanding approach, this book is a new and valuable contribution." E: Liss, M.D.

+ Survey 63:301 D 1 '29 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p627 Ag 8 '29 260w

BERTRAM, ANTHONY. Life of Sir Peter-Paul Rubens. 238p $3 Doubleday, Doran [8s 6d Davies]

B or 92 Rubens, Sir Peter Paul 29-9582

A straightforward narrative of the life of Rubens which emphasizes the man rather than the artist, presenting Rubens as private individual and as diplomat. The author acknowledges the standard life of Rubens by Rooses and the Codex Diplomaticus Rubenianus as his chief sources. His story—the first popular biography of Rubens—contains some of Rubens's hitherto unpublished letters.

---

BERTRAM, ANTHONY—Continued

"It is easy to glorify so great a man; it is easy to deck him out in a worldly cloak of mysticism and much of this has been seen in recent biographies. Simplicity on the other hand, is more difficult to achieve, but this Mr. Bertram has accomplished, and we have, therefore, in his life of Rubens, a picture at once engaging as it portrays a rich and robust life, and deriving from its simple manner a satisfying air of authenticity." R. S.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '29 630w

New Statesman 31:642 S 1 '28 980w

"By his straightforward presentation of the personality of the artist Mr. Bertram makes it possible for the reader better to understand and appreciate his work as a painter. . . Therefore the student of Rubens can feel that this story of his life is authoritative and be grateful for the new, larger and more illuminated background of his character and career."

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 21 '29 500w

"Mr. Bertram has written a delightful book on a delightful subject which has never been approached in quite this way before. Without making lengthy quotations it is difficult to indicate the remarkable ease and lucidity of his style; nor, indeed, is it necessary in the columns of this particular journal. But it may be asserted with some confidence that his book will open the eyes of many people who, while admiring Rubens's art—as who would not?—have never yet appreciated the full range of the master's genius."

+ Sat R 146:154 Ag 4 '28 1100w

"This book can be read and enjoyed by the layman, the historian, and the artist: Mr. Bertram has succeeded in giving a vivid picture of the colossal stage on which Rubens worked, so that we who admire his genius may appreciate his masterpieces with a fuller understanding."

+ Spec 141:272 S 1 '28 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p588 Ag 16 '28 920w

BERTRAND, LOUIS. Louis XIV; tr. by Cleveland B. Chase. 366p il $5 (18s) Longmans

B or 92 Louis XIV, king of France 28-24831

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"It is no hasty piece of journalism like the recent bulky volume by the most prolific of Paris correspondents: Bertrand is a trained scholar, deeply versed in his subject. It is not 'popular' in the cheapest sense: but it is accessible to all, and fascinating. We do not happen to share Bertrand's political views, and we feel at times that the blend of erudition, splashes of picturesqueness and classical dogmatism in his books is unstable and unconvincing. But his work is alive, intelligent, artistic, a challenge and a delight. The general reader will rush through this book with delight. The historian cannot afford to neglect it, although he will never be guided by it." Albert Guerard

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Jl 28 '29 950w

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 25 '29 180w

"The book makes highly interesting reading." A. R. B.

+ Cath World 128:761 Mr '29 500w

Reviewed by Francis Birrell

Nation and Ath 44:588 Ja 26 '29 130w

"M. Bertrand is always lively: no one surely has written an historical biography less burdened with political history. In the English—or should one say American—version, the reader will miss M. Bertrand's eloquent and flowing style, which is perhaps his most persuasive weapon. Still, the translation, if undistinguished, is adequate."

+ — New Statesman 32:446 Ja 12 '29 490w

Reviewed by Horace Gregory

N Y Evening Post p6m Je 15 '29 450w

"M. Bertrand's biographical study was badly needed. . . It would have been better if he had not been quite so vehement. Louis was not, as he says he was, 'the great Frenchman of all time,' a phrase which will stand for the tone of the whole book. But although this ecstasy of his mars his work it does not detract from the facts he sets forth and the new and—on the whole—sound viewpoint he takes." C: W. Thompson

+ N Y Times p10 My 19 '29 1450w

Pratt p37 summer '29

St Louis 27:60 F '29

"The impressionistic sketch which finally emerges is flamboyant, excessively flattering, and yet seems to have a basis of truth. Above all, it is full of life. The translation is rather hard and obvious, though Mr. Chase is to be congratulated on putting the French verses into rhymed English."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p51 Ja 24 '29 400w

Reviewed by J: M. S. Allison

+ Yale R n s 19:175 autumn '29 550w

BESKOW, FRU ELSA (MAARTMAN). Aunt Green, Aunt Brown and Aunt Lavender; [tr. from the Swedish by Siri Andrews]. 15p il $2.50 Harper

29-26940

They probably had other names but Aunt Green always wore a green dress, Aunt Brown always wore a brown dress, and Aunt Lavender always wore a lavender dress, and that is why the children in the village named them thus. Across the street lived a little old man who always wore a blue coat, so he was called Mr Blue. The three aunts had a little dog Pet, who got quite hopelessly lost one day. This is the story of his adventures.

Booklist 25:169 Ja '29

"Even more than in her other charming picture books Elsa Beskow in Aunt Green, Aunt Brown and Aunt Lavender shows that her work belongs in the line of the best tradition in picture books for children, that which shows unmistakably in every line the delight that its creator has taken in doing it." Marcia Dalphin

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Mr 3 '29 680w

"An excellent combination of charming pictures and simple, unforced text. It is just the quiet, detailed sort of story that very small children never tire of hearing."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:484 D 8 '28 180w

Wis Lib Bul 25:76 F '29

BESKOW, FRU ELSA (MAARTMAN). Olle's ski trip; tr. from the Swedish by Siri Andrews. unp il $2 Harper

29-26044

"The outdoor life of the North is shown in all its glory in this charming picture-book. The text, telling of winter days and the final rout of King Winter by Old Woman Thaw, accompanies pictures that are delightful both in conception and execution."—Booklist

Booklist 25:215 F '29

St Louis 27:170 My '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:77 F '29

BEST, JOHN HENRY. From the seen to the unseen. 552p il $7 (18s) Longmans

215 Religion and science 29-7586

"An elaborate argument, fortified by much scientific evidence, to prove that, even apart from special revelation, a spiritual interpretation of the universe best explains what physiology, embryology, psychology, astronomy and evolution tell us about it, and that any merely mechanical explanation is inadequate to account for the known facts."—Christian Century

Christian Century 46:1188 S 25 '29 50w

"Mr. Best's thesis is not new, but its freshness of treatment and sometimes originality of presentation may make it a valuable aid to those who, not content with a cautious agnosticism, prefer to seek support for their religious speculations in those departments of science which, from their very complexity, may not yet be sufficiently well understood to be described adequately in terms of the known."

+ Nature 124:88 Jl 20 '29 200w

"We think his reasoning is often astray; but he has written an interesting and attractive book."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p570 Jl 18 '29 1470w

BETTAUER, HUGO. Viennese love [Die freudlose gasse]; tr. from the German by F. H. Lyon. 251p $2 Macaulay [7s 6d Cassell]
29-11648

"A weird story of aristocratic Vienna. The plot centers around the murder of Frau Lia Lied, involving her lover, Otto Demel—a journalist, poverty-stricken Grete Rumfort, and Frau Greifer, a procuress for the young bloods of the city. It is not a pretty tale, but it portrays clearly and well the post-war temptations that confront the young girls of that once-romantic capital of Austria."—Bookm

Bookm 69:xxv Ag '29 70w
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 S 8 '29 200w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p7m Je 29 '29 130w
Sat R of Lit 5:1197 Jl 20 '29 240w

BETTS, ERNEST. Heraclitus; or, The future of films. (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 96p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]
791.4 Moving pictures [29-6716]

The author writes his essay out of the conviction that the films, as a form of art, have an assured if incalculable future, tho much of his prophecy concerning the silent pictures is jeopardized by the recent arrival of the "talkies."

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Je 9 '29 70w

"His little book contrives to conceal a minimum of analysis and suggestion beneath any amount of comment (most of which is meant to be a good deal funnier than it is) upon comparatively unimportant matters. His principal contribution is a plea for faith: 'There is no future for the films until somebody believes in them.' This is true, but scarcely practical advice."
— Nation and Ath 44:sup234 N 10 '28 280w
Nature 124:649 O 26 '29 170w
New Statesman 32:476 Ja 19 '29 180w
N Y Times p5 My 19 '29 700w

"Heraclitus is an entertaining little book, full of sparkling and original ideas, which should stimulate Wardour Street to a more serious consideration of the artistic and moral aspects of the film industry."
+ Spec 141:sup543 O 20 '28 220w

"What, then, of the future of the films? Mr. Betts's little volume is not of great assistance. His book is hard to read, moreover, because he is unbearably facetious at times. He, too, considers Hollywood the villain of the piece, but he is less charitable than he might be."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p725 O 11 '28 150w

BETTS, GEORGE HERBERT. Beliefs of 700 ministers, and their meaning for religious education. (Abingdon religious educ. monographs) 74p $1 Abingdon press
230 Ministers of the gospel. Religious education 29-11732

"The author of this study has undertaken to obtain an accurate composite picture of the minds of the ministers by the simple process of asking a large number of them to put their theological and religious opinions on record by answering a questionnaire containing 56 items. Five hundred active ministers of varying ages and two hundred young ministers who are still in graduate theological schools, and many of whom are already in charge of churches, responded to this invitation. Seven major denominations—Baptists, Congregational, Episcopalian, Evangelical, Lutheran, Methodist and Presbyterian—are each represented by from thirty to more than a hundred replies."—Christian Century

Reviewed by Earl Marlatt
Christian Century 46:576 My 1 '29 2100w
Nation 128:663 Je 5 '29 850w

"A scientific attempt to find out the real beliefs of the Protestant clergy." E. B. Chaffee
+ Outlook 152:230 Je 5 '29 100w

BEVERIDGE, ALBERT JEREMIAH. Abraham Lincoln, 1809-1858. 2v 607;741p il $12.50 Houghton [25s Gollancz]
B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 28-26716
For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"Taken altogether, making every allowance for peculiarities of method, and for occasional omissions the book remains an invaluable contribution." N. W. Stephenson
+ Am Hist R 34:616 Ap '29 1100w

"Two notable things he has done. First, he has related the Lincoln story more fully to the life of the nation, step by step, than other biographers have been able to do. . . The other and more notable thing which this book has done is to trace the career of Lincoln as a politician as no one else has ever done it." W: E. Barton
+ Am Pol Sci R 23:188 F '29 960w

"Mr. Beveridge's work is a true and careful picture of political life in Illinois for the two decades and more during which Lincoln played so integral a part in it all." D. L. Hunt
+ Ann Am Acad 142:455 Mr '29 660w

Reviewed by C: K. Trueblood
+ Dial 86:522 Je '29 1150w

"The late Senator Beveridge's two volumes on Lincoln, like his earlier ones on John Marshall, are masterpieces of historical scholarship and interpretation."
+ Hist Outlook 20:93 F '29 320w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:637 D '28

"There is nothing better for an understanding of Lincoln than these volumes." H. C. Engelbrecht
+ World Tomorrow 12:90 F '29 190w

BEVERIDGE, SIR WILLIAM HENRY. British food control. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of economics and hist. Economic and social hist. of the World war. British ser.) 447p $4 Yale univ. press [17s 6d Oxford]
351.82 European war, 1914-1918—Food question. Food supply—Great Britain. Great Britain. Ministry of food 28-24371

"Sir William Beveridge's account of the Ministry of Food which now appears, nearly ten years after the war . . . is one of those uncommon books which reveal with clarity and frankness the working of the huge machine of Government from the point of view of the administrative expert."—New Statesman

"Statistics, tables and appendices abound. On the whole there can be no doubt that a volume worthy of its many predecessors has been added to the economic and social history of the World War Series."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 5 '29 300w

"Sir William Beveridge has written an extraordinarily lucid, interesting, and valuable history of British food control during the war. And he does it all with a mastery of fact, a sureness of judgment, a command of the English language, and a sense of humor that make his book a joy to read."
+ Nation 128:746 Je 19 '29 220w

"Sir William Beveridge is an expert in economics and an expert in administration; he held high office in the Ministry of Food itself, and he can write clear, nervous English, enlivened

BEVERIDGE, W: H:—Continued
by occasional flashes of a wit that never fails to illuminate its subject. . . The book as a whole lends itself to straightforward reading as well as to study. . . It is a notable contribution both to the history and to the science of administration on its economic side." C. E. Fayle

+ Nation and Ath 43:653 Ag 18 '28 880w

"The book is the product of a mature mind, versed as perhaps no other in this generation in the art of public administration. To the skill of the civil servant in 'putting on paper' the essential facts of a situation and the reasons for and against alternative lines of action the author adds in this book the broader vision of the economist and the social historian."

+ New Statesman 31:593 Ag 18 '28 1300w

"Sir William Beveridge has achieved a very felicitous blend of personal impression and authoritative statement, made all the more attractive by touches of sarcastic humour."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p575 Ag 9 '28 1750w

BEYLE, MARIE HENRI (DE STENDHAL, pseud.). Lamiel; or, The ways of the heart; tr. and preface by Jacques Le Clercq. 320p $2.50 Brentano's

29-5225

" 'Lamiel' is the last of Stendhal's novels to appear in English. The novel was originally intended to fill two volumes. Only the first was written. The Lamiel of the first volume is a naïve and innocent child, whose curiosity about life leads her to unconventional behaviour. The scene is in northern provinces of France after the restoration of the monarchy in the nineteenth century. Lamiel is brought up by two childless peasants. . . The story starts Lamiel on a dominated, cynical career which brings the novel to Paris and presents more sophisticated scope for scene and action."—N Y Times

---

"This sort of book gives about as good an idea of representative French literature as Michael Arlen does of English. In any case it is one of those things which sound so much better in the original French."

Boston Transcript p5 Mr 16 '29 230w

Reviewed by Lionel Trilling

N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 16 '29 480w

"Without Stendhal there might not have been the later expansive development of motives. It is surprising and fascinating to find this novel of nearly a hundred years ago so modern in its treatment." Edwin Clark

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 3 '29 980w

"Stendhal, the stylist, has added wit and charm to the intimate candor of his principal characterization; while by way of contrast he has provided an abundance of vain and stupid men. Unfinished though it is, the book offers ample evidence of its author's skill and puts to shame countless contemporary efforts." J. D. Tasker

+ Outlook 151:428 Mr 13 '29 300w

BIANCO, MRS MARGERY (WILLIAMS). All [2] about pets. 134p il $2 Macmillan

636 Pets 29-22971

Chapters on pets in general and pets that the author has kept, illustrated with photographs and drawings. The varieties of animals included are mice, rats, dogs, cats, rabbits, guinea pigs, birds, fish, and land-and-water pets.

---

"Any child who is really fond of animals ought to have this book. It is so wise, so thorough and so very sympathetic in feeling. As for the photographs and line illustrations—they are all one could desire, so are the end papers." Rose Fyleman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 N 10 '29 80w

"There are lifelike pictures by Grace Gilkison, of pet mice, rabbits, guinea pigs, rats, besides the usual cats and dogs, which will arouse longing in the heart of the petless child. It is quite evident that Mrs. Bianco writes out of her own experience, so practical are her suggestions."

+ Cath World 130:380 D '29 130w

"It is written sanely and practically but with a refreshing style throughout and a humorous, friendly approach that makes it most desirable. One is quietly amused to learn of the keen auditory sense of the guinea pig, and of the meticulous ablutions performed by rats, while the author refutes the popular idea that cats have nine lives and shows the fallacy of such a belief." M. G. Bonner

+ N Y Times p12 D 15 '29 100w

"Very helpful book for any child interested in pets and the care of them." O. M. Fuller

+ N Y World p11m D 22 '29 70w

"It is a good little book, and belongs in all families where pets happen. . . 'All about Pets' is not as encyclopædic as its title suggests, but it will stand the challenge of Audrey: 'Is it honest in word and deed? Is it a true thing?' And that, after all, properly understood, is not a bad slogan." Elizabeth Woodbridge

+ Sat R of Lit 6:575 D 14 '29 200w

BIBESCO, MARTHE LUCIE (LAHOVARY) (PRINCESSE GEORGES V. BIBESCO). Green parrot; tr. by Malcolm Cowley. 246p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Selwyn]

29-11438

An aristocratic Russian family in a foreign community at Biarritz mourns thru the years the death in childhood of the only son. Sasha, the dead boy, possesses his parents to the exclusion of their living daughters. One of the latter, whose quiet recital forms the story, gives all her childish love to a green parrot, and losing it never again has an earthly love. She learns, however, of a family legend of brother-sister devotion and believes herself to be the victim of a similar passion for her brother Sasha. The unusual theme of the story is handled simply, naturally and with delicacy.

---

"The horror and final tragedy of the story is offset by Princess Bibesco's quiet prose, which Malcolm Cowley has handled so well that his translation retains all the glamour of the original."

+ Bookm 69:xxiii Ag '29 50w

Reviewed by M. C. Dawson

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 My 26 '29 580w

"Princess Bibesco is an accomplished writer; but the vein which is really her own, as she showed in 'Catherine-Paris,' is more in the nature of gossip than tragedy. There is no gossip in this book."

+ New Repub 59:349 Ag 14 '29 120w

" 'The Green Parrot,' is a strange and beautiful story, with the faintly arid charm of a miniature painted on the cover of a seventeenth century snuff box. . . There is a good deal of reticent drama, but no hint of melodrama. The overtones of the story are left to the reader's imagination. The result is a slender, but captivating and completely self-sufficient novel."

+ N Y Times p8 My 19 '29 520w

Reviewed by A. C. West

N Y World p7m Je 2 '29 250w

"The Princess Bibesco writes with poetic feeling, wit, delicacy, economy, and rare grace of expression. Her style is intensely personal and has the quality of giving readers who like her books a sense of understanding, even of communion with their author which goes beyond objective admiration. And as for Malcolm Cowley's translation, it confirms our high opinion of his ability. Readers who have no French can be assured that the essence of the original is preserved in the translation."

+ Outlook 152:188 My 29 '29 230w

"Princess Marthe Bibesco's skill is not great enough to establish all these various abnormal states as real. The final impression of the book is powerful but bewildering." Basil Davenport

— + Sat R of Lit 6:7 Jl 27 '29 570w

"The story is told with brevity and poetic feeling by a woman familiar with the life in France of noble exiles from the East."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 11 '29 120w

"The charm of Princess Marthe Bibesco's new novel lies not very much in the plot of the tale —which is elusive—but very much in its disclosure of character and fantastic temperament."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p899 N 7 '29 320w

BIBESCO, MARTHE LUCIE (LAHOVARY) (PRINCESSE GEORGES V. BIBESCO). Royal portraits. 228p il $3 (12s 6d) Appleton

923.1 Kings and rulers. Courts and courtiers 28-22075

These portraits of royalty are drawn from life, out of the memories of the author's childhood and early youth. Ferdinand of Rumania, the late Czar of Russia, the Empress Eugénie, Edward VII and Queen Carmen Sylva are among the major royalties, and some minor ones are included.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Ja 27 '29 230w

"Princess Marthe Bibesco never stoops to the servant's point of view, and as a result she has here conjured up the personalities of her subjects as they must have appeared to their social equals. By means of a sparkling and vivid style and a sympathy which at times penetrates into the very depths she has given us some unforgettable sketches of a class of people that may soon disappear." W. T. B.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Q 6 '28 280w
Cleveland Open Shelf p41 Mr '29

"These pen-portraits of royalties she has herself known are written not only with graphic skill in their portrayal, but with keen insight into the human heart, with ability to analyze appearances, actions, motives, and then to present vividly the whole of the pictured personality."
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 20 '29 400w

BIBLE. WHOLE. SELECTIONS. Cambridge shorter Bible; arr. by Alexander Nairne, Terrot Reavely Glover, and Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch. 891p $3 Macmillan

220 [29-12070]

A revision of the Bible intended for school use and the general reader. With few exceptions the text is that of the authorized version, and the traditional order of the books has been retained. There are a few omissions, such as the books of Chronicles, Lamentations, Joel, Obadiah, Nahum, Titus, second and third John, and Jude. Selections from the Apocrypha are included.

---

Booklist 26:8 O '29

"The appearance of the 'Shorter Bible' is most attractive. Traditional chapter and verse divisions have been altogether discarded. The King James version of the text has been used with few exceptions. The books appear in the traditional order. All in all, this is the most readable edition of Holy Writ that we have ever seen." J: H. Holmes
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Je 9 '29 550w
Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 1 '29 300w

BICKERSTAFFE, LOVELYN ELAINE. Things seen in Morocco; a land of enchantment, of perpetual contrasts and of absorbing human interest. (Things seen ser.) 159p il $1.50 Dutton [3s 6d Seeley, Service]

916.4 Morocco—Description and travel [29-26172]

"Another of the Things seen series, giving something of the history of Morocco, and describing its scenery, its people and their customs. One chapter is devoted to the mountainous Riff country, another to Salli, a famous pirates' nest. Numerous excellent illustrations."—Cleveland Open Shelf

---

Bookm 69:xviii My '29
Cleveland Open Shelf p93 Je '29
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 9 '29 250w

BICKLEY, GRAHAM. Handbook of athletics for coaches and players. 151p il $1.80 Barnes, A. S. & Co.

796 Athletics 29-2040

A handbook for high-school coaches and players covering the fine points of football, baseball, basket-ball and track.

---

Booklist 25:273 Ap '29

"Many valuable diagrams of plays and formations may be found in each chapter for the purpose of elucidating the text."
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 20 '29 80w

"In presenting material on basket-ball and football, any book must give some space to plays and formations. The author gives a good assortment. The formations are clearly drawn and explained. There are no illustrations for track, and there is only a limited number for baseball. The book can be recommended for high-school libraries, for coaches, and for others interested in concise material on the major sports." G. L. Walker
+ School R 37:472 Je '29 420w

BIE, OSKAR. Schubert, the man; a biography of Franz Schubert; rendered from the German by Jean Starr Untermeyer; introd. by Otto Kahn. 215p il $3 Dodd

B or 92 Schubert, Franz Peter 28-29516

This biography, one of the fruits of the Schubert centennial in America, is both a sketch of his life and a study of his musical works.

---

"The portion of the work treating of his life is inclined to be 'appreciation' rather than factual, vivid and concentrated presentation of events and personalities. However, the chapters which treat of Schubert's work prove considerably better stuff, offering clear analysis, sympathetic interpretation and unhesitating appraisal, accompanied by much excellent illustration from the many scores discussed." Elbert Lenrow
+ — Bookm 68:694 F '29 480w

"Blemishes are numerous, not to say insidious. To the student and scholar the book, even in its original German, has little to offer beyond the usual array of historical stereotype and slushy platitude." P: Bowdoin
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 Ap 7 '29 180w

"The author's biographical method is somewhat inconsecutive and ejaculatory; he modestly disclaims originality. Students of music will find his critical chapters of decided value, and the choice of this work as the official biography of the Schubert centennial is justified on that score."
+ — Dial 86:529 Je '29 60w

"Mr. Bie's latest book on Schubert has nothing final or complete about it either as biography or criticism. It is simply something light and pleasant by one thoroughly acquainted with his subject, profoundly attached to his hero, and quite capable of doing things much deeper if so minded." T. R. Ybarra
+ N Y Times p5 N 25 '28 320w
Reviewed by Douglas Gilbert
N Y World p10m Ja 13 '29 160w
Outlook 150:1373 D 19 '28 40w
Pratt p37 summer '29

" 'Schubert the Man' is a thoroughly misleading title for this book. Only forty pages are devoted to Schubert's life. The remaining three-fourths of the book is devoted to an account of Schubert's music, with excerpts from the scores. Much of this analysis is a supreme example of the programme note style, which

BIE, OSKAR—Continued
'explains' music in terms of words, thereby reducing clear musical thinking and powerful emotion to sheer sentimentalism which merely interposes a mawkish mask between hearer and opus." Hubbard Hutchinson
— + Sat R of Lit 5:601 Ja 19 '29 650w

BIGGERS, EARL DERR. Black camel. 312p $2 Bobbs
29-13780

"Deals with the murder of an American motion-picture actress who had just arrived at Honolulu for the purpose of completing a picture. When Inspecter Chan takes charge of the case he finds himself confronted time after time by false clues, evidently planted for the purpose of leading him astray. By patient investigation the detective finally learns who planted these clues, only to find that the person who did it has what appears to be a perfect alibi for the time at which the murder was committed. There has been a flaw somewhere in Chan's reasoning, and it becomes necessary to consider the case from a new angle before he arrives at the solution."—N Y Times

"Leads the reader through a maze of difficulties that both delight and bewilder."
+ Bookm 69:xxvi Ag '29 40w

" 'The Black Camel' is a good warm weather guessing game, for Mr. Biggers is generous with hints and clews, at the same time guarding his secret perfectly until the end." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 30 '29 150w

"Something very near perfection in the modern mystery tale." W. H. C.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 17 '29 450w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p5 Ag 31 '29 180w

"Not only is this an excellent detective story, but there is, as in Mr. Bigger's other stories, some very skillful character drawing in it."
+ N Y Times p17 S 1 '29 200w

"Better detective stories have been written, stories more lively, more adroit. And yet this will do well enough for the casual reader."
Sat R of Lit 6:95 Ag 31 '29 130w

BIGHAM, CLIVE. See Mersey, Clive Bigham, 2nd viscount.

BIKLE, MRS LUCY LEFFINGWELL (CABLE). George W. Cable; his life and letters, by his daughter. 306p il $3.50 (12s 6d) Scribner
B or 92 Cable, George Washington 28-24845
For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:160 Ja '29

Reviewed by G. C. Knight
Bookm 69:205 Ap '29 400w
Christian Century 46:426 Mr 28 '29 100w
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Ja '29

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Repub 57:352 F 13 '29 1550w

"Mrs. Bikle has done her work as editor with skill and discretion, and has been particularly happy in the grace and charm with which she has woven the letters together, supplied backgrounds, filled in gaps and provided explanatory notes." F. F. Kelly
+ N Y Times p7 Ja 6 '29 1550w

"His letters give impressions on Meredith, Gilder, Beecher, Carnegie, and a host of other personalities who mattered in their day." W: B. Shaw
+ R of Rs 79:28 Mr '29 180w

"Its chief merit is that it does set vividly before us the adult Cable, a man of charming, delicate, almost Hawthornesque personality." Allan Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 5:637 F 2 '29 1450w
Wis Lib Bul 25:30 Ja '29

BILGRAM, HUGO. Remedy for overproduction and unemployment. .113p 50c Vanguard press
330.1 Money. Profit 28-12703

"An elaboration of an essay submitted to the Pollak Foundation as a criticism of Foster and Catchings' book, Profits. It is a thesis to the effect that high interest is the cause of depressions. Hence the author attacks the quantity theory of money, does not fear inflation; advocates more currency against smaller gold reserves to reduce pure interest from the discount rate, and higher taxation of land values. The appendix on 'Apologists for Interest' is the best part of the book."—Am J Soc

Reviewed by A. J. Todd
Am J Soc 34:741 Ja '29 70w
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 O 7 '28 80w

BILL, ALFRED HOYT. Red prior's legacy; the story of the adventures of an American boy in the French revolution. 256p il $2 (7s 6d) Longmans
[29-13782]

An historical mystery story in which a young man, part French and part American, returns to France from America to marry an heiress and reclaim the family fortunes. He is entangled in a mass of murder and intrigue, witnesses the massacre of the Swiss guards and nearly loses his life, but escapes to tell his story. The descriptions of old New York and revolutionary France are good. The book was selected for publication by the judges in Longmans' Juvenile prize contest.

Booklist 26:37 O '29

"The style is somewhat above the average in boys' romances; and the picture of the attack on the Tuileries is in particular most powerfully executed. But it is difficult to see wherein the story is noteworthy for adventurous suspense. It contains plenty of thrills, but the tension does not seem steadily maintained; and one fears that from the point of view of the young reader this may prove the formidable weakness in what is assuredly a picturesque story of fascinating times." J. F. S.
+ — Boston Transcript p1 Jl 13 '29 550w

"A fine thriller and mystery in Mr. Bill's usual facile style." F. L. P.
+ Churchman 140:5 Ag 17 '29 50w
Cleveland Open Shelf p133 N '29

"Any one, old or young, who likes a stirring and a touching story will enjoy it. The authentic and admirable scenes in old New York and in revolutionary France, the fine characterizations, the fragrant love story and the really moving quality of the tragic incidents make this a book of great distinction in its field." F. L. Robbins
+ Outlook 152:390 Jl 3 '29 160w

BINDER, RUDOLPH MICHAEL. Principles of sociology. 609p il $4 Prentice-Hall
301 Sociology 28-23519

"Part I, though labelled the Social Population, is concerned, after an introductory discussion of the composition of the population, with the uniqueness of the individual; so also is Part II, Social Motives. Part III, The Social Processes, is a series of essays on such topics as Domination, Toleration, Social Values, and The Socially Incomplete. The final section of the book, on Social Aims, discusses Social Progress, Improvement of Health and The Integration of Special Activities."—Yale Law J

"The tone of the book is restrained and conservative, especially on such controversial questions as sex, religion and property. The work should prove highly congenial to the outlook of the majority of American sociologists and should go far to allay the current conviction that American academic sociology is a disruptive influence in American life and threat to the morals and well-being of the country." H. E. Barnes
+ Am J Pub Health 19:464 Ap '29 320w

"It is difficult to make out any coherent line of thought connecting one topic with another, and the volume leaves in the mind of the reviewer the impression of a hodge-podge." F. N. House

Am J Soc 34:1202 My '29 250w

Reviewed by H. E. Jensen

Christian Century 46:457 Ap 4 '29 600w

"A plethora of fact is presented in a pertinent, economical, and not unattractive manner."

+ — Dial 86:530 Je '29 110w

"Professor Binder's work is an earnest and comprehensive volume, philosophic rather than scientific, sticking close to the old rubrics and well satisfied with conventional American society. It is pious, respectful and hopeful, but ought to go well in colleges on religious foundations and in conservative secular colleges and universities. It should also prove reassuring to those educators, theologians, purists and plutocrats who see in sociology a subversive body of subject-matter." H. E. Barnes

Survey 61:689 F 15 '29 180w

"Professor Binder undertakes an herculean task, and fails bravely and worthily. He writes cogently and well. There is much sage judgment and penetrating analysis of social phenomena in the pages of this latest Principles of Sociology. But by its attempt to bridge the gaps between psychology and the various social sciences, it has succeeded only in falling into the abyss wherein lie countless other textbooks on sociology." J. G. Leyburn

— + Yale Law J 38:846 Ap '29 740w

BINDING, RUDOLF GEORG. Fatalist at war; tr. from the German by Ian F. D. Morrow. 246p $3.75 Houghton [10s 6d Allen & U.]

940.48 European war, 1914-1918—Personal narratives 29-8526

"Rudolf Binding was forty-seven when the War broke out and was in command of a squadron of cavalry. First in France, then in Galicia, and finally in France once more, he was scarcely ever far behind the front line, and these extracts from his letters and diary (beautifully translated by Mr. Ian Morrow) touch every aspect of the War, from its philosophy to its most ludicrous situations. The author spares no one, least of all his own High Command. Hindenburg, alone, among the leaders of both sides, was the only great general."—Spec

---

Booklist 25:315 My '29

"He is not writing history; he sets forth, with extraordinary vividness, a picture of a man's mind in the stress of war, the mind of a polished and capable gentleman past his youth and come to maturity. The people who took part in this war have not been reticent regarding their experiences and reactions; from high commanders to reluctant conscripts and welfare workers, they have been extremely revealing as to what they did and thought and felt. But this group of letters comes into no category of war writing that I know." J: W. Thomason, Jr.

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Mr 31 '29 950w

"What distinguishes this from other records of the kind is its impartial view of the war—a willingness to concede right on the other side—almost a willingness to concede right on neither side and the remarkable absence of propaganda and national prejudice. It is also a powerful pacifist argument from a military point of view and impresses strongly with its sincerity." M. M.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 16 '29 380w

"The diary of a keen observer, a sensitive and intelligent individualist. As a war diary, with a stalwart thread of philosophy carried throughout, it impresses me as a superb book. It is the kind of note-book out of which a 'Case of Sergeant Grischa' might be written. It contains a similar sweep in point of view, in sympathy and fatalism." J. B. Wharton

+ Nation 129:69 Jl 17 '29 750w

Reviewed by Edmund Blunden

Nation and Ath 44:690 F 16 '29 630w

"Herr Binding's philosophical reflections, though doubtless sincere, are of less interest than his personal observations. His book, as a whole, gives a view of the War which will be new to most English readers."

New Statesman 33:supviii My 4 '29 230w

"It is a very readable document, even for a generation long since fed up on war stories." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p8m F 2 '29 100w

N Y Times p9 Mr 17 '29 620w

"This book gives us quite a new 'angle' on the war, and would be well worth reading on that account alone. But it has other merits. Herr Binding is a novelist and thoroughly understands the business of writing. The result is that a long succession of daily entries, which might easily have become monotonous, are presented in such a way that we never find them tedious—not even when there is no fighting to record."

+ Sat R 147:324 Mr 9 '29 780w

"A book so beautiful and tragic, so full of caustic wit and brilliant observations, and yet with passages of sheer lyric poetry, is worthy even of the birth-pangs of war. . . When Undertones of War came out it was hailed as the finest book that the War had inspired. There is another one now to be placed along side it. In Rudolf Binding the Germans surely have a writer worthy to be compared with our own Edmund Blunden."

+ Spec 142:130 Ja 26 '29 580w

"Binding gives a very true picture of the War, and one to which not only Germans will subscribe. This veracity, combined with an eye for picturesque details, makes the letters excellent reading; to which may be added that the translation is good and conveys with ease the quiet and delicate style of the author. Its quietness, indeed, is one of the attractions of the book, for Binding is always unaggressive, and unmoved either by the pacifist or by the diehard."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p172 Mr 7 '29 720w

"It is tremendously fine; I should like to quote whole pages from it—its comment on war is unusually brilliant and precise: it is the day by day record of a sensitive, intelligent man, commandeered by barbaric organization, serving in the chaos and attrition of modern war. It is, in my opinion, the completest war record that has yet come from one of the 'lost generation.' " Coley Taylor

+ World Tomorrow 12:377 S '29 190w

BINDLOSS, HAROLD. The frontiersman. 334p $2 Stokes [7s 6d Ward, Lock]

29-5218

Northwestern Canada forms the background. A young Scotch Canadian, just back from Cambridge, becomes mixed up in a feud between the local ranchers and gentlemen farmers. A murder and a mysterious disappearance add to the excitement.

---

Booklist 25:321 My '29

"There is always an authentic feeling for the thoughts and aspirations of those closely attached to the soil in Mr. Bindloss's stories, whether the scene is laid in Northumbria, or, as in this, in the North-West of Canada."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p165 F 28 '29 200w

"A better than average story."

+ Wis Lib Bul 25:195 Je '29

BINDLOSS, HAROLD. Mystery reef (Eng title Halford's adventure). 328p $2 Stokes

28-20415

Bob Halford is one of the younger members of the Halford house of importers in London. For an altercation with one of the managers of the firm he is banished to the Jamaican office of the company and there learns something that saves the firm from a smash.

---

Booklist 25:164 Ja '29

BINDLOSS, HAROLD—Continued

"Harold Bindloss holds out valiantly for leisurely, well bred and somewhat meandering adventure, with plenty of fine ringing sentiments." Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 9 '28 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ja '29

BINGER, WALTER DAVID. What engineers do; an outline of construction. 259p il $2.75 Norton

620 Civil engineering 28-28517

"Tells the general reader something of what has been done and what is being done in the field of civil engineering, i.e., structures, highways, railways, surveying, and water supply."—N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 25:289 Ap '29

N Y New Tech Bks 14:8 Ja '29

"The book contains a great deal of technical detail lucidly presented. It is too bad, however, that it is not indexed."

+ N Y Times p26 D 2 '28 230w

"The author handles the various subjects with the use of the simplest and clearest terminology, never failing to give good definitions and excellent illustrations as needed. . . The sketches used in this book are worthy of special comment because of their clearness, accuracy, and simplicity." H. L. Seward

+ Sat R of Lit 5:834 Mr 30 '29 700w

BINKLEY, ROBERT CEDRIC, and BINKLEY, MRS FRANCES (WILLIAMS). What is right with marriage; an outline of domestic theory. 261p $2.50 (8s 6d) Appleton

173.1 Marriage 29-17569

A discussion by a modern young couple who believe in marriage, and have outlined the principles upon which a successful marriage is made. Domestic theory, the nature of marriage and the family, marriage and children, and marriage and art are some of the topics they discuss.

Bookm 70:xii O '29 100w

"The Binkleys' book is one of the least prejudiced and most comprehensive discussions of marriage as it exists today that I have seen. . . Their book is written out of experience and wide reading. They know the history of marriage and the contradictions of the 'sacred' institutions that have grown up around it; but they are chiefly concerned to separate the essential character of marriage from these institutional elements. They know the latest psychological theories of sex, and pick their way through the wilderness with quite unusual perspicacity and shrewdness. In spite of the fact that its phraseology makes it quite unnecessarily hard to read, their book is most enthusiastically to be commended to everyone concerned with marriage." A. B. Parsons

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 O 6 '29 800w

Boston Transcript p5 O 5 '29 110w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Nation 129:386 O 9 '29 370w

"The reviewer has but one serious bone to pick with the authors, aside from their questionable use of percentage statistics from so small a number of cases, and that is the over-emphasis placed upon the evil effects of the 'mother complex' on men when they come to choose their wives. It is a pity that the Freudian thesis in this and other aspects of their discussion should be so unquestioningly accepted as the only true explanation of the facts disclosed in their research." W. H. Crook

+ — Portland Evening News p8 O 22 '29 950w

"There is a great deal of youth in these pages. The general tone suggests an idyl, but one disguised by erudition and scientific habits of thought. The authors are eminently qualified for their task in everything but age. Even more convincing will be the version they present at a time nearer their golden wedding." E. M. Sprague

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:367 N 9 '29 1000w

Reviewed by I. S. Wile, M.D.

Survey 63:231 N 15 '29 320w

BINYON, LAURENCE. The idols. 51p $1.75 Macmillan

821 29-5208

"Mr. Binyon's penetration into the centers of ultimate darkness, which takes place in 'The Idols,' rewards him with many jewels of his own finding."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Reviewed by C. Divine

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 26 '29 30w

"This latest poetry of Mr. Binyon's is so incomparably superior to his earlier work as to appear to be the work of another artist altogether. There is in this ode a Wordsworthian grandeur of expression and a Blake-like visionary perception of nature that is at once stimulating to the intellect and quickening to the imagination. These are the best parts. In others, however, the poet's metaphysics becomes bewildering, and his mystical symbolisms, unintelligibly abstruse."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Mr 6 '29 180w

Reviewed by Austin Clarke

Nation and Ath 44:sup234 N 10 '28 500w

"The ode is the kind of cultivated, scholarly, well-bred expression of emotion which will certainly receive the praise of well-bred, scholarly, and cultivated people, and the praise or dispraise of others can hardly be important to its author." Archibald MacLeish

Sat R of Lit 5:902 Ap 20 '29 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p930 N 29 '28 850w

BIRKENHEAD, FREDERICK EDWIN SMITH, 1st earl of. More famous trials. 298p il $4 Doubleday, Doran [21s Hutchinson]

343.1 Trials 29-877?

Certain of these criminal cases have appeared in print many times of late. Others will be less familiar to American readers. Contents: Marie Antoinette; Charles Peace; Joan of Arc; Bywaters and Thompson; Charles I; The Seddon case; Francis Bacon; Mrs Maybrick; Major Strangeways; Madeleine Smith; The Duchess of Kingston; The murder of Dr Parkman; James Scott, duke of Monmouth; The Yelverton case; Jonathan Wild; Burke and Hare; Colonel Nicholas Bayard; William Cobbett; The Marquise de Brinvilliers; Landru.

Bookm 69:xxx My '29 40w

"Lord Birkenhead is doubtless capable of more imposing periods than he has seen fit to lavish upon this crime collection. It is well enough, as crime books go, and makes a timely successor to 'Famous Trials.'" Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 My 12 '29 950w

"In many of the stories he has reconstructed a twice-told tale, but in each case he does it with a peculiar skill that is infused with common sense as well as with legal acumen." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p10 My 25 '29 1200w

"Lord Birkenhead is not a particularly good narrator, and his statement of the cases is not always marked by that legal clarity which one might have expected from him. The authentic voice of the distinguished lawyer is more often recognizable in the comments on the verdict and reflections on the evidence. These are often very interesting." Leonard Woolf

— + Nation and Ath 44:326 D 1 '28 600w

"The author's legal interests lead him often to pay considerable attention to the scenes and customs of courts and judges at different times in the several countries, and therefore the collection of narratives has special attraction for lawyers. But he brings out in all cases the human interest involved and often discusses entertainingly the characters and motives of the people of whom he writes."

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 21 '29 330w

"When a selection from the famous trials is presented to us by a former Lord Chancellor, accompanied by his own considered comments upon the evidence and the verdicts, the book naturally acquires a very considerable legal and historical interest, quite apart from the popular demand."

+ Sat R 146:732 D 1 '28 460w

Sat R of Lit 5:948 Ap 27 '29 250w

"In his second book, as in his first, he studied the public's taste, and the result is a first-rate series of thrillers that would not be disowned by Edgar Wallace himself."

+ Spec 141:654 N 3 '28 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p819 N 8 '28 1600w

BIRMINGHAM, GEORGE A., pseud. See Hannay, J. O.

BISHOP, AVARD LONGLEY. Financing of business enterprises. 616p $5 Harper

658.14 Corporations—Finance. Business 29-12191

Authoritative statements on the matter of corporate financing, of special interest to business executives and investment dealers. An analysis of different types of securities is given, concluding with methods of raising funds for corporations.

"Those who desire a text which covers in a concise, well written, and well organized manner the subjects of business organization and finance will welcome the appearance of Professor Bishop's volume. So far as the reviewer has been able to ascertain, it makes no important contribution either in subject matter or method of treatment; but the author makes no such claim for it. It does, however, outline and discuss in a broad, general way most of the essential principles which students who are beginning the study of business finance should know." C: S. Tippetts

+ Am Econ R 19:688 D '29 620w

Booklist 26:105 D '29

"Professor Bishop has brought to the writing of this book, apart from his indebtedness to the voluminous literature of the subject, not only his concrete acquaintance with it as consultant or economic adviser to a number of business concerns, but also his experience of nearly fifteen years in teaching large classes of undergraduates at Yale in business finance, corporation finance, and allied themes." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Je 22 '29 950w

St Louis 27:281 O '29

BISHOP, MORRIS. Gallery of eccentrics; or, A set of twelve originals & extravagants from Elagabalus the waggish emperor, to Mr Professor Porson, the tippling philologer. 244p il $3.50 Minton

920 Biography 28-24738

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"Mr. Bishop has sought them out in books and documents and rehearsed them admirably, so that they come together in his book with all the success of singers of close harmony."

Bookm 68:ix Ja '29 90w

"Mr. Bishop's subjects are better than their treatment. A group of people clearly chosen for their oddities and their amusingness, none of them can be considered very important; and yet the essays are cluttered with the distracting and unnecessary apparatus of scholarship. The accounts are neither swift nor graceful in style, and are frequently interrupted by pointless digression." Edgar Johnson

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Ja 27 '29 550w

"Mr. Bishop's style often has a cool lucidity that is rare in these journalistic days; but it is also frequently marred by a preciosity that smacks too obviously of the grotesqueries which characterized the subjects it delineates."

+ — Nation 128:208 F 13 '29 80w

Reviewed by Gardner Harding

N Y Times p9 Mr 17 '29 1150w

St Louis 27:60 F '29

BLACHLY, FREDERICK FRANK, and OATMAN, MIRIAM EULALIE. Government and administration of Germany. (Inst. for government research. Studies in administration) 770p $5 Brookings

354.43 Germany—Politics and government. Germany.Constitution 28-30760

"The first of a series of volumes describing the administrative systems of the chief countries of Europe. The preparation is based upon original sources, fully annotated. There is appended an exhaustive bibliographical chapter of seventy pages."—Am Econ R

Am Econ R 19:156 Mr '29 80w

"The work is done in a scholarly fashion, and the information offered is sound, although, as the reviewer knows full well from his own experience, perfection is never attained in works of this kind. As a rule, the subjects dealt with are brought up to date as far as possible. In a few instances, however, attention to more recent developments might have been of added value. . . But with all its peccadillos the work is an outstanding achievement in its field. It holds its own with any of the Studies of the Institute. No greater compliment could be paid its authors than the expression of wonder that a book containing such a wealth of detail did not turn out a deadly bore." Johannes Mattern

+ — Am Pol Sci R 23:481 My '29 1250w

Booklist 25:268 Ap '29

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 26 '29 530w

BLACK, ARCHIBALD. Civil airports and airways; with the collaboration of a group of 19 specialists in the different angles of airport construction and equipment. 238p il $4 Simmons-Boardman

629.13 Aeronautics, Commercial. Airports. Airways 29-7292

Nineteen specialists in airport construction and equipment have contributed to the book illustrated articles on the subject based on their own knowledge and experience. The book is an all round treatment of airports and airways.

Booklist 25:347 Je '29

Cleveland Open Shelf p105 Jl '29

"This book attempts to bring together in one volume the information on airports and airways which has accumulated over the past several years and the author accomplishes the task with considerable skill. His procedure is not to give the reader his personal views on every subject but to secure the views of specialists on each particular phase. The result is a broad yet detailed picture of the present requirements of airport and airway development in which the civil engineer can readily locate the functions he is best fitted to perform."

+ Eng N 103:108 Jl 18 '29 330w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:19 Ap '29

St Louis 27:198 Je '29

BLACK, HUGH. Adventure of being man. 170p $1.50 Doubleday, Doran

230 Man. Faith. Immortality 29-17518

Life is the greatest of all adventures, according to Hugh Black. In his philosophical essay he takes up the nature of faith in spiritual adventure—"the will to act on the hazard"—and he discusses the final and greatest life adventure —death.

Booklist 26:53 N '29

BLACK, HUGH—Continued

"The theme is brilliantly and persuasively argued and its approach to age-old questions is modern and human."

+ N Y Times p22 S 15 '29 350w

BLACK, JOHN DONALD. Agricultural reform in the United States. 380p $4 McGraw

630.973 Agriculture—United States. Agriculture—Economic aspects 29-12597

"A timely and authoritative study of the problems of farm relief. After a survey of the present unsatisfactory status of agriculture and the causes of it, there follows a statement and evaluation of the various proposals for reform. The list comprises not merely the schemes for agricultural price-raising which are now claiming public attention—tariff revision, the equalization fee, export debentures, and the like—but also the more fundamental reforms which are needed in production, land utilization, marketing, transportation, credit, and taxation. It is made abundantly clear that there is no single, and certainly no simple, remedy for this complex and baffling problem. But the author makes a number of constructive suggestions."—Am Pol Sci R

---

"In the closing pages of the first chapter is to be found the most pretentious attempt to forecast the agriculture of the next quarter century thus far made, within the writer's knowledge. Moreover, it is a commendable attempt. . . While no two students of the great subject of agricultural reform could agree wholly on details and specific proposals, there will be hearty agreement respecting the main theses and general merits of this book." B: H. Hibbard

+ Am Econ R 19:675 D '29 1200w

"His approach throughout is that of the trained economist. The book is clear and readable and is an important contribution to a vital problem."

Am Pol Sci R 23:785 Ag '29 210w

"This is the most informative book to date on agricultural reform. The author's facts are authoritative and his judgments well seasoned."

+ Ann Am Acad 145:212 S '29 70w

"The author, now Professor of Agricultural Economics at Harvard and formerly of the University of Minnesota, presents a very competent discussion within his chosen limits. He has, within recent years, distinguished himself as a student of the economic effects of political measures in agriculture. . . Dr. Black has produced a work that will be a permanently valuable contribution to the economic and agricultural history of this decade." Wheeler McMillen

+ N Y Times p39 O 6 '29 1350w

St Louis 27:281 O '29

BLACK, MACKNIGHT. Machinery. 80p $2 Liveright

811 29-8739

Modern machines and engines have furnished the inspiration for these poems in which Mr Black visualizes the cosmos in terms of energy and steel.

---

Booklist 25:385 Jl '29

"His richness—which is of idea, not of diction or allusiveness—springs from a gift for repose. His climaxes are piercing, and his rhythms proper and profound."

+ Bookm 70:xii S '29 90w

"If MacKnight Black becomes at times a little repetitive, somewhat over-rhetorical, a trifle overstrained in his effort, we should remember that, although modern poetry should concern itself with machinery as one of several manifestations of man's creative genius, not all machinery is poetry. It is something that in this book a poet has dared welcome the Beauty of controlled and constructive power, a Beauty cried against throughout the nineteenth century and run away from by most of the earlier poets of the twentieth." E. L. Walton

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 My 5 '29 500w

"It is fair to say that his book does not interpret civilization, even subtly; it merely analyzes symbols. And when Mr. Black employs such figures as 'skyscrapers stand tethered,' and 'as where the measured sun hammers the cold earth, a piston beats immobile steel,' there is proof that machinery is not yet a self-sufficient idea. It is possible to imagine that the rhythms of these poems are those of electricity, swirling and surging and beating; it is still more possible that machinery is a subject more suited to prose than to verse." J. D. Tasker

— Nation 129:96 Jl 24 '29 150w

" 'Machinery' reads like a futuristic manifesto. Only, in a sense, it has come too late because it is a manifesto, poetry with a purpose. Fifteen years or more back, when pronouncements like Dadaism, Expressionism, and Futurism, were still being made with vigor and belief, we might have been caught off guard. Now, that is scarcely possible, and for that reason expressions of this kind can no longer have the element of surprise that we expect from a work of art. . . The result is a massive still-life. And I don't think this is a confrontation of what we call the American life any more than a studio set of a certain period is a reproduction of that period, historically." E: Dahlberg

— New Repub 59:187 Jl 3 '29 580w

"Like the machines they celebrate, the poems of MacKnight Black are simple, smooth running and swift, moving within their limited patterns with a deadly and svelt precision. The strokes of these poems [are] like the strokes of a balance wheel." Edwin Seaver

N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 13 '29 400w

"MacKnight Black has wrought with great skill to convey to the reader the clear beauty of the machine. He has succeeded to a degree that will leave to others little but repetition. And the very measure of his success shows indubitably the paucity of machinery as inspiration to art. . . There is not a piece in the book but has the clear beauty for which the author has sedulously striven." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 14 '29 1300w

BLACKBURN, BARBARA (MRS CLAUDE LEADER). Sober feast. 266p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Secker]

29-16162

The story centers about the emotional experiences of four intelligent young Londoners: Rollo Howes, who wants to make money quickly; his sister Catherine, who works in an intellectuals' bookshop; Anne, another intellectual; and Richard, Rollo's grave and silent friend and business partner.

---

Bookm 70:322 N '29 80w

"One of the outstanding features of 'Sober Feast' is its dialogue which proclaims Miss Blackburn's undoubted ability in this direction. There is much real enjoyment to be had in reading this book, but one is likely to search in vain for the expected touches of distinction and individuality."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 S 8 '29 400w

Boston Transcript p2 S 18 '29 220w

"The novel is partly a study of the generations, but much more balanced and intelligent than usual. Miss Blackburn is extremely sensitive to the latest moods. She actually discovers that the newest young men talk as though life were worth while. The scenes in the offices in 'the road,' where cars are bought and sold, are fascinating, and the dialogue is most amusing."

+ Nation and Ath 44:854 Mr 16 '29 180w

"It is a keen volume, depicting the futility of trying to find out what life is about, portraying the distress of youngsters who attempt to clothe the uncomfortable form of actuality in the garments of their own theories. It is rambling, pleasant, in passages extremely funny, in others slightly vapid, as the thoughts of youth must be. If, however, it is a novel, a snapshot album is a work of art. Symmetry is absent. Purpose is missing, other than reflection." F: F. Van de Water

— + N Y Evening Post p6m S 7 '29 170w

" 'Sober Feast' has been written with a good deal of feeling and humor. Miss Blackburn has given expression—even in the rather gaudy humors of the second-hand motor trade—to the many little but disastrously perplexing commonplaces of ordinary lives. Some of her understanding of character has been illuminated with the sharpening tincture of satire. In her style she has mastered a compact form. Her dialogue is the brightest ornament of a sympathetic and sensible novel."

+ N Y Times p7 S 29 '29 720w

"Miss Barbara Blackburn has a delightful gift of dialogue. But her characters, though they find many stimulating things to say, tend to lose their own identities in the current of their talk. The conditions of modern life, as illustrated by the motor-trade, are vividly presented. But many aspects of life and tracts of emotion which cannot be illuminated by general conversation between a handful of intelligent young people, Miss Blackburn, sensitive as she is, leaves unexplored." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 147:220 F 16 '29 130w

"For all its limitations as a novel, 'Sober Feast' has a quality of candor about it that is curiously ingratiating. Structurally, though, it is so fragile as to be almost bodiless."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:570 D 14 '29 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '29 300w

"In her third novel Miss Blackburn displays quite unusual qualities of economy and neatness. She does not obtrude her humour, but it is always perceptibly there, to maintain throughout a saving proportion in her most difficult, and to add a finer poignancy to her more tragic, scenes. She fishes in a small pool, but her line goes deep. . . It is the business background which is especially attractive in this clever novel."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p182 Mr 7 '29 400w

BLACKWELL, ALICE STONE, comp. and tr. Some Spanish-American poets; with an introd. and notes by Isaac Goldberg. 559p $3 (12s 6d) Appleton

861.08 Spanish-American poetry—Collections. Spanish-American poetry—Translations into English 29-16314

Translations, including the Spanish original, of the work of eighty poets representing nineteen of the Spanish-American countries. With an introduction, in Spanish and English, by Isaac Goldberg; and bibliographical notes in the two languages.

---

Booklist 26:61 N '29

"There is but one regret about Miss Blackwell's volume: the failure to include longer pieces leads to the misleading impression that Spanish-American poets are incapable of sustained work, an impression contrary to fact. The volume remains the only available one in which Spanish text and English translation appear together." W. M. T.

+ — Boston Transcript p5 S 14 '29 440w

"Many of the poems, it must be admitted, are rather turgid in style and strained in imagery when judged by our standards. But there are also higher levels of literary attainment and purer specimens of lyric beauty. The name of Ruben Dario, of Nicaragua, ought to be known to all lovers of poetry. Gabriela Mistral of Chile, whose poetry is mostly in the form of prose, not even free verse but straight prose, has an authentic gift of sensitive feeling and delicacy of utterance. And there are many others well worthy of better acquaintance."

+ — Christian Century 46:1123 S 11 '29 300w

"The translations are generally excellent. Two hundred poems, representing eighty poets, (mostly modern) from Panama to Argentina, constitute a notable anthology." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p4m S 14 '29 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p1056 D 12 '29 1300w

BLACKWOOD, ALGERNON. Dudley & Gilderoy; a nonsense. 281p $2.50 Dutton [8s 6d Benn]

29-25037

Dudley, a fine grey parrot, and his best friend, Gilderoy, a disreputable and ginger-colored cat, ran off to London in search of adventure. They managed to find a home with a nice old lady, and had a great time in general before they were returned to their original owners in Kent. The book is a fantasy, but at the same time a serious study in animal psychology.

---

"One does not quite see why Mr. Blackwood calls his delightful history 'A Nonsense,' for it is about a real parrot and a real cat, and there are no creatures less nonsensical in the world. . . Dudley, the parrot, and Gilderoy, the cat, remain a bird and cat studied with a profound and delicate understanding. Their amusing adventures take place in a kind of mad lark, but never does Mr. Blackwood overstep the limits of the real world even where the two creatures do the most surprising things in their trip to London, Dudley's search for his soul, and Gilderoy's exploits on the back fence."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 D 15 '29 200w

"Mr. Blackwood manages a very delicate balance between pure fantasy and what must be described as realism. His enterprise takes him far into what he supposes to be the minds of the parrot and the cat, but they remain parrot and cat, do not become miniature human beings dressed up in feathers and fur." E. S.

+ New Statesman 34:267 N 30 '29 300w

"The cat and parrot whose adventures are the subject of his latest book are no realistic portraits of their kind; they are of the tribe of Puss-in-Boots, they can invent and comment, at times even rhapsodize. . . 'Dudley and Gilderoy' is a fantastic, enchanting little work, glittering on the drab rubbish heap of much contemporary fiction, a wisp of dewy cobweb. If one has to offer a criticism it is that the book is over-long for its fragility." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 148:787 D 28 '29 230w

"The book is decorated with jolly little thumbnail sketches and is most delightfully bound and printed."

+ Spec 143:496 O 12 '29 200w

"It was a charming friendship, this in which the parrot, hampered by his clipped wings, would ride on the cat's back, holding fast to Gilderoy's ramrod tail. There is something wistful and pathetic, almost, in the chivalry of the relation; for Dudley was not quite at his ease with Gilderoy, thinking sometimes he detected a gleam in the cat's eye which seemed to say, 'Parrots are good eating for cats.' "

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '29 420w

"Mr. Blackwood seems to us to delay these lively adventures with too many serious reflections and irrelevant descriptions. He is too philosophical himself, and often makes his creatures too philosophical. When Dudley and Gilderoy are thinking practically, about what to do next, they are themselves; but when they reflect on the nature of friendship or the history of the cat we know that the reflections are not theirs but Mr. Blackwood's."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p1030 D 5 '29 400w

BLAIR, WILLIAM REID. In the Zoo; representing twenty-seven years of observation and study of the animals in the New York zoological park; foreword by Madison Grant. 195p il $2.50 (10s 6d) Scribner

590.7 New York (city). Zoological park. Zoology. Animals—Habits and behavior 29-21581

Dr Blair, director and general curator of the New York zoological park, bases his book upon several years' observation and study of animals in captivity. He tells how the animals are bought, cared for, fed, treated when sick, etc. The birth and care of the babies of the Zoo is one of the book's most interesting contributions to information on wild life.

BLAIR, W: R.—Continued

"Scores of interesting and amusing anecdotes of animals fill the pages of the book. Dr. Blair knows how to make his charges interesting as well as how to keep them well. Some traditions and superstitions about the bear's hug and the ostrich hiding its head are exploded. Altogether it is a fine popular short course in zo-ology."
+ Boston Transcript p4 N 13 '29 220w

Reviewed by Joe Gould
N Y Evening Post p13m D 21 '29 80w

"One reads the book with a sense of dependability, because it is evident from the start that Dr. Blair writes about animals only what he has seen and himself knows to be true. He does not imagine or embroider or indulge in sentiment or conjecture. Instead, he sets down in crisp, brief sentences the simple truth as he has observed it. And whoever likes animals will find in the book a wonderful lot of varied and interesting knowledge."
+ N Y Times p32 O 20 '29 360w
Times [London] Lit Sup p970 N 21 '29 250w

BLAKE, MRS EMILY (CALVIN). Third weaver. 252p $2.50 Willett
29-21926

Thaisa's marriage to Peter Dagmar, a discontented dreamer, was the result of a childlike, romantic attachment on her part, and on his part a blundering ignorance of Thaisa's temperament and needs. A separation followed. The War came and Peter entered service, while Thaisa went to live in a deserted Oregon homestead and supported herself and the child born to her there, by loom-weaving. Ian Trevor, who had always loved her, helped her when he could; but he too enlisted, and was killed at the front. When Peter sought Thaisa after the War, however, and saw for the first time his young son, he and Thaisa rectified their former mistakes and disillusionments, and were reunited.

Bookm 70:xxvi D '29 150w
Boston Transcript p7 D 14 '29 450w

"The novelist has attempted to weave a large tapestry and has not always succeeded in keeping it uniform in texture or compact in design. There is a perceptible straining for effect, a stylistic self-consciousness that distracts the reader's attention and works against his enjoyment. . . Although the course of the action takes us from England by way of New York and Chicago to Oregon, there is little to connect that action with the great currents of the life of the time in the broader sense. The life of the characters is too isolated from other life." L. E. Cannon
— + Christian Century 46:1506 D 4 '29 350w

"The author has done her best to picture a lovely girl, hungry for beauty. She has succeeded only to a small extent, the picture being blurred by over-exposure. Thaisa is too ethereal, to a point of exasperation."
— N Y Times p26 N 10 '29 420w

BLAKE, GEORGE. Path of glory. 224p $2.50 Harper [6s Constable]
29-26894

Col Macaulay and his friend John Macleod, workers at Clydeside shipyards, enlist as pipers in a Highland regiment. While at training camp Col courts and marries Kirsty, who deceives him during his first absence on duty. Col thrashes the woman and her lover, and with John Macleod goes out to fight and die at Gallipoli.

"The story is simple, realistic, authentic. Mr. Blake knows Scots and Scots English. He knows army life as millions knew it in the great war. He makes his readers realize to no little extent the vast amount of drudgery, folly, cruelty and suffering that are comprised in modern war. He has done an honest, forceful and, at times, a touching book." F. E. Hill
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ag 4 '29 350w

"It is no light task to write a novel the principal character of which is as inarticulate in his private thought as in what he says to others. Yet without some account of the inarticulate soldier the picture of the war in fiction would have been incomplete. Mr. Blake has solved the problem which he set himself by means of a really remarkable feat of artistic rigidity." E. S.
+ New Statesman 33:184 My 18 '29 550w

"It has two excellences: First, it presents what seems to be a very accurate account of the average Scots soldier's life and point of view. Second, it deals with the lamentable campaign on Gallipoli. Both these aspects of the general conflagration have been comparatively neglected in novels about the war. But it is in the day-by-day accounts of trench fighting in Gallipoli that Mr. Blake achieves his most substantial contribution to the story of the war. Much has been written of that tragic episode, but it has remained for Mr. Blake to write—with admirable detachment—a clear and convincing story of the private soldier's part in fruitless attempts to take positions not worth capturing, and of his existence in a territory where the menace of disease was greater than that of the enemy's bullets."
+ N Y Times p9 Je 23 '29 430w

"Mr. George Blake's straightforward unsentimental narrative shows unexpected depths of emotion, and that emotion is of the most harrowing kind. One cannot praise too highly its fairness, its restraint, its power, shown on every page, of extracting from the welter of battle significant and illuminating incidents. The whole book has a dignity of attitude and elevation of tone which never falter and which raise it, though written in the plainest style, to the stature of poetry." L. P. Hartley
+ Sat R 147:582 Ap 27 '29 160w

Reviewed by H: S. Canby
Sat R of Lit 5:1087 Je 8 '29 100w

"This is beyond question one of the best War novels that have been written. Passionately vital and sincere, remorselessly realistic and ironical, yet pervaded by whimsical humor and a sensitive vein of poetry, it is an absorbing and heart-rending story."
+ Spec 143:60 Jl 13 '29 310w

"It is a grim story, and makes no concession whatever to sentiment."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p666 Ag 29 '29 420w
Wis Lib Bul 25:195 Je '29

BLAKE, MABELLE BABCOCK, and others. Education of the modern girl; with introd. by William Allan Neilson. 219p $3 Houghton
376 Education of women 29-10616

Eight essays, by as many women, most of them connected with girls' preparatory schools. Contents: Home influences, by M. B. Blake; Academic influences, by Caroline Ruutz-Rees; The spirit of the school and religion, by M. R. Hillard; Athletic influence, by Jessie Hewitt; College or not, by Dorothy Waldo; The future trend of the private school, by L. M. Wing; The influence of summer camps, by M. A. Elcock; Partners all, by Frances Lee.

Bookm 70:viii S '29 100w

"There is occasionally an over-emphasis on abstract educational terms, though the book is extraordinarily free from that sort of patter. It is a conservative little volume, but conservative, one feels, because of an ardent faith in the present order. And as President Neilson says, the contributors write from a high level of intelligence and intention." H. F. Whicher
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Jl 14 '29 320w
Boston Transcript p5 My 25 '29 1100w
Cleveland Open Shelf p115 S '29
+ J Home Econ 21:450 Je '29 130w

"Although the papers composing the volume are necessarily short and concerned for the most part with the primary factors of their themes, they are the outcome of long and rich experience and should prove helpful and illuminating not only to parents of girls but to their teachers and to the girls themselves."
+ N Y Times p21 My 12 '29 430w

Pratt p12 autumn '29

"The book may be said to tap widely the springs of careful thinking and rich experience." D. J. Banks
+ School R 37:707 N '29 900w

"The book is a clear and authoritative affirmation of the status quo, not an attempt to solve freshly the problems that beset those who are trying to help educate the modern girl." H. W. Smith
+ Survey 62:615 S 15 '29 650w

BLAKE, WILLIAM. Land of dreams; twenty poems, sel. and illus. by Pamela Bianco. 42p $2 Macmillan

821 28-22247

From Blake's poems of childhood Pamela Bianco has selected the poems for this book, and has illustrated them with her naïve and charming drawings. Most of the selections are from "Songs of Innocence."

Booklist 25:173 Ja '29

"Fragile and pensive as Italian Primitives, Pamela Bianco's drawings will certainly appeal to children—and grown-ups—who care for the poems of Blake."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 6 '29 200w

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren
Nation 127:548 N 21 '28 130w

"The wild ethereal delicacy of Pamela Bianco's drawings has found beautiful material in this collection of Blake's 'innocent' poems." Isabelle Houck
+ N Y World p11m D 23 '28 100w

St Louis 27:139 Ap '29

"To acquaint a child with poetry such as is contained in Blake's 'Songs of Innocence,' decorated with designs so beautifully naïve as those of Pamela Bianco, one of the artistic prodigies of our time, is to develop early a sense of discrimination in regard to beauty. We can recommend the present impeccably presented thin book as a delight to the child who is at all artistically inclined. This is an excellent introduction to the poetry of Blake, illustrated with the rarest delicacy."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:482 D 8 '28 130w

BLAKER, RICHARD. Jefferson secret; a mystery with love and without a murder (Eng title Umpire's game). 274p $2 Doubleday, Doran

29-14757

Jefferson, Sr. has discovered a formula that will revolutionize the steel industry. Jefferson Jr., recovering from a disastrous blow to his young affections, is entrusted with the formula. Certain evil gentry try to relieve him of it; but with luck and wit and a change of heart, the Jefferson secret is saved.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books ( NY Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 7 '29 100w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 31 '29 200w

"It is rather an entertaining yarn. It does seem, however, in view of the fuss that is made about it, that the author might have told us just what it was that happened in Singapore some years before the story opens."
+ — N Y Times p16 Ag 18 '29 200w

"There isn't much here to attract the average reader, and the only mystery seems to be why so shallow a travesty of plot should have been strung out to almost regulation novel length."
— N Y World p7m Jl 7 '29 100w

"It is doubtful if the real mystery addict will care much for this crimeless account of a lost formula, but there are many readers who enjoy being a bit puzzled by their fiction yet have little taste for the gory propensities of current thrillers. 'The Jefferson Secret' will be just to their liking."
Sat R of Lit 5:181 Jl 13 '29 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p437 My 30 '29 110w

BLASCO IBANEZ, VICENTE. Unknown lands; the story of Columbus; tr. from the Spanish by Arthur Livingston. 270p $2.50 Dutton

Columbus, Christopher—Fiction 29-6183

The story of two young lovers who sailed as brothers with Columbus on his first voyage to America. Altho their way was beset with much difficulty they returned in safety to Spain.

Booklist 25:321 My '29

"This last novel of the popular Spanish author is primarily a richly-detailed story of adventure and discovery."
Bookm 69:xxv Je '29 100w

"With the background of the period, Ibañez is much more successful than he is with the plot of the story. . . The last book of Ibañez is neither his best nor his worst. His soundest claim to literary fame still rests upon his quite early and purely regional novels, and his claim to popularity upon such inferior, but readable books, as 'The Four Horsemen,' and 'Our Sea.'" Herschel Brickell
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Mr 17 '29 900w

"Perhaps the best pages in this story are those dealing with the life at the convent and on shipboard; both these have an atmosphere of reality, a charm of vivid portrayal not found elsewhere. It is not the best thing Blasco Ibanez has done, but it is an interesting achievement, and the translation is unusually true to the spirit of the original." G. R. B. R.
+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 23 '29 330w

Cleveland Open Shelf p77 My '29

"Mr. Livingston's excellent translation gives us the glow and color, as well as the restless, somewhat wordy flow of the original. Action is swift and constant; there are happy, descriptive bits from the Discoverer's own 'Diary.' Columbus himself, half prophet, half charlatan, is well drawn." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 9 '29 100w

N Y Times p7 Mr 17 '29 520w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 227:adv Ap '29 100w

"Only in incidental passages devoted to the Inquisition (and once each to a violent storm and to an ordinary sea-sickness) does the expected descriptive power materialize." J. D. Tasker
— + Outlook 151:428 Mr 13 '29 270w

"In this instance discriminating readers will be disappointed. Blasco Ibáñez has turned out a neat, workmanlike, and uninspired historical romance of the time of Columbus. He has done his job dexterously, but it is all too plainly only a job."
— + Sat R of Lit 6:42 Ag 10 '29 450w

BLATZ, WILLIAM EMET, and BOTT, MRS HELEN. Parents and the pre-school child; with a foreword by Sidonie M. Gruenberg. 340p $3 Morrow [6s Dent]

136.7 Child study. Children—Care and hygiene. Children—Management 29-6834

"A guide to parents, so that they may work their way intelligently through the complex maze of habits, controls and relationships of the pre-school child. The emphasis is almost entirely on prevention and not the cure of abnormalities. The authors have presented to parents an almost exhaustive examination of the many difficulties with which they are confronted in child life, from birth to the time when the different and entirely fresh problems of school begin."—Churchman

Booklist 25:305 My '29

BLATZ, W: E., and BOTT, H.—Continued

"Its pseudo-profound terminology does not mask its omission of much important material."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Ap 28 '29 70w

"It is sane, scientific, intelligible and unsentimental."

+ Christian Century 46:967 Jl 31 '29 50w

Reviewed by R. P. Kreitler

Churchman 139:16 My 11 '29 260w

J Home Econ 21:606 Ag '29 120w

Reviewed by E. L. Vincent

Survey 62:143 Ap 15 '29 130w

"It is unfortunate that obscurity of style should make the assimilation of this work a formidable undertaking, since its material deserves consideration."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p967 D 6 '29 170w

BLODGETT, RUTH. Birds got to fly. 324p $2.50 Harcourt

29-17921

Rosanne was the product of ultra-fashionable New York; Alexander was New Englander to the core. This is the story of Rosanne's struggle to readjust herself to the Boston point of view and how she succeeded.

---

Booklist 26:118 D '29

Bookm 70:322 N '29 30w

Reviewed by A. B. Parsons

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p29 S 15 '29 630w

"The Porter clan is exceedingly well drawn . . . Miss Blodgett is very successful in drawing rather phlegmatic, free from temperament characters, but having brought them to life it almost seems as if she were not sure just how to dispose of them. It is rather a pity that such splendid material should be wasted on the trivial complications of this story." M. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 S 21 '29 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p142 N '29

"It is quick reading, interesting reading as far as it goes, but it doesn't go quite far enough. For a book like this needs excellent characterization, living people, real events. And the author falls short of that reality."

+ — N Y Times p7 S 8 '29 430w

"The atmosphere is truthful, the characterization vivid and convincing, the action sufficiently vigorous to hold the attention, the interest well sustained to the last word. The best artisanship is shown in the climactic ending—an unusually brilliant denouement—a most difficult achievement even for an experienced novel-writer." C. W. Smith

+ Portland Evening News p5 D 4 '29 230w

"This novel has plot, situation, and poise; it conveys character and conversation; it has a theme and a philosophy of life; but its characters are cardboard figures, and their action is entirely mechanical."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:324 O 26 '29 240w

Wis Lib Bul 25:323 O '29

BLUNDEN, EDMUND CHARLES. Nature in English literature. (Hogarth lectures on literature ser.) 156p $1.25 Harcourt [3s 6d Hogarth press]

820.9 Nature in literature. English literature —History and criticism 29-21287

The love of nature as expressed by the famous English poets, and nature essays in prose, are commented upon and analyzed, and compared with selections also from lesser known authors.

---

Booklist 26:109 D '29

"Mr. Blunden handles a congenial theme with adequate scholarship and infectious relish."

+ Bookm 70:456 D '29 300w

"An excellent nature poet himself, Mr. Blunden brings to his subject a sympathy and knowledge which makes his study both a delightful and informative discourse."

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 28 '29 200w

"He knows, and he is able to make known to us, the source and the substance of his delight. Every man who has felt as he feels is his friend; and every man who has written of what he has felt is his brother. Hence his enthusiasm for Collins and Clare; hence his indulgent demeanour towards those two rather tedious fellows, Robert Bloomfield and Stephen Duck." D. M. Stuart

+ Nation and Ath 45:510 Jl 13 '29 720w

"The mere title of Mr. Blunden's book is enough to show that the subject can but be glanced at; and all we can ask of Mr. Blunden is that his glance should be penetrating and his comments wise. And what we ask we get. The variety, considering that the whole book is but a hundred and fifty pages, is surprising, and the specimens collected are of every kind."

+ New Statesman 33:416 Jl 6 '29 430w

"Fate is definitely unkind so rarely to provide gratification for one's desire to listen to some true man of letters who is a thorough master of his subject, holds his audience in respect and speaks with fluency, grace and precision. Mr. Blunden's book is the newest one in the admirable series of Hogarth Lectures, and I should think that by this time the Hogarth Lectures would inspire our American critics to emulation." G. B. Munson

+ N Y Evening Post p10m O 19 '29 400w

"Poetry is his particular field of inquiry, and he hardly pays any attention to the revelation of nature in English prose; he deliberately chooses not to deal with such master painters of the out-of-doors as Hardy and Hudson; but, within his own favored territory, he succeeds in casting many revealing lights and in giving us a work that is both studious and informative."

+ N Y Times p39 O 27 '29 380w

"Mr. Edmund Blunden has done an admirable piece of critical work; in fact, we can think of no writer in England who could have reviewed the subject so clearly and with such felicity in the choice of studies."

+ Spec 143:129 Jl 27 '29 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p533 Jl 4 '29 1150w

BLUNDEN, EDMUND CHARLES. Undertones of war. 342p $3.50 Doubleday, Doran [10s 6d Cobden-Sanderson]

940.48 European war, 1914-1918—Personal narratives 29-8806

The impress of the war upon the mind of a poet has resulted in this beautifully written book of "Undertones" with a brief supplement of "Poetical interpretations and variations." In these pages Mr Blunden recaptures his whole experience of the war and its effect upon him.

---

Booklist 25:315 My '29

"Impressive as a record, and illuminating in its picture of the lack of correlation, the stupidity and the confusion which marched along the front. Though the significance of the record has its place in this book, even more important is the fine-wrought art of the narrative. This makes Mr. Blunden's story a creative thing, the most lovely record of a war that was on the whole ugliness and destruction." F. E. Hill

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Mr 31 '29 1100w

"Mr. Blunden's verse strikes me as bad. It does not belong in my category of true poetry." J. B. Wharton

— Nation 129:69 Jl 17 '29 120w

"My only complaint against this very worth while book is that Blunden is too much of a gentleman. Loyalty keeps him from heaping the shames on the horrors. Almost everyone he mentions is more or less of a good fellow, or a stout fellow at least; the troops are seen in massacre, but never in stampede with our own machine-guns rallying them." Robert Graves

+ — Nation and Ath 44:420 D 15 '28 680w

"Mr. Blunden's book is charmingly written, deeply felt and recalled to mind with great integrity. It remains, however, merely an external narrative of things that happened."

N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 23 '29 220w

"A skillful and tender volume of memories, not alone of horror but of the beauty that wandered like a foundling through the squalor of conflict." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 20 '29 110w

"The reader is placed in contact with the great struggle through the medium of a mind more than ordinarily sensitive."

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 17 '29 820w

"Mr. Blunden is not the mere civilian soldier shocked into articulateness. The bibliography at the end of the volume, the poetry that concludes it, but most of all the main narrative, establishes that. In the midst of horrible death and the long stultification of routine he sees those glimpses of mutilated but imperishable beauty that the worst acts of man never entirely obliterated." R. H. Mottram

+ Sat R 146:728 D 1 '28 1250w

"Blunden is a very gifted writer. If one cannot quite match the very best moments of Tomlinson or Sassoon, it is nevertheless not such a bad life if one comes near them. . . Behind the lines with Blunden there is much that is allusive, mainly to be relished by the caste of writing men, and by comrades, friends of Blunden, in his own army. But there is no disassociation when he writes of action. There we are carried with him and see what he sees, feel what he feels, without intervention. That is a great achievement." F. V. Morley

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:993 My 11 '29 2200w

"He writes, as he tells us, in undertones, but the image and horror of war are presented here as no other writer about the Great War has quite presented them. . . Mr. Blunden looks at the War first through the eyes of prose and then through the eyes of poetry, and in both forms the undertones are able to shake the reader with vibrations which would hardly have reached him from a full diapason."

+ Spec 141:822 D 1 '28 800w

"Mr. Blunden's gifts and training ensure a prose of the utmost flexibility and beauty. If one has no interest in its subject, this book is worth reading as a great example of English prose. There is nothing startling about it; in prose as in poetry Mr Blunden is conservative; but it possesses that rare feeling for word and rhythm which enables it to treat simplicities of life without vulgarity, and to rise to the greatest emotional heights without rhetoric." H. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 24 '29 2000w

"It is, in the first place, a very able record of the infantryman's existence in France and Flanders: faithful, observant and precise. But that is only its exterior merit. There is a great deal more to be found in it by the imaginative, a sort of essence of the battlefields."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p949 D 6 '28 1050w

BOARDMAN, RUBY. Poems. 2d ed 95p $2 Dodd [6s Lane]

821

Short poems with a European and classical background. The book has three divisions: 1924; 1926; 1928.

---

Reviewed by C: Divine

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 26 '29 30w

Boston Transcript p5 Mr 23 '29 100w

"Unprofessional Miss Boardman palpably is; or her professionalism, her archness, whimsical naughtiness, shrill gaiety, belong to a field which is certainly not the field of literature." P. Q.

New Statesman 33:49 Ap 20 '29 50w

"Miss Boardman's greatest virtue is the one she has evidently spent little time in cultivating. She can write a very witty comment in a very few lines, and if she would nurture this one aspect of her talent she might become an individual and irreplaceable spirit. But for the most part the poems in this volume are ordinary enough." J: Chamberlain

— + N Y Times p20 Je 2 '29 160w

"Those verses reveal rather a pert than a significant modernity. They are individual, impulsive, and concise, but they flicker brightly over the surface of things without really illuminating them. . . Miss Boardman has, however, at her best, a light touch, a lively fancy, and generous eagerness, which experience may in time enrich with meaning."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p102 F 7 '29 110w

BOAS, FRANZ. Anthropology and modern life. 246p $3 Norton [10s 6d Allen, G.]

573 Anthropology. Social problems. Civilization 28-29158

" 'Anthropology and Modern Life' is the author's first 'popular' book since his 'Mind of Primitive Man.' The problems he then discussed —environment, race and culture, evolution and progress, modern and primitive culture—are here once more passed in review. But there are also new topics untouched before; criminology, eugenics and education."—N Y Evening Post

---

"A wandering but thought-provoking discourse, usually clear and helpful but here and there, as in the chapter on criminology, almost naïve." D. Y.

+ — Ann Am Acad 146:282 N '29 150w

Booklist 25:196 F '29

Bookm 69:xxiii Mr '29 330w

"His book is a readable exposition of some of the more startling developments in current thought."

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 22 '28 250w

Int J Ethics 39:511 Jl '29 150w

"In the compass of this short volume Franz Boas accomplishes the annihilation of the bases of almost all the prejudices and passions on which modern society rests, and arrives by the least spectacular kind of reasoning at revolutionary and yet strangely hopeful conclusions." Freda Kirchwey

+ Nation 127:689 D 19 '28 800w

Nature 124:754 N 16 '29 510w

Reviewed by E: Sapir

New Repub 57:278 Ja 23 '29 650w

Reviewed by Dr Alexander Goldenweiser

N Y Evening Post p9m D 29 '28 780w

Reviewed by Gregory Mason

N Y Times p11 Mr 24 '29 730w

"There is no dogma in the book. Even when Dr Boas is stating something he firmly believes . . . he is arguing inductively and not deductively, and that science is not dogmatic. This book is extremely valuable and one that should act as a corrosive on a dozen or so very popular social prejudices." C. H. Grattan

+ N Y World p11e Ja 6 '29 550w

Pratt p14 summer '29

St Louis 27:92 Mr '29

"His writings have been for the most part for selected students. His recent book, 'Anthropology and Modern Life' is, however, couched in such language as to invite the attention of the general reader." E. P. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 My 27 '29 780w

Times [London] Lit Sup p570 Jl 18 '29 1000w

World Tomorrow 12:91 F '29 40w

"With no special theological axe to grind, Boas makes clear the worth not only of some of the results, but of the methods of anthropological research." Donald Slesinger

+ Yale Law J 38:694 Mr '29 1380w

BOAS, GEORGE. Adventures of human thought; [2] the major traditions of European philosophy. 497p $4 Harper; text ed. with title The major traditions of European philosophy, Harper $3

109 Philosophy—History 29-12697

The author, associate professor of philosophy at Johns Hopkins university, gives an account of the more important philosophers and the essence of their doctrines, beginning with the earliest philosophers of Greece and her colonies and continuing thru the countries of Europe, to today, with a brief chapter on American philosophy.

---

Booklist 26:54 N '29

"Because of the author's treatment of his theme, his book is not only a digest but also a history of philosophy, justifying the claim of its publishers that it fills in the gaps which usually occur in similar works. There are a handsome bibliography and a series of self-testing interrogations as well as the usual index."

+ Bookm 70:xii D '29 100w

Boston Transcript p3 N 23 '29 550w

"The exposition is, for the most part, somewhat colorless and such criticisms of the various systems as are presented are somewhat incidental and not always very illuminating, as when the author waves aside one aspect of Santayana's teaching with the comment that it is 'a bit too Byronic to be taken seriously.' Such defects as exist in the treatment of the modern period are, however, chiefly incident to extreme brevity. The story of American philosophy simply can't be told in 16 pages."

— Christian Century 46:1513 D 4 '29 120w

"In this volume we have a brief but adequate and authoritative history of philosophy, written in an engaging simplicity of style, and linked with the interests of history, science, and literature, which give form and significance to the ventures of human reason, and in turn affect those interests. How more interesting or simply expounded philosophy could be made than it is in this volume presented, it is difficult to imagine, if at the same time fidelity to the thought of the philosophers is maintained. The chapter on America, however, we regret to say, seems utterly inadequate. Under the title of the book one does not look for a treatment of the movements or contributions of American philosophy. The chapter might as well have been omitted." S. B. Meeser

+ — Crozer Q 6:508 O '29 700w

"Though the exposition is clear and straightforward, and not devoid of illuminating comments, it passes rather lightly from one philosopher to another. A division of the number of pages by the number of men indicates that such a result was inevitable, unless the author had conformed to his title by restricting his discussion to major philosophers; and perhaps such a restriction would have been inadvisable. At any rate, since the defects of the book are due to the nature of its task rather than to the author, it is only fair to emphasize the fact that to write a clear and interesting history of all of European philosophy is no mean accomplishment." C. M. Perry

+ — Int J Ethics 40:141 O '29 160w

BOAS, RALPH PHILIP, and BOAS, LOUISE SCHUTZ. Cotton Mather, keeper of the Puritan conscience. 271p il $3.50 (12s 6d) Harper

B or 92 Mather, Cotton 28-27598

The frequent quotations from the writings of Cotton Mather and from other contemporary sources illuminate the character of this famous Puritan and give to his well-written biography an increased flavor of his times.

---

Booklist 25:209 F '29

Churchman 138:20 D 22 '28 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p61 Ap '29

"Cotton Mather is distinguished by the reticence and judgment of its authors who have managed to tell all that one needs to know of a second-rate man—who was a figure of the first importance—while recognizing his secondary place. An interesting, intelligently executed work of difficult biography."

+ Dial 86:438 My '29 80w

"In these pleasantly written pages psychology is skilfully used to explain the seeming contradictions of Cotton Mather's neurotic character." V. L: Parrington

+ Nation 128:137 Ja 30 '29 920w

"As a picture of New England life in the early eighteenth century, in which witchcraft figures prominently, the book before us is both instructive and entertaining. We could, however, have dispensed with the final chapter, in which the writers fall into the prevalent folly of supposing that, with our modern psychoanalysis, we are at last in a position to plumb all the tangled depths of human personality."

+ — Nation and Ath 45:sup138 Ap 27 '29 180w

"So far as is humanly possible the authors have spared this hapless man. They wished to be scrupulously fair to him, and they have been. They have used incidents selected for color, for drama, for sketching in the background, and have quoted liberally from the rude old chronicles; the result is a very fine biography of Cotton Mather, and another book as long as this one might be written with the things they have left out." K. A. Porter

+ N Y Evening Post p8m N 3 '28 820w

"To anyone who wants an insight into the Puritan mind, its dignity and its pitiful delusions, this book will give it, and with it a highly illuminating picture of the intimate life of the times, presented with charm, understanding and illuminating scholarship." Arthur Strawn

+ N Y World p10m F 3 '29 760w

"Mr. and Mrs. Boas have succeeded in making the two Mathers interesting figures, no small feat when all is said and done." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv Ja '29 130w

Reviewed by Van Wyck Brooks

Outlook 151:190 Ja 30 '29 520w

Pratt p34 spring '29

St Louis 27:100 Mr '29

"Unfortunately the book has more than its share of small errors in fact and of hazardous generalizations which distort the picture. It is well that Cotton Mather, if he is to be remembered at all, should be dealt with in a book as well written and as entertaining as this, but it is a pity that it must so often disappoint the reader who seeks not only entertainment but historical truth. Moreover it is woefully incomplete." K. B. Murdock

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:1146 Je 29 '29 700w

"This volume studies the man in all his distances and guises, employing critical acumen, literary art, and psychological analysis." J. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 9 '28 1400w

"Their biography is of such admirable restraint and good sense that Mather emerges as a figure of quite unusual interest."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p108 F 14 '29 880w

Wis Lib Bul 25:126 Ap '29

World Tomorrow 12:186 Ap '29 40w

BOBBE, MRS DOROTHIE (DE BEAR). Abigail Adams, the second first lady. (Biographies of unusual Americans) 336p il $3.50 Minton

B or 92 Adams, Abigail (Smith) (Mrs John Adams) 29-6040

A biographical study of that very vital woman, Abigail Adams, remarkable by her own right apart from the fact that she was the wife of the second president of the United States. Her letters, written to John Adams during his long absences, have given her a place among the most enjoyable of letter-writers.

---

Booklist 25:318 My '29

"Miss Bobbé has drawn a good picture of early Colonial life in America."
+ Bookm 69:iv Ag '29 80w

"When people can present themselves as superbly as this [through her letters], the biographer is in danger of making his presentment of them a water color rendering of the original etching; and it must be admitted that Dorothie Bobbé's 'Abigail Adams' gives a somewhat weakened and diffused version of its subject. It is the technique of the book which is to blame for this; the intention, the stratagem of attack, is praiseworthy." S. T. Warner
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Mr 10 '29 2000w

"It reveals not only the personality of a remarkable woman, but that of John Adams also, for they cannot be separated, and it depicts very vividly the atmosphere of Colonial Boston, with its quaint manners, customs and costumes and of England and France as well." F. M. W.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 20 '29 1050w
Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p5 Jl 13 '29 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p107 Jl '29

"Under the pages of racy, historical summarization lies a bony structure of research. It is sound, well thought out. After considerable study Mrs. Bobbé has painted her picture with zest and humanity." C. A. Chapman
+ New Repub 59:132 Je 19 '29 200w

"An interesting study of an interesting woman, though one would wish more emphasis had been placed on Abby, less on John and still less on the American Revolution." Edwin Seaver
— + N Y Evening Post p10m F 23 '29 80w

"This is a readable book, presenting a human being and not an historical puppet. The author has told her story in an ingratiating manner." Harry Hansen
+ N Y World p10m Mr 10 '29 1000w

"A good piece of work." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 227:adv Ap '29 50w

'Dorothie Bobbe has executed an unusually fine biography. There is nothing to my knowledge that has been written about this talented housewife, philosopher, suffragist, mother, politician and patriot, neither by Gamaliel Bradford nor by Meade Minnigerode, that equals this accurate and yet ingratiating study." E. M. Benson
+ Outlook 151:389 Mr 6 '29 220w
Pratt p33 autumn '29
Sat R of Lit 6:132 S 14 '29 200w
Wis Lib Bul 25:159 My '29

BODEN, FREDERICK C. Out of the coal fields. 71p $1.75 Dutton [3s Dent] 821

"Last year Mr. Boden published a volume of indignant verse from the pithead. Since then kind friends, including the Poet Laureate, have taken him out of that life and enabled him to be at Exeter University College. From there he publishes this second volume. His indignation has naturally become less personal, and its violence is consequently less interesting."—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Boston Transcript p4 Je 29 '29 230w

"Here is a poet of rare quality, a singer of the same kind as Burns, William Barnes, or W. H. Davies, creatures of irrepressible lyric genius. We have yet to watch the effect of freedom and leisure on this poet, who can now give all his vitality to the passionate idleness of Blake's 'mental strife.'" R: Church
+ Spec 142:789 My 18 '29 600w

"His language is still that of A. E. Housman, most of the metres of the Shropshire Lad are there, but now, where his voice is not that of Housman, it is that of other poets in the line of Blake, and not, as occasionally in his previous poems, his own. The new poems contain more larks and hawthorns and wild roses, but not any lyrical effect. Mr. Boden—it is natural considering the bitterness of the life he was born to, but perhaps unfortunate if he is to be a poet—does not seem to feel at all the immanence of beauty in the savage places of his birth."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p366 My 2 '29 130w

BODENHEIM, MAXWELL. Sixty seconds. 280p $2 Liveright
29-6451

"John Musselman was standing in one of the death-cells of a state-penitentiary and starting his last minute of life on earth." In that one moment John reviews the sex disappointments of his life from his first experience to the last when the woman he idealized tires of their passionate interlude and leaves him. It is one betrayal too many, and he murders her.

---

"If you can ignore the major premise, you will find here a story of huge, writhing vitality and striking phraseology." M. C. Dawson
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ap 14 '29 620w

"In his attack on the evils of certain existing conditions, conditions that even the smuggest, most conventional, most self-satisfied, must admit to be wrong—the author succeeds in creating in his reader an antagonistic, rather than friendly, frame of mind. . . Were the chief character of different calibre, were the numerous women he knew not so fundamentally of one kind, were the author's purpose plainer, and his tolerance larger, a different opinion might have been written of this book in which is recognized both force and vigor."
— + N Y Times p14 Ap 7 '29 400w

"The story is not a pretty one and the squeamish—for whom the book is not intended—may sniff at parts of it, but it is undeniably powerful and compelling, written with the author's usual candor and intense earnestness."
— + N Y World p11m Mr 24 '29 230w

"When Maxwell Bodenheim writes a novel he turns instinctively to diatribe. . . The idea of reconstructing the protagonist's sex past in sixty seconds is a worthy one. But it is done with such technical slovenliness, and with so little artistic discretion, that the idea becomes no more than a blind to veil an otherwise mediocre treatise on the opinions of Maxwell Bodenheim." E. M. Benson
— Outlook 151:514 Mr 27 '29 220w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 14 '29 110w

BOECKEL, MRS FLORENCE BREWER. Between war and peace; a handbook for peace workers. 591p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan
172.4 Peace. War 28-25157

The Education director of the National council for the prevention of war has written a handbook for the use of Americans working for peace. The book surveys the peace movement and the international influences for and against peace, and offers at the close a working program of organized effort in the cause of peace.

---

"In spite of its avowed bias it is a temperate, reasoned presentation of the arguments for peace and of the methods which can be used to bring it about."
+ Am J Soc 35:160 Jl '29 80w
Booklist 25:193 F '29
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 D 30 '28 150w

"The book should prove extremely useful to students of ethics, politics, and education and to various discussion groups. For it touches a great many angles of the peace problem, gives a large bibliography, supplies many addresses, and, above all, suggests throughout practical plans to promote the much needed 'world mindedness.'" K. F. Leidecker
+ Int J Ethics 39:381 Ap '29 250w

"It is primarily intended for the use of American peace-workers out of touch with national organizations. But it contains so full and impartial an account of the work and aims of both unofficial and official peace organizations throughout the world that it should appeal to a very much larger public. The comprehensive bibliography and index alone recommend it."

BOECKEL, F. B.—Continued
+ Nation and Ath 45:84 Ap 20 '29 100w
Pratt p8 summer '29

"Anybody who has tried to pull together the slenderest array of facts on the peace movement can appreciate the long days Mrs. Boeckel has put in on this job. But verily she has her reward, for it belongs in the category of books which are really indispensable in spite of being called that by reviewers. She has aimed at practicality and given us an eminently usable tool. The problems of peace are comprehensively handled, and the distinctive approach of every significant organization 'working for peace' is sympathetically presented." Devere Allen
+ Survey 62:415 Jl 1 '29 620w
Wis Lib Bul 25:26 Ja '29

"It is invaluable as a reference book. But it must not be used as a textbook, because the introductory chapter sets forth an unsound philosophy of reform. Mrs. Boeckel read, thought, and wrote in Washington as a Washingtonian, with the shadow of the Capitol or the War Department Building across every page. She sees what goes on at Washington, but does not see in its proper proportion what goes on behind it throughout the country." R. P. Barnes
+ — World Tomorrow 12:138 Mr '29 680w

BOEHN, MAX von. Miniatures and silhouettes; tr. by E. K. Walker. 214p il $5 Dutton [15s Dent]
757 Miniature painting. Silhouettes 28-13004

A review of miniature painting beginning with its origin in the illuminated manuscripts of the Middle ages and coming down to the late eighteenth century, the period of its highest development.

Booklist 25:151 Ja '29

"Though apparently put forward as covering the whole field, in reality this volume deals with the silhouette and miniature in England and Europe only. There are 200 illustrations in half-tone and forty plates in colour, of quite ordinary quality, interspersed throughout a discussion which has the general effect of guidebook commentary—popular in tone, frequently gratuitous, and not, it would seem, very carefully informed."
— + Dial 86:268 Mr '29 100w
Sat R 145:602 My 12 '28 250w

"Too little attention has been paid to connecting the art to the trend of the great schools of painting. The English reader will perhaps resent the amount of space devoted to the French and German schools compared with his own—an art so eminently English—and the American reader will be disappointed to find no mention of a Trumbull, a Sully, a Malbone, or a Trott. The omission of the location of collections of most of the Miniatures illustrated, of a list or even an indication of the public and private collections, and of a short bibliography are all serious, as is that of an account of modern work in this charming and intimate field."
— Sat R of Lit 5:1165 Jl 6 '29 230w
Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 7 '29 450w

BOEHN, MAX von. Modes & manners: ornaments; tr. from the German. 273p il $5 Dutton [15s Dent]
391 Costume

A description, with illustrations, of costume accessories, ornaments, etc., which have accompanied the progress of fashion thruout the ages. The author gives the history of lace, fans, gloves, walking-sticks, parasols and umbrellas, jewelry and trinkets.

"This volume will form a pendant to Fischel and Boehn's admirable and too-little-studied Modes and Manners of the Nineteenth Century. That fascinating compilation dealt with the vagaries of nineteenth-century dress, and sought to provide the extravagances of fashion with a background of social change. Here one of its joint authors undertakes the history of ornament; he describes, for example, jewellery, laces, gloves, furs, walking-sticks and umbrellas. The section which traces the development of the fan is particularly good. The book is well and fully illustrated."
+ New Statesman 34:sup xvi N 9 '29 120w

"In the supplementary volume to the 'Modes and Manners' series, ornaments for the person are studied and illustrated with that knowledge and enthusiasm that were so entertaining in the former volumes on dress. The pictures alone are a feast, from the lady promenading in 1776, with her fan and her long elegant cane, to the snuff-boxes in the collection of Frederick the Great."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p897 N 7 '29 800w

BOGAN, LOUISE (MRS RAYMOND PECKHAM HOLDEN). Dark summer. 72p $2.50 Scribner 811 29-20124

"Dark summer" contains several lyrics reprinted from Miss Bogan's earlier volume, "Body of this death," and a number of new lyrics notable for their technical precision and an emotional restraint that aids the deft presentation of idea. A longer narrative poem, "The flume," and a dialogue between two voices, "Summer wish," are also included.

"The slightest of Louise Bogan's lyrics has a finished perfection rare in these days of hysterical writing. The various 'songs'—'Chanson un peu naive,' 'Girl's Song,' 'Song for a Slight Voice,' 'Second Song'—well deserve their titles. Everything is seen freshly and set down with delicate integrity." M. E. P.
+ Boston Transcript p4 N 23 '29 450w

"At the time when so much of poetry is merely energetic echoing or forced attempt at individuality, we have among us those few, and among them Louise Bogan, who are not only excellent technicians but true poets in that they have an extremely sensitive approach to their physical world and a definite poetic outlook concerning it." E. L. Walton
+ Nation 129:682 D 4 '29 600w

"The least that the most defamatory of critics can say in her praise is that she suffers no diminution by comparison with the best of the English lyricists, that she is certainly as good in every respect as a great many of the best, and that she is beyond any doubt one of the principal ornaments of contemporary American poetry." Yvor Winters
+ — New Repub 60:247 O 16 '29 1200w

"Louise Bogan, long associated with the Measure group, in this volume of selected poems becomes one of the most important women poets of the present generation. She has mastered a cool, inflexible technic and, granting that her limitations are much the same as those of Elinor Wylie, her work has more distinction than that of the better-known poet." Horace Gregory
+ N Y Evening Post p12m N 23 '29 250w

"Miss Bogan's poetry has in it both the breath of the forests and the breath of the sea. There is wistful beauty that is at once calm and passionate. There is serenity of movement combined with vitality of thought. And there is simplicity of diction that conveys a sense of richness."
+ N Y Times p37 N 24 '29 550w

"Louise Bogan excels in the polished phrase; there is a finished craftsmanship in her work that is rare enough in American poetry to be impressive. Miss Bogan creates an effect of almost stony immobility; life stops to enable her to perfect her sculpture." Granville Hicks
+ N Y World p11m O 6 '29 220w

"We have fallen in verse upon finicky and constricted times. Dour and cryptic little poets are making notes for each other on the immediate status of their personal disillusions and disgusts. They have a secret sign language of their own; they are tense, crabbed, and cerebral. However, Miss Louise Bogan is certainly not the least among them, for she can write with a condensed exquisite haughtiness of her immense distaste for life." L. W. Dodd
Yale R n s 19:390 winter '30 200w

BOJER, JOHAN. New temple; tr. from the Norwegian by C. Archer. 341p $2.50 Century [7s 6d Hodder & S.]
28-22464

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:420 Ja '29

---

"The element of greatness in the work of Johan Bojer resides in something far beyond the strong simplicity and transparency of his style, though his style is as perfectly fitted to his material as ring to finger. Beyond style is the exaltation of his themes and his own attitude toward them. . . 'The New Temple' is sequel to his best known work, 'The Great Hunger.' "
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 23 '29 560w
Cleveland Open Shelf p47 Mr '29

"By the simplest of effects it attains eloquence, and by the gentlest of pressure it exerts power. Many novelists have been drawn to the theme which underlies this novel—the enduring and mystic power of faith—but few sustain it with the unassuming yet ample grace which one discovers here."
+ Dial 86:163 F '29 80w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:611 D '28
Pratt p35 winter '29

"This novel lacks the power and solidity of 'The Great Hunger.' Nevertheless, it is a novel that displays the virtues of Bojer—a simple and easy style, the pleasant background of an agricultural Norway, characters that have the breath of life in them." C. D. Carleton
+ Sat R of Lit 5:622 Ja 26 '29 500w
Springf'd Republican p7e F 10 '29 420w

BOKER, GEORGE HENRY. Nydia; a tragic play; ed. by Edward Sculley Bradley. 102p $2 Press of the Univ. of Pa.
812 29-14479

A hitherto unpublished play by an American poet, the bulk of whose plays and poems were written before the Civil war. The names and the central situation of the play are derived from "The last days of Pompeii"; but all the rest of the work is independent of that source.

---

" 'Nydia' is based, of course, on episodes in 'The Last Days of Pompeii,' but it is written in blank verse, after what was already in 1886 a waning mode. It lacks the real poetic distinction of 'Francesca,' but it lacks little of sound, swift, cumulative movement. It is good romantic melodrama and suggests anew that Boker had a genuine talent for dramatic writing which, had he applied it to the nascent drama of contemporary life instead of to themes and forms that were already lifeless, would have made him one of the most important figures in our nineteenth century playhouse." W. P. Eaton
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 30 '29 180w

"With the best will in the world to solidify Professor Bradley's enthusiasm into sober statement, I can find nothing 'great' in 'Nydia,' this readable, admirable dramatization of the central situation in the 'Last Days of Pompeii.' The style is generally compact and simple—at times almost colloquial. But it is not a great style, and poetic drama needs at least the excuse of a style." F. C. Macdonald
New Repub 60:213 O 9 '29 1650w

"One is impressed with the simplicity, vigor, and at times, beauty of expression and feeling with which Boker develops the melodramatic theme of his play." Vera Kelsey
+ Theatre Arts Mo 13:630 Ag '29 330w

BOLITHO, HECTOR. Judith Silver. 289p $2.50 (7s 6d) Knopf
29-7073

A psychological study of a hypersensitive father and a devoted but unintuitive son. The father and son of the story live in New Zealand. So possessive is James Grantham's love of his son that he tries to kill the boy to keep him for his own. The result is that the father goes to a sanitarium for mental cases and Simon journeys to Cambridge. Later James recovers and joins his son in England just as Simon falls whole-heartedly in love with the opera star Judith Silver. For the second time the wretched father is driven out of his mind.

---

"His book is an amazing combination of mature feeling, childish thinking and extremely good writing." A. B. Parsons
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Mr 17 '29 700w

"This story is one of the few contemporary novels with artistic power that exalt the virtues of a woman." W. S. B.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 20 '29 360w

"If 'Judith Silver' were an exception to the general tendencies of contemporary British fiction, the book could be considered as an individual and self-conscious piece of work, supported by a well knit, distinctive prose style. But since there are many young novelists today writing from the same general point of view, Mr. Bolitho's book is scarcely more than another footnote implying criticism of a receding culture." H. G.
New Repub 59:80 Je 5 '29 250w

" 'Judith Silver' is a very fine novel, written with considerable grace and verve, an awareness of form and an irreproachable ear for the language." Edwin Seaver
+ N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 16 '29 80w

"One of those rare books in which character and narrative and scene are fused into a beautiful and satisfying whole. Hector Bolitho reveals himself not only as a poet but as a man of deep understanding and originality of conception."
+ N Y Times p8 Mr 24 '29 500w

"Mr. Bolitho's book contains a good many well conceived separate episodes, but one puts it down convinced that his undoubted talent would be much better employed in telling us more about the strangely attractive New Zealand of his first few pages than in chasing that mythical creature, the romantic prima donna of fiction."
— + Sat R of Lit 6:62 Ag 17 '29 450w

"One feels that Mr. Bolitho is capable of better things; and that he is, possibly for lack of simplicity, merely baffled by human nature. He seems to live in his eyes. So engrossed is he with inanimate things—oranges on a blue plate, a ring, a tie, furniture, objets d'art—that he becomes inattentive to his people. Therefore, they have no solidity, and the closing horror has only a Grand Guignolesque effect." R. A. Taylor
— Spec 142:210 F 9 '29 200w

"Tyranny of parental love has become almost a popular theme within the last few years, but the morbid intensity and curious detail of Mr. Bolitho's story tempt one to believe that he is dealing with an actual 'case.' . . Unfortunately, Mr. Bolitho solves a painful but real problem by falling back on homicidal lunacy as a solution of his plot, and, being only used as a solution, its effect is melodramatic."
Times [London] Lit Sup p165 F 28 '29 170w

BOLITHO, WILLIAM, pseud. (WILLIAM B. RYALL). Twelve against the gods; the story of adventure. 351p il $4 Simon & Schuster

920 Biography 29-24645

The twelve adventurers with fame, fortune and fate of whom Mr Bolitho writes are Alexander the Great, Casanova, Christopher Columbus, Mahomet, Lola Montez, Cagliostro, Charles XII of Sweden, Napoleon I, Catiline, Napoleon III, Isadora Duncan and Woodrow Wilson.

---

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes
Bookm 70:458 D '29 850w

"Mr. Bolitho has the gift of being able to sketch simply and impressively. A sort of triumphant rationalism pervades him. He is clear and concise in the expression of his convictions. In less capable hands such a subject as he has chosen for his book would run a good chance of being a third-rate show. He has turned it into a pageant." C: J. Finger
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 N 17 '29 700w

Reviewed by Frances Bartlett
Boston Transcript p10 N 16 '29 1050w

"On the brilliant woven thread of his style, irradiated by the pitiless calcium of his objectivity, he strings the Twelve who above all others that he has considered seem to him to have, to the fullest degree, realized the career of adventure. . . To this reviewer he did not justify the inclusion among his Twelve of Lola Montez or Cagliostro (and Seraphina). But the nomad tents of Mr. Bolitho's dozen are pitched so far from the ordinary dull oases of human life that this lack of eligibility on the part of some of them will not affect the interest even of those readers who may agree with the criticism." Arthur Krock
+ N Y Times p5 N 10 '29 1600w

"Some of these portraits have been painted often enough. Everybody has tried his hand at Napoleon. In estimating Alexander we cannot improve much on Plutarch, nor, in studying Charles XII of Sweden is there much more evidence than that used by Voltaire. But when Bolitho describes Isadora Duncan and Woodrow Wilson he breaks new ground, and his interpretation of the President indicates already how completely Wilson's tragedy will occupy the minds of men in the future, taking the place, most likely, of the Napoleonitis of our time. . . For the most part the conclusions are brilliantly sustained and the modern attitude is presented with success." Harry Hansen
+ N Y World p11m N 6 '29 1000w

"Mr. Bolitho writes in journalistic style, to be sure, but in the brilliant perfection of it. He plays rhetorical elegance against disorder, untidy colloquialism carefully set, against classic phraseology strung haphazard. The result is striking. His approach to the subjects of his biographical essays on adventurers is forceful, intelligent, free from prejudice as from sentimentality and fresh, even when he has no new material to offer."
+ Outlook 153:465 N 20 '29 450w

"Once aboard the lugger with Mr. Bolitho, it is a jaded traveler who would turn back. There are few enough who can capture a reader for a voyage so easily and utterly. . . Some of these twelve brief biographies are better than others, but there is not a dull one on the list. While the discriminating reader will inevitably skip about, there is ample continuity to give a plot to the whole." Geoffrey Parsons
+ Sat R of Lit 6:437 N 23 '29 1700w

"The game being played here is not alone with words; it is with the reader. And the reader's response flags. Even when Mr Bolitho is most exciting, apathy grows. To be sure, the substance of these sketches is not very distinguished. But pungency is not to be gained by dressing up mediocre material in gaudy dress—and the dress here is neither brilliant nor artfully fashioned enough to be enjoyed for its own sake."
— Springf'd Republican p6 D 9 '29 820w

BOND, FREDERIC DREW. Stock movements and speculation. 195p $2.50 (10s 6d) Appleton

332.6 Stocks. Speculation 28-25324

The book, written by a man who has been for many years an investment counselor and writer for the financial magazines, is a scientific study of the factors affecting stock prices, the causes of market movements and the methods of stock speculation.

---

"Emphasis is placed upon those factors affecting all stock prices such as the money market, market control, and special speculative methods. Little is to be found that is at all new." G. W. Hoffman
Ann Am Acad 145:211 S '29 40w
Booklist 25:232 Mr '29

BONE, DAVID WILLIAM. Merchantmen-at-arms; the British merchants' service in the war; introd. by H. M. Tomlinson. new and rev ed 311p $5 Dutton [12s 6d Chatto]

940.45 Merchant marine—Great Britain. European war, 1914-1918—Naval operations

A new and revised edition of Captain Bone's book first published in 1919, of which H. M. Tomlinson writes in the Introduction: "His book on the work of the Merchant seamen in the war takes its permanent place with those stories of the great affair which for a reason not easily defined read like the truth of it; and there are not very many of them."

---

Boston Transcript p7 N 20 '29 300w

"One of the very best books that the war produced. Captain Bone combines, in a rare degree, absolute integrity in recording the impressions of the moment with the capacity to give them vivid and sharply-edged expression. There is no more inarticulate body of men than merchant seamen. Here, for once, the silence is broken, and we can learn what that little job of keeping us alive in war time felt like to the men who did it."
+ Nation and Ath 46:24 O 5 '29 150w

"Mr. David Bone's deservedly famous record—for indeed there is no other—of the gallant services rendered by the British mercantile marine during the Great War comes to us in a new edition, of which the leading feature is an introduction specially written by Mr. H. M. Tomlinson. As Mr. Tomlinson says, he knows comparatively little about the sea. But he does know how to write an introduction. The book triumphantly survives the pruning knife: it reads as well as ever."
+ Sat R 148:330 S 21 '29 160w

"He writes with knowledge, and he writes with grace. . . Merchantmen-At-Arms gives a glorious taste of the fellowship and humour of the sea."
+ Spec 143:sup453 O 5 '29 700w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 22 '29 900w

BONNER, MARY GRAHAM (MRS EUGENE E. EARLY). Magic music shop; music by Harry Meyer. 95p il $2.50 Macaulay

787 Musical instruments. Instrumental music—Instruction and study 29-17401

Minna put her ear to the keyhole of the music shop one day and straightway was invited in to meet the different musical instruments. She had a delightful time and learned a great deal about their life histories. The story is accompanied by simple piano pieces for beginning pupils.

---

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p14m N 16 '29 80w

"A handsome book, but ingenious rather than imaginative. To one who likes her orchestra well hidden and concert halls dark and wholly given over to sweet sounds, the spectacle of trombones with legs and violins with eyes confuse rather than delight." Ernestine Evans
— N Y Times p38 O 27 '29 80w

Reviewed by O. M. Fuller
N Y World p11m D 22 '29 80w

"With all the wealth of material to draw from as well as the author's evident gift of writing for children it is to be regretted that the book is not of more intrinsic worth."
— Sat R of Lit 6:428 N 16 '29 320w

BONNEY, THERESE, and BONNEY, LOUISE. Guide to the restaurants of Paris. 88p il $1.50 McBride

914.436 Paris—Hotels, restaurants, etc. Gastronomy. Menus 29-16885

"In the first third of the volume the authors take the reader, in a rapid, pleasant narrative, to a great number and variety of restaurants, all of them more or less famous, mentioning for each one its advantages of situation, its specialties in food and the particular satisfaction of flavors or of service it affords its customers. One long section translates into simple English, with explanations, the French terms for what the authors call 'the more interesting creations of the French cuisine.' There is a long list of menus for different kinds of meals recommended by maîtres d'hotel of famous restaurants, and the book ends with an eight-page directory of Parisian restaurants, the list including also tea rooms and American bars."—N Y Times

"For the tourist, the guide prepared by Therese and Louise Bonney has many excellences, notably the glossary and the array of recommended menus suggested by various maîtres d'hotel." Lisle Bell
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Jl 21 '29 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p150 D '29

"This little book about Paris restaurants will have an almost universal appeal among tourists, for everybody who goes to Paris wants to experiment with French food, and these authors cover rather thoroughly the field of the better grade of these establishments."
+ N Y Times p18 Je 23 '29 300w

BONNEY, THERESE, and BONNEY, LOUISE. Shopping guide to Paris. 281p il $3 McBride

914.436 Paris—Description. Shopping 29-11736

"The co-authors have gone about the business of compiling a truly helpful guide that includes practically every sort of shopping from art to automobiles and from gowns to doctors. Particularly interesting are the brief character sketches of the world-known dressmakers, with their idiosyncrasies and methods of doing business. There has been for some time a crying need for just such a book. Not only does it assist those who do not have to count pennies, but it also provides information to fit all kinds and conditions of purses."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 26:26 O '29

Reviewed by A. B. Maurice
Bookm 69:xvii Jl '29 300w

"Here is an explicit, well classified and eminently usable guide to all these and many other things that travelers might like—or have—to know; doctors and all night drug stores, for example, as well as modern decoration, Paris beauty shops and men's tailors! It is exactly what its title suggests and worth a place in any trunk that is likely to come back to this country more heavily freighted than it went."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Jl 14 '29 150w

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 31 '29 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p141 N '29

St Louis 27:289 O '29

BONSER, MRS EDNA MADISON (MACDONALD). Child life and religious growth; prepared in co-operation with the International association of daily vacation Bible schools. (Abingdon religious educ. texts) 380p $1.50 Abingdon press

268 Religious education 28-15877

An experienced writer on the subject of religious education offers here a curriculum for the second course in the primary department of the vacation church school, with illustrative story material.

Boston Transcript p3 S 8 '28 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 Mr '29

"Miss Bonser's book tends to assume too much on the part of the teacher and reflects theory more than practice. But it has an abundance of valuable material and fertile suggestions for the development of the topics chosen." E. J. Chase
+ — J Religion 9:322 Ap '29 1000w

BOORMAN, WILLIAM RYLAND. Developing personality in boys; the social psychology of adolescence. 257p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

136.7 Adolescence. Personality. Boys 29-1830

A study of the development of the boy in relation to his home and social environment. The author has been for several years a Y. M. C. A. secretary of boys' work in Chicago, and a teacher of courses for those who work with boys.

Booklist 25:267 Ap '29

"Mr. Boorman does not seem to get inside his boys. He knows what happens to them, and he is able to give a pretty good objective account of experiences coming at them, but he does not grasp the processes of their minds."
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 24 '29 200w

"The author is not dogmatic as though he knew it all. He is ever a student of boys, as well as their leader. He has had an exceptional opportunity for his studies and leadership and his suggestions are thought-provoking and practical, and deserve a large place in the study and treatment of the adolescent boy."
+ Boston Transcript p8 Mr 23 '29 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p75 My '29

"The author's acquaintance with the boy life is so broad and his fine distinctions in social analysis so marked, that a casual reading of the volume impresses the layman with the exceeding timeliness of the volume. A careful study of the text informs the student of boys of a wealth of suggestion for child guidance research as well as of a rich content of material on mental and physical hygiene. The book is well documented with source material from boy life, as well as with quotations from standard texts in psychology to support the author's interpretations. Free from dogmatic features, it presents alternate view points on debatable themes." S. G. Cole
+ Crozer Q 6:514 O '29 500w

"While the book seems more concerned with the disorganized or unorganized type of personality than with the 'normal' type, a reader cannot help but feel that few boys are understood as they should be by parents, teachers, or devoted leaders and that personality development in most cases is more of a chance process than a scientifically guided piece of education. The book should be stimulating to parents of adolescents and to workers with both boys and girls. The bibliography is well chosen."
+ J Religion 9:501 Jl '29 320w

Pratt p7 summer '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:97 Mr '29

BOOTES, HENRY HEDGER. Deep-sea bubbles; or, The cruise of the Anna Lombard. 354p $3 Appleton [10s 6d Benn] 29-8251

A story of whaling adventures in the South Seas, based—we have the author's word for it—on an actual cruise, and recorded by the third officer on the "Anna Lombard."

"It is a sea-going narrative of the sort that only salt-rimed Britishers can write. Carrying the reader through a disjointed and often improbable series of adventures, with characters only half real, the author makes his ships and scenes of shipping alive with action and nautical color. A story of no literary pretensions, in the Captain Marryat-William Clark

BOOTES, H: H.—Continued
Russell tradition, Deep-Sea Bubbles is packed with sea lore and authentic pictures of sailing-ship life. I do not know where one could find a more graphic picture of the last days of the great square-riggers."
+ Bookm 69:xv Ag '29 230w
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 28 '29 50w

"A most agreeable and interesting book, a book evidently based largely upon personal experience and likely to prove interesting not only to the general reader but to those who find particular picturesqueness and charm in that fast-vanishing ranger of the seas, the sailing vessel."
+ N Y Times p7 Je 23 '29 350w

"Along with the adventures of a unique whaling cruise there is a great deal of ichthyological information for the sober-minded. Names of personnel and ship have been changed for publication, but in an introduction the author vouches for the authenticity of the cruise."
Sat R of Lit 5:1008 My 11 '29 300w

"This is a most fascinating book, which can but leave any reader more convinced than ever that much of the world's splendour slipped away with the proud beauty of set sails." R. A. Taylor
+ Spec 141:828 D 1 '28 270w

BOOTH, CHARLES GORDON. Gold bullets. 306p $2 Morrow [7s 6d Hodder]
29-1198

"Andrew Ogden was stabbed in the back as he sat at his desk. His son Jerry disappeared after being the last person seen with him. But what was Ogden's connection with Alex Peterson, the picturesque character who thirty years earlier, with his two guns loaded with bullets of gold, had won a reputation for daring and reckless bravado in the mining town of Torridity? And who was Dillon, to whom on the first of every year Ogden paid $5,000, receiving in return a poker chip?"—Outlook

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 20 '29 220w
N Y Times p20 F 3 '28 180w

"For those who enjoyed 'Sinister House,' this is another yarn of facile skill and easy interest and brings the complete relaxation and forgetfulness that only a detective story can bring."
+ N Y World p11m F 10 '29 100w
Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 151:114 Ja 16 '29 180w

"The mysterious malefactor, who is at the root of all the villainy is kept well in the background until his ultimate exposure comes as a surprise warranted to thrill the most blase reader of this class of fiction."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 10 '29 130w
Times [London] Lit Sup p876 O 31 '29 200w
Wis Lib Bul 25:324 O '29

BOOTH, ERNEST. Stealing through life. 308p $3 Knopf
B or 92 29-8786

Another story of a career of crime which began early and has ended early in a life sentence in a California prison. The record, written with detachment, is one of robbery and reform school, followed by more robberies and forgeries, with intermittent periods of prison and escape. A part of the story has appeared in The American Mercury.

"He has written a straightforward, interesting account of his thieving existence, evidently trying to be as honestly autobiographical as if his life had been devoted to entirely different pursuits. This is an achievement." W. D. Lane
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 My 26 '29 730w

"'Stealing Through Life' is better written than most books or articles by the inmates of a prison, but it does not escape from the viewpoint of glamour and self-justification so frequently adopted by the criminal mind as a pose."
— + Boston Transcript p2 Ap 17 '29 100w
Cleveland Open Shelf p98 Jl '29

"There are passages in 'Stealing Through Life' which challenge comparison with the best that has been done of recent years in English prose." M. A. de Ford
+ Nation 129:94 Jl 24 '29 650w

"A most gripping thriller, away out in front of any fiction, and at the same time a human brief, a case-history for the crime commissions and a source-book for the sociologist." Jack Black
+ New Repub 58:259 Ap 17 '29 560w

"Booth does not strike his stride until he is well into the book. There is a certain fictional decoration to the account of his youth that is not entirely convincing. But once he has launched himself into a criminal life, the story marches ahead with gripping alacrity." Milton MacKaye
+ — N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 23 '29 900w

"It is almost a unique record, set down with a stark and simple realism. . . It is a book which ought to be read very soberly and Ernest Booth ought to go on writing."
+ N Y Times p12 Mr 24 '29 780w

"His sense of the dramatic is keen, yet he is not overintense or overconscious of his position. Booth would be a writer even if he were not in prison." G: Joel
N Y World p11m My 5 '29 140w

"It is delightful to come upon a hobo's confessional that bears the water-mark of truth as indelibly as this book does. Expertly written and psychologically sound from start to finish, this author's anthology of crime covers the field thoroughly." E. M. Benson
+ Outlook 151:468 Mr 20 '29 150w
St Louis 27:290 O '29

"Mr. Booth's narrative is no better or worse than its kind—except for the last chapter, which is so brilliant, original, and true that it seems the work of another writer."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:889 Ap 13 '29 100w

"Stealing Through Life is eloquent in its simplicity. It envelopes you like a cloud and you bury yourself in it as when a child you read Oliver Twist." Nels Anderson
+ Survey 62:202 My 1 '29 160w

BOOTH, HENRY KENDALL. Background of the Bible; a handbook of Biblical introduction. 281p $2 (7s 6d) Scribner
220 Bible. Whole—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 28-21661

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"Naturally in a book of such broad scope many topics are touched on which are not penetrated very deeply but it is a useful work, into which much industry has entered." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 46:22 Ja 3 '29 130w

"This is a good book, and no doubt will be a great help to many readers. It is an excellent sign of the times, in that it comes from the pen of a preacher-pastor. As such it is scholarly. . . Withal it is readable. Even the uninitiated must be carried along chapter after chapter by the enthusiasm of the author." I. G. Matthews
+ Crozer Q 6:232 Ap '29 560w
Pratt p8 spring '29

"The book is one of outlines, but the outlines are valuable. It is obviously a digest. To many who will peruse it carefully along with their Bibles it will be the way to a great discovery."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 5 '29 650w

BOOTH, MARJORIE. Gem of earth. 310p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Chatto]
29-17525

Ruth Bowman was in love with Cecil Barclay, a young novelist; but his chief ambition was to achieve a brilliant marriage with a noted actress. Meanwhile Dr Detmold, the Bowman family physician, falls in love with Ruth. His marriage has been unhappy, and Ruth, sympathizing with him, yields to him. An injury to Ruth in a street accident brings Cecil to the realization that he has always loved her.

"Miss Booth's heroine does not come alive. She slips through the story methodically, in tears and laughter, like a puppet on a string."
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 15 '29 250w

— Boston Transcript p3 S 28 '29 220w

N Y Times p6 O 6 '29 580w

"Miss Booth writes with ease, and at the start she tricks us into hoping that her novel is going to be successful. But we do not get far before we realize that the whole business is being inexpertly managed, that Miss Booth has no real grip on her material, no clear notion of the course that the action ought to follow."
— Sat R of Lit 6:326 O 26 '29 170w

"The story is a serious effort at character portrayal, with pointed epigrams and well-written descriptive paragraphs."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e O 27 '29 370w

"The story is plausibly told, but it has not much life in it. The satire on the lower middle classes is crude, and the sentiment of the love passages is conventional."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p244 Mr 21 '29 90w

BOOTH, MEYRICK. Woman and society. 256p $3 Longmans [8s 6d Allen & U.]

396 Woman [29-28805]

That the feminist movement toward freedom and the equality of the sexes is a bad thing for society and the future of the race is Dr Booth's contention. Women are differently constituted, psychologically as well as physically, he maintains, than men; and therefore women should be educated for home life and child birth rather than trained for business or professions.

"This book is an addition to that increasing mass of literature, written by men to tell women what they ought to want, which Mr. John Langdon-Davies has aptly christened 'the literature of impertinence.' 'Woman and Society' differs from other works of the same type by being more verbose, more repetitive, and more difficult to read." Vera Brittain
— Nation and Ath 44:917 Mr 30 '29 1000w

"Mr. Booth has the 'New Woman' badly on his nerves. Yet a survey of the civilized world suggests that he, like the rest of us, will have to accept her and get used to her. There is, really, little cause for alarm. For, to modify an axiom of Huxley's, 'what has been decided among prehistoric protozoa cannot be cancelled by Parliament' or by the highest of high-brow schoolmistresses." Harry Roberts
— Sat R 147:437 Mr 30 '29 1000w

"Until the real nature of sexual differences has been analysed and their relevance to social organization determined, any dogmatizing as to what is and what is not the proper sphere of woman is bound to be based almost entirely on prejudice."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p488 Je 20 '29 1200w

BORDEAUX, HENRY. Saint Francis de Sales, theologian of love; tr. by Sister Benita. 282p $2.50 (10s 6d) Longmans

B or 92 Francis de Sales, Saint, bp. 29-21487

The biography of an eminent Catholic divine, born in Savoy in 1567. Altho antedating the Freudian psychologists by about three centuries his teachings were not unlike theirs.

"The latest study of that interesting saint, Francis de Sales, will prove something of a disappointment to the historical minded. It is not the biography for which, despite the excellent work of M. Fortunat Strowski and others, there is still urgent need; nor is it the study of St. Francis in relation to the society of his times for which one had hoped. Rather is it an edifying book, written with a moral and devotional purpose—and the historian is notoriously indifferent to all attempts to edify him. To the devout, however, it will be of great interest and inspiration. . . M. Bordeaux's book would no doubt have pleased the amiable saint about whom it is written. The present reviewer, unfortunately, is not a saint." W. K. Ferguson
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 O 6 '29 500w

"A very interesting biography, in great detail, in a clear and lucid style, never dull or tiresome, but showing us a saintly priest with an insight into the meaning of life and the way to attain perfection. It is translated into English so excellently that the reader never remembers it was not originally written in that language." G. B.
+ Boston Transcript p1 O 11 '29 530w

"Henri Bordeaux, the eminent French novelist and academician, in spite of an ingratiating preface, approaches the life of St. Francis de Sales, his fellow Savoyard, with timidity and handles it with chilly if correct fingers. To the reader less interested in the hagiographical and more in the human aspects of Bordeaux's biography, St. Francis de Sales's life will not be particularly interesting. In a time of great events, it was singularly uneventful. Perhaps that very lack of incident in his hero's life has made it an ungrateful subject for a novelist. At all events, while no doubt important to the devout, Bordeaux's book is not significant to the ordinary reader." F. L. Robbins
Outlook 153:151 S 25 '29 320w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:12 S '29 80w

St Louis 27:342 D '29

Times [London] Lit Sup p851 O 24 '29 360w

BORDEN, MARY (MRS EDWARD LEWIS SPEARS). Jehovah's day. 380p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Heinemann]

29-9096

"Jehovah's Day is an imaginative effort to realize the procession of life across this whirling planet, from the moment when Eryops the Mud Puppy, whose bones lie in the British Museum, dragged himself with his mate from the primeval slime to become the ancestor of the human race until such recent incidents as the general strike and the forest fires in the Esterel. . . Into this book Mary Borden drops Hilary Stewart the young aviator, Anne his mother, Professor Wood his stepfather, Rose Kimberley, Mrs. Whitaker and her daughter Orchid, Patrick O'Hagan, the Jeremy family and others, and remains as indifferent to them as an explorer flashing his lantern on the forest life while he steadily proceeds on his way . . . except when, with swift and cruel insight, she sees them reproducing the appearance and behaviour of the fishes, reptiles and apes of the early morning of Jehovah's Day."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 25:394 Jl '29

"The story itself is arresting enough, for it is an excellently-sustained narrative of the conflicts of love with more than a little mysticism permeating it, like a delicate mist. While there is much excellent writing that conveys clearly enough the philosophical implications of her tale, the effect, as a whole, is jarred somewhat out of focus by the ambitiousness."
+ — Bookm 69:430 Je '29 300w

Reviewed by M. C. Dawson
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 My 12 '29 680w

Boston Transcript p2 My 22 '29 250w

"Miss Borden writes well, is not boring, is fearfully ambitious. Human beings have been compared to animals before, and Miss Borden's philosophy, which the English papers have so widely hailed, is the indisputable but not very novel idea that we are a pretty insignificant lot. Why take four hundred pages to tell us so?" G. T. H.

BORDEN, M.—Continued
New Repub 38:341 My 8 '29 200w

"Jehovah's Day is admirably constructed. The prehistoric scenes are not only convincing but relevant as well. There is a real continuity and economy about the book and the transitions from pre-history to the present moment are made without a jolt. . . The distinctive qualities of Miss Borden's work are her imagery, her vitality, her gift for personifying material objects. But as long as her characters are second-hand their treatment will be sentimental, as long as she avoids dialogue and spins cocoons of explanation round her dramatic moments, the going will be difficult, and as long as her fine imagination finds such facility of expression her style will be undistinguished." Cyril Connolly
+ — New Statesman 32:191 N 17 '28 780w

"To have undertaken the writing of a novel with this scope is a rather magnificent hostage to fortune; to have carried it out with so small a margin of peccability is an achievement in the grand manner."
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 7 '29 620w

"Mary Borden has written a provocatively intelligent novel that combines real philosophy with real story."
+ N Y World p11m Ap 7 '29 320w
+ Outlook 151:593 Ap 10 '29 130w

" 'Jehovah's Day' is one of the most ambitious novels I ever read, but not one of the most successful. . . Miss Borden makes a brightly-coloured hotch-potch of the phenomena of modern life and stirs it with a will. It whizzes round, impressing, bewildering, then boring. The quality of vitality never fails Miss Borden; but how different is vitality from interest!" L. P. Hartley
— + Sat R 146:734 D 1 '28 580w

"An impressive, though by no means a persuasive book. In Jehovah's Day the people are singularly unsympathetic, and inherently worthless in both a human and a dramatic sense . . . too insignificant for the pageantry of prehistoric life unrolled behind them. But as an unusual comment on social conditions and their future development, as a piece of glittering intellectual activity, the story will attract, repel, and surprise." R. A. Taylor
— + Spec 141:666 N 3 '28 250w

"Recently Mary Borden succeeded in constructing in words an admirable suggestion of New York, its people dwarfed by its monstrous beauty, controlled and silenced by its machinery; now with greater daring she dramatizes a day of a hundred million years in the earth's story, and diminishes the life of man to a dance of midges in the sun. . . The whole book is full of a contagious interest and excitement and with very little that is trivial or hurried in its 500 pages."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p828 N 8 '28 450w

BORDEN, SIR ROBERT LAIRD. Canada in the commonwealth; from conflict to co-operation. 144p $3.75 (10s) Oxford

971 Canada—History. Canada—Politics and government [29-12614]

"Canada in the Commonwealth embodies the substance of a series of lectures delivered at Oxford by Sir Robert Borden as the first lecturer on the Rhodes Memorial Foundation, established in 1926. As Prime Minister of the senior British Dominion during and immediately after the World War, Sir Robert played a great part in the rapid evolution of the British Commonwealth then in progress, and decidedly the most valuable chapters in this book are those in which he describes and comments upon events with which he was intimately associated."—Pol Sci Q

---

Booklist 26:63 N '29
Boston Transcript p3 My 25 '29 130w
Reviewed by R. L. Schuyler
Pol Sci Q 44:311 Je '29 250w

"Sir Robert writes clearly and well, with an eye for practical form, and with a distinct power to seize salient and creative features. If his lectures do not reach great heights of illumination they possess qualities perhaps more enduring—modesty, sanity, dignity, sterling integrity, and an entire freedom from passion."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1100 Je 8 '29 250w
Times [London] Lit Sup p411 My 23 '29 580w

BORGMAN, ALBERT STEPHENS. Thomas Shadwell, his life and comedies. 269p $5 N.Y. univ. press

B or 92 Shadwell, Thomas 29-24052

Monograph on the life and dramatic works of this seventeenth century English dramatist, poet-laureate to William and Mary. The second half of the book reviews in turn each one of his thirteen comedies.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 My 19 '29 250w
Boston Transcript p5 Ap 6 '29 330w
Sat R of Lit 5:933 Ap 20 '29 100w

"Mr. Borgman has written an excellent study of the man and his work. All the materials are here for a sound opinion; and the author is invariably reasonable in his views, which are expressed with a discretion which is still rare in American biography. We wish at times he had been less modest. Too much of the book is within inverted commas. We should like to have more of the author and less of his authorities. He gives a complete picture of the man and his work without exaggerating his importance."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p345 My 2 '29 2400w

BORSKI, MRS LUCIA MERECKA (LUCIA MERECKA SZCZEPANOWICZ), and MILLER, KATE B., comps. and trs. Jolly tailor, and other fairy tales; tr. from the Polish. 156p il $2 (6s) Longmans

398 Fairy tales. Tales, Polish 28-25565

A group of merry folk tales from the Polish, illustrated in black and white and with a frontispiece in color.

---

"Wit and humor, fun and laughter characterize these tales." A. C. M.
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 D 30 '28 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p140 D '28

BORSODI, RALPH. This ugly civilization. 468p $3 Simon & Schuster

330.1 United States—Civilization. Factory system. Conduct of life 29-24750

The factory itself—not machinery—is responsible for the ugliness of modern civilization. Ralph Borsodi writes. To help remedy factory conditions, he believes that factories should be confined to the making of desirable products only, which cannot be made as efficiently in the home. An analysis of herd-, quantity-, and quality-minded individuals is made with a plea for more quality-minded men. Since civilization is a quest for comfort, Mr Borsodi considers some of the factors in its quest, and the social, economic and individual barriers to comfort.

---

Bookm 70:v Ja '30 200w
Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 N 3 '29 800w
Boston Transcript p2 D 24 '29 1000w

"There is a ribbed and bare simplicity in his thinking which is the mark at once of the amateur (in its best sense) and the prophet, and which startles the reader in the audacity with which it plows through institutions, beliefs and ways of social organization." Max Lerner
+ N Y Evening Post p10m N 9 '29 1000w

"Mr. Borsodi's book suggests some rather serious, reflections upon the practical value of utopian programs. Virtually every count in the indictment which he frames of present-day society has much obvious truth to sustain it, although there is hardly an item of novelty in the indictment from beginning to end, but most readers will be likely to conclude that the idyllic existence which he pictures is beyond the reach of such as are not, to begin with, financially well-heeled." W: MacDonald

+ — N Y Times p5 D 1 '29 2080w

"It is the unique and significant attribute of Ralph Borsodi's book that it confines itself not only to analysis and disapproval, but that it is perhaps the only book of its kind that definitely and courageously points a way to a solution of the difficulty." Arthur Strawn

+ N Y World p10m N 17 '29 1150w

Outlook 153:511 N 27 '29 280w

"Not only extravagant but commonplace. The work has not the incisiveness of fresh intuition. Many of the ideas are valid enough in themselves, or within their limits, but the author's expression of them is tedious and verbose."

— Springf'd Republican p10 N 7 '29 600w

BOSE, SIR JAGADIS CHUNDER. Motor mechanism of plants. 429p il $8.40 (21s) Longmans

581.1 Plants—Irritability and movements.
Plants, Motion of fluids in [29-1116]

"The eminent author's investigations of plant motor mechanisms as compared and contrasted with those of animals. Relates not only to the visible external movements of plants, but also to the invisible internal movements concerned with the propulsion of sap. Some of Dr. Bose's delicate laboratory devices are described."—N Y New Tech Bks

---

"For the investigation of processes of excitation and conduction, and of some peculiar types of contractile process, the vegetable kingdom evidently offers very great scope. All those interested in these aspects of general physiology will be grateful to Sir Jagadis Bose for his pioneer work, and for the extraordinarily ingenious methods he has devised." A. D. Ritchie

+ Nature 123:672 My 4 '29 1920w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:12 Ja '29

Reviewed by C: Johnston

N Y Times p4 Ag 18 '29 1150w

"To the vegetable physiologist this book cannot fail to be profoundly interesting and suggestive. Perhaps the most valuable of its conclusions is that which relates to the vitally important problem of the ascent of the sap in plants."

+ Spec 141:994 D 29 '28 1100w

"Sir Jagadis, notwithstanding the refinement of his methods and apparatus, is an almost exaggerated example of the type so resolute in seeking resemblances that it tends to neglect even fundamental differences. . . It is impossible to acquit Sir Jagadis of overstatement; but we must congratulate him on the valuable work he has done."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p56 Ja 24 '29 480w

BOSSCHERE, JEAN DE. Marthe and the madman; tr. from the French by Pierre Loving. 265p il $3 Covici

28-29429

"'Marthe and the Madman' is M. de Bosschere's first novel. It is a subtly written study of two introverted personalities struggling with an unsympathetic environment. Marthe is a sensitive girl whose life has been hopelessly handicapped by a hideous physical deformity. Pierre, her brother, partly out of sympathy for her, and partly from a natural reaction to his environment, develops a morose and truculent disposition, which at the last approaches psychosis. The theme is powerful. The brother and sister are outcasts, individualists, and heathen, in a bigoted Catholic town in Flanders."—Boston Transcript

---

"This is by no means a pleasant novel; nor is it one in the least suited for the squeamish. Notwithstanding, it is worth reading, for the sake of its strangely beautiful style, if for no other reason. It is moreover, a splendid specimen of artistic book-making."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 19 '29 230w

"De Bosschere is a poet and an artist—a strange and exquisite poet and artist. He is not a psychologist. He is not a story teller. He does not get behind the masks, and his people are puppets. But the masks he describes and their contortions are carved so sharply and with such an uncanny precision that they seem more vital than faces, more poignant than living things." Paul Eldridge

+ — N Y Evening Post p9m D 1 '28 430w

Reviewed by S: Putnam

N Y World p11m D 30 '28 430w

BOTKIN, GIEB EVGENEVICH. The God who didn't laugh. 326p $2.50 Payson & Clarke [7s 6d Gollancz]

29-23488

"Tosha Stavroff entered a Siberian monastery as a novice just after the Revolution. His childhood conception of the Deity had been that of a jolly sort of God who would laugh and gleefully see the funny side of things. But later, on the eve of ordination, he encounters the God who does not laugh, and leaves the monastery forever, torn between the sense of freedom gained and the loss of something very precious."—Bookm

---

Bookm 70:xxx O '29 130w

"The disillusionment of youth is a favorite theme nowadays, as is also the break with established religion. But Mr. Botkin has brought to them vitality and courage and honesty, together with a directness of expression which is surprising in a Russian who has apparently written English only as long as he has lived here, less than ten years. Much of the strength of the book is no doubt due to the fact that it is in part autobiographical."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 27 '29 550w

"Mr. Botkin's style is fluent with the fluency of a virus that saturates as it flows. That he uses the English language as the original vehicle for a foreign and decadent religious disquisition makes his book the more menacing in all that it discloses."

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 30 '29 300w

"The atmosphere of the book is medieval. Tosha, like all the other characters with but a single exception, seems to the reader amazingly devoid of every sort of modern knowledge. His ideas, his reasoning, are entirely untouched by modern science. But he is a very human, very appealing youth, and his mental sufferings are vividly described. We follow all the windings and turnings of his mind with pity and understanding, going with him each step of the way which leads from submission to rebellion."

N Y Times p9 D 1 '29 900w

"Until he took this step [entered a monastery] 'The God Who Didn't Laugh,' with its swift, sympathetic apprehension of a child's intelligence, its pictures of leisurely pre-Revolution Russian life, is charming, and Tosha is a delightful little boy whose interest in his soul's welfare is refreshing and commendable. After he is installed in the monastery, Mr. Gleb Botkin exchanges charm for power. Tosha's animal instincts awaken and he frets against temperance, soberness and chastity; he wants to laugh, and thinks that Christianity will disapprove. . . Though the conclusion is dignified and touching, on the whole we are harrowed rather than moved." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 148:398 O 5 '29 300w

"The most interesting part of the novel consists of sketches of monastic life and character, although there is a certain amount of exaggeration here. The religious discussions and the lengthy descriptions of erotic fancies are evidently meant with considerable seriousness, but they are quite commonplace. Some of Tosha's

BOTKIN, G. E.—Continued
farthest flights of imagination are, indeed, a little provoking, although this may be due in part to a certain amount of verbal clumsiness."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p748 S 26 '29 260w

BOTTOME, PHYLLIS (MRS ERNAN FORBES-DENNIS). Windlestraws. 336p $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d Collins]

When Jean Arbuthnot went to be secretary for Sir Reginald Falconer she found herself thrust into a strange situation. Beatrice, Lady Falconer, loathed her husband, but loved her consin Ian, altho for the sake of her children she lived on at Windlestraws. Plunged into this strange environment Jean, who was very attractive, soon found that both men were fond of her. It took straight thinking and straight living to untangle the complications which followed, but Jean was equal to the task.

For biographical sketch of the author see Boston Transcript p1 O 19 '29

Bookm 70:xiii Ja '30 180w

"It's hard to believe that four human beings could continue long in such a complicated entanglement as results in 'Windlestraws.' In real life some one would snap under the strain. But it makes intriguing reading and toward the end of the book the reader is held in an almost breathless suspense." E. D. W.
+ Chicago Daily Tribune p15 N 30 '29 180w

"The emotional situation is complicated rather than subtle, and perhaps too mechanical, but it is interesting, and it is worked out with force and clarity. It is Miss Bottome's chief merit that, when her head, as distinct from her heart, is at work, she says what she has to say without nonsense or verbiage."
+ — Nation and Ath 46:358 D 7 '29 150w

"It is in some ways an astonishing performance, being quite frank in the emotional stress involved in the wrong men loving the wrong women at the wrong time, and yet utterly nice and respectable in the physical complications, the ruthlessness and even the nastiness that might quite naturally arise in such a quadrangle." Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p12m N 9 '29 130w

"It is all as melodramatic as any penny-dreadful, a tale which never rings true, whose characters are puppets dangling on quite visible wires, jerking about this way or that, as may be needed to further the action of the thoroughly artificial plot. The novel is smoothly and at times very well written, though with too much straining after subtlety, too much arduous splitting of resolutely manufactured hairs."
— N Y Times p30 N 24 '29 280w

"The story is interesting for those who like romanticized problem novels, but it lacks substance."
+ — Outlook 153:670 D 25 '29 230w

"Miss Bottome gives to the emotions more durability and elasticity than normally they possess; she treats them almost as constants, the strength of whose action may be relied on whatever obstacles and friction they encounter. She does not allow enough for the fact that emotions denied their outlet or forced, even once, into uncongenial channels, tend to dwindle. But this means she succeeds in keeping the issues of her situation taut to the last, even though, as in a game of cat's cradle, they have been re-arranged a dozen times. But all the same 'Windlestraws' is an absorbing story, full of wit and sensibility and good sense, though I think it imposes a Latin rigidity on the rather vague conventions which, in England, are supposed to direct the course of 'illicit' love." L. P. Hartley
+ — Sat R 148:786 D 28 '29 500w

"Miss Bottome weaves a compelling story around her four puppets. How she untangles the snarled skeins is revealed in a dramatic climax. The story is entertaining—and superficial."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '29 230w
Times [London] Lit Sup p1084 D 19 '29 200w

BOTTOMLEY, GORDON. Scenes and plays. 123p $2.50 Macmillan [6s Constable]
822 29-11044

Contents: A parting; The return; The sisters; The widow; Towie castle; Merlin's grave; Ardvorlich's wife; The singing sands. Short dramatic pieces of lyric beauty written with a purpose thus stated by the author: "The first pieces in this volume were written for use at the Oxford Recitations and found notable performance there: the remainder have grown out of these, and have been written for the use of those practitioners of the revived and reoriented art of verse-speaking who are looking for a freer and more lyrical dramatic utterance, and more opportunity to use poetry, than the contemporary theatre affords them."

"This is powerful and distinguished work, call it what you please. Probably 'poetry' would be nearest to the mark!" W. P. Eaton
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 30 '29 70w
Boston Transcript p1 Jl 13 '29 170w

"As plays these pieces have the not inconsiderable fault of lacking almost all dramatic qualities. Perhaps they were not intended to have any, for the subjects chosen are seldom dramatic themselves, but the aftermaths of drama. . . There is no action of any kind, and the plays scarcely move at all. . . The faults of the plays are emphasized by those of the diction, which fluctuates between extreme poeticality and mock simplicity."
— Nation and Ath 45:658 Ag 17 '29 480w

"Scenes and Plays represent the same high level of technical competence which previous volumes have taught us to expect." P. Q.
+ New Statesman 33:274 Je 8 '29 80w

"The conditions create a new problem of style and have suggested interesting novelties in presentment. The informality of the setting favours simplicity of language, the high tension makes simple words sound thin."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p572 Jl 18 '29 1000w

BOULENGER, EDWARD GEORGE. Animal mysteries. 214p il $3 Macaulay
591.5 Animals—Habits and behavior
[28-13438]

"The author of this lively book is director of the London Zoological Society Aquarium and a lifelong student of the habits of animals. From his large and varied store of knowledge concerning them he has drawn generously for the illustrative incidents, examples, instances with which his pages are filled."—N Y Times

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 24 '29 100w

"His title is not a very apt one, since there is no mystery whatever about most of the animals and animal habits of which he writes. But his book is none the less interesting for that."
+ N Y Times p21 My 19 '29 450w

"A great deal of curious information about beasts and birds and reptiles, entertainingly presented by the director of the London Zoo. The writer has a sense of humor as well as knowledge, which doesn't make the book any less pleasant." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 151:314 F 20 '29 150w

"The author, whose business first and last is with the facts of animal life, has familiarized himself with the popular legends that have been associated with animals everywhere. He explodes several persistent errors that have grown out of these myths; but the chief value of his book is in its full descriptions of the habits, migrations, and dwelling-places of various species." W: B. Shaw
+ R of Rs 79:10 My '29 130w

BOUTELL, H. S. First editions of to-day and how to tell them. 62p $1 Lippincott [3s E. Mathews & M.]

094.4 Book collecting. Editions [29-26033]

"Mr. Boutell has collected from English and American publishers statements of the manner in which they generally indicate first impressions, and either by quoting from the letters received in reply to his questions, or by using information given directly to him by the publishers themselves, has succeeded in bringing together an amount of definite knowledge available in no other one place. To collectors, nothing could be more useful."—Sat R of Lit

---

Booklist 25:191 F '29
New Statesman 32:678 Mr 2 '29 80w
Reviewed by Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 26 '29 130w
N Y Times p23 Ja 27 '29 230w
Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 227:adv Mr '29 40w

"This is one of the most interesting and informative books that have recently appeared. . . Mr. Boutell has earned general gratitude by the manner in which he has accomplished his work. There is no question of its value and importance to everyone interested in modern English and American writers." G. M. T.
+ Sat R of Lit 5:696 F 16 '29 460w

BOVET, PIERRE. Child's religion; auth. tr. of Le sentiment religieux; by George H. Green. 202p $2 Dutton [6s Dent]

201 Religion—Psychology. Child study. Religious education 29-665

A study of the development of the religious sentiment in the child, based on investigation and observation carried out at the Jean Jacques Rousseau institute. The author is director of the Institute and professor of education at the University of Geneva.

---

"Bovet's method is highly eclectic. He selects the cases that prove his point, and fails to deal with exception and contrary evidence. In an obvious attempt to ground the theistic sentiment in man's instinctive nature, and thereby establish its psychological inevitability, he has taken only slight account of the cognitive processes, and has but scantily treated other potent factors in the social milieu. . . Even with these defects the book is rich in illustrative material, and should prove to be thought-provoking and stimulating to parents, religious educators, and psychologists of religion." D. M. Trout
+ — Am J Soc 35:326 S '29 650w

"A book of interest to a rather special group. Parents and teachers who must meet the problem of religious teaching practically will welcome a book in this field founded on research and offered in a tolerant spirit. Dr. Bovet is a figure internationally known to progressive educators. The book is not written in a popular style." Elisabeth Irwin
Bookm 68:706 F '29 100w

"Professor Bovet uses his profound knowledge of psychology to convey, not to obscure, his meaning, and his terminology is intelligible to anyone familiar with the rudiments of the subject, while the singular accuracy of phrase characteristic of French style is not lost in this excellent translation by Professor Green."
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 19 '29 420w

"As it stands, the book contains a central theme which is interesting and original, sketched out in a suggestive manner; we only hope that Professor Bovet, who writes with obvious sincerity, modesty and fairness, will return to his subject and develop it further."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p247 Mr 21 '29 420w

BOWEN, ELIZABETH. Joining Charles, and other stories. 302p $2.50 Dial press [6s Constable]

29-25349

Eleven short stories, in all of which the study of character is predominant, by the author of "The hotel." Many of these stories reflect a peculiarly tragic crisis underlying the trivial incidents of life. Contents: Joining Charles; The jungle; Shoes: an international episode; The dancing-mistress; Aunt Tatty; Dead Mabelle; The working party; Foothold; The cassowary; Telling; Mrs Moysey.

---

"There is not a breath of carelessness in any of these stories. She uses the furniture of life with a sharp instinct for its appropriateness: chooses the precise trick of physical appearance, speech, scene to establish a fragile relationship between the figures in her stories and the terms of their life. The result has a strange, cool potency." F. H. Britten
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 N 24 '29 1050w

"These are pure and dispassionate glances into the lives of ordinary people—as of a recording angel with much work to do and too little time to follow any of it to the end. Or, perhaps it would be better to say, Miss Bowen dredges up a scoopful of stuff and analyses it, for what it is worth, with the kindliest but also with the keenest interest. . . I am inclined to think that Miss Bowen will have a great future as a writer of short stories when she can get the better of a somewhat over-anxious virtuosity." E. S.
+ — New Statesman 33:500 Jl 27 '29 450w

"What is perhaps most evident is that Miss Bowen is primarily a novelist. Her short stories have a dwarfish look as if they should have had more room to grow. Some, it seems, have a definite malformation; for example, 'Mrs. Moysey', whose passion for chocolates, we feel, should have been treated without so incredible a barricade of circumstances. 'Foothold,' too, dealing with a very solid ghost, has none of the real elements of a short story. All of them move within the wide limits of Miss Bowen's vocabulary with a varying drama and sudden life."
N Y Times p7 N 24 '29 500w
Reviewed by Gertrude Diamant
N Y World p11m Ja 5 '30 900w

"What richness results from the collision of forces in Miss Bowen's work! She shrinks from no complication, she makes no omission that would simplify her task: she puts her entire experience into it, and her contribution to modern fiction, though small as yet, cannot possibly be over valued." L. P. Hartley
+ Sat R 148:108 Jl 27 '29 650w

"All the tales in the book are unusual and significant, and will repay a second reading. Miss Bowen has an admirable sense of balance, a beautiful style, and she never stresses her points." B. E. Todd
+ Spec 143:104 Jl 20 '29 100w

"Miss Elizabeth Bowen is quite welcome to collect her short stories into a volume as often as she may. Joining Charles and Other Stories is as good, perhaps even richer, than the previous volume 'Ann Lee's.' "
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p606 Ag 1 '29 380w

BOWEN, ELIZABETH. The last September. 315p $2.50 Dial press [7s 6d Constable]

29-3188

A story of Ireland during the Revolution, dealing with the characters and fortunes of a group of English and Irish people of good family who attempt to ignore the fact that warfare is going on. They have their tennis and their house parties but each is at heart affected by the background of Black and Tan terror.

---

Booklist 25:321 My '29

"Her second book, like the first, is a comedy of manners and of character that deepens almost imperceptibly into something bitterer than comedy and yet keeps throughout a shrewdly ironic view." T. S. Matthews

BOWEN, ELIZABETH—Continued

+ Bookm 69:89 Mr '29 300w

"To have made unimportant the witty, charming and intelligent group of people is a proof of the force and reality with which Miss Bowen invests the almost unseen background of the Irish revolution. . . It might be considered as that rare kind of history, detached yet imaginative, which shows without rancor or spite how people lived at a time when the molds were being broken and when individual happiness was less important than a massed insurgency." Mary Ross

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Mr 10 '29 850w

— Boston Transcript p4 Mr 30 '29 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p77 My '29

"There is humor in this book and no passion. Miss Bowen's character work is excellent. Her writing is charming. Her humor is subtle and delightful." Norah Meade

+ Nation 128:589 My 15 '29 300w

"The book is a triumph of technical subtlety distinctly surpassing the same author's accomplishment in 'The Hotel.'" W. T.

+ New Repub 58:105 Mr 13 '29 180w

"Because it is so undeniably clever, and because, from an esthetic standpoint, it is so perfectly worked out, 'The Last September' tears from reluctant lips an expression of admiration. It is a grudging sort of admiration, but it is possibly the more valid for that. Elizabeth Bowen has palpably found her métier, and she excels in it."

+ N Y Times p9 F 3 '29 860w

+ N Y World p11m F 10 '29 150w

"The book suffers from lack of subject; the intense interest and significance of the individual pages is not enough. . . But what a brilliant book, keen, perceptive and mature, and owing to a marvellous adjustment between thought, style and subject matter, strung so taut that a mere sentence or two sets the whole vibrating like music in the mind." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 147:184 F 9 '29 820w

"Though perhaps too subtle and elusive for popular taste, this novel fulfils the artistic promise of The Hotel. Particularly brilliant is the manner in which Miss Bowen gradually heightens the atmosphere of mystery and tension until the final tragedy for the charming young heroine and her subaltern lover."

+ Spec 142:210 F 9 '29 80w

"Beautiful images and cascades of striking similes and metaphors abound. Yet with but one or two exceptions, the characters remain shadowy."

+ — Springf'd Republican p17e Mr 31 '29 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p96 F 7 '29 550w

BOWEN, MARJORIE, pseud. (MRS GABRIELLE MARGARET VERE [CAMPBELL] LONG). Holland; being a general survey of the Netherlands commonly called Holland. 252p il $3 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Harrap]

914.92 Netherlands—Description and travel

29-2557

The emphasis of the book is on the historical background of Holland. A chapter is devoted to each of the provinces of the Netherlands and the whole is written out of the enthusiasm and the deep and extensive knowledge which have informed the author's many books on this country.

---

Booklist 25:389 Jl '29

"Miss Bowen is admirably equipped to write an appreciative and informed guide, and this is precisely what her book proves to be. One gets from these pages a sense of the essential values of Dutch life—something more than the quaintness and the charm outwardly manifest in costume and landscape."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Je 9 '29 170w

Boston Transcript p4 Je 1 '29 620w

Cleveland Open Shelf p141 N '29

"Miss Bowen writes in an easy conversational style, contriving to give a fair amount of the usual guide-book information while making the narrative pleasant to read."

+ New Statesman 31:652 S 1 '28 120w

"Marjorie Bowen keeps herself as invisible as possible, and her descriptive survey of the Netherlands is a well-nigh perfect example of the depersonalized guidebook." R. C. B. Brown

N Y Evening Post p8m Je 1 '29 150w

"Examination of Marjorie Bowen's volume shows that she does know country, people and history thoroughly and writes about them with that intimate knowledge that enables her to be both warmly appreciative and judiciously critical."

+ N Y Times p23 My 19 '29 380w

Sat R 146:278 S 1 '28 140w

"We commend the book unhesitatingly to all travellers to Holland. The quiet unmannered style reflects the simple dignity of the country and the people, and the photographs are excellent."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p608 Ag 23 '28 250w

BOWEN, MARJORIE, pseud. (MRS GABRIELLE MARGARET VERE [CAMPBELL] LONG). William, prince of Orange (afterwards king of England); being an account of his early life up to his twenty-fourth year. 343p il $5 Dodd [18s Lane]

B or 92 William III, king of England

[29-10027]

Mrs Bowen is the author of several books on Holland and of a number of historical novels dealing with the Prince of Orange. Out of her detailed knowledge of William III and his times has grown this account of his youth (1650-1673) which is the first installment of a three-volume biography.

---

+ Bookm 69:vi Ag '29 170w

"With a vivid grasp of the political forces which dominated the scene, and a lively sympathy for her subject, she has written a comprehensive and well-digested study."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 Mr 10 '29 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p92 Je '29

"Miss Bowen is obviously steeped alike in the data and the atmosphere of her subject, and her picturesque style, which delightfully fills in the scenic and social background, does not obtrude itself when plain and sometimes intricate genealogical, military, or other detail is required. Her main fault is her enthusiasm, and it is debatable whether that is not preferable to the opposite extreme, practised by too many modern biographers, of exaggerating the warts."

+ Nation and Ath 44:471 D 29 '28 730w

"Miss Bowen's long book, which brings her up to William's twenty-fourth year, reveals very little that is new about him. It is, in fact, less a personal study of William than a lengthy account of the political events concerning his country. . . Miss Bowen proposes to complete this life of William III. in two more volumes, and it will undoubtedly prove a valuable acquisition to most libraries. But she might do a good deal to add to the usefulness of her book."

New Statesman 32:445 Ja 12 '29 630w

Pratt p36 autumn '29

"Miss Bowen writes admirably as usual, and wears a vast weight of learning lightly."

+ Sat R 147:21 Ja 5 '29 150w

"The book is doubly welcome. It is a work of real merit and presents an almost unique interpretation of its subjects. . . Students of French as well as of English history would do well to read the book. The account of Franco-Dutch relations is detailed and interesting. It is good diplomatic history as well as good biography that Miss Bowen has written." J: M. S. Allison

+ Sat R of Lit 6:21 Ag 3 '29 570w

"We have here a great wealth of information regarding personages and events of distinctly minor importance; but the book is redeemed from banality by the attractiveness of Miss Bowen's style and the common sense of her judgments."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p1010 D 20 '28 650w

BOWEN, NORMAN LEVI. Evolution of the igneous rocks. 334p il $5 Princeton univ. press [23s Milford]

552.1 Rocks, Igneous 29-9945

"The author, who is Petrologist of the Geophysical Laboratory, Carnegie Institution of Washington, bases this volume on a series of lectures to advanced students in Princeton University. 'It is an attempt to interpret the outstanding facts of igneous-rock series as the result of fractional crystallization.' "—N Y New Tech Bks

---

"This book is the work of a master in a difficult field of research, and is bound to incite much discussion among geologists and petrologists. Many will doubtless hold that Dr. Bowen has taken an extreme position as to the origin of the rocks, but he has clearly done good service in publishing this detailed theory of 'crystal-fractionation.' " R. A. Daly

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 F 10 '29 420w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:9 Ja '29

"This is the most important contribution to the scientific study of rocks that has been published in book form since Harker's 'Natural History of Igneous Rocks' delighted geologists in 1909. The book, though based on a course of lectures, is not at all for the beginner; indeed, the reader who intends to follow the arguments closely must be familiar with the phase-rule and its application to the problems arising in the crystallization of silicate melts. But we may add that, for all its technicality, it is well and clearly written."

Times [London] Lit Sup p590 Jl 25 '29 1280w

BOWER, B. M., pseud. (MRS BERTHA [MUZZY] SINCLAIR-COWAN). Rodeo. 309p $2 Little [7s 6d Hodder]

29-13891

"In this new novel reappear the characters familiar to readers of 'Chip of the Flying U' and some of its immediate successors. Here once more are Chip himself, the Old Man, the Little Doctor, the cowboys of the Happy Family and others. But Chip is going in for expensive blooded stock and giving it solicitous care, and the Happy Family cowboys have gone into the movies and are piling up money and fame. The group gathers at Chip's ranch, and, to meet them once more, the Kid, son of Chip and the Little Doctor, has hurried home from the university at Laramie. The story centres around this young man, and its drama grows out of the age-old conflict between the older and the younger generations."—N Y Times

---

"Miss Bower comes back to her own with a mad whirl of action—all culminating in a most unexpected climax. It would be too much to hope that the conclusion would be other than what it is but, even with this drawback, the tale is as thoroughly excellent as any she has written and it is certain to be hailed with as much enthusiasm as appreciation."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 7 '29 350w

"An entertaining, modernistic tale of the cowboy up to date."

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 14 '29 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p770 O 3 '29 190w

Wis Lib Bul 25:276 Jl '29

BOWER, B. M., pseud. (MRS BERTHA [MUZZY] SINCLAIR-COWAN). Swallowfork bulls. 318p $2 Little [7s 6d Hodder]

29-550

Scott Morrison, tenderfoot cowboy for the Swallowfork outfit, is tricked into a faked sale of his herd. He starts hot foot after the crooks and the cattle and catches up with both.

---

"Mrs. Bower is a sure hand at turning out engaging Westerns. Here is another with a lively plot, likeable characters, authentic lingo and touches of humor." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 20 '29 130w

"A stirring tale, and an almost incredibly exciting one."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 30 '29 250w

"It is as exciting as B. M. Bower's readers expect to find her novels. The early chapters are verbose and tedious, but the reader who persists will find his reward."

+ — N Y Times p9 Ja 6 '29 450w

N Y World p11m Ap 14 '29 150w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 14 '29 70w

"It is pleasant to read so direct a tale, and one that deals solely with vigorous, uncomplicated characters."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p278 Ap 4 '29 160w

Wis Lib Bul 25:75 F '29

BOWERS, CLAUDE GERNADE. Tragic era; the revolution after Lincoln. 567p $5 Houghton

973.8 Reconstruction. United States—History—1865. Johnson, Andrew 29-17848

This history recreates the Reconstruction period after the Civil war, the twelve tragic years that stretched from the death of Lincoln to the close of the Grant administration. The period lives again in this dramatic and fully documented account of the political corruption of the times, carpet-bag rule in the South, leading politicians and women of society, the scandals of Grant's administration, the rise of the Ku Klux Klan and the disputed Hayes-Tilden election. The much misunderstood Andrew Johnson, for years the storm-center of hate and abuse, is given his rightful place as an honest man and a faithful public servant—a place similar to that accorded by his latest biographer, Judge Winston.

---

"He has produced a volume that is interesting, dramatic and—with an important exception—written in scholarly fashion. An attractive feature of the work of Mr Bowers is a telling style. Sometimes unconventional, but rarely, if ever, to an inartistic degree. But the style is a bit too strident, the insistence upon northern ignorance, partisanship and corruption too continuous and sweeping,—until the reader, however sympathetic he may be with the main thesis, begins to rebel and to feel that the author protests too much." C: R. Lingley

+ — Am Hist R 35:382 Ja '30 800w

Booklist 26:63 N '29

"This reportorial history of the intrigues after Lincoln has both the faults and the virtues of journalistic writing. Fortunately, the virtues predominate; they make Mr. Bowers's book an unforgettable record of an unforgivable period in American history. There are several intervals of dull and difficult reading; on the other hand, there are many stretches of excellently written passages, in which the significance of the facts presented does not obscure the quality of the author's work." Irving Astrachan

+ — Bookm 70:462 D '29 400w

"In this last effort the author carries his method to a higher level of interest and analysis than in either of its predecessors—the unlovely men and the contriving women. I have read every page. . . He is master of a trenchant style; he has ideas of his own and he thinks

BOWERS, C. G.—*Continued
a historian must call spades spades." W: E. Dodd

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 S 8 '29 1400w

"This is a vigorous, denunciatory, often entrancing book, well worth reading, but to be constantly discounted because of its temper, far, far below the standard of 'The Party Battles of the Jackson Period' and 'Jefferson and Hamilton.'" S. L. Cook

+ — Boston Transcript p4 S 7 '29 2600w

Cath World 130:374 D '29 600w

"Mr. Bowers has done titanic research work. His documentation is painstaking and profuse. He had access to some sources heretofore unavailable, to wit, the amazingly rich and rewarding unpublished diary of Honorable George W. Julian. There may be in Bowers' book place for historians to dispute, but scarcely to carp; room for differences of opinion as to policies and personalities, and the inferences drawn therefrom, but not, I think, of the work as a whole, nor the belated attempt to do justice to an era where the vanquished was voiceless, or, if vocal, his voice was lost in a chorus of diatribes and invectives." E. DeW. Jones

+ Christian Century 46:1504 D 4 '29 950w

"Although marred in places by a political bias that weakens some of its best passages and vitiates its value to those who are not willing and ready to weigh the facts for themselves, 'The Tragic Era' is still a masterpiece of historical writing. Furthermore, there is seen throughout the book an honest attempt to do justice to all, regardless of politics or partisan feeling."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 S 14 '29 850w

Churchman p16 O 5 '29 80w

Cleveland Open Shelf p148 D '29

"Despite its dramatic quality Mr. Bowers's book is not the product of a lively imagination untrammeled by concern for the facts, or of a talent for graphic narrative untempered by the testimony of the sources. The author not only gives evidence in the bibliography of his source material and manuscript collections of an extraordinarily thorough study of the politics of the period which he describes, but he shows on every page that he has mastered and assimilated the material which he has used." D. S. Muzzey

+ Current Hist 31:212 N '29 1250w

"One of the most distinguished books of the year . . . ought to be read by every American who is honestly interested in the history of his country." N. G. Goodman

+ Hist Outlook 20:351 N '29 700w

"The sterling merit of his book is its altogether remarkable recreation of the spirit of the time. If he has dealt severely with great reputations, he has also rescued many lesser ones from neglect. The spokesmen of the South are given a hearing and women lobbyists are unmasked. There is no history of the sordid epoch better worth reading, none better calculated to destroy respect for Republican morals, and none more certain to give its readers shocks and thrills." W: MacDonald

+ Nation 129:306 S 18 '29 1000w

"Bowers should be conceded his place as the greatest living American practitioner of what for want of a better term may be called personal history. . . Bowers' latest volume has all the merits and defects of the genre." A. M. Schlesinger

— + New Repub 60:210 O 9 '29 1650w

"Smashingly iconoclastic, the book is sure to draw controversy, and when the blast comes the author must depend upon the obvious soundness of his scholarship to see him through. Historians of orthodox, reactionary schools, happily passing but nevertheless still numerous, will howl 'Debunker' at him, but he is evidently braced for this and needs no help. . . Footnotes may interrupt a narrative, but in a story so incredibly fresh as Bowers's they add a quality more vivid than action—conviction. . . Grand entertainment, this warm and tragic book." Lloyd Lewis

+ N Y Evening Post p6m S 7 '29 1200w

"Mr. Bowers has spread the broadest canvas in contemporary writing of history. He has painted, with fire and feeling, and yet with deep regard for personal dimension, a forensic battle-scene in detailed panorama. What has before been viewed in sections, Mr. Bowers has assembled in one vast piece. Allowing for his strong prejudices (and historians who lack them leave their readers without thrill); allowing for the surprising presence in the midst of fine passages of slovenly phrases and aged stereotypes, 'The Tragic Era' seems to this reviewer the first compilation of the case and comment of Reconstruction worthy of its titanic theme." Arthur Krock

+ N Y Times p3 S 8 '29 2450w

"Here is the 'new history' at its best. It bears the unmistakable authenticity of careful scholarship, hard work, heart-breaking research among musty records and forgotten documents. Yet it moves swiftly. There are few dull spots among its five hundred pages. . . Mr. Bowers writes with vigor, a sense of the colorful, and above all a feeling for the people of his drama." H: F. Pringle

+ Outlook 153:66 S 11 '29 800w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:19 O '29 800w

St Louis 27:315 N '29

Reviewed by N. W. Stephenson
Sat R of Lit 6:600 D 28 '29 1000w

"Along with this graphic chronicle is mingled a running commentary on events as viewed from the perspective of today. Here, again, there are no new viewpoints. But Mr Bowers does something to popularize viewpoints which have not filtered down from the scholarly writers into general consumption. . . There is perhaps no period of American history about which a clear comprehension is more needed than that which Mr Bowers calls the 'tragic era.' His book, written with spirit and well documented, imparts much of the concrete evidence which is necessary for understanding."

+ Springf'd Republican p14 S 6 '29 780w

Reviewed by Beulah Amidon
Survey 63:172 N 1 '29 430w

Theatre Arts Mo 14:89 Ja '30 80w

BOWIE, WALTER RUSSELL. The Master; a life of Jesus Christ. 328p $2.50 Scribner [7s 6d Murray, J.]

232 Jesus Christ—Biography 29-1312

A simple, reverent re-telling of the life of Christ from gospel sources with frequent reference to widely known works of other writers. Dr Bowie is rector of Grace church, New York city, and author of The inescapable Christ (Book Review Digest, 1926).

---

"No one can read this book through without being impressed with the author's sincerity, and by the spirit of devotion by which he was animated."

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 26 '28 330w

"His deep religious insight and his gift of poetic imagination and expression rise to new heights in this interpretation of Jesus." C: W. Gilkey

+ Christian Century 46:585 My 1 '29 1150w

"Mr. Bowie has devout feeling and a style of great beauty and purity. The result is a life of Christ which is free from the fantastic extravagances of a Papini, but offers little beyond the well known features of Gospel paraphrase." B. W. Bacon

New Repub 57:169 D 26 '28 280w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p1 D 23 '28 1350w

Pratt p9 summer '29

St Louis 27:304 N '29

"His book is a combination of the sort of scholarship which a student gets second-hand from masters of criticism, and a not particularly novel homiletic interpretation. The style is boyish, with much of the charm which goes with adolescence, a charm which one hardly can accept as the equivalent of that maturity of expression which is properly expected from middle-age. The Christology of this book seems quite definitely Unitarian, although the author carefully refrains from using unmistakably Unitarian terminology."

Sat R of Lit 5:612 Ja 19 '29 120w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 19 '29 480w

"In Dr. Bowie's book a diluted theology is ubiquitous; and diluted theology is irritating, where pure theology is not."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p660 Ag 29 '29 600w

Wis Lib Bul 25:317 O '29

BOWMAN, ISAIAH. New world; problems in political geography. 4th ed rev 803p $4.80 World bk.

910 World politics. European war, 1914-1918 —Territorial questions. Boundaries 28-29089

"The fourth edition of The New World has been completely revised to conform with the events since 1921 when the first edition appeared. To make room for the large number of maps, of which there are 257, and for a discussion of recent treaties, the photographs which appeared in the early edition have been omitted. In order to provide a better understanding of the major problems raised in connection with the various countries and regions, the first chapter contains a discussion of such matters as mandates and colonies, debts and reparations, raw materials, the distribution of land, communication and transit, limitation of armaments, minority populations, boundaries, and international relations."—Am Pol Sci R

Am Econ R 19:105 Mr '29 40w

"The volume gives us a large and luminous account of the present positions of things in the world so far as they are reflected in and affected by the political geography of the world. This is a volume for the student, but it is especially a book for the intelligent layman." R. E. Park

Am J Soc 34:1204 My '29 200w

"The work forms a rich background for teachers and students of foreign governments and international problems."

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:230 F '29 230w

Booklist 25:255 Mr '29

"Almost as valuable as the text itself, and fatally fascinating, are the maps, charts and tables with which the volume is richly furnished." B. R. Redman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 3 '29 920w

"The various editions of the volume by Dr. Bowman have become generally recognized as handbooks which, brought down to date with each new edition, no student of world politics can afford to neglect." H. A. Innis

+ Canadian Hist R 10:71 Mr '29 120w

Hist Outlook 20:254 My '29 70w

Nation 129:49 Jl 10 '29 70w

"The text is written in a free-hand style that takes it out of the class of reference works and manuals. It can be read in an easy chair late at night." C: A. Beard

New Repub 58:257 Ap 17 '29 220w

"An established reference book for intelligent Americans." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p9m D 22 '28 100w

"There are 257 maps brought down to the present, and an astonishing amount of accurate information about contemporary affairs among all the nations of any importance." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv Ja '29 60w

Pol Sci Q 44:480 S '29 150w

"As a sound general survey of world geography dispassionately and understandingly written Mr Bowman's book has great usefulness."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 16 '29 100w

BOYD, THOMAS ALEXANDER. Mad Anthony Wayne. 351p $3.50 (12s 6d) Scribner

B or 92 Wayne, Anthony 29-21295

An historical biography of the revolutionary general and impetuous hero. For his daring manoeuvers early in his military career he was called "mad" Anthony Wayne, and the term stuck. His military strategy was always aggressive, but his real fame as a soldier is due to his capture of Stony Point and his Georgia and Indian campaigns. After the war he continued the work of George Rogers Clark in making the region north of the Ohio safe for white settlers.

Booklist 26:115 D '29

Bookm 70:564 Ja '30 550w

"An unpretentious book, without the paraphernalia of scholarship, but bearing in its pages the unmistakable marks of careful study and an intimacy with the scenes and characters of Wayne's life that gives it a flavor of authenticity and reality denied to many a more imposing tome. . . Its value lies in the successful re-creation of one of the most attractive figures of the Revolutionary period, and in the incidental background of social and economic conditions." H: S. Commager

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 O 20 '29 850w

Boston Transcript p7 N 13 '29 220w

Cleveland Open Shelf p148 D '29

Reviewed by Allan Nevins

N Y World p10m D 22 '29 100w

"Thomas Boyd's Mad Anthony Wayne gives a splendid portrait of that Revolutionary general." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 153:270 O 16 '29 100w

"The general reader especially if he is interested in military affairs will find it a lively and, in parts, even an exciting volume."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p875 O 31 '29 120w

BRACKETT, CHARLES. American colony. 218p $2.50 Liveright

29-16596

The story gives a gaily merciless picture of a colony of profligate Americans cultivating the indecencies in France. The only normal people in the group are ashamed of their decency. The others are pictured pursuing their sometimes perverted desires from dawn to dawn.

"One feels that Mr. Brackett is wasting a facile talent on the small affairs of small people who fortunately represent only an insignificant section of any American colony in Europe."

+ — Nation 129:448 O 16 '29 150w

"This book is poisonous, but only as a mosquito bite is poisonous. If you take it too seriously, its irritation may linger, but the itching will subside in a day or two. Such books, like mosquitoes, are among the penalties of a summer vacation."

— New Repub 60:182 O 2 '29 170w

"The scene of this volume is the Riviera and its author is Ernest Hemingway without inhibitions. . . In the defiant libertinism of 'American Colony' and 'The Sun Also Rises' there is no scrap of beauty. They are stories of lives carried on with excitement, but no vestige of dignity or loveliness. This may be, of course, due to the fact that Hemingway and Brackett both are puritans at heart, writing with unconscious denunciation of a world that actually shocks them." F: F. Van de Water

— N Y Evening Post p6m Ag 10 '29 250w

"Both Mr. Brackett and his characters are all stuck in the quandary of their milieu . . . one wishes that Mr. Brackett would write more in the untrammeled manner he is able to command when he is not considering aspects of contemporary sociology. . . The book's quality of misfittedness and its quantities of misfitted characters, reach a thin crescendo."

— N Y Times p9 Ag 18 '29 680w

BRACKETT, CHARLES—Continued

"Diverting and sufficiently scandalous chronicle." Mary Shirley
Outlook 152:628 Ag 14 '29 180w
— Springf'd Republican p7e S 8 '29 100w

BRADFORD, GAMALIEL. As God made them; portraits of some nineteenth-century Americans. 294p il $3.50 Houghton

920 United States—Biography 29-7738

Portraits of some nineteenth-century Americans: Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun, Horace Greeley, Edwin Booth, Francis J. Child and Asa Gray.

Booklist 25:318 My '29

"Mr. Bradford's seven sketches are neat, systematic, more or less uniform, but they lack the fusing touch of the artist."
Bookm 69:iv My '29 180w

"The understanding is high, the writing excellent. One may not always agree with the interpretations, but it is a relief in these days to find something of honest research presented in such readable fashion." Avery Craven
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Mr 31 '29 1500w

"Mr. Bradford has long been at his best. That this volume shows no advance is because it is a best which could not be bettered. To say that it shows no diminution of power is high praise, and it is praise deserved as well." S. L. Cook
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 23 '29 1700w

"This new book does not seem to us to have the power and penetration of 'Damaged Souls' and 'American Portraits.' . . On the whole it may be said that for those who like the method of this 'psychographer' and cannot have too much of his product, here is a new supply, not up to the best of what has gone before, not below the average produced by a machine guaranteed to maintain much the same level consistently." S. C. C.
— + Christian Science Monitor p12 My 15 '29 550w

"In this book Mr. Bradford shows the patient research, the wide sympathy and the insight to which his readers have become accustomed. He never has done a finer piece of work." C: L: Slattery
+ Churchman 139:27 Ap 6 '29 270w

"Everywhere, omnipresent on every page, the always capable if rarely exciting craftsmanship of our most indefatigable biographer stands out—almost never is one allowed to forget that Mr. Bradford is speaking. He is always eminently fair-minded, perspicuous, and sympathetic, as well as occasionally humorous in a gently quizzical sort of way; but one cannot help wishing that he would for once—just once—forsake his everlastingly competent craftsmanship and emit one bloodthirsty Menckenian war-whoop or one of Mr. Strachey's soft but terribly annihilating chuckles."
+ — Nation 129:22 Jl 3 '29 120w

New Repub 59:160 Je 26 '29 400w

"There is little of emotion or imagination in his work, but there is a reassuring sense of authenticity. Possibly, it is the men he has chosen that make 'As God Made Them' a little dull." F: F. Van de Water
— + N Y Evening Post p9m Je 1 '29 100w

"In this book he hustles together three statesmen, an editor, an actor, a scholar, and a scientist. But it must be said that he always writes with penetration, grace and art, and is forever interesting; and troubles himself to find the truth and tell it. . . A good deal of the book is not history but character sketch, brightened by anecdote." C: W. Thompson
+ — N Y Times p3 Mr 24 '29 1350w

"These are finely limned portraits, and often quite as illuminating as full-length biographies." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 227:adv My '29 70w

"Each of them has been done in full-length portraiture already. But to none of these biographies has been brought the clear, searching understanding which Mr. Bradford displays. . . His freedom from prejudice, his fine intellectual curiosity, his learning, grace and wit, above all his ability to reanimate the large or precious figures of the past make him an eminent figure in contemporary literature." F. L. Robbins
+ Outlook 151:504 Mr 27 '29 420w

"It is another evidence of Mr. Bradford's rare gifts as a biographer that with characters so varied as these he seems on equal terms." W: B. Shaw
+ R of Rs 79:20 My '29 130w

St Louis 27:270 S '29

"In connection with Mr. Strachey one thinks first of finish, irony, and something of the touch of caricature. With Mr. Bradford the strongest impression is of his justice. His style may be less impeccable, his portraits less deft and vivid; but they are deft and vivid, and they are more accurate."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1113 Je 15 '29 230w

"These compact sketches of variously representative 19th-century American men are analyses rather than portraits. Mr Bradford probes his characters keenly but fairly [and] cities abundant data. . . He is not oversubtle here and does not deal overmuch in formulas. The sketches tend to provide a scale of values for measuring personality."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 7 '29 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 25:159 My '29

BRADFORD, ROARK. This side of Jordan. 255p il $2.50 Harper

29-3660

Negro life in the cotton growing region along the southern Mississippi. It was nip and tuck between old Aunty Crip, who was guided by the spirit of the bayou and Preacher Wes, the spiritual leader of the Negroes, for the soul of Didge. But clever little black Didge laughed and danced her way thru life and into the heart of Jack, where she very much wanted to be.

Am J Soc 35:525 N '29 80w

Booklist 25:321 My '29

"His first novel. . . despite a few structural defects and a few lapses into journalism, deserves to be read along with the dozen or so good novels about Negroes that have come out of the South during the last decade." Herschel Brickell
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 F 3 '29 580w

"Although entertainment is its great feature the entire book is a painstaking and accurate work on the Southern negro. There is plenty of humor, but the utmost sympathy is shown, the greatest love and understanding. No one can read this tale without respecting the negro." J. R. S.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 30 '29 380w

"For inside information in fiction form, upon Negro life, the book is worthy of a place by the side of 'Black April' and 'Scarlet Sisfer Mary'—than which no book in this field needs any higher praise."
+ Christian Century 46:364 Mr 14 '29 100w

"Probably no one but Julia Peterkin can approach this author in appreciative understanding of the Negro. . . The beauty of this book is that the reader hasn't the slightest desire to try to convert these black folk from their primitive superstition, savagery, or sin. He has laughed and wept with them, and would like to know them." W. L. C.
+ Churchman 139:29 Ap 20 '29 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p95 Je '29

" 'This side of Jordan' is a strong and unflinching novel of life among the negroes of Louisiana by bayou and cotton patch, and Roark Bradford is a writer of some very positive and admirable virtues. Nevertheless, his book is something of a disappointment. It comes too late in a sequence of stories about negro life, and, whether derivative or not, it must of necessity give the reader who has followed the sequence the effect of derivative work."
+ — N Y Times p22 F 10 '29 630w

"Mr. Bradford has succeeded admirably in a lightning contrast of the Southern darkie of the halcyon days with his more sophisticated brother of the North. He sounds the note of an old order's passing in a vein philosophical rather than gloomy and his description of the flood is something to remember for a long time."

+ N Y World p11m Mr 24 '29 200w

"The story itself seems unimportant compared to the wealth of sound, color and lore which is presented. It is by no means so rich a book as Julia Peterkin's recent novel, 'Scarlet Sister Mary,' for instance, but it is a thoroughly real contribution to our growing sectional literature of the negro." Ben Wasson

+ Outlook 151:230 F 6 '29 400w

"The novel leaves us with a distinct feeling of satisfaction. The writing is powerful at times, bold at others. Altogether, 'This Side of Jordan' is a novel that ought to be generally read and esteemed."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:737 Mr 2 '29 300w

"The work is a distinct contribution to the folk narrative of America."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 19 '29 250w

Wis Lib Bul 25:101 Mr '29

BRADLEY, MARY (HASTINGS) (MRS HERBERT EDWIN BRADLEY). Alice in Elephantland. 187p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Appleton

916.75 Kongo, Belgian—Description and travel. Elephants—Legends and stories

29-23329

Alice, aged nine, accompanied her parents on a scientific expedition to East Africa, where they explored the Mountains of the Moon, and forests that no white man had ever entered. The story is simply told for children.

Boston Transcript p8 Ja 4 '30 180w

"It is a long way from Chicago to the Mountains of the Moon in the middle of Africa, but young Alice Bradley has made the journey a second time, and this is an engaging travel book of her experiences written by her mother. It is Africa for small people, and black and white silhouettes dance through the pages, drawn by the heroine of the book." O. M. Fuller

+ N Y World p11m D 1 '29 70w

" 'Alice in Elephantland' has a good story to tell about a hunting expedition in Africa. The information is occasionally quickened with pertinent and suggestive comment. But more often the story is spoiled by repetitive explanation of the dangers of the expedition." Helen Chrystie

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:418 N 16 '29 50w

"The story is simply told for children, but it is full of good stuff."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p1003 N 28 '29 120w

BRADLEY, MARY (HASTINGS) (MRS HERBERT EDWIN BRADLEY). Trailing the tiger. 246p il $3.50 (12s 6d) Appleton

915 Sumatra—Description and travel. Dutch East Indies—Description and travel. Indo-China, French—Description and travel. India—Description and travel. Tigers 29-13465

The book is more trail than tiger. Much of it is the engaging account of travels in India, the East Indies, and Indo-China, en route to the hoped-for meeting with the tiger. In the next to the last chapter the meeting takes place, in the jungles of Annam.

Booklist 26:64 N '29

"What makes Mrs. Bradley's book about big game hunting so much more interesting than the usual book of its kind is that, while big game is the primary object of the expedition, that subject often drops into a subordinate position in deference to other pursuits equally exciting. That is to say, Mrs. Bradley's impressions are not centered exclusively upon the chase, for she is an alert observer of everything that contributes to the fascination of life in those remote corners of the earth where tigers still dispute the right of way with civilization."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 S 15 '29 200w

" 'Trailing the Tiger' seems to us the most wholly delightful book of travel in the Far East that we have encountered this year. It is colorful, humorous and deftly done. Mrs. Bradley knows words and how to handle them. Her descriptions are vivid, stirring and most satisfactorily unfulsome." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p6m Jl 6 '29 130w

"A very fine sort of travel book, written with real charm." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p7m Jl 13 '29 90w

"Mrs. Bradley writes a most readable travel book, as much out of the ordinary as are the places she visits and the experiences she writes about. Those who have read her previous books recounting her adventures in Africa—one with the Akeley expedition, another into wildest Africa and a third telling of the experiences of her little daughter on these far trails—will know just the sort of vivid, amusing, colorful narrative to expect."

+ N Y Times p8 Je 30 '29 550w

"A pleasant, gossipy, non-statistical travel book." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 152:434 Jl 10 '29 80w

"A very pleasant chronicle of clean, hard, sportsmanship and shrewd observation."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p618 Ag 8 '29 600w

BRADWIN, EDMUND WILLIAM. Bunkhouse man; a study of work and pay in the camps of Canada, 1903-1914. (Columbia univ. studies in history, economics, and public law) 306p il $5 Columbia univ. press

331.8 Labor camps—Canada. Contract labor—Canada. Wages—Canada 28-21134

"This is a fascinating account, drawn from the author's first-hand experiences as a manual laborer and educational leader among the men who toiled in the construction of the government railways of Canada—particularly the National Transcontinental—in the period indicated. The study centers largely in the isolated camps and bunkhouses situated in the wilderness and concerned with grading and trestlework, miles in advance of the steel. Its subject matter transcends the field of economics, reaching over into the realms of housing study, racial analysis and educational policy, and one chapter depicts the historical outlines of the development of transportation in Canada."—Am Econ R

"From the standpoint of material presented this is a significant book. It may be criticized for lack of that detachment generally held to be necessary for scientific productions. Its manner is ever warm and at times even indignant, yet system rather than personality is held at fault, and all radicalism is assumed in error. Opinion is set forth boldly and without stint, yet for the most part it is mature opinion based on years of observation. The style is distinctly literary and free, and the paragraphs ornamented—though the thought is rarely strengthened—with a wealth of similes drawn from classical history and mythology. Frequent illustrations add to the book's attractiveness." H. A. Logan

+ — Am Econ R 19:137 Mr '29 550w

"The book has a double value. It is a history of the migratory worker on the frontier and of the heartless exploitation he submitted to. . . One feels that the book would have been vastly improved if the author had added some of the Paul Bunyan stories, the songs, and other bits of social life that would give us some of the human side of those bunkhouse days." Nels Anderson

+ Am J Soc 34:748 Ja '29 280w

"Whatever the merits of Mr. Bradwin's suggestions, they are rather belated." H. R. Kemp

Canadian Hist R 9:267 S '28 400w

Reviewed by Eugene Staley

Christian Century 46:869 Jl 3 '29 420w

BRADY, GEORGE STUART. Materials handbook; an encyclopedia for purchasing agents, engineers, executives, and foremen. 428p $4 McGraw

620.3 Commercial products—Dictionaries. Building materials—Dictionaries 29-1603

"Very concisely stated data on the raw materials of engineering and manufacturing, designed 'to give a quick summary of the most important technical feature viewed from the consumers' standpoint only.' Includes abrasives; alloys; building materials; fabrics, leathers, organic material; fibers; finishing materials; industrial chemicals; irons; non-ferrous metals; military chemicals and commercial explosives; minerals; ores; oils and greases; refractories; resins; gums; waxes; steels; woods."—Pratt

Booklist 25:310 My '29

"To call a smallish handbook 'An Encyclopedia for Purchasing Agents, Engineers, Executives and Foremen' seems offhand a rather strained ambition, but a captious user will find disappointingly little to grumble at when he comes to resort to it. A skillful economy of words affords place not only for the information essential to its chosen audience but also for many desirable secondary data. This audience is then likely to be thankful that its informant is at least not encyclopedic in bulk."

+ Chem & Met Eng 36:366 Je '29 120w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:10 Ja '29

Pratt p17 autumn '29

BRAGDON, CLAUDE FAYETTE. New image. 190p il $3 (10s 6d) Knopf

814 Mysticism 28-23821

Essays of a metaphysical nature on certain problems of modern life as seen in the light of Oriental philosophy, including several on the status of the modern woman.

Boston Transcript p7 N 14 '28 260w

"Having identified its writer as a Theosophist . . . I was unprepared to find in The New Image passages that deal sensibly with actualities such as architecture, education, the theatre. On these topics Claude Bragdon is enlightening. He knows about the Dimensions, but he also knows what the skyscrapers in New York actually stand for. In the chapter Towards a New Architecture he shows us the difference between architecture and engineering. The skyscrapers are the work of the engineer. . . The New Image is, to my mind, a book of unequal values. There is in it a little too much of the sort of thing that is said in inner circles in Theosophical Lodges. But there is much besides this . . . things stimulating even to outsiders are said." Padraic Colum

+ Dial 86:428 My '29 750w

Reviewed by Harris Russell

N Y Evening Post p9m D 29 '28 230w

St Louis 27:43 F '29

"The essays are in Mr. Bragdon's usual manner, almost too delicate in style, but in keeping with the mystical tone of his inquiries."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 13:468 Je '29 200w

BRAINARD, DAVID LEGGE. Outpost of the lost; an Arctic adventure; ed. by Bessie Rowland James; with salutation by A. W. Greely. 317p $3 Bobbs

919.8 Arctic regions. Lady Franklin Bay expedition 29-7355

In 1881 General (then Sergeant) Brainard joined the Greeley expedition to Lady Franklin Bay. Having in two years accomplished their purpose, the members of the party waited for the relief ship. The horrors of those months of waiting, as supplies diminished and weakness increased, make an indelible impression in these restrained and matter-of-fact pages from Sergeant Brainard's diary.

Reviewed by C. L. Skinner

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p29 S 15 '29 200w

"The story is told with classic simplicity, with perfect candor and absolute honesty." T: C. Richards

+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 30 '29 1550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p94 Je '29

Nation 129:256 S 4 '29 260w

"His language is restrained and yet so graphic that each character in the tragedy, each event in that hopeless Arctic vigil, stands before the reader's eyes a reality." Neilson Abeel

+ New Repub 59:79 Je 5 '29 320w

Reviewed by H: E. Armstrong

N Y Times p3 Ap 14 '29 1550w

St Louis 27:270 S '29

"The volume is notable in that it presents a straightforward account, without the self-consciousness or swashbuckling heroism we seem to find so necessary in our modern exploration literature. . . For its general literary honesty the book deserves to be ranked among the best human documents of polar literature. Those who are interested in a serious critical study of polar history can have only one complaint. The great amount of cutting and editing of the original diary was probably justified for the popular edition, but in all fairness some mention of it should have been made. From the edition we have the impression that the record is complete and unabridged."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:980 My 4 '29 330w

BRAITHWAITE, WILLIAM STANLEY BEAUMONT, ed. Anthology of magazine verse for 1927 and Yearbook of American poetry. 405, 146p $4 Vinal

811.08 American poetry—Collections (15-26325)

The 1927 anthology of magazine verse includes many new voices but omits the work of such established poets as Vachel Lindsay, Edna St Vincent Millay and Elinor Wylie. The introduction by Mr Braithwaite constitutes a rapid survey of American poetry in the last sixteen years.

Booklist 25:201 F '29

"So generous a net as his cannot avoid catching a number of noble fish, but it is also fine-meshed enough to keep quantities of small fry that it would have been kinder to throw back into the sea."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 D 30 '28 220w

"Mr. Braithwaite deserves the hearty thanks of all lovers of the art." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 19 '29 500w

"The anthology does afford a very real enjoyment. Mr. Braithwaite's greatest service, perhaps, is in printing a variety of poems instead of just one by a number of the lesser known poets." J: W. Crawford

+ N Y Evening Post p9m D 22 '28 700w

BRAM, ISRAEL. Goiter prevention and thyroid protection. 327p il $3.50 Davis

616.44 Goiter. Thyroid gland 28-20639

"The book has been written chiefly for the layman, though it is expected to be useful for the medical man as well. . . There is a good description of the thyroid, its functions in health, and the results of disturbed function. The chapter on endemic goiter is contributed by Dr. Olesen of the U. S. Public Health Service, and discusses its prevention by the use of iodine. The views of Dr. McCarrison on the relationship of iodine to goiter are also given, and we are warned against the promiscuous use of iodine and obesity cures, most of which contain thyroid extract. There is a chapter on diet, which the author believes has a strong bearing on the structure and function of the thyroid gland. . . An appendix gives a brief description of the various ductless glands of the body and some history of our knowledge of endocrinology."—Am J Pub Health

"The material given is mostly sound, and there is much useful advice, though we believe that the endeavor to make a book for both the physician and the patient is a mistake. The book is well printed and illustrated." M. P. Ravenel

+ — Am J Pub Health 19:128 Ja '29 330w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 F 17 '29 160w

Boston Transcript p4 S 1 '28 320w

BRANCH, ANNA HEMPSTEAD. Sonnets from a lock box, and other poems. 126p $2 Houghton

811 29-18469

A series of thirty-eight correlated sonnets forms the opening group of the book, Sonnets from a lock box. Lyrics on varied subjects follow, and the volume concludes with three narrative poems under the title, "Three stories told in a haunted house."

Booklist 26:110 D '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 D 8 '29 70w

Boston Transcript p5 O 19 '29 550w

"Her chief fault is wordiness. She is too fluent and too easily didactic. Certain sonnets in the 'Lock Box' have, however, the compression and individualistic outlook of a true poet." E. L. Walton

— + Nation 129:558 N 13 '29 50w

"Her place in our poetry is secure, if slight. In this volume, however, there is nothing to extend that place." Clarence Britten

— New Repub 60:357 N 13 '29 300w

"None of the title sonnets (reveries in a safe deposit vault) nor any other poem in this volume so much as approaches the sustained effect of her early and moving ode, 'The Monk in the Kitchen.' Why this decline of power in a poet whom the rigorous Conrad Aiken has anthologized among our best? I think it may be charged directly to her intellectual method. . . Mrs. Branch has been so good a poet that we may be pardoned the impertinence of wishing she were again less certain of her vision and more certain of her muse." Clarence Britten

— + N Y Evening Post p12m N 2 '29 600w

"The thought behind the verse is just a bit too insistent, intellect controls emotion, and the two remain ever disparate; the complete and flaming fusion is not attained. . . The simplicity of taste, together with a gentle humor, a sort of arch slyness, that mark the poems of 'Sonnets From a Lock Box' should win for the author many a reader."

+ — N Y Times p35 O 27 '29 280w

"The significant work in Miss Branch's book is to be found in the sonnet sequence, although among the poems which fill out the collection there are to be found two ballads notable for terse, stark phrase and an aptness of language which is unusual. Too many lines are hypermetrical; one poem is not a sonnet, lacking one line; at least three others have lines in excess of the limit. Lest this seem unwarranted carping, it should be remembered that the poet who undertakes a set form does so voluntarily, and should not do so unless it is her intention to stand by the election." F: G. Fassett, Jr.

+ — Portland Evening News p10 O 15 '29 450w

Reviewed by W: R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 6:292 O 19 '29 170w

BRANCH, EDWARD DOUGLAS. Hunting of the buffalo. 240p il $3 (10s 6d) Appleton

799.2 Bison, American 29-2501

This interesting history of buffalo hunting in the United States is enlivened by excerpts from the legends and tales of Indian and white hunters, and by the spirited illustrations from paintings representing scenes of the hunt.

Booklist 25:273 Ap '29

"It is an epic chapter of American history, worth telling and well told."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Mr 31 '29 200w

"Few authors are blest with the sweep and vividness of style that is Mr. Branch's. His story moves with the swiftness of the hoofs of the thundering herds that roamed the Great Plains. In writing a saga of this mighty beast he has presented a graphic piece of writing."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 1 '29 320w

Cleveland Open Shelf p60 Ap '29

"Mr. Branch has done his work with considerable research and with remarkable temperateness of tone."

+ Nation 128:352 Mr 20 '29 40w

"The author has told his story well, in swift, animated prose. He covers the American bison, hoof, hair and hide, the legendary as well as historic, the factual as well as the fabulous buffalo." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 2 '29 110w

"It is all told in a lively and readable style, with many anecdotes and graphic descriptions and an admirable sense of the underlying drama. The illustrations, mostly reproduced from old books, are unusually interesting."

+ N Y Times p18 F 10 '29 400w

"Mr. Branch's book is well illustrated, and contains a chapter in our history that is not usually given the importance it deserves in the more academic of our history-books." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv Mr '29 60w

"It is a chapter in the history of the West which is usually given less emphasis than it deserves, a picturesque and a significant chapter, and we are glad to see it told so fully." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 151:314 F 20 '29 100w

"Mr. Branch's volume is full of interest. It covers the whole buffalo country as it was in the beginning of the last century, and, telling of the buffalo, it tells also of the people whose support the buffalo were." G: B. Grinnell

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1193 Jl 20 '29 720w

"This book by Mr. Branch is the best and most complete account of the whole melancholy business that has been written. It is a careful piece of work well documented, and the record is temperately presented without over-emphasis."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p226 Mr 21 '29 650w

Wis Lib Bul 25:100 Mr '29

BRAND, MAX. Gun tamer. 283p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Hodder]

29-927

Into the midst of Colonel Mackay's self-complacent life came Señor Don Felipe Consalvo, when the colonel, his wife and their seventeen-year-old daughter Mary, were attending a cowpuncher's dance. Consalvo's amount of flattery was enormous; he got himself invited to stay at the colonel's ranch. Mary promptly fell in love with the suave hero; her father was pleased; her mother was horrified. And that's what made the story.

"Good stuff by an ace of Westerns. This outdoor piece has no cows, but is none the less a fine, upstanding tale of the open, with a mystery strain to add to its merits." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ja 27 '29 100w

"The story as a whole is a capital one, distinguished, moreover, by some shrewd, and in the case of the Colonel mordantly ironical, character-drawing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p669 Ag 29 '29 140w

BRAND, MAX. Mistral. 315p $2 Dodd

29-13213

A splendid gray-white stallion was Mistral, swift and devastating as the wind for which he was named. Lin Bister was a young man with a fancy for horses; he knew the worth of Mistral, and kept and trained him. And all his faith in the horse, which had been a killer, was justified.

BRAND, MAX—Continued

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 30 '29 70w

"The description of a five mile race, in which young Bister is thrown at the first fence, breaking his leg, but pluckily goes on and wins by trying a daring leap across a chasm, is the one portion of the book where triteness of style and banality of thought are forgotten in breathless excitement." P. L.

— + Boston Transcript p5 Ag 10 '29 350w

" 'Mistral' is one of those I'd-go-to-hell-for-you stories, centering about a horse instead of a girl. The servants would go to hell for young Lindley Bister, heir to the Bister traditions; Lindley would go to hell for Mistral, the man-killer stallion; and Mistral would go to hell just for the excitement on the way."

— + N Y Times p30 N 10 '29 270w

BRANN, ESTHER. Nanette of the wooden shoes. 124p il $2 Macmillan 29-9001

Nanette and Grandmère lived in a Brittany village, on a street called Geranium Lane. Here are stories and pictures of the little girl's happy times in the village with Grandmère and her neighbors.

Booklist 25:399 Jl '29

"Although the black and white illustrations do not help to visualize the country itself, they do convey the quaintness and charm of the houses and costumes. The color plates, however, do not seem in keeping with the simplicity of the text and the other illustrations. But into most of the pictures, as into the book itself, the author has put understanding and sympathy for Brittany." Evelyn Turpin

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ag 4 '29 550w

"These are most understandingly presented tales of a little wooden-shoed girl in a Breton village."

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 25 '29 80w
Cleveland Open Shelf p132 N '29

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Outlook 152:392 Jl 3 '29 50w

"A gentle story of Breton fisher-folk, told with charm and simplicity, and pleasingly illustrated." C. H. Baker

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1153 Je 29 '29 100w
Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '29 70w

BRAY, JOHN LEIGHTON. Principles of metallurgy. (Engineering ser.) 568p il $5.80 Ginn

669 Metallurgy 29-13598

A textbook on the basic principles of metallurgy, covering ores and their treatment, the reduction and refining of common metals, refractories, fuels and metallography.

"Professor Bray's treatment of the subject is broadly academic without, however, neglecting the industrially important aspects of the craft as practiced in the present day. There is some sacrifice in scientific accuracy by way of making statements in a more popular style. The language is simple and direct." G. E. Doan

+ — Chem & Met Eng 36:495 Ag '29 220w

"The author has achieved a handy yet comprehensive, concisely written text that will conserve the time of both teacher and student. The printing is well done." C: M. Johnson

+ Ind & Eng Chem 21:887 S '29 250w

BREAKENRIDGE, WILLIAM M. Helldorado; bringing the law to the mesquite. 256p il $4 Houghton

979.1 Frontier and pioneer life. Tombstone. Arizona. Outlaws 28-25741

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:207 F '29

"The quiet and efficient manner of 'Colonel Billy' Breakenridge in part accounts for the lack of blood-and-thunder descriptions of the sort that so often characterized books about that chaotic period during the early years of railroads in the West. But even without the Nick Carter touch, this story of Tombstone has its appeal for those who enjoy the history of expansion in America."

+ Bookm 69:iv Ag '29 140w

Reviewed by C: J. Finger
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Ja 27 '29 700w
Cleveland Open Shelf p69 My '29

"When it was necessary to 'get his man,' he did so with no fuss and feathers; and as he did, so he writes. Hence the story of his life is simple, sincere, and at the same time genuinely exciting."

+ Nation 128:208 F 13 '29 100w

"Colonel Billy tells the story of his life with unemotional simplicity. He simply rambles along, piling one incident upon another until he has finished, and then he stops. It is extremely interesting stuff, full of details of the doings of rip-roaring old hell-raisers, but the Breakenridge blood doesn't boil." Stanley Walker

+ N Y Times p34 Mr 24 '29 1000w
Pratt p32 spring '29
St Louis 27:99 Mr '29
Springf'd Republican p7e My 5 '29 950w
Wis Lib Bul 25:73 F '29

BREARLEY, MARY, pseud. See Jayne, M.

BRECHT, HAROLD W. Downfall. 342p $2.50 (7s 6d) Harper
29-8540

Malcolm is a bad boy, so his father thinks. Caught in a childish offense, Malcolm is taken from school, separated from his beloved "Clarkie"—an evil influence in the father's eyes—and sent to the farm of a sternly just Pennsylvania Dutchman. Here the boy's sullen defiance is either ignored or over-ridden. He is at last persuaded by a friendly farmhand to drop heroics and assume sweet reasonableness to gain his ends. The new tactics quickly bring results. Malcolm's use of them at home and at school wins popularity with the boys and girls. He is presently initiated into the mysteries of sex. However, arrogance comes with success and leads to a second downfall and a fresh stock-taking.

"One of the most honest and illuminating records of adolescence ever written. The story of this boy's rehabilitation and the short success that breaks at the moment he most confidently expects his triumphant system to hold him up is painful, but it is engrossing. Every adult who thinks Penrod and Seventeen are convulsingly funny should put Downfall on the shelf between them."

+ Bookm 69:xxii My '29 250w

"It is a masterpiece in its portrayal of adolescent youth. . . Mr. Brecht is a teacher and his criticism, more implied than expressed, is much against teachers. He is more than sympathetic with his boy, and his work, in all its frankness, is commendable in its finish." C. B. P.

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 18 '29 420w

"Although the book is an accurate study of adolescence, complete as any possible case history of a boy who 'flunks,' Mr. Brecht tells his story without use of psychoanalytic jargon or the usual painful methods of introspection. You see the boy in action, fighting for the preservation of his ego against his father and going down in defeat. . . Even if you are not interested in an excellent analysis of boy psychology, you will find that Mr. Brecht has given you a penetrating study of contemporary American life." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 13 '29 420w

" 'Downfall' is simply an earnest, uninspired, and exceedingly overwritten retelling of the adolescent at odds with his environment."
+ — N Y Times p24 Je 9 '29 260w

"This story of a 'Bad Boy, Model 1929' just misses being a really important book. It is written with sympathy, insight, pity, and restraint and shows expert knowledge of the subject of the American high school sheik. It is its slightly moral tendency which robs the book of some of its force. Not that Mr. Brecht ever preaches or ever loses his moral perspective. Just the same, his bad boy is just a little too far on the bad side and the story just a little too much of a parable to be intellectually satisfactory." J: Carter
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:973 My 4 '29 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p1004 N 28 '29 200w

BRECK, JOHN. When hell came through. 321p $2 Harper
29-6670

The Union Pacific railroad is being pushed westward. Jerry Kendrick, scout for the survey gang, rides into Julesberg and into a first class enmity with the local boss, a firm friendship with Two-gun Tom and a lasting love for Sue Curran. Adding to these factors trouble with the Pawnee Indians, a prairie fire and gun fights as required, the author spins a lively yarn of what happened before the first train, "Hell on wheels," came thru.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ap 7 '29 80w

"A very exciting and thoroughly dramatic story. It adds nothing new to our knowledge of this period of history but there is little likelihood of Jerry's adventures palling."
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 11 '29 150w

"This is an exceptionally good 'Western.' Hero and heroine are likable and not too stereotyped; there are two very villainous villains; and the happy ending concludes a thrilling sequence that keeps the reader on the qui vive." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p9m My 18 '29 80w

" 'When Hell Came Thru' is a book without pretentions—a plain Western thriller. Its writing is crude, its plot inconsistent and frequently obscure, but there are plenty of Indians and rough two-fisted, two gun men, hairbreadth escapes and tender love scenes in the heart of the wilderness to make it amusing and even, at times, exciting reading."
+ — N Y Times p16 Je 16 '29 150w

"The tale is spirited and entertaining in a conventional type."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 12 '29 200w

BREDER, CHARLES MARCUS. Field book of marine fishes of the Atlantic coast from Labrador to Texas; being a short description of their characteristics and habits with keys for their identification. (Putnam's nature field bks.) 332p il $5 (15s) Putnam
597 Fishes 29-10580

"The general habits, range and most prominent features of each species found in Atlantic waters from Labrador to Texas, are fully described in a manner which will enable both naturalist and fisherman to identify them easily. A series of keys aid classification, and the book contains numerous drawings and color plates."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 25:380 Jl '29

"This pocket size volume is the first comprehensive book on marine fishes."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 3 '29 60w

"The latest addition to Messrs. Putnam's excellent series of American Nature handbooks, in their very convenient format, is up to the level of its predecessors. It is a good book: a difficult task well done."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p562 Jl 11 '29 240w

BREMOND, HENRI. Literary history of religious thought in France, from the wars of religion down to our own times; v 1, Devout humanism; tr. by K. L. Montgomery. 423p $4.50 Macmillan [16s S.P.C.K.]
840.9 French literature—History and criticism. Religious literature (29-10231)

A study of the inner life of French Catholicism during the seventeenth century. M. Bremond deals not simply with the history of religious thought in France but with the history of the literary expression of religion, drawing his material from various literary sources—biographies, devotional works, treatises on philosophy and morality, sermons, Christian poetry, etc. Such devotional writers as François de Sales, and Yves de Paris are treated at length.

N Y Evening Post p8m F 9 '29 170w

"It is the successful fulfilment of [its] aim, together with the richness and interest of the material drawn upon, and its author's literary genius, which combine to set the Histoire Littéraire apart from all other works of the kind. It weaves into one richly coloured fabric, history, biography, and religious experience; compelling us to realize that the true masters of the spiritual life lived what they taught, and taught in order to share their discoveries." Evelyn Underhill
+ Spec 141:963 D 22 '28 1100w

BRENNER, ANITA. Idols behind altars. 359p il $5 Payson & Clarke
709.72 Artists, Mexican. Art—Mexico. Mexico—Antiquities. Indians of Mexico
29-19615

Mexican art, closely related as it is to native history, customs, and religion is the subject of "Idols behind altars." Early chapters are devoted to products of the ancient Aztec civilization, and the Spanish invasion of Mexico under Cortez during the rule of Montezuma. Art of the colonial period is next described. Part three is concerned chiefly with modern art and the work of such artists as Siqueiros, Orozco, Giotia, and Charlot. Illustrated.

Bookm 70:vi Ja '30 250w

"Miss Brenner wrote her book, the first attempt at an ordered story of art and artists in Mexico, with the official sanction and the unlimited aid of the University of Mexico. She has the equipment of a good annalist: youth and enthusiastic sympathies, the gift of close and penetrating observation, a genius for listening and remembering what she hears and an admirably energetic style. . . She interprets symbols in terms of human life, describes the now-famous mural paintings of the Syndicate of Painters and Sculptors in a lively intelligible painters' jargon, and devotes a series of remarkably fresh and delightful biographical chapters to individual painters who helped to make the most exciting period of art in the history of America. . . This is a book about Mexico not to be missed—a stimulating record of a vital period in the history of American art told by a contemporary eyewitness." K. A. Porter
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 S 29 '29 2150w

Boston Transcript p3 O 23 '29 830w

"Miss Brenner describes the complexities of Mexico with sympathy, clarity, and vision. She surveys the problem from many angles and in many moods. Her style reflects the peculiar spirit of modern Mexico—feverish activity of thought, precipitate action, defeatism in contemplating the immutability of nature and the transitory futility of individual man, and a hopeful intellectual cynicism. What she offers, however, is appreciations rather than solutions." G: C. Vaillant
+ Nation 129:496 O 30 '29 850w

"Miss Brenner has endeavored to paint a portrait of Mexico. Naturally, her work is not a complete portrayal. But it has lines and colors

BRENNER, ANITA—Continued
more revealing of the spirit of that land than any I have found elsewhere in print." Waldo Frank

+ New Repub 60:276 O 23 '29 500w

"The book is profusely illustrated with examples of Mexican art, ancient and modern. To say that some of them are as charming as Miss Brenner's style is high praise." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p10 O 6 '29 1350w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y World p11 D 18 '29 600w

"It seems likely that this large and careful and impassioned book will take its place beside Gruening's brilliant and judicious Mexico and Its Heritage as a necessity to any one who would study the Central American republic. Where that book dealt largely with Mexican political history, this deals exclusively with the emotional essence of Mexico, especially as it expresses itself in creation. . . The text of Miss Brenner's book shows exhaustive research, based upon deep intimacy, and significant conclusion, but without the formality and pedantry which the words 'research' and 'conclusion' suggest. Understanding and love of Mexico, feeling and knowledge about it have informed Miss Brenner's work with warmth."

+ Outlook 153:188 O 2 '29 380w

"Her concept of Mexican art is as broad as Mexican life itself. It is Mexican life, poetically described. But this amplification imposes equally broad obligations. These have not been shirked in 'Idols behind Altars,' though they have not all been solved. . . Miss Brenner's record of modern Mexican painting is exceedingly valuable; it turns over a little-tilled field. Only a few scattered articles and chapters, a few specialized brochures, have preceded her. Her account of the Syndicate of Painters and Sculptors and of the various painters is a record which the world will some day thank her for having preserved. She is the Vasari of the modern Mexican school and quite as delightful as Vasari." Carleton Beals

+ Sat R of Lit 6:505 D 7 '29 1250w

"Miss Brenner's style has agreeable pulse and eloquence, which are impaired by excessive impressionism in the arrangement of thoughts and even more by frequent obscurity of diction. But her work, as a whole, provides a significant compendium of ideas about Mexico. And these are not related to art alone. She seeks the background of contemporary art in the history and character of the nation."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e S 22 '29 1150w

BRETT, OLIVER. Wellington. 316p il $3.50 Doubleday, Doran [15s Heinemann]

B or 92 Wellington, Arthur Wellesley, 1st duke of 29-7543

In writing this biography of Wellington Mr Brett expresses his purpose and his point of view as follows: "This volume is not intended as a description of the Life and Times of the Duke of Wellington. It makes an attempt to follow him through his time, to seek him out in the fog of war, to disentangle him from the thickets of ancient politics. No battle will be described in it, no political issue explained. Beneath the actions of his military and public life, beneath the blinding glamour of his surpassing fame, there is the task of finding the essential portrait of the man himself."

---

Booklist 25:356 Je '29

"Mr. Brett does not aspire to write Wellington's biography nor to analyze his military career. Instead, he has attempted to produce what Gamaliel Bradford would call a psychograph." J: Carter

Bookm 69:203 Ap '29 480w

Reviewed by A. L. Sachar
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Je 30 '29 1400w

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 9 '29 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p93 Je '29

"Here is an admirable study of Wellington, conceived and executed in a spirit that would have delighted the general. The Hon. Oliver Brett writes as befits his subject—clearly, sensibly, and honestly, with no pretense on the one hand to exhaustive historical scholarship, nor on the other to psychological interpretation."

+ Nation 129:23 Jl 3 '29 110w

"What gives to Mr. Brett's book real life and freshness is the fact that, without belittling or denigrating Wellington, in the modern manner, he yet makes one see the limitations and littlenesses in Wellington's character. When the Duke emerges from the ordeal, he is perhaps less of a hero, but he is still the great 'character,' and more real and more understandable." Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 44:110 O 20 '28 220w

"Mr. Brett's book is delightful reading; it discusses Wellington in war, in politics, in love; it describes his tastes and pleasures, his relations with his colleagues and his wife and children. It abounds in happy and illuminating touches."

+ New Statesman 32:193 N 17 '28 750w

Reviewed by T. J. C. Martyn
N Y Times p18 My 12 '29 600w

"A book done with skill and delicate workmanship." C: J. Finger

+ N Y World p10m Mr 3 '29 780w

"An extremely able and interesting sketch of the Duke's life and character."

+ Sat R 146:613 N 10 '28 360w

Spec 142:26 Ja 5 '29 120w

"The book is primarily intended as a character-study. From this point of view it has much to commend it; for Mr. Brett has certainly succeeded in giving a vivid impression of Wellington's personality and of his general attitude towards men and affairs. There are, however, serious drawbacks to his device of blurring the background in order to throw the portrait into stronger relief."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p795 N 1 '28 1500w

BREWSTER, DOROTHY, ed. Book of modern short stories. 482p $3; school ed $2.25 Macmillan

Short stories—Collections 28-25346

These stories by the best of the moderns were chosen primarily to illustrate diverse ways of handling material. The notes at the end of the volume are largely the work of Professor Angus Burrell of Columbia university.

---

"It is a group of stories out of which one may not pick and choose, saying this or that is the better story. This may be done only in so far as one's individual taste for a particular type of story is pleased. Each story is individual and ably illustrates some particular point of method and structure. Each author possesses a different viewpoint of life and is eminently capable of revealing this angle in a skilful and entertaining manner." H. F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 16 '29 250w

"The book is written in clear and vigorous style, and is full of illustrations from recent and current history which make it interesting but too often supply the place of reasoned argument. While we recognize the sincerity and earnest Christian spirit of the author, we cannot but feel that he has not fully grappled with the difficulties of a highly complicated subject." E. F. Scott

+ — J Religion 9:467 Jl '29 500w

"Here is a minimum of magazine-fiction flavor. Miss Brewster evidently felt no responsibility toward the average short-story audience and her selections were made on the basis of a high literary standard." Tess Slesinger

+ N Y Evening Post p12m D 8 '28 680w

Pratt p24 spring '29

BREWSTER, HAROLD SYDNEY. Madness of war. 261p $2 Harper

172.4 War 28-24592

Mr Brewster, having searched the Scriptures for the teachings of Jesus concerning war, studies the question of the settlement of international problems in accordance with the message and spirit of Christ.

"Although its thesis is religious and its argument and illustrations are taken from the Christian Scriptures and proceed along lines of Christian thought, it is at the same time practical, modern, concrete and progressive, not only in its conclusions but in the general carrying out of its theme."

N Y Times p26 D 9 '28 380w

Wis Lib Bul 25:123 Ap '29

Reviewed by G. A. Beaver

World Tomorrow 12:88 F '29 560w

BRIDGES, HORACE JAMES. Taking the name of science in vain. 273p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

104 Science—Philosophy. Ethics, Evolutionary 28-25059

Four lectures originally delivered under the general title "Some aspects of life and conduct" are the basis of these chapters. Mr Bridges argues against the mechanistic theory sponsored by J. B. Watson, setting up in its stead the doctrine of personal responsibility in matters of right and wrong.

"Dr. Bridges wields a keen rapier and is not loth to use it. He clashed swords in public debate with Clarence Darrow, and acquitted himself well. His title is well chosen; his method of meeting these men on their own ground is courageous; his analysis and criticisms are thought provoking, to say the least." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 12 '29 400w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 46:50 Ja 10 '29 380w

Cleveland Open Shelf p135 N '29

"His refutation of behaviorism, and of the mechanistic philosophy of which it is a part, is not only a specimen of delightfully clever writing, but absolutely convincing and itself irrefutable." H: C. Vedder

+ Crozer Q 6:242 Ap '29 480w

Reviewed by D. A. Piatt

Int J Ethics 39:371 Ap '29 270w

"The high-minded idealism of the essays is stimulating to those who are concerned primarily for human values."

+ J Religion 9:330 Ap '29 90w

"The distinguished leader of the Chicago Ethical Culture Society takes the moderns to task for destroying ethical and cultural values by a mechanism for which they have no warrant in science. His strictures are not new but they bear reiteration."

World Tomorrow 12:91 F '29 50w

BRIDGES, THOMAS CHARLES, and TILTMAN, HUBERT HESSELL. Kings of commerce. 288p il $3 Crowell [7s 6d Harrap]

920 Great Britain—Biography. Biography 29-28189

Among the successful business men, British and American, whose careers are here sketched are Lord Ashfield, director of the London underground railways; Charles Cochran, showman; Sir Robert Hadfield, steel king; the Harmsworth brothers, newspaper magnates; Sir Joseph Lyons, restaurant proprietor; Sir Charles Macara, Lancashire cotton expert; Gordon Selfridge, the store king; Sir Alfred Yarrow, ship builder; George Eastman; Edward Bok; Henry Ford; John D. Rockefeller; Charles M. Schwab; F. W. Woolworth.

"There are two dozen brief biographies in this assortment. The facts vary, but the sentiments are interchangeable."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 N 3 '29 200w

"The biographies are written in good workmanlike style, with rapid movement, careful selection of material and graphic presentation."

+ N Y Times p22 S '29 480w

"It is a well-recognized fact that to produce an interesting or even readable character sketch of a successful business man is one of the hardest tasks that can be put before any writer. Messrs. Bridges and Tiltman, however, have plunged into it with admirable courage, unbounded enthusiasm for their subject, and a good deal of unconscious humour."

+ Sat R 146:661 N 17 '28 110w

BRIGHTFIELD, MYRON FRANKLIN. Theodore Hook and his novels. 381p $4 Harvard univ. press [13s Oxford]

B or 92 Hook, Theodore Edward 28-22483

"The most valuable part of Professor Brightfield's thesis is his last chapter in which while describing Hook's importance as a novelist, he defines his relation to other exponents of the novel of fashionable life and to the realistic trend in early Victorian fiction. He takes up his points of contact with Pierce Egan and with the earlier phases of Bulwer Lytton and Disraeli, but dwells with particular emphasis on the likenesses to Hook that are to be found in Dickens's stories, suggesting strong possibilities of borrowing on the part of the younger writer. For the rest, the book is a component narrative of a person whose great reputation in his own day was due to an extraordinary gift of improvisation."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 N 4 '28 120w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p10 My 11 '29 1400w

"Professor Brightfield's book is an excellent and thorough piece of research. His fault is that evidently necessary fault of all biographers of little men, the tendency to claim for their subjects, resentfully and reproachfully, a far greater honor and worth than can possibly be allowed." Lionel Trilling

+ — N Y Evening Post p8m D 22 '28 200w

"Prof Brightfield's book gives the impression of being a clear, painstaking and thorough piece of work. It is a valuable addition to our knowledge to have stated so clearly Hook's influence upon the English novel, and particularly his relations with Dickens. All this Prof Brightfield has done excellently. Yet, on this foundation, for a recreation of personality, we need something more. None of this reveals graphically the essential Hook." H. K.

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 F 4 '29 520w

"Professor Brightfield has accomplished his critical intention carefully and unassumingly; his biographical labours are well planned also, but we could wish that he had permitted himself a little more of that vivacity which, it may be, is held unsuitable to a thesis."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p9 Ja 3 '29 520w

BRIGHTMAN, EDGAR SHEFFIELD. Philosophy of ideals. 243p $2 Holt

141 Idealism 28-14913

"An exposition and defense of the thesis that ideals are not mere tools created by man for the purpose of organizing a more satisfactory life in relation to nature, regarded as neutral, but are rather constitutive of reality itself. This idealistic philosophy is set forth with ample recognition of differing philosophies and with careful definition of the issues involved. The final chapter on 'Contemporary Idealism' furnishes a suggestive survey."—J Religion

"His arguments are presented with remarkable lucidity and impressiveness in chapters some of which deal with ideals as such, with mind and nature, with the sources of the authority of ideals, and with the objections which have been offered to idealism, many allusions to the pertinent literature coming in by way of illustration." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 4 '28 500w

BRIGHTMAN, E. S.—Continued

"The unified and readable character of the work will make it intelligible, instructive, and interesting to amateur and professional philosophers alike." D. L. Evans

\+ Int J Ethics 39:359 Ap '29 750w

"No one but a partisan of his view, and an optimist at that, would, I think, regard Mr. Brightman's argument as a respectable demonstration of his position. He trusts too readily in proof by judicious quotation and confident assertion, is prone to give thin, often careless interpretation of rival philosophies and to find the source of adherents to these philosophies in mental confusion. At critical junctures he lacks space or time to go into the matter or is diverted by more pressing concerns." M. C. Otto

— + J Philos 26:499 Ag 29 '29 1500w

J Religion 9:162 Ja '29 70w

St Louis 26:373 D '28

BRINIG, MYRON. Madonna without child. 352p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

29-5409

The psychological study of a childless old maid who was a "born mother." Mary Dunston was secretary to Albert Camden. The first time Camden brought his motherless daughter to the office an unusual relationship sprang up between the yearning woman and the eager little girl. Camden brought them often together, and his new attitude gave Mary hope of marriage and of having Claire always with her. It turned out otherwise, but the relationship had given Mary something she could never lose.

---

Bookm 69:xxiii My '29 120w

"The tragic neurosis of Mary Dunston, which becomes at the end so violent as to impel her to kidnapping, is a genuine abnormality, given vivid outline by an author who will some day write a less saccharine book. It is not the beautiful devotion of a charming relationship."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Mr 10 '29 250w

"It is an interesting story despite its hysterical ending, and it shows some constructive power, but it has all the earmarks of an overyoung writer who has not waited for experience to teach him proper understanding of his fellow man and woman."

— + Boston Transcript p3 Mr 6 '29 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p76 My '29

"This story of an old maid's attempt to find emotional fulfillment in a passionate, yet unrealized, maternal love is over-emphasized and murkily erotic. Yet Mr. Brinig has built well. His story has in itself its own justification—a kind of centripetal force which seems to render external standards more than usually futile. 'Madonna Without Child' is a sentimental book, saved by its power and consistency from sentimentality."

\+ — N Y Times p30 Mr 17 '29 480w

"The prolonged psychological and sexual hunger of a drab wage slave is not the most pleasant and cheering reading. It is a great tribute to Mr. Brinig's technique that he has made her plausible, sweet and as human as possible considering the cramped and horrible circumstances of her life. A great pity and tenderness sweeps through the book."

\+ — N Y World p11m Mr 24 '29 250w

"While one is moved to pity Mary, one does not feel that hers is a great tragedy. It is the tragedy of a mediocre person, and the tragedy is entirely personal. Only in the last chapter does she rise to true nobility of soul, but the alternative is utter despair."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:814 Mr 23 '29 220w

BRINIG, MYRON. Singermann. 466p $2.50 Farrar & Rinehart

29-26895

" 'Singermann' is the story of a first generation immigrant family between the years when Michael, the youngest child, is born and when he is ready to start for college. Each member of the family is an individual, living a life in which his inheritance and his circumstances are combined to make a story sometimes dramatic, always human. There is something of a real saga in this history of a family, although the family is only that of an ignorant Jewish immigrant who comes to America from Rumania, finally to settle in Montana."—N Y Times

---

Booklist 26:69 N '29

Bookm 70:318 N '29 170w

"The book must have been part of the blood and tissue of its author. It develops with the rhythmic beat of reality. If it lacks, now and then, for a measure of lightness, or a smile at the grotesque and disproportionate, you forgive it." V. P. Ross

\+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 S 8 '29 750w

Boston Transcript p2 O 2 '29 280w

"All of the characters in the story are living and credible, but it cannot be said that any of them is boldly, uniquely realized. The drama itself, though it commands a strong and sustained interest, is never intense." K. F.

\+ — New Repub 60:330 N 6 '29 300w

"His Jews are, first, human beings, no different from other races. His characters are not mere traits, personified. But the traits are there none the less, the more outstanding because they are represented in warm, living human beings."

\+ N Y Times p6 S 8 '29 750w

"This heavily overwritten and disjointed account of the doings of a family of orthodox Jews in Montana is saved by its intensity of feeling, as well as by a number of vivid passages and a vein of real and touching beauty, from being merely indigestible." S. Ish-Kishor

\+ — Outlook 153:68 S 11 '29 240w

"From first to last Singerman is a realistic account of life as it is experienced not only by Jewish families but by those of every nationality, when transplanted to mid-western American soil." H. L. Cail

\+ Portland Evening News p8 O 22 '29 350w

"Mr. Brinig has designed his book on the heroic scale, and the result justifies his temerity. The novel sprawls as America sprawls, but it is quick with life, too, as America is." Gladys Graham

\+ Sat R of Lit 6:105 S 7 '29 820w

BRINTON, SELWYN JOHN CURWEN. Gonzaga—lords of Mantua. 273p il $5 Brentano's

945.2 Gonzaga family. Mantua—History

[28-13382]

"Led to write a book through his enthusiastic admiration of the splendid works of art still to be seen in this rich old city, [the author] was carried away by his material into the very serious labor of writing a romantic history of the Gonzaga family."—Bookm

---

"This volume shows too many weak spots for symmetry, too many amateurish efforts at moulding, to command real esteem."

— Bookm 67:xxiii Je '28 160w

"Years of research in the history of Italy, followed by a special study of the life story of Mantua, Key City of Northern Italy, have brought into being this brilliantly conceived and written history whose subject was never before presented in its entirety by any English writer." F. B.

\+ Boston Transcript p4 F 4 '28 700w

"Lavish in illustration, documented to the last detail, yet not too long to be read with ease, here is a volume which will appeal to those who have fallen under the spell of Italy." P. W. Wilson

\+ N Y Times p7 Ap 22 '28 1150w

"There is, of course, much fighting and much political intrigue recorded in Mr Brinton's scholarly book, but he manages to relieve the situation whenever it threatens to become confusing or wearisome by little personal touches, descriptions or opinions which heighten the charm and interest of the story, always."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 30 '28 600w

BRION, MARCEL. Attila: the scourge of God; tr. from the French by Harold Ward. 275p il $3.50 McBride [12s 6d Cassell]

B or 92 Attila 29-13143

"Attila's long life unrolls to a splendid panorama in M. Brion's fascinating pages, from his early exile in licentious and frivolous Rome where he studied every weakness of the empire he wished to win not for heathen motives, but only as a link in his dream of a world dominion stretching from Gaul to the Yellow Sea."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 26:27 O '29

"A brilliant and exciting and irreproachable book wherein the genius and statesmanship of the infamous Scourge of God receive a painstaking acknowledgment. It is a thorough and dramatic exposition of one of the ablest organizers and greatest kings in history who never made war for the sake of war." Donald Douglas
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Je 2 '29 700w

"The author of this historical sketch of a great man's life has rendered his story highly dramatic. Yet it is the more serious by reason of its careful and studious examination of the scene. M. Brion gives the reader an unforgettable picture of all the forces at work."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 15 '29 200w

Nation 129:560 N 13 '29 50w

"His book is without bibliography or references of any kind; he seems, however, to have used the romantic Byzantine chroniclers of the sixth century, the hagiographers of the ninth without ever doubting their word; where these have failed, his invention has suppliéd the rest. . . M. Brion's work would have been reckoned a masterpiece in this singular school. By the exercise of his imagination, he has concocted an amazing and deceptive dish."
— Nation and Ath 46:294 N 23 '29 450w

"A more historically valid and humanly gripping account of Attila and the world he flailed with the Hunnish lash has yet to be written." F: H. Martens
+ N Y Evening Post p6m Je 15 '29 400w

"M. Brion knows that the way to make the general public read history is to keep them interested; and his story is so dramatic that sometimes you wonder how much is history and how much romance. . . In the main M. Brion's history is quite sound. If he has selected and arranged and interpreted, he has done no more than his material requires." Elmer Davis
+ N Y Times p7 Je 2 '29 1300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p826 O 17 '29 230w

World Tomorrow 13:41 Ja '30 40w

BRION, MARCEL. Bartolomé de las Casas, "Father of the Indians"; tr. from the French by Coley B. Taylor; with an introd. by Ernesto Montenegro. 314p $3 Dutton

B or 92 Casas, Bartolomé de las, bp. of Chiapa 29-1843

"Marcel Brion writes of Las Casas, the great Dominican who was called the Father of the Indians, and who espoused so stalwartly the cause of those miserable savages suffering at the hands of his fellow Spaniards in the West Indies and South America. The story is both a noble and a dreadful one. Dreadful in its setting—the exploitation and annihilation of the aborigines by the conquistadores; noble in its pictures of devoted, adventuring monks. Of these monks, Las Casas is foremost."—Outlook

Booklist 25:357 Je '29

"M. Brion has made a self-contained history that gives a unified and well-proportioned view of the brave old priest who seems to have been a kindly humored man though a terrible fighter for his cause. If America is to have a handy transcript of Las Casas's great book, we can look with confidence to M. Brion and his translator for reliable work, judging from this." C: J. Finger
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ja 27 '29 1000w

Boston Transcript p5 Mr 9 '29 250w

"M. Brion's life of Bartolomé de las Casas is the most impersonal of biographies. Its virtues are those of history: proportion, organization, and solid learning. The author is interested in his hero historically, that is, not so much for himself, but as a force that moves against other forces; the resulting conflict is the theme of his book." Dwight Macdonald
+ New Repub 58:76 Mr 6 '29 320w

"Las Casas was, it seems to us, one of the great of the world, and M. Brion's account of his life is stirring and splendid reading." F: F. Van de Water
+ N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 19 '29 200w

"M. Brion's biography is a fine, illuminating detail study of a great and generous soul." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 26 '29 110w

N Y Times p12 Ja 27 '29 450w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 227:adv Mr '29 70w

"Las Casas's life is simply told without effort at picturesque effect—a feat of authorial self-denial when one considers the quality of the material—and thereby gains in force."
+ Outlook 151:109 Ja 16 '29 220w

Reviewed by L. B. Simpson
— + Sat R of Lit 5:802 Mr 23 '29 930w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 21 '29 150w

BROAD, C. LEWIS, and BROAD, VIOLET M. Dictionary to the plays and novels of Bernard Shaw; with bibliography of his works and of the literature concerning him; with a record of the principal Shavian play productions. 231p $4 Macmillan [10s 6d Black]

822 Shaw, George Bernard [29-6261]

This guide-book to Shaw's works provides synopses of his novels and plays, bibliographies, including reported speeches, lectures, letters, etc.; a dictionary to the characters in the plays and novels; and a record of play productions, with notes on the plays banned by the censor.

Booklist 25:313 My '29

"A very well edited book of reference to Mr. Shaw's writings."
+ Nation and Ath 44:854 Mr 16 '29 60w

St Louis 27:202 Je '29

"This work of reference should prove entertaining as well as useful. . . The range of the book is remarkable, but the proof-reading has been careless, and, in the case of a dictionary, the fault is considerable."
+ — Sat R 147:118 Ja 26 '29 200w

"Some books of reference transmit the flavor of their subjects unalloyed while they preserve the integrity of the facts. This dictionary presents varied information about Mr. Shaw's work in economical detail and in several accessible arrangements, and yet misrepresents the qualities of Mr. Shaw. . . The whole book, in spite of the truthfulness of its contents, gives a remarkable impression of a singlehearted Mr. Shaw who writes earnest prefaces to plays of guileless melodrama."
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:866 Ap 6 '29 270w

"It is hard to keep pace with Mr. Shaw; but the compilers seem to have done their work admirably."
+ Spec 142:398 Mr 9 '29 100w

BROADHURST, THOMAS WILLIAM. Blow the man down. 356p $2.50 Dial press [7s 6d Hurst] 29-18559

A girl, "Estelle Montmorency," is shanghaied aboard the British schooner Southern Cross. Her adventures on its voyage to Calcutta, and her contacts with such worthy sea-going men

BROADHURST, T: W:—Continued
as the Big Swede, 'Arry, Ugly Mug, Mr Ryan, Donald, the Scotch steward, young Charles, and Capt Braverman, make up the story.

For biographical sketch of the author see Boston Transcript p1 O 5 '29

" 'Blow the Man Down' is in no need whatsoever of manufactured corroborations. It is a good story well told. The men on board that old ship are so well done that they never become vague or literary in the mind of the reader. They are all of the generation of sailors who passed into steam as the sailing ship passed into limbo. They brought with them to us their ethics, their tradition and their own peculiar profanity as you see it in this book. This novel will find readers. It is the kind of story that will never go out of fashion." W: McFee

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Ag 25 '29 1100w

"Credit is due to Mr. Broadhurst for good handling of a somewhat improbable story, for creating and keeping alive the illusion of reality through a succession of such happenings as probably never took place on the seven seas . . . The story has no plot, and is not well written in the usual sense of the word, but the author must have felt as though he had to write it, and that very need makes it live. The author is quite right when he says in his short introduction that it is no tale for a lady, but it would not be suprising if many of them read it, and liked it." B. M.

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 14 '29 520w

"A genuine sea story written by one who knows the sea in all its moods. It contains something of melodrama, but it has nothing in it of that strange extravagance and forced humor that have made the name of Marryat famous, or any of the curiously mingled realism and fantasy that we all expect to find when we read a sea story by Joseph Conrad." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p7 O 19 '29 420w

"A fine deep sea story, told in a sailor's lingo and dealing with real human beings. The narrative moves with vigorous swing, and it is flavored with driving spray and fo'c'sl profanity and sailors' yarns and the sound of the wind in the rigging. It lifts the reader out of his daily routine, plants him down on the deck of an old windjammer and lets him see how the ship is sailed, how the sailors act, what they say, and what the weather is like between London and Calcutta."

+ Galveston Daily News S 15 '29 850w

"The book deals with the simple emotions of naive men, its style is unpretentious, but it never grows sluggish and the climax is one of the most exciting chapters that we can remember in any story of the sea." Malcolm Logan

+ N Y Evening Post Ag 24 '29 420w

"In turn heroic, brutal, melodramatic, humorous, sentimental, this powerful sea tale depicts the ninety-five-day voyage in the '80s of the thirty-year-old clipper Southern Cross from London to Calcutta." E. C. Beckwith

+ N Y Sun Ag 31 '29 400w

— N Y Times p16 S 1 '29 280w

"Capt Braverman was the hero of the tale and if Mr Broadhurst had done no more than add him to the gallery of outstanding figures of sea fiction, it would have been an achievement; but he has also told a story that measures up in interest to the portrait of his chief character."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 27 '29 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p826 O 17 '29 70w

BROCK, EMMA L. Runaway sardine. unp il $2 Knopf

29-14637

A delightful story for children, of two old fisher folk of Brittany who had a yellow cat and a black hen and a sardine in a tub. The sardine's name was Zacharie. And Zacharie ran away from his tub and adventured far and wide before he came back to the tub again. Hand-lettered and illustrated by the author.

Booklist 26:37 O '29

Reviewed by Helen Ferris

Bookm 70:307 N '29 60w

"Here is a picture book after our own heart —one that springs spontaneously out of the every day life of a Breton fishing village seen through the eyes of an artist, who has caught the true flavor and given it meaning and color in a charming picture story book for little children." A. C. Moore

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Jl 7 '29 880w

Cleveland Open Shelf p159 D '29

"The delightful odyssey of Zacharie, an unusually adventurous sardine who lived in Brittany, and was the excuse for some fine drawings of Breton fisher folk." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p14m N 16 '29 40w

"Little children will like this jolly story and we hope they will enjoy the delightful habit [the sardine] had of tucking his tail in his mouth." M. G. Bonner

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 28 '29 60w

"The pictures are really funny; they have the rough, broad effect of cartoons." M. L. Becker

+ Outlook 152:392 Jl 3 '29 60w

St Louis 27:315 N '29

"It is all that a little child's book should be, with a flavor and vigorous, rollicking humor too seldom found between bookcovers." Rachel Field

+ Sat R of Lit 6:403 N 16 '29 200w

BROCK, LYNN, pseud. See McAllister, A.

BROD, MAX. Reubeni, prince of the Jews; a tale of the renaissance; tr. from the German by Hannah Waller. 340p $3 Knopf

28-23535

The story opens in Prague in the Middle ages. David is the studious son of a Hebrew scholar. His adolescent love is given, guiltily, to the Christian girl Monica, who helps him escape from Prague only to betray him when they have left the city. David next appears in Venice as Reubeni, a powerful personage who calls himself brother to the King of Chabor and who is regarded as the Messiah. This half of the book is based on historical sources.

" 'Reubeni' is interesting as an essay in history. But no single character in the great gallery of sixteenth century personalities, from Pope Clement to Michelangelo and Machiavelli, achieves even a single pulse-beat of life in his unreal and ponderous treatment."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p262 N 18 '28 1000w

"While the book is quite frankly a romance, it is based upon historical research and presents an accurate picture of the ruthless treatment of the Jews in those days." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 46:425 Mr 28 '29 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p111 Jl '29

"The book lacks unity. The breach between the historic man and his fictitious youth is too great. While the life of the man is interesting from a historical and philosophical point of view, it is the life of the boy, rich in Talmudic lore and reactions to the customs and practices of the country, that is remembered."

+ — N Y Times p13 D 30 '28 700w

"The story itself is moving but it will be appreciated only by one who knows the meaning and history of the time in which it is laid. It is so distant, so fantastic to a citizen of this age of 'enlightenment' that it cannot stir the reader very deeply unless he understands its implications and sympathizes thoroughly with the spiritual currents of that age." Bernard Smith

N Y World p11m N 18 '28 330w

"The novel is labored and ponderous, swamped with detail. The characters have a way of fading out; none of them really lives for more than a few pages at a time. Long before the end, the reader is as indifferent to Reubeni's projects as were the contemporary Jews."
— Sat R of Lit 6:218 O 5 '29 250w

"Inchoate and wordy as the novel seems at times, it has passages of visionary splendour." R. A. Taylor
+ — Spec 142:247 F 16 '29 150w

"The entire handling of the period of the Renaissance is extraordinarily vivid and telling, the story itself moves at a brisk dramatic pace, and the poetic fervour with which the historical facts are interpreted gives a fine edge to the religious theme."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p200 Mr 14 '29 500w

BROD, MAX. Three loves; tr. from the German by Jacob Wittmer Hartmann. 275p $2.50 Knopf 29-15287

" 'Three Loves' is the story of a man's search for the perfect love. A man surcharged with sensibility, with imagination, with the spirit of questing. Yet a man who retains, somewhere in the depths of himself, an instinct for balance. This instinct saves him from destruction and it keeps him from his goal. It is the source of his struggle."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"Undoubtedly Mr. Brod compels you to listen to him. The sharp point of his analysis spurs you on. He starts long trains of thought and conjecture in your mind. He makes you feel both the variety and the universality of human experience." V. P. Ross
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Jl 21 '29 850w

"The Stasha episode is managed with great power. The fact that this all devouring love is described by the impoverished, shabby old man gives it an odd and startling effectiveness."
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 4 '29 380w
N Y Times p12 Ag 4 '29 830w

BRODERICK, JOHN THOMAS. Forty years with General electric. 218p il $2.50 Fort Orange press, Albany, N.Y.
621.3 General electric company 29-19762

A series of sketches describing the origin and growth of the General electric company and tracing its success to its founders.

---

"Facts are clothed by the writer in a picturesque way to show the growth of one of the great representative and modern industries of America. The human touch is there and shows that behind progress, growth, wizardry and modern production is the old, old story of a man, another man and yet another."
+ Boston Transcript p4 N 30 '29 250w

"Mr. Broderick's reminiscences are recounted in a not wholly orderly flow, but more than compensate for the unrigorous sequence by their personal color, derived from both his unusually long period of association and his real, unobtrusive talents."
+ Chem & Met Eng 36:690 N '29 120w

Reviewed by J: Dos Passos
New Repub 61:104 D 18 '29 550w

BRODY, ALTER. Lamentations. 89p $2.50 Coward-McCann
812 28-22604

Four somber one-act folk plays of the American Jew which hark back to Russia for their psychological background. Contents: Lowing in the night; Recess for memorials; Rapunzel; A house of mourning.

---

"Four one-act plays which cry out with the passionate sincerity of all Brody's work and display his smouldering lust for beauty. Mr. Brody's is an authentic voice, and his language, in lesser degree, transcribes into English the flavor and poetry of Yiddish as Synge's did of Irish." W. P. Eaton
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 D 30 '28 150w

"The boldness of development in his themes yet displays restraint, and what has so well been called his 'quiet sense of crisis' reveals the many beauties of these plays. To the few masters of the shorter form we must now add Alter Brody."
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 26 '28 280w
Cleveland Open Shelf p28 F '29

"There is no mistaking the racial quality of his speech, yet it has neither the caricature which vaudeville comedians nor the milt-grossness which other Anglo-Jewish writers have presented as the equivalent of an eloquent and dignified idiom. But this is his sole vital achievement, an achievement of considerable magnitude, to be sure, and one that will undoubtedly influence all future work in the Yiddish field. There is little else impressive or outstanding in these one-act plays." Johan Smertenko
— + Nation 127:sup630 D 5 '28 380w

"Much of this new jargon must be utterly unintelligible to those who have not some knowledge of the Yiddish language and of the Yiddish twist of expression. On the other hand, Mr. Brody not infrequently lends to the written word the richness and savor and crude vigor of a foreign idiom which penetrates in spite of its strangeness." Edwin Seaver
+ — New Repub 58:340 My 8 '29 360w

"If Alter Brody has not already established his reputation as a poet, these sketches have made him a poet in the Continental use of the word. He has put a new language down on paper, he has made the American Jew his medium. His 'Lamentations' are a record of human experience, not easily forgotten. They deserve to be recognized as such." Horace Gregory
+ N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 5 '29 460w

"All of these pieces are bitter, sharp arraignments. All have realistic truth. And all are written in a spirit of literary fearlessness. There is little structure to Brody's plays, and there is little action in the usual sense of the word as employed in dramatic criticism. And there is more of monologue than of dialogue. But there is a powerful crescendo movement in each piece which carries the reader through to the end; a cumulative effectiveness, but an effectiveness of argument rather than dramatic effectiveness." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p8 Jl 28 '29 150w

"Mr. Brody, being a poet and possessing the dramatic sense as well, has created a medium of expression which is plastic and sure, not revealing any awkward surgical grafting. He has not employed an English that serves to ridicule Yiddish, nor has his English suffered in force or dignity by the linguistic marriage which he has effected." H. Salpeter
+ N Y World p10m N 4 '28 600w
St Louis 27:56 F '29
Sat R of Lit 5:890 Ap 13 '29 220w

"These plays are not quite successful—chiefly because the material in them does not necessarily require dramatic treatment. The attempt to render the quality of Yiddish into English seems particularly successful in Mr. Brody's work and the poetic quality he imparts rivals, at times, that of Synge's peasant Irish."
— + Theatre Arts Mo 13:233 Mr '29 450w

BROMFIELD, LOUIS. Awake and rehearse. 349p $2.50 Stokes
29-9726

Short, sardonic histories of the life and death of several different characters, in very different situations.

---

BROMFIELD, LOUIS—Continued

Booklist 25:394 Jl '29

"The literary task which Mr. Bromfield undertook in these stories was a very difficult one indeed. Where he succeeds he deserves a great deal of credit; where he fails, the result is, if anything, more than usually flat." Margaret Wallace

+ — Bookm 70:101 S '29 380w

"The present volume . . . is a milestone in Mr. Bromfield's literary progress. For in it, for the first time, Mr. Bromfield emerges as a mature and capable artist whose achievement fulfills his potentialities." Lloyd Morris

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ap 28 '29 850w

Reviewed by D. F. Gilman

Boston Transcript p4 My 4 '29 1450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p127 S '29

"Awake and Rehearse gives the same feeling of discomfort and irritation as when a neighbour in the theatre sniggers in the wrong place, but almost every short story in the collection shows technical ability." L. L. Irvine

— + Nation and Ath 45:208 My 11 '29 50w

"In all the tales Mr. Bromfield is amusing, and if he is not the equal of Ring Lardner or Chekhov as a short story writer, he is still many rungs above those who work in the commercial formula. And in one story, that of Vergie Winters, he is likely to prove memorable."

+ N Y Times p6 My 5 '29 650w

"The stories in this volume show Mr. Bromfield's ability with character and plot, and his gift for adapting almost every manner of writing to his needs. However, there is nothing to distinguish them from the usual first-class popular magazine story, except Mr. Bromfield's familiarity with a wide variety of settings, and skilful use of them. The plots of these stories are varied, simple, and definite; and the dialogue, lively."

+ Outlook 152:70 My 8 '29 180w

"The stories have the interest of the adventures of Baron Munchausen. But as with the adventures of Baron Munchausen the strangeness tends to limit them, to make them rather stunning than moving; strident, monotonous, without subtlety or peace or half-shades." L. P. Hartley

Sat R 147:620 My 4 '29 230w

"The quality which above all distinguishes these stories is one which, until the present volume, the author had scarcely made his own. Mr. Bromfield's novels have had a tendency to run—and how willingly we have run after them—all over, as it were, the lot. In 'Awake and Rehearse' there is a sharpening of outlines, a tightening of situations, and a ruthless elimination of details." Gladys Graham

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1067 Je 1 '29 750w

"The unity of the short story is frequently violated by his exuberance. Yet the zest which makes him throw a vivid brushful too much upon his little canvas is a valuable quality these days; his notions are original; and he sometimes conveys a fresh emotional pang. If, in his desire to startle, he often loses the true tragic conclusion, he can come near success. 'Justice' is bitter, fine, and restrained. Awake and Rehearse is the versatile display of a mobile and glittering talent." R. A. Taylor

+ — Spec 142:sup706 My 4 '29 160w

"Mr. Bromfield has a vigorous and profuse talent; he is seldom at a loss to invent a fresh lot of circumstances or to introduce a new set of characters, and he seems to have no difficulty in interesting himself in all sorts and conditions of people. But he has a passion for violent drama. This leads him to adopt a strained and somewhat gesticulating manner in writing of ordinary matter."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p400 My 16 '29 430w

Wis Lib Bul 25:195 Je '29

BRONSHTEIN, LEV DAVIDOVICH. See Trotsky, L., pseud.

BROOKE, GEOFFREY FRANCIS HEREMON. Way of a man with a horse; a practical book on horsemanship; with veterinary notes by A. G. Todd. (Lonsdale lib. of sports, games and pastimes) 288p il $7 Lippincott [31s 6d Seeley, S.]

798.2 Horsemanship [29-19224]

An illustrated manual of instruction on the choosing, training, and care of a horse, and in the principles of horsemanship. The author's advice is sound and easily understood. With veterinary notes by A. G. Todd, and a chapter on pigsticking by Arthur Brooke.

"This volume contains a vast amount of profitable and pleasurable material for novices and veterans alike."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ag 18 '29 100w

"No one in England is better qualified than Colonel Geoffrey Brooke to write of modern polo, hunting, racing, and particularly of showjumping in which he has won so many laurels. All of us who are not too set in our ways can pick up useful hints from the author, who draws from all kinds of sources for his argument, from Xenophon to his own wide and varied experience. The illustrations are excellent."

+ Spec 142:518 Mr 30 '29 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p647 Ag 22 '29 460w

BROOKS, COLLIN. Her serene highness. 304p $2 Sears

29-5695

"In this lively tale of revolution, plot and counter-plot in an imaginary duchy, a tempestuous princess and a handsome Englishman provide the love-interest."—Outlook

Bookm 69:xxix Jl '29 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Times p16 Ap 21 '29 100w

" 'Her Serene Highness' is a book one may read at a sitting with considerable enjoyment and forget easily and quickly."

N Y Times p22 Je 9 '29 230w

Outlook 151:554 Ap 3 '29 30w

BROOKS, JONATHAN, pseud. See Mellett, J: C.

BROPHY, JOHN. Pluck the flower. 301p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]

29-2245

The brothers, John and Paul, are much alike physically, but are very different in character. Their father is a harshly righteous, self-made man of wealth. John marries a girl of the village who has been seduced, and, unjustly denounced by his father, takes Mary to London where he finds work in a big department store. He becomes interested in the welfare of the employees and is in the midst of a campaign for them when he learns that Paul is on the side of the owners and that it was he who had seduced Mary.

"The very inconclusiveness of the ending is true to life and merely accentuates the general excellence of the book."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Mr 24 '29 200w

"The author does not play with the literary material he has selected. He tells of life as he knows it; and he makes a remarkable story from what one suspects are his own observations and deductions. . . Rarely have we read a novel which dealt with life and its problems with such grave understanding." D. F. Gilman

+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 16 '29 1150w

"Though somewhat turgid in style Mr. Brophy's novel is serious and one can place it in the English tradition. It thus 'belongs' in a way that many more flashy and entertaining novels do not." Edwin Seaver

+ — N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 2 '29 30w

"The book is a remarkably interesting study of the development of the two brothers, a skillful record of journeys starting from almost identical beginnings and ending on roads widely divergent."
+ N Y Times p24 Ja 27 '29 530w

"There is much capable writing wasted in the book, and its general conception seems to be artificial, mildly old fashioned and second rate."
— + N Y World p10m F 10 '29 200w

Springf'd Republican p5e Je 2 '29 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p296 Ap 11 '29 300w

BROWN, ALICE. Golden ball. 92p $1.75 Macmillan[2]

812 29-24036

A play for children in which a little boy left alone with his baby sister on the eve of her christening meets many fascinating creatures in his attempts to foil the Bad Fairy who has not been invited to the christening.

---

"A three-act dream play which is the essence of sentimentality and prettiness. Boy, its hero, is very much the wrapped-in-cotton-wool type." H. S. Wright
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 D 8 '29 80w

"Good plays for children, played by children —how we do need them! And how few there are! Perhaps it was because the name of Alice Brown sent our hopes soaring too high that we were a bit disappointed in 'The Golden Ball.' It is, of course, delightfully written—a whiff of Barrie, a flavor of Maeterlinck, plus Miss Brown's own humor and sureness of touch. . . The plan would have made a pretty one-act play, but the author's ingenuity has expanded it to three, which was, we think, a mistake."
— + Sat R of Lit 6:428 N 16 '29 200w

BROWN, BEATRICE CURTIS. Alas, Queen Anne; a reading of her life (Eng title Anne Stuart, queen of England). 325p il $4 Bobbs [10s 6d Bles]

B or 92 Anne, queen of Great Britain 29-20235

"Miss Curtis Brown, in her charmingly written biographie romancée of Queen Anne, has two ends in view. Though she disclaims any attempt to throw light on the political movements of the time, she does in fact set herself to show how Anne became, as it were, a function of English political movements. The other aim, always correlative to the first, is to create an intimate view of the interior life of Anne; of her feelings towards herself, her friends, her family, and the people around her."—Spec

---

Booklist 26:115 D '29

Bookm 70:329 N '29 250w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p6 O 26 '29 480w

" 'Alas, Queen Anne' wil be a profitable work for any student of human nature to read. It is quite as exciting as a novel, and far more fascinating. Its historical importance is great, for there are few books dealing with Queen Anne as a living human woman. And it offers that analogy to all life which is the mission of biography." B. B.
+ Boston Transcript p3 N 16 '29 1250w

"The historical novel has its place in literature. But it only justifies itself by making us forget history and convincing us that what we are reading is good fiction. Mrs. Brown does not quite do that: she is too anxious to follow the authorised contours of her theme. Everything that she makes Anne say is plausible, but much of it is dull."
— + New Statesman 33:314 Je 15 '29 90w

"Miss Brown has achieved here the difficult feat of writing an entertaining account of the life of a dull woman, of turning a static and uneventful career into a narrative full of movement and vitality."
+ N Y Evening Post p7m S 28 '29 500w

"It is the purpose of the book to bring out the human side of the Queen and provide a sympathetic understanding of her nature. To give a fairer picture of the Queen, Mrs. Brown, while basing her writing upon sound historical material, has presented her portrait in the form of story narrative. . . 'Alas! Queen Anne' recreated an engaging picture of a dull and dutiful woman, whose stubbornness ironically contributed to stabilizing a new order." Edwin Clarke
+ N Y Times p26 N 24 '29 900w

"The 'Good Queen Anne' of history, the ineffectual, the stupid Queen Anne, the treacherous, plotting queen, has been here synthesized into a human, breathing woman whose inconsistencies become comprehensible and whose actions become if not reasonable, at least understandable. . . Open this narrative biography at random and the attention will be caught by some paragraph vividly sketching a character or an event." Lenore Gray
+ Portland Evening News p5 D 4 '29 400w

"Miss Brown admits, in effect, to belonging to the growing number of purveyors of Brighter Biography for Bright Young People. We must say that she has given us an amusing book written with a sense of the dramatic. It is not perhaps much more inaccurate than it claims to be. For the book as history, we have Miss Brown's confession. As fiction, art, the artful combination of biography and fiction, Miss Brown has made a success of an unpromising subject."
+ Sat R 147:804 Je 15 '29 400w

"A quietly consistent and convincing revelation of a perpetually befuddled and thwarted woman, who happened to be a queen." Bartlet Brebner
Sat R of Lit 6:514 D 7 '29 600w

"The story is told in clear, precise English, without a trace of mannerism, and, indeed owes much of its charm to this simplicity of style. It is an open-faced and easily moving prose, in which, though there is nothing to startle us with its singularity, the whole impression is of continuous grace and freshness."
+ Spec 142:829 My 25 '29 600w

"Miss Brown has combined documentary material and historical imagination in apparently an impartial study of this strange career. It is worth reading to understand the woman and her times more intelligently."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 N 27 '29 350w

BROWN, BETH. Applause. 312p $2 Liveright [7s 6d Long]

28-21482

"The ancient story of a Burlesque Queen and a baby and a handful of scoundrelly men! Kitty Darling produces an infant girl back-stage, rears it as she tours the sticks, takes it to a cultivated convent on the Hudson, and ends with a sweet, tender, well bred, loving daughter on her hands, and no place to put this paragon. Eventually, of course, the paragon finds a beautiful young man, whereas poor Kitty, the fêted Queen, goes from bad to worse and meets her final fate in the shape of a box of mysterious white powders."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"The book is like its heroine. Beneath abundant flesh and war-paint flows a strong current of sentimentality and untutored instincts. The description of burlesque troupes and hick towns is probably accurate, certainly convincing in each sordid, blatant detail. But the vanities and good-natured stupidities of the Leading Lady, the reticences and primness of her daughter, are an oil-and-water combination."
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p43 S 30 '28 220w

"Although the author succeeds very well in describing the sordid brutality of life in a third rate burlesque show, the characters she depicts are merely conventional types. Only April is different, but she is a little too good and too colorless to be very convincing." G. E. M.
— + Boston Transcript p7 O 6 '28 380w

BROWN, BETH—Continued

"A true and poignant story of the show world."

+ N Y Times p18 D 9 '28 600w

"Flashes of characterization and bits of anecdote have reality in 'Applause,' but it falls apart for lack of definite conception."

Sat R of Lit 5:440 D 1 '28 250w

BROWN, BUFORD OTIS. Problems of newspaper publishing, with special reference to the country field, including weekly and daily newspapers. 379p $3 Harper

070 Newspapers. Journalism. Publishers and publishing 29-4971

Deals with the business side of newspaper publishing. Part one takes up location, financing and equipment of a newspaper, and discusses advertising methods and merchandising; part two is devoted to circulation promotion and gives postal rules; part three has to do with laws governing newspapers, especially libel and contempt.

Booklist 25:305 My '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:272 Jl '29

BROWN, HARRIET CHEDIE (CONNOR) (MRS HERBERT DANIEL BROWN). Grandmother Brown's hundred years, 1827-1927; [foreword by Charles G. Dawes]. 369p il $3 Little

B or 92 Brown, Mrs Maria Dean (Foster) 29-22546

Grandmother Brown was born in 1827 in the Ohio town to which her grandfather had migrated after the Revolution. In the 50's she and her husband moved to Iowa where Grandmother Brown lived until her death, in 1928. Her biography, told almost entirely in the form of conversations with her daughter-in-law, is the story of how one good woman spent a hundred busy, useful and, on the whole, happy years.

Booklist 26:115 D '29

Reviewed by Paul Allen

Bookm 70:573 Ja '30 300w

"Maria Foster Brown is a good subject for such a biography, not only because she lived to be a hundred, but because, in an extraordinary way, she had garnered her experiences, had sifted and stored them, and was able to bring them forth ripened by the sunshine of her own homely wisdom. . . The book is certainly too long. While grandma sits crippled in her chair her numerous progeny take the stage, and they are by no means grandma herself." H. F. Whicher

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 N 3 '29 1450w

"No reader of imagination but must feel not merely that he has been told the story of Grandmother Brown's useful and inspiring life, but rather that he has sat beside her by the open fire in her pleasant room and listened to it from her own lips. . . No one interested in human life in general, and in particular that of an era peculiarly rich in heroic initiative and accomplishment, should miss its reading." Frances Bartlett

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 2 '29 1900w

"The book is simple narrative, much of it taken down in 'Grandmother's' own words at the completion of her extraordinary century of arduous living; touched in, however, though most unobtrusively, with bits of background and collateral material by way of rounding out the picture. The success of the book seems to lie in the skill with which all the homely detail of life is woven into a panorama of vivid pictures. And I agree with the author that in the activities of this long and brave life we find ourselves drawn rather deeply into the processes of national growth." S: Merwin

+ Chicago Daily Tribune p14 D 14 '29 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p147 D '29

"Nearly the whole of it is in the simple, homely, vigorous phrasing of Grandmother Brown herself, a delightful and harmonious medium for the telling of her simple, homely and vigorous life story." F. F. Kelly

+ N Y Times p4 N 3 '29 1700w

"No great men came her way; she witnessed no world-shaking events. But she was in very fact the pioneer wife and mother of legend. She lived long, worked hard, observed sharply, and felt deeply." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 153:385 N 6 '29 500w

R of Rs 80:19 D '29 500w

"I have rarely read a book purporting to give an account of what life has meant to some human being, which seemed to me as little posed and arranged as this. . . There is not a page of the book that does not inform us far more intimately and authoritatively than any fiction, as to what was the current type among our lovable, staunch, limited provincial, devoted grandmothers." D. C. Fisher

+ Sat R of Lit 6:513 D 7 '29 450w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 11 '29 650w

BROWN, IRVING HENRY. Deep song; adventures with gypsy songs and singers in Andalusia and other lands, with original translations. 355p il $3.50 Harper

397 Gipsies. Gipsy music. Folksongs, Gipsy 29-7609

Irving Brown has followed the Romani patteran in many lands. He has learned the Romani language, and has listened to the gipsy song welling up from the heart of the nomad. His book is an interpretation of singer and song, closing with a brief list of the greatest living gipsy singers, and translations of their songs. Illustrated in sepia from photographs.

Booklist 25:350 Je '29

Bookm 69:xxi My '29 150w

"Mr. Brown passed among [the gypsies] with unusual qualifications for understanding and interpreting their music: a knowledge of both Spanish and the gypsy tongue. He is in the direct tradition of Borrow and Leland in that he gathers his material about the wandering folk at first hand, and they take him in as a brother. . . Mr. Brown's book should interest every student of folklore, and its appeal to Hispanophiles hardly demands comment."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ap 7 '29 250w

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 6 '29 350w

Christian Century 46:748 Je 5 '29 40w

Cleveland Open Shelf p109 Jl '29

Nation 129:388 O 9 '29 70w

" 'Deep Song,' while being a study of Gypsy music, is really a most intimate revelation of Gypsy character; and bids fair to remain a standard book on both Gypsy music and Gypsy life. A most valuable book in the library of any one interested in Gypsy life, it is at the same time one of the most charming and informing books I have ever read." Konrad Bercovici

+ N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 20 '29 450w

"The book has many phases of interest, of which not the least is the author's quick responsiveness to whatever is beautiful and charged with emotion and his ability to depict these things with color, vitality and impressiveness. But its particular appeal is for those who are interested in folksongs of all sorts."

+ N Y Times p23 My 19 '29 400w

Outlook 151:556 Ap 3 '29 40w

St Louis 27:282 O '29

"Mr. Brown is a foremost authority on gypsies whom we remember from his former books, 'Nights and Days on the Gypsy Trail,' and 'Gypsy Fires in America.' He has lived with gypsies, collected their songs and poems, and studied their habits, and thus his latest book should make a great appeal to all those interested in the subject." Walter Starkie

+ Sat R of Lit 6:128 S 14 '29 550w

"Deep Song tickles the springtime imagination. It is a personal book too, but far from the flashy journalism of the ordinary travel book. Aside from being a sparkling Gypsy odyssey, it is an important contribution to folk song literature. . . For poets, travelers. singers, philologists, folkloreists and so forth, Deep Song will be abundantly useful." V: Weybright

+ Survey 62:200 My 1 '29 300w
Wis Lib Bul 25:124 Ap '29

BROWN, LAURENCE OLIVER (LAURENCE OLIVER, pseud.). Blind; a play in three acts. 130p $2.50 Harper

822 28-25965

A play by a young English author which draws for its effect upon the miracle plays of the Middle ages. The daughter of a narrow-minded English cabinet member has an illegitimate child. The family is gathered in solemn conclave to decide her fate. It is Christmas eve and a tramp with his wife and child seek sanctuary in an old building on the estate. The family troop out to see the strangers and an unexplainable something occurs. The effect of the vision on the members of the family is brought out before the end of the play.

"This fable is well written, and its spirit is not mawkish. But it smells of conventional artifice, nonetheless." W. P. Eaton

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 F 3 '29 100w

"The argument is unassailable in essence, but if the theme could have been developed without the use of symbolism the play would have been stronger. By the use of the miraculous Mr. Oliver nullifies the real characters he has so excellently drawn, and turns what might have been a searching social study into allegory. But as allegory. 'Blind' has real beauty, and deserves a wide reading public." Jane Dransfield

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:516 D 15 '28 220w
Wis Lib Bul 25:72 F '29

BROWN, MAUD ANNA. Teaching health in Fargo. 142p il $1.50 Commonwealth fund

371.7 Hygiene—Study and teaching 29-10574

From 1923 to 1927 the Commonwealth fund conducted a program of public health at Fargo, North Dakota. The object was to determine the effects of a well-directed program of voluntary health activities upon a given community. The work was carried out largely thru the public schools. This book is a statement of methods employed and the results.

"Miss Brown writes. She does not grind out words, and in this respect her book is quite unique in health literature. Colorful expression, delicately humorous critical comments, and amusing illustrations in both words and pictures, all go to make the book a delight to the reader." R. S. Patterson

+ Am J Pub Health 19:1176 O '29 450w
Booklist 26:10 O '29

Reviewed by M. E. Stone
El School J 30:75 S '29 300w

"This little volume of 142 pages contains a wealth of ideas and material not only for health teachers and supervisors, but for those who have any part in furthering health teaching in the schools." L. H. Gillett
J Home Econ 21:787 O '29 550w

BROWN, ROLLO WALTER. Lonely Americans. 319p il $3.50 Coward-McCann

920 United States—Biography 29-3291

Biographical studies of eight intensely individual Americans whose genius or idealism set them apart. The personalities sketched are Charles W. Eliot, James McNeill Whistler, Edward MacDowell, George Bellows, Charles Eliot Norton, Raphael Pumpelly, Emily Dickinson and Abraham Lincoln.

Booklist 25:282 Ap '29

"In each case, Mr. Brown has approached his subject with knowledge, spirit and intimate sympathy, even writing of Lincoln and of Whistler freshly. This is an important book."

+ Bookm 69:iv My '29 200w

" 'Lonely Americans' contains surprisingly little stale material, for the author is generally concerned less with fact than with interpretation. This, being sincere, and never taking the prevalent form of plays to the intellectual gallery, rarely involves the repetition of what others have written." G. T. Hellman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 F 24 '29 1050w

"All of the essays or sketches show signs of Mr. Brown's avowed liking for these lonely Americans; they are excellent short biographies, because they are sympathetic without being idolatrous." K: Schriftgiesser

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 2 '29 1350w

"Mr. Brown writes with a keen sense of the distinctive qualities which gave character to the stalwart individualists whom he has chosen as the subjects of his biographical portraits. There are various types of heroism in his subjects, and admirable artistry in his treatment of them."

+ Christian Century 46:459 Ap 4 '29 160w

"Each biographical essay is written with such sympathy and gusto as could be inspired only by a genuine personal liking. . . In writing several of these papers the author has had the advantage of access to unpublished material; and even in those based entirely on previously published facts there is a notable freshness of treatment." S. C. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 15 '29 380w
Cleveland Open Shelf p125 S '29
N Y Times p2 F 10 '29 1500w

"He writes in interesting and readable style and has the happy gift of treating topics of current interest." C: J. Finger

+ N Y World p10m Mr 3 '29 60w

"Excellent, penetrating studies. We cannot agree with all Mr. Brown's conclusions, but we found his book decidedly interesting, and his speculations as to the place of the individualist in contemporary American culture are provocative."

+ Outlook 151:270 F 13 '29 100w
St Louis 27:205 Je '29

"The Lincoln seems the least interesting of Mr. Brown's studies possibly because Lincoln has been explained, not to say pawed over, so much of late. But the rest are extraordinarily good. It would not be too easy to find their equals among biographic miniatures." Arthur Colton

+ Sat R of Lit 5:795 Mr 23 '29 780w

"Rollo Brown offers a delightful book which shows that threads of more than one color have gone to the weaving of our American civilization. He is graphic and realistic in portraiture. These figures appear to us living and real. And he has created them without the aid of sentimentality or the debunking process."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 14 '29 450w
Wis Lib Bul 25:159 My '29
World Tomorrow 12:378 S '29 80w

BROWN, WALTER C. Second guess. 304p $2 (7s 6d) Lippincott

29-9937

George Mason, or "Sweepstake" Mason, a past master in the art of gambling, came staggering into his house with a deadly wound in his chest. A few minutes later he died. Before the police could take full charge three masked men removed most of his papers and money, but, unfortunately for them, they lost one sheet of paper. With that as a starting point the mystery was solved.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 F 24 '29 80w
Boston Transcript p4 Mr 23 '29 130w

BROWN, W. C.—Continued

"The story contains action and excitement and is up-to-date in its story of smart lawbreakers who live, and live luxuriously, by their wits."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '29 170w

BROWN, WILLIAM. Science and personality; with a foreword by Sir Oliver Lodge. (Terry lectures) 258p $3 Yale univ. press [12s 6d Oxford]

130 Personality. Psychology. Psychotherapy
29-16516

A study of the psychological workings of the normal and pathological mind in relation to personality, with emphasis on the association between faith and mental health.

Boston Transcript p2 Je 5 '29 720w

"Although it is obvious that Dr. Brown is in favour of trying to reconcile the claims of science with those of religion, it is not quite clear in what sense he uses the latter term. Again, the relation of religion to what he calls the 'universe', and the concept of value which he considers an integral part of his argument, are not sufficiently worked out to illustrate the problem of personality, and the inclusion of some very dubious examples of 'clairvoyance' towards the close of the volume tends rather to obscure than to clarify the fundamental issues."

— Nature 123:904 Je 15 '29 350w

"Dr. Brown's all-round equipment has enabled him to assemble much very interesting material of great variety in the category dear to Scottish booksellers—'Theology, Philosophy and Occult.' "

+ — New Statesman 33:446 Jl 13 '29 600w

"Dr. Brown's authority in his own province of psychotherapy is manifest on every page devoted to this subject. More, he knows his sciences, and you may look far before encountering another such lucid and cogent presentation of Einstein or quantum physics or conditioned reflexes." Clarence Britten

+ N Y Evening Post p6m Ag 3 '29 750w

"The rather discursive style, more appropriate to the lecture-room than to private reading, detracts considerably from this work; which ranges over such diverse subjects as 'Spiritual Healing,' suggestion, psycho-analysis, religion and art, and gives considerable attention to psychical research and the problem of survival. Many who fail to be attracted by technical accounts of psychotherapy will read these chapters for their human interest."

Spec 142:709 My 4 '29 150w

"The book was originally a course of lectures, and admirable lectures they must have been, but now that they are reprinted with the addition of various miscellaneous papers they read rather scrappily. The argument is seldom carried rigorously through to a conclusion, but it is always redeemed from insignificance by the author's engaging candour and his real anxiety to overlook no aspect of the truth."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p430 My 30 '29 1350w

BROWN, WILLIAM ADAMS. Beliefs that matter; a theology for laymen. 333p $2.75 Scribner [8s 6d Hodder & S.]

239 Christianity 28-11222

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"The large number of people who have been brought up within the main lines of the Christian heritage and practice, and who now suddenly find not only the miracles of theological tradition and the doctrines of the church, but the central affirmations of their own religious faith, called sharply into question, will welcome a readable book which competently reviews and intelligently reinterprets the great Christian convictions in the light of modern knowledge and of the urgent social and spiritual issues of modern life." C: W. Gilkey

+ Christian Century 45:1258 O 18 '28 720w

"He interprets what is going on in the world about him in a way which is both lucid and reassuring."

Churchman 138:20 D 22 '28 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 Mr '29

"This book represents vital theology from the pen of a theologian in close touch with modern life and literature. It is not modernism, although it is eminently modern. Nor is it fundamentalism, although it is deeply fundamental. The tendency and effect of such a work is to restore theology to its true relation to the common life and experience of men." J: W. Buckham

+ J Religion 9:145 Ja '29 510w

Pratt p8 spring '29

BROWNE, ROBERT GORE. See Gore-Browne, R.

BRUERE, HENRY JAROMIR, and PUGH, GRACE. Profitable personnel practice. 454p $4 Harper

658.3 Employment management. Efficiency, Industrial 29-2060

"A practical working manual ending with a good index and selected bibliography. Contains descriptions and a discussion of the practices of American industrial and commercial companies. Some typical chapter headings are: Getting a job in a plant, Sharing ownership and profits, Vacations, food for workers, and Aids to the personnel manager."—St Louis

Booklist 25:310 My '29

St Louis 27:199 Je '29

"A comprehensive, well organized, clearly presented collection of personnel practices which a wide range of industrial and mercantile establishments have found profitable in terms of money and good-will."

+ Survey 63:105 O 15 '29 300w

Wis Lib Bul 25:157 My '29

BRUNELLI BONETTI, BRUNO. Casanova loved her; with a preface by Arthur Machen; tr. by Alexander McKechnie. 299p $3.50 Liveright [15s P. Davies]

B or 92 Rosenberg-Orsini, Giustiniana (Wynne) countess von. Casanova de Seingalt, Giovanni Jacopo. Memmo, Andrea
29-20820

Signor Brunelli, having discovered some old volumes of letters in the Civic museum of Padua, finds among them several written by Giustiniana, countess von Orsini-Rosenberg. She was the eldest daughter of an English nobleman, and has been identified by Brunelli as the mysterious Mlle X.C.V. who figured in Casanova's memoirs. This story tells chiefly of Giustiniana's youthful passion for one Memmo, a Venetian gentleman. After having given birth secretly to a child, Giustiniana undertakes a mariage de convenance with Count Rosenberg. Casanova was one of her great admirers thruout her life.

Reviewed by H. L. Matthews

N Y Times p6 D 8 '29 700w

"Signor Brunelli has constructed a lively story from the letters and other records, and has given it a sprightly background."

+ Outlook 153:190 O 2 '29 80w

"Apart from the share which Casanova had in her adventurous career, the letters of Giustiniana to Memmo have an intense and tragic interest of their own. Besides their sentimental interest, these documents provide rich material for reconstructing the social and amorous life and the complicated psychology of an adventuress of the eighteenth century."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p527 Jl 4 '29 1400w

BRUNI, GERARDO. Progressive scholasticism; auth. tr. from the Italian by John S. Zybura. 185p $1.75 Herder

189.4 Scholasticism 29-1036

"It being the author's purpose to show, firstly, that Scholasticism is a philosophy in its own right; and secondly, that Scholasticism is not a dead philosophy, but a living one, and this vitality is proven by the facility with which Neo-Scholasticism keeps au courant with the thought and science of our own day."—Cath World

---

"This book of Dr. Bruni's is a first class piece of scholarship. It is a fine contribution to New Scholasticism. In connection with this we must mention the thirty-six page introduction of the translator, John S. Zybura, which is probably the finest presentation of New Scholasticism ever written in America." F. J. S.

+ Cath World 130:241 N '29 1000w

Reviewed by C. M. Perry
Int J Ethics 39:382 Ap '29 230w

"An arresting book presenting an interpretation of scholasticism by a leading neo-scholastic."

+ J Religion 9:328 Ap '29 40w

BRUNNER, EDMUND DE SCHWEINITZ. Immigrant farmers and their children; with four studies of immigrant communities. (Inst. of social and religious research. Publications) 277p $2.75 Doubleday, Doran

325.73 United States—Foreign population. Agricultural laborers. Agricultural colonies. United States—Social conditions 29-11033

A study of many aspects of the problem of the immigrant farmer in America with reference to certain designated communities described in separate studies: Castle Hayne, an experiment in colonization in North Carolina; Danes in Minnesota; Czecho-Slovaks in Virginia; Poles in New England.

---

Reviewed by J. F. Steiner
Am J Soc 35:509 N '29 280w

Ann Am Acad 145:209 S '29 170w

Booklist 26:54 N '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 Ag 18 '29 120w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 3 '29 330w

Christian Century 46:1040 Ag 21 '29 40w

J Home Econ 21:606 Ag '29 130w

"This intensive study of one small portion of the whole vast immigration problem is as valuable for the contribution it makes to sociologic and economic questions that press for solution as it is interesting for the human needs, problems, and developments it reveals."

+ N Y Times p21 My 26 '29 420w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:20 S '29 220w

"Exception are liable to teem in a scientific work such as this, and it is best to recommend it to the expert study of the economist, who will find it full of interest."

+ Spec 143:229 Ag 17 '29 330w

"This volume, which appears in the useful series of publications of the Institute of Social and Religious Research, fills the gap by presenting the results of an exhaustive inquiry into the distribution and characteristics of this important section of the immigrant population,"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p627 Ag 8 '29 280w

BRUSH, KATHARINE (MRS HERBERT CHARLES WINANS). Night club. 298p $2 Minton

29-17994

Eleven subtle, poignant short stories of life as it looks to the younger generation at this very present moment.

---

Bookm 70:xxx N '29 150w

" 'The Long Young Dreams' and 'Debutante,' written with glittering superficiality, make lively use of such sure-fire sentimental plots as could be adequately restated in twenty words—a cheap string on which to hang the sparkling baubles caught by an observant eye. Yet even such shopworn merchandise becomes a little memorable in Miss Brush's hands for its sure, workmanlike handling, its luster that amounts almost to a glaze, its crisp wit. . . 'Night Club' is a masterpiece of selection—brilliant patches from the ragbag of life."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ag 4 '29 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p144 N '29

"Miss Brush's talent for biting irony is best displayed in the title story of the volume, 'Night Club.' It is a lean and economical little story, underwritten if anything, but each line of it is as sharply etched as an engraving. It would be trite and not very pertinent to say that these stories show promise. In themselves they are promise fulfilled. But one feels, from the abundant virtuosity they display, that Katharine Brush may become, before many seasons have passed, a commanding figure on the literary horizon."

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 4 '29 580w

"You will find them a current adaptation of O. Henry—but with the fizz gone out of it. You will find their melodrama trite instead of timeless, their picturesqueness tawdry instead of gusty. If you despair of the morality of the present, you will find much in the stories to cheer you: virtue rewarded, noblesse obliging, sin finding out the sinner, blood telling. . . Like the generation in which Miss Brush delights, her stories conceal a lack of blood and bone under a show of costume and cosmetic, a lack of originality under an anonymity of standardization. There is as little nourishment in them as in a papier maché roast of beef."

— Outlook 152:549 Jl 31 '29 350w

"They are very good magazine stories. They are written with an ease, a spontaneity, and a lightness of touch which bears witness to an admirable talent. . . She writes with ease, reticence, and charm, but this book should be regarded rather as an effort to recapitalize in the field of literature a success scored in the field of magazine writing." J: Carter

+ Sat R of Lit 6:53 Ag 17 '29 530w

BRYNER, EDNA CLARE (MRS ARTHUR SCHWAB). While the bridegroom tarried. 345p $2.50 Dutton

29-1194

A Bostonian, in love with an unattainable girl, marries the girl of his mother's choice. On the eve of the wedding the other telephones him that she will never marry. The bridegroom is young, impressionable, desperately anxious to do the correct thing. He goes thru with the wedding but the bitter voice of the other woman spoils his marriage and drives him after two years to a position in the West Indies. This fixed idea of his defection hounds him down the years, until after his wife's death; and altho he is passionately in love with another woman, he marries the woman he thinks he has wronged.

---

"First, it will have to be said this is one of the silliest novels that has recently appeared. Second, it must quickly be added that it is also one of the most honest and most moving. Even as we squirm at the careless, cheap writing and the shoddy, second-rate emotional phrasing, the essential truth about these human beings does undeniably get through to us. Intellectually, the book is laughable: a mawkish fog of badly managed words; emotionally it is very nearly a triumph." T. S. Matthews

Bookm 69:89 Mr '29 450w

"Within the limits of the psychological novel, and there are very definite limits to this type of fiction, 'While the Bridegroom Tarried,' is a first-rate piece of work. It establishes quite clearly the fact, which was really well enough established already by Miss Bryner's excellent short stories, that 'Andy Brandt's Ark' was not a flash in the pan, but that it was the interesting beginning of an important novelist's work, now carried further in a second book." Herschel Brickell

BRYNER, E. C.—Continued

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ja 6 '29 900w

"Cleverly written, distinctively modern in its outlook, it is in reality a treatise on John Alden Bennington's psychological reactions to the women he loved or desired. His was a perverse character, sometimes pitiful, at times detestable. He received from the world just what he put into it—nothing of account. One is rather relieved to close the book and shut him in with his idiosyncracies." H. F. M.

— + Boston Transcript p2 Ja 23 '29 440w

"It is wasteful for so talented a person as Miss Bryner to make so much ado about a pompous prig. Her main character, Alden Bennington, is her main concern, and his vapors absorb the book. His self-admiration, his introspection, his weakness and his utter futility soak into our wearied brain. He knows his own lack; he dramatizes his inefficiency and feels sorry for himself through 345 pages. Since he is neither a sympathetic nor a tragic character, one asks, perforce, 'What of it?'" Irene Van Valkenburg

— N Y Evening Post p9m F 2 '29 340w

"This story of Alden is an ambitious one. Were its compulsions great enough it would be tragic. But the reader, cheated of any complete understanding of Alden, cannot help finding his actions unjustifiable. . . The women of the book are better drawn and more sympathetic. The whole story narrowly misses achieving significance. The substance is about on a par with Miss Bryner's amorphous and unwieldly style, so innocent of a rhythmic gift and so pointlessly eccentric."

+ — N Y Times p8 Ja 20 '29 700w

"The whole thing has the effect of a rather highly colored dream half-way between waking and sleeping. It is, in its peculiar way, an interesting book, but it is hardly a broad, complete, and rounded book."

— + N Y World p11m Ja 27 '29 180w

"Without being self-conscious about her writing, Miss Bryner takes a good many liberties with words and phrases, but, oddly enough, her style does not lose lucidity because of its eccentricity. While the Bridegroom Tarried is overlong, especially in the latter part, but it is an interesting psychological novel, with a good deal to give back to the intelligent reader." Herschel Brickell

+ — No Am 227:adv Mr '29 180w

" 'While the Bridegroom Tarried' is written with great sincerity. It has strength and breadth. And, compared with the shallow performances of many popular and much praised writers, it has depth. But it lacks reality. 'Man as bridegroom' is only a small part of man. Had Alden Bennington been a more rounded character, his evident desirability as bridegroom might have been more evident to the reader, and his failure, therefore, more tragic."

+ — Outlook 151:71 Ja 9 '29 650w

Sat R of Lit 5:984 My 4 '29 420w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '29 200w

BUCHAN, JOHN. Courts of the morning. 384p $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d Hodder]

29-16823

Mr Buchan transports his veteran adventurers of other tales to a South American state which is fast becoming an oligarchy in the hands of the all-powerful Castor, and which threatens the peace of the American continent. Richard Hannay, Sandy Arbuthnot, Archie Roylance and Company embark on the dangerous enterprise of overthrowing Castor's regime.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:422 Ja '29

Booklist 26:32 O '29

"An erudite, yet breathless and romantic tale of adventure. As in this author's other books, the tale is carried in a rhythmic and graceful prose which reaches its height in descriptive passages of rare beauty."

+ Bookm 70:xxiii S '29 120w

"Mr. Buchan's followers will rejoice in this volume, as should all other fans fortunate enough to fall into line. For John Buchan is something of a live classic and much more entertaining than that sounds." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 8 '29 250w

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 31 '29 300w

"This is an excellent adventure story, distinct from a thriller, although it is full of mysteries, intrigues, and hairbreadth escapes. It is all capital sort. If the 'ideas' grate, they need not be taken too seriously. The characterization and the writing are adequate."

+ Nation and Ath 46:296 N 23 '29 250w

"A 'precipitous yarn' of the first order, and there are pages in it as exciting as any that Mr. Buchan has ever written. It is also the work of a man who has a broad and informed view of the springs of modern life and who could not help, even if he would, mixing political observation with the provision of sensations." E. S.

+ New Statesman 34:16 O 12 '29 700w

"No one, it is our firm conviction, writes better adventure tales than Mr. Buchan and 'The Courts of the Morning' is of the same fine texture and august stature as its predecessors." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p6m Jl 27 '29 160w

"An exceptionally good romance of imaginary intrigue in the imaginary South American kingdom of Olifa, which leads to an imaginary war —all worked out with fine ingenuity and invention." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p6m S 28 '29 90w

"John Buchan's name on a title page is enough to give the reader a delightful sense of security against boredom. . . All these pleasant expectations are more than fulfilled by 'The Courts of the Morning.' There is mystery of an unusual kind; there is adventure, and plenty of it; there are thrilling and dramatic moments, touches of the horrible and the bizarre; and at the root of it all, a sharp conflict between two utterly different philosophies of life."

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 11 '29 750w

"Not quite up to 'Greenmantle,' this is still a first-rate story of mystery and adventure."

+ Outlook 152:591 Ag 7 '29 150w

"The gradual detection of this mysterious conspiracy makes excellent reading; but as in nine mystery stories out of ten, the unraveling falls below the standard set by the knitting of the complication. The principal factor in the defeat of Castor's schemes is a revolution where Buchan, the military historian, lets himself go, in a narrative of quite appalling length and complexity."

— + Sat R of Lit 6:36 Ag 10 '29 700w

Reviewed by B. E. Todd

Spec 143:469 O 5 '29 170w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 25 '29 270w

"His well-cut wording is easily and discreetly adequate to all demands made on it—to the small talk of 'the shires' equally with the pounce of the desperado; when it is necessary for his purpose to represent Americans as loud, he sees to it that no embarrassing international complications shall result by explaining that Americans are not really like that; and when he complaisantly supplies us with the melodrama we want of him he allows us to think that what we are really interested in is not whether the degenerate will catch the lady before she is over the osier bridge but a spiritual conflict."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p720 S 19 '29 550w

BUCHAN, JOHN. Montrose; a history. 385p il $5 Houghton [21s Nelson]

B or 92 Montrose, James Graham, 1st marquis of 28-24618

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"He has made the past live in a story so thrilling as to compel the attention, so vivid as to require no effort of memory to retain it. This will be the book's appeal to the popular mind; for the student it contains much more." F. H. Relf

+ Am Hist R 34:582 Ap '29 450w

Booklist 25:160 Ja '29

"So skilfully has Mr. Buchan written his history that Montrose is as vibrantly alive today as he ever was. There seem to be few military histories more brilliantly written."

+ Bookm 68:viii Ja '29 110w

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 2 '29 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p72 My '29

"Mr. Buchan's book is yet another proof that good history need not be dull, and though he has ventured at times to interpret, none can deny that the essential points of his case have been proved." J. D. Mackie

+ Eng Hist R 44:471 Jl '29 620w

"There are no fat complacencies in this book. It may be recommended highly as good literature and good history." W. P. Hall

+ New Repub 59:294 Jl 31 '29 580w

"Historians will wish to read parts of this book again and again. And it will command, I hope, that wide public easily found for biographies much less readable and much less wise." Wallace Notestein

+ Sat R of Lit 5:567 Ja 5 '29 820w

Wis Lib Bul 25:30 Ja '29

BUCHANAN, ROBERT EARLE, and FULMER, ELLIS INGHAM. Physiology and biochemistry of bacteria. v 1 517p $7.50 Williams & Wilkins [34s Bailliere]

589.95 Bacteriology (28-13929)

"The authors have attempted to collect and evaluate the available information concerning the more fundamental properties of bacteria and the principles governing bacterial action. This they have done in admirable fashion."—Am J Pub Health

---

"There are plenty of authoritative textbooks of physical chemistry and physics to which the earnest student of biology can readily go for the information he needs in a specific problem. The difficulty in Buchanan and Fulmer's book is to pick out from the mass of mathematics the biological facts which he may require." J. H. Mueller

— Am Chem Soc J 50:3399 D '28 700w

"A text that is worthy of the attention of all who are concerned with a study of any phase of bacteriology. . . There, for the first time, may be found collected and interpreted those facts which future work in bacteriology must recognize. Aside from its interest as an effort to deal with the more intimate phases of bacterial activity the text is readable and has great value as a reference book." G: H. Smith

+ Am J Pub Health 19:129 Ja '29 450w

"There is a good deal of interesting matter in this book. On the other hand, a surprisingly large proportion of the text is devoted to introductory physical chemistry. The authors seem to have tried to do two independent things. One is to give the physiology and biochemistry of bacteria. The other is to teach physical chemistry to the biologists. The second is a praiseworthy aim and this may be the only way to do it; but it does seem to the layman as though two books would have been better than one." W. D. Bancroft

+ — J Phys Chem 33:467 Mr '29 3600w

BUCHANAN, SCOTT MILROSS. Poetry and mathematics. 197p $2.50 Day

801 Poetry. Mathematics—Philosophy. Literature and science 29-18665

The author treats poetry mathematically and mathematics poetically, showing illuminating comparisons and contrasts between them. This treatment has resulted in a philosophy of mathematics and a theory of literary criticism.

---

"While Mr. Buchanan may not have done anything very specific for literary criticism, his book is decidedly valuable in pointing an attitude and popularizing a point of view. It is also an attempt to break down the little artificial barriers which our minds create between such different departments of life as mathematics and literature. Mr. Buchanan's book is concisely and clearly written. It is stimulating and refreshing and not without the sanitary virtue of humor. It should be read by laymen who are interested in what is going on in mathematics and science in general." H. R. Hays

+ Bookm 70:220 O '29 450w

"Poetry is so manifold that I doubt whether it would have been possible to move from poetry to mathematics with any greater success. The fact may be that the similarity of poetry and mathematics is an intuition which can be announced, not a proposition which can be proved. Provable or not, the doctrine as Mr. Buchanan handles it is fruitful and entertaining and a tonic antitoxin against much that goes for criticism. His book, moreover, is worth reading for its contingencies and asides as well as for its argument." H. M. Kallen

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 D 8 '29 700w

"His thesis is very simple, although in spite of the great beauty of Mr. Buchanan's diction, his argument is not always easy to follow. His words are drenched with meanings which call to each other in a way often to confuse the reader, and the terseness which he favors in mathematical proofs is a quality he himself possesses to the detriment of some clarity." Ernest Nagel

+ — J Philos 26:552 S 26 '29 2450w

"Arbitrarily Dr. Buchanan translates the jargon of mathematics into terms of literary jargon; then deftly, with the skill of a lightweight champion dancing around the ring, reverses his procedure. He opens his attack by showing the relationship of an episode in 'Alice in Wonderland' to the Pythagorean theorem as demonstrated by Euclid. However, Dr. Buchanan does not stop here; he manfully thrusts his argument forward into algebra, insisting upon a relationship of numbers and their classification as ordinals and cardinals to the development of an epic or a novel. Roughly, the characters in a novel correspond to cardinal numbers and their actions to ordinal numbers. At this point, Dr. Buchanan, lightweight champion, is in trouble; the strain is beginning to tell, but his footwork is rapid as ever." Horace Gregory

New Repub 60:180 O 2 '29 620w

BUCK, CHARLES NEVILLE. Marked men. 292p $2 Doubleday, Doran

29-21206

Clem Archibald is killed in a private room of his club. Inspector Crandall can find neither clue nor motive to account for the crime committed. When two or three other murders follow it is evident that a gang is at work. But when a lawyer who has interests in an engineering project in the Kentucky mountains and enlists the aid of a young mountaineer, also meets death, the mountaineer undertakes to solve the mystery by using backwoods methods, and succeeds.

---

Bookm 70:xxxii N '29 100w

" 'Marked Men' is a readable combination of bright lights and rusticity, the best of it being the handsome Kentucky lingo in and about such spots as Squabble Creek, Pig Bristle and Bear-cub Run." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 O 13 '29 130w

BUCKHAM, JOHN WRIGHT. Humanity of God; an interpretation of the divine fatherhood. 265p $2.50 Harper

231 God 28-25640

"A very thoughtful study of the problem of defining the nature of God. Recognizing that such definition must inevitably be through the use of some symbolic term, Professor Buckham contends that the symbol of personality meets with fewer difficulties than any alternative. Using this conception, he discusses with candor, but with a genuine religious feeling, the main questions connected with the doctrine of God."—J Religion

---

Boston Transcript p2 D 1 '28 200w

"When I took up Buckham's 'The Humanity of God,' I fully expected to read another of those bewitchingly clever, half-right, impassioned tracts of humanism, a tract that would spell 'humanity' with a capital 'H' and call it God, 'Bible' with a small 'b,' and not spell sin at all. None of these things did I find. I found instead an open-eyed appraisal of science, philosophy and the facts of life, dark as well as bright, joined to a single-minded devotion to a discovery in personal experience, made apparently many years ago, and that discovery is God. Religion and learning meet, bow and walk off arm in arm in happy fellowship in this book by Buckham." M. H. Krumbine

+ Christian Century 45:1492 D 6 '28 850w

J Religion 9:331 Ap '29 60w

"This is one of those unanswerable books: unanswerable but unsatisfying. . . In common with all idealist philosophies it asks you to grant an assumption and then shows that from this standpoint you can, with negligible (sic) exceptions, achieve 'an interpretation of religious experience and a theory concerning the ultimate meaning of man and the cosmos which is not only tenable but is more rational as well as more productive of human well-being than any other.'" E. E. Aubrey

J Religion 9:638 O '29 700w

BUELL, RAYMOND LESLIE. Europe: a history of ten years; with the aid of the staff of the Foreign policy association. 428p il $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

940.5 Europe—History 28-23848

This history of the drift of European affairs in the ten years since the war is a co-operative enterprise of the research staff of the Foreign policy association. Mr Buell who has compiled and organized the material writes, "We have attempted not only to trace the history of the Paris peace treaties but to discuss the internal development of the leading countries of Europe and interpret the two really vital phenomena of Bolshevism and Fascism."

---

"The point of view throughout is that of a good liberal, an internationalist and lover of peace. Unfortunately haste of execution is evident as well as clarity of style and fairness of judgment." Preston Slosson

+ — Am Hist R 34:646 Ap '29 450w

"It will make a useful book for persons and university classes interested in contemporary history and international affairs. Even the expert will find that its Index furnishes an easy means of checking the date and details of facts which may have slipped his mind." Quincy Wright

+ Am J Soc 35:153 Jl '29 160w

"The book should furnish excellent collateral reading for a course in European governments."

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:510 My '29 600w

Booklist 25:353 Je '29

Reviewed by J: Carter

Bookm 68:579 Ja '29 180w

"Mr. Buell distrusts generalizations; but his careful compilations are lavish in data if one cares to devise one's own philosophy of civilization." L: Gannett

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 6 '29 650w

"The layman will find here an excellent resume of the foreign news he has been reading in the newspapers during the last ten years. . . Mr. Buell has here brought the threads together, and introduced us anew and with clear explanation to Locarno, Geneva, the general strike in England and all the other recent happenings we find we have half forgotten. Told in an extremely lucid, almost reportorial style, he offers us a fine opportunity to refresh our memories anent discussions of the Kellogg Treaties and any future political activities."

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 21 '28 220w

Christian Century 46:968 Jl 31 '29 30w

"This is one of the best, most instructive studies of conditions and developments in Europe during the past decade that has yet appeared." R. E. E. Harkness

+ Crozer Q 6:239 Ap '29 420w

"For the teacher or public-spirited citizen, who earnestly desires to keep abreast of the times and to have some source to which he may turn when the daily papers prove bewildering, this volume will prove invaluable. This is not to say that it will be of no avail to the scholar, no matter how well informed." Duane Squires

+ Hist Outlook 20:145 Mr '29 950w

"One does not look for novelty in a personally conducted tour of this kind, and the facts that are marshaled are, naturally, little more than the commonplaces of specialists, but Mr. Buell has a good eye for what is informative and important, and his readers will find the book worth while." W: MacDonald

+ Nation 128:320 Mr 13 '29 420w

"With its rapid style and neat arrangement this book should prove useful to the large number of people who never read newspapers and yet find it irritating to be ignorant of European affairs."

Nation and Ath 44:628 F 2 '29 360w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 227:adv Ja '29 80w

Pratt p30 spring '29

St Louis 27:31 Ja '29

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey 61:610 F '29 200w

"The author has used secondary authorities freely, but his book is a fair and reliable guide. It is, indeed, one of the few American surveys of European affairs in which the politics of the Old World are impartially and scientifically described as the impact of national tendencies and interests, and not mere illustrations of human wickedness and folly."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p219 Mr 21 '29 1200w

BUELL, RAYMOND LESLIE. Native problem in Africa. (Bureau of international research, Harvard university and Radcliffe college) 2v 1045;1101p il $15 Macmillan

916 Africa—Politics. Africa—Civilization. Africa—Race question. Africa—Native races. Africa—Economic conditions 28-11639

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"Africa is bound to receive an ever increasing amount of public attention. Its problems are among the most baffling that the world can produce. They must be studied from every point of view, and Mr. Buell has laid us all under a great obligation by collecting together such a vast mass of material all of which is essential to a proper understanding of them." H. A. Wyndham

+ Geog R 19:340 Ap '29 1000w

Reviewed by W. C. Langsam

Hist Outlook 20:192 Ap '29 570w

"There is a minimum of generalization. The reader must wade through the two thick volumes before he can make up his mind what the author thinks about it, but after he has done so he will realize the problem of Africa as he never could by any brief summary or system of generalizations. The reviewer speaks from experience. He has read the volumes through and commends them to others who seriously want to know about Africa." Quincy Wright

+ Pol Sci Q 44:276 Je '29 1100w

Springf'd Republican p10 F 14 '29 670w

"He has produced a work of exceptional merit, showing a masterly grasp of political and administrative conditions in all the territories that he visited, and written in a clear, vigorous, and incisive style." Evans Lewin
+ Yale R n s 18:824 summer '29 720w

BUELL, KATHARINE LOVING (MRS ROBERT HOLMAN WILDER) (WILDER BUELL, pseud.). Other side of Main street. 339p $2 (7s 6d) Longmans

[29-7205]

A gossipy, kindly chronicle of life and love in a small New England community. The quiet humor and simplicity of the story place it in direct antithesis to the "Main Street" of Sinclair Lewis and it may be intended as an answer to that book.

— Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '29 150w

"This is a novel that will soothe all those whose native feelings were bruised by 'Main Street,' and make the rest wonder at Sinclair Lewis's forbearance. It is an amiable, formless chronicle of life and love and death and every one's affairs in Pudding Centre, presented in that humorous and unselective manner immemorially known as Dickensian."
N Y Times p9 Mr 24 '29 250w

"As a counterblast to 'Main Street' this novel misses the mark, but as a picture of rural New England life to-day, combining seriousness and broad humor, it has its points."
+ — N Y World p11m Ap 7 '29 100w

"This is a sincere and sound chronicle of small-town life, rich in local color, intelligent sympathy, humor and honest sentiment. The story moves briskly and the characterizations are good."
+ Outlook 151:554 Ap 3 '29 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p476 Je 13 '29 110w

Wis Lib Bul 25:161 My '29

BUELL, WILDER, pseud. See Buell, K. L.

BUFANO, REMO. Pinocchio for the stage; in 2 four short plays from Collodi's original; dramatized by [the author]. 219p il $2 Knopf

812 29-20544

"Collodi's Adventures of Pinocchio, dramatized in four parts which may be used as four separate plays. They are, 'Pinocchio runs away,' 'The forest of the blue fairy,' 'Pinocchio turns donkey' and 'The end of Pinocchio.' Although many incidents are omitted or transposed, the jolly care-free atmosphere is reverently preserved. Because of the variety and elaborateness of the stage settings, the plays seem best suited to the marionette stage."—Cleveland Open Shelf

"Mr. Bufano has made a good selection of dramatic adventures and presents the true Pinocchio with fine feeling for things genuinely Italian which are sure to be appreciated by children anywhere." H. S. Wright
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 D 8 '29 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p135 N '29

"Remo Bufano has very successfully compressed and arranged the nimble episodes of 'Pinocchio' into four plays suitable either for marionettes or for children to act themselves. The book is eminently practical in its stage-directions and suggestions for costuming. It may be said fairly enough that except for occasional unnecessary lapses into modern vulgarisms, the old favorite has lost little of its charm in its new guise."
+ Sat R of Lit 6:431 N 16 '29 120w

BUFFALO CHILD LONG LANCE (Siksika chief). Long Lance; foreword by Irvin S. Cobb. 278p il $2.50 Cosmopolitan bk.

970.2 Indians of North America 28-20565

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:209 F '29

Spec 142:206 F 9 '29 450w

Springf'd Republican p6 F 11 '29 160w

"What makes the book so interesting and so unlike most other books written about the Indians is that it is lived and not observed."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p21 Ja 10 '29 1500w

BUGNET, CHARLES. Foch speaks; tr. by Russell Green. 308p $3 Dial press [7s 6d Gollancz]

B or 92 Foch, Ferdinand 29-12410

The great French general's aide-de-camp has written a personal memoir of the last eight years of Foch's life, reporting in the Marshal's own words his views on many subjects.

Reviewed by W: MacDonald
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Je 9 '29 720w

"A realistic and altogether fascinating portrayal of Foch." Edmund Noble
+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 15 '29 2300w

"The season has given us nothing finer or more stimulating than Major Bugnet's portrait of Marshal Foch." K. B.
+ Cath World 129:627 Ag '29 800w

Reviewed by W: MacDonald
Nation 129:201 Ag 21 '29 450w

"Commandant Bugnet's pleasant and modest little book will serve the historian both to correct the Foch Legend, and to explain how it arose. . . Within its limits, the book is well written and convincing, and the records of the Marshal's conversation are of the highest interest."
+ Nation and Ath 45:342 Je 8 '29 420w

"Major Bugnet's book is not written from any particular literary or psychological angle, but takes its tone from its subject. It is straightforward, emphatic, confident, factual, not subtle, not imaginative, limited in scope. It gives a reliable, unaffectedly laudatory picture of Foch; it shows him sending thousands of young men to their death (in order to save thousands of others), but it does not explain him, except in vague terms of patriotism and religion." G. T. Hellman
+ — New Repub 59:268 Jl 24 '29 620w

Reviewed by F. R. Dulles
N Y Evening Post p4s Je 8 '29 520w

"A portrait of the perfect Frenchman, which is itself perfect because only a Frenchman, artist as well as officer, could have painted it. . . It is a book which would have satisfied the exact eye of the Marshal himself." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p1 Je 2 '29 2100w

"It must be confessed that the natural interest in this book lies rather in the subject than in the manner in which it is presented. . . To the reader interested largely in personalities, it may be taken as a hero-worshiper's simple tribute, or as the initial volume in the literature and legend of Foch, the immortal."
Outlook 152:267 Je 12 '29 220w

"The only thing that can be commended in this disappointing book is the translation, which has been admirably executed by Mr. Russell Green. The author acted as Marshal Foch's aide-de-camp from 1921 till his death this year and had every opportunity of compiling a really valuable account of the intimate talks of that great soldier, for whom he evidently entertains a sincere and wholehearted admiration."
— Sat R 147:650 My 11 '29 130w

"Commandant Bugnet's book about Foch is very disappointing. The dead Marshal speaks, but we cannot believe it is a human voice. We certainly get no impression whatever of having seen into Foch's mind."

BUGNET, CHARLES—Continued
— Spec 142:sup703 My 4 '29 260w
Times [London] Lit Sup p413 My 23 '29 570w

BULCOCK, HARRY. Religion and its New Testament expression; lectures delivered to the Liverpool board of biblical studies. 280p $3.50 Macmillan
225 Religion. Bible. New Testament [29-16503]

These essays in religious philosophy and theology begin with a discussion of the universal elements of religion—religious consciousness, mysticism, the idea of God, immortality—leading up to the religion which finds expression in the New Testament.

"He eliminates so much that conservatives will lift their hands in holy horror, but those familiar with modern scholarship will see in this thoughtful book, a fine piece of discriminating scholarship." T. C. R.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 8 '29 380w

"The author has succeeded in dealing in a clear, brief and readable way with several urgent problems, first in the philosophy of religion and then in the theology of the New Testament. It is difficult to formulate a criticism that will fairly estimate a book of such wide range. Its fundamental thesis is sound—that experience precedes expression and that theology succeeds intuition." H: J. Cadbury
+ — Christian Century 46:588 My 1 '29 700w

BULLARD, ARTHUR. American diplomacy in the modern world; with a foreword by Roland S. Morris. (Henry Labarre Jayne foundation. Publications) 127p $1.50 Press of the Univ. of Pa. [6s 6d Oxford]
327.73 United States—Foreign relations. Peace. Disarmament. League of nations [28-24597]

These three lectures delivered at the University of Pennsylvania comprise an illuminating discussion of American policy in regard to the new diplomacy, the organization of peace, and the problem of disarmament.

Am Pol Sci R 23:235 F '29 50w

"There is enough political wisdom in these three lectures to fill a volume many times the size." C. G. Fenwicke
+ Ann Am Acad 143:375 My '29 120w
Booklist 25:269 Ap '29
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ja 20 '29 120w
Boston Transcript p2 D 29 '28 280w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 Ja '29
Nation 128:234 F 20 '29 230w

"Student and traveler, Mr. Arthur Bullard is more than a good American; he is an enlightened citizen of the world. This admirable point of view has enabled him, in his latest book, to analyze our present foreign policy with searching impartiality." J: B. Whitton
+ N Y Times p24 Ap 21 '29 1400w

BULLER, MARGUERITE. Story of Woofin-Poofin. 18p il $2 McBride [29-18024]

A big picture book about an aristocratic china dog with a "fine curly tail which he kept most neatly arranged." Woofin-Poofin lived in a London antique shop.

"Especially outstanding for its pictures. The color-work in this book is extremely well done." Helen Ferris
+ Bookm 70:307 N '29 70w

"If the story is thin and uncertain, the illustrations, and the excellence of their reproduction by the color gravure process, alone make the book a notable addition to picture books in general." A. C. M.
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ag 4 '29 600w

"Marguerite Buller paints with more bouyancy than she writes. Woofin-Poofin's career, after he leaves the London antique shop, is rather uninteresting and sentimental. The story is all told in the minor key and by the stream-of-consciousness method. Children want more action. But they do love Miss Buller's glorious colors." Jean Wheeler
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:216 O 5 '29 100w

BULLETT, GERALD WILLIAM. Dreaming; an essay. (Pleasures of life ser.) 88p $2 Harper [5s Jarrolds]
135 Dreams 29-5088

"The Pleasures of Life Series, to which this small volume is the latest addition, contains essays on collecting, laughing, reading, wandering, idling, day-dreaming, talking and playgoing. In this volume Mr. Bullett writes of day-dreaming, of the importance of the dream element in art, of various fallacious popular beliefs regarding dreams, of Freud, who 'represents the first perceptible advance on the interpretive methods of Joseph.' And he interprets an amusing sample dream."—Outlook

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Mr 31 '29 170w
Boston Transcript p5 Ap 27 '29 300w
Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 151:351 F 27 '29 100w

"Whether or not there is any technical value to the psychology of Mr. Bullett's analysis, it is a felicitous piece of writing."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:813 Mr 23 '29 180w

"The pleasantest of essayists Mr. Bullett always is—his relation here of certain dream-stories is particularly delightful—but we wish that he had been content to treat his subject either as a diversion purely or that he had delved deeper and more systematically into it than he has done."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p57 Ja 24 '29 650w
Wis Lib Bul 25:98 Mr '29

BULLETT, GERALD WILLIAM. History of Egg Pandervil, a pure fiction. 335p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Heinemann]
29-6672

A very humble sort of person is the hero of Mr Bullett's story. He is Egg (for Egbert) Pandervil, timid, mild-mannered, middle-aged proprietor of a suburban grocery store, married to a nagging wife. Egg's great solace is Nicky, his three year old son. As he bathes the child at night, a long forgotton tenderness comes back to Egg, and he recalls, as if they were a part of another man's life, scenes of his childhood and youth, and the summer ecstasy of his first passion for Monica, the vicar's niece, who was so cruelly torn from him—scenes that contrast with, yet foretell, the drab misery of the present.

Booklist 26:32 O '29

"There is a sharp division in Mr. Bullett's novel: the first part has to do with the hero's hopeful, poetic youth, his short ecstatic love affair; while the second, showing his mature workaday life, is by contrast excessively dreary. This does not seem exaggerated; it is genuinely moving. Moreover Mr. Bullett has avoided sentimentality where nine out of ten authors would have succumbed. Egg Pandervil deserves all the eulogistic adjectives you can think of."
+ Bookm 69:660 Ag '29 430w

" 'The History of Egg Pandervil' is a fastidious blend of the pale, flat realities and the strong, towering impulses which go to make up human existence. Mr. Bullett has woven the story from the fiber of truth." V. P. Ross
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Jl 7 '29 900w
Boston Transcript p4 Jl 24 '29 800w

"By no stretch of the imagination could the hero, after his youth is gone, be called 'finely aware.' His consciousness of his situation, his moments of vague rebellion only make him dully miserable; and the stupid and the blind surrounding him tend merely to deaden his awareness. In so far, however, as he is responsive, Egg himself is interesting." G. A.

+ — New Repub 60:81 S 4 '29 300w

"The book opens beautifully—one might go so far as to say that the first half of it comes agitatingly close to being masterly. Here we have a genial, slyly humorous, and (psychologically) exceedingly sensitive account of Egg Pandervil's childhood and boyhood. . . At this point, unfortunately, the novel breaks in two, and breaks badly; it never again recovers. To move from this earlier section, which is all bloom and fragrance and charm and humor, to the later career of Egg, as a suburban grocer, is to move from the most delicate and imaginative of poetry, and the gentlest of psychological truthfulness, to a cardboard world of thin caricature and the very woodenest of farce." Conrad Aiken

— + N Y Evening Post p6m Jl 6 '29 700w

"Gerald Bullett has written a period novel—of the Wellsian period. It is a logical thing to compare the two writers, and it will be quite as logical for those who like Wells to have very kindly feelings for Mr. Bullett."

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 7 '29 800w

"We can unqualifiedly recommend this book to you for what it is, hilarious tour de force with much clever caricature and some fine writing."

+ Outlook 152:512 Jl 24 '29 230w

"The story, though dismal enough when one remembers the glow and glamour with which Egg entered upon his career, is never dull. 'The History of Egg Pandervil' is a very successful piece of work and marks an advance in Mr. Bullett's career as a novelist. While not less interesting intellectually than his previous books, it is much plainer in intention and design. Its defect, perhaps, is a certain monotony of mood. Like so many novelists of the day, Mr. Bullett writes of his intellectual inferiors and though he does not actually condescend to them he cannot help regarding them with a certain irony." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 146:398 S 29 '28 520w

"Mr. Bullett's interesting talent often leaves one rather provoked; part mystic, part realist, he so often just misses his mark. In The History of Egg Pandervil he weaves a more consistent if a more sober history than usual. The cockney part of the book is forced sometimes; but Egg is a sympathetic character, and the reader's curiosity concerning him is well sustained." R. A. Taylor

+ — Spec 141:340 S 15 '28 170w

"The novel tellingly works out its passive theme, even if it does not reach complete unity. It is a striking and uncommon book; shrewd in insight and sensitively varying in tone, with passages of real beauty."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p754 O 18 '28 550w

BULLETT, GERALD WILLIAM. Nicky, son of Egg. 253p $2.50 Knopf [6s Heinemann]

29-18543

"Mr. Gerald Bullett finishes the history of the hero of his first book. 'Egg' Pandervil is now an elderly, wistful grocer, bearing with the ill-temper of an invalid wife, his elder children married, assisted in the shop by his son Harold, and giving all his heart to his Benjamin, Nicky. Nicky, when the book opens, is an urchin at school, absorbed in boyish adventures, plunged in boyish scrapes, and visited by the strange questionings and fears of adolescence. We leave him dead, in a shell-hole in France." —Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Booklist 26:69 N '29

"Mr. Bullett's characterizations are charmingly handled. His prose is even mellower than it was in The History of Egg Pandervil. The result is a readable and touching book that saddens because of its indicated suggestion of the deplorable passing of all quiet and peaceful things."

+ Bookm 70:315 N '29 200w

"Perhaps this second novel has lost something in sharp outline. Perhaps the author has allowed too great a lull and too soft a light, like the pale stars at dusk. There are times when it is becalmed and you feel that he lingers overlong before the coming of a stiff breeze. There are times when you miss the knife-edged contrast of meanness to generosity that was part of 'The History of Egg Pandervil.' Nevertheless this conclusion to Egg's story makes a rounded whole out of a suggestive half. Mr. Bullett has poured into two remote and undistinguished lives a limpid gallantry which, for want of other words, is called the soul." V. P. Ross

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 S 22 '29 630w

Boston Transcript p2 O 11 '29 920w

"The lucidity and good workmanship of the book make a tolerable substitute for originality. Mr. Bullet's imagination works so well at moments that one has the impression of ability held on the leash—or of ability perhaps slumbering comfortably at home. He holds back the true and full history of Nicky's growth, and merely reports its stages. At periods he measures Nicky's mental and spiritual height, but in the intervals he ignores him, and it is then that the important things happen. Many readers prefer to do their own skipping and grow annoyed when they find it done for them by the author. As to the ending, one wishes that it might have been another war, and not the last, about which we already know a good deal: or, failing another war, a steam-roller or pneumonia." L. L. Irvine

+ — Nation and Ath 45:710 Ag 31 '29 260w

"I wish Mr. Bullett could have found a better and less conventional vehicle for what he really has to say. His real subject is the love of old Egg Pandervil for his youngest child, and this is beautifully rendered. So, too, are many of the incidental passages. I suspect that Mr. Bullett has not yet the courage to make his own form for what is genuinely original in him. When he does there is no saying what he may not achieve." E. S.

+ — New Statesman 33:604 Ag 24 '29 170w

"The author has written poignantly of a father who sees the fulfillment of his own life in his son. That the son suffers, to a large extent, unknown to his father, the same difficulties the older man had is a touch of irony that is very effective. 'Nicky, Son of Egg,' is a moving sequel to 'The History of Egg Pandervil.' "

+ N Y Times p7 N 24 '29 400w

"Few novelists can make one care whether their characters live or die. Mr. Bullett can. 'Nicky' marks an advance in his development. Besides depth of feeling it has sureness of touch, and its easy march covers a wide area of experience."

+ Sat R 148:250 Ag 31 '29 280w

"The relationship between father and son is portrayed with poetic subtlety and restraint and there are good moments in the story, which would be excellent if we could rid ourselves of the suspicion that Mr. Bullett is remembering how he did it all before. There is one utter failure, Nicky's wife; she flickers uncertainly between life and limbo; one success worth remarking, the prosperous Uncle Algy; one disappointment, Nicky himself." V. S. Pritchett

+ — Spec 143:285 Ag 31 '29 200w

"The unsatisfying thing about Nicky's history is that he never seems really to come alive. He strikes us as a document rather than a person—a document that serves very well for the description of some things which we already know by heart—school-days, adolescent disgusts, idyllic love, the farmer's round, War talk and violent death. The pages on which we come nearest to a living individuality in the adult Nicky are pages of analysis; for there was a poet in him, a legacy of the unconscious poetry in his father, and the workings of this spirit in

BULLETT, G. W:—Continued
Nicky's soul are the things that Mr. Bullett sees best."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p666 Ag 29 '29 500w

BUNDY, WALTER ERNEST. Our recovery of Jesus. 350p $2.50 Bobbs

232 Jesus Christ 29-5900

"The present book serves as a companion piece to 'The Psychic Health of Jesus,' in that it continues, without greatly advancing, the discussion of the alleged visions and voices Jesus saw and heard; and to 'The Religion of Jesus,' in that it deals with Jesus at prayer, his social message and religious experience. The characteristic position of all three books is the treatment of Jesus as a religious subject rather than as a religious object."—Christian Century

"Some day, the author says, we shall obtain a religious view and understanding of Jesus, 'the only view and understanding that will do Him historical, personal and religious justice.' And Prossor Bundy, by his sane, scholarly, sympathetic and religious treatment is hastening the day toward that goal. His courage in searching the truth is only equalled by his devout and devoted spirit in his search. This is not the work of an iconoclast, but of a builder." T. C. R.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 27 '29 500w

Reviewed by A. C. McGiffert, Jr.
Christian Century 46:358 Mr 14 '29 530w

"Dr. Bundy's main theme seems to be that we owe to Jesus a more earnest effort to beat our way directly to Him that we might come closer to His mind and heart and His own religious life. It is this motive that gives these lectures their fascination and keeps them from being critically destructive." A. L. Murray
+ Churchman 139:16 Ap 20 '29 350w

"Such a study is timely, but it must be confessed that this study is not adequate. It is, like so many 'recovery' books, to a large extent a project of the author's and today's estimates of Jesus. Unfortunately the author, whose competence is not questioned, abandons thorough methods of scholarship, and biased by exclusive reading in German, contents himself with the popularization of the theologies which, however influential they may once have been, do not meet many of the problems which have arisen recently. It is the reviewer's impression that this is a better book than the author's former volume, but both, however timely they may be, ought to be better than they are."
— + J Religion 9:493 Jl '29 230w
Pratt p8 autumn '29

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:26 Ap '29 120w

BUNDY, WALTER ERNEST. Religion of Jesus. 361p $3.50 Bobbs [12s 6d Cassell]

232 Jesus Christ 28-22164

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"The work is well done. It is intelligent, reverent, and constructive." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 45:1331 N 1 '28 200w

"Although the author is at home in the German literature of New Testament science, he cannot be said to have made its data his own. For him the religion of Jesus is found by accepting what the Synoptic Gospels offer, while the Fourth Gospel is relegated to the background. No other principle of source criticism is apparent. This book, promising so much, is a disappointment."
— J Religion 9:155 Ja '29 100w

"Walter E. Bundy's 'The Religion of Jesus' differs from such volumes by its background of historical scholarship, its understanding of psychology, and its sympathetical appreciation of the personality of Jesus himself. . . There is considerable repetition, and the book is not free from verbosity. But every page is illuminating, clear and relevant."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 17 '29 1000w

"One of the most illuminating and stirring books about Jesus that has yet been published." K. P.
+ World Tomorrow 12:186 Ap '29 200w

BUNZEL, RUTH LEAH. Pueblo potter; a study of creative imagination in primitive art, (Columbia univ. contributions to anthropology) 134p pl $10 Columbia univ. press [50s Milford]

970.6 Pueblo Indians—Art. Indians of North America—Pottery. Pottery 29-16104

A short study of the technique and form, symbolism and stability of decorative design of the pottery made by the Zuñi, Acoma, Hopi and San Ildefonso Indians.

"Miss Bunzel studies her technique, her forms and her designs against the uninsistent background of a superb mastery of the whole content of Pueblo culture, especially of the culture of Zuñi, and with knowledge of the older stages of Pueblo pottery which antedates the somewhat degenerated art of the present. But she is not strangled by her knowledge. Without making a romantic nuisance of herself, she is alert to catch every promise of the individual enrichment of tribal pattern, sensitive to every turn of style, to the formal excellences or shortcomings of all her materials; she is sympathetic to every phase of the potter's art, from the molding and firing of the clay to the planning of the layout of painted patterns on the finished surface of the vessel." E: Sapir
+ New Repub 61:115 D 18 '29 850w

"The book is prepared with authority based on extensive first-hand knowledge." E. A. Jewell
+ N Y Times p18 O 20 '29 80w
Times [London] Lit Sup p823 O 17 '29 250w

BURDEKIN, MRS KATHARINE. Burning ring. 299p $2.50 Morrow [7s 6d T. Butterworth] 29-1197

"Stunted at fourteen in his emotional development by the shock of his greatly-loved mother's death, Robert Carling, at forty has experienced none of the major emotions. With the aid of a magic ring he wishes himself back in the past, and lives through three episodes in three different historical periods—dream-experiences which, through the stages of hero worship, deep friendship of man for man, and love of woman, bring him emotionally to date."—Cleveland Open Shelf

"This fantastic tale, the writing of which is often charming, if not distinguished, is far removed from the main stream of the contemporary novel. It is surprising to find, in this day of realism, so frankly and engagingly romantic a tale."
+ Bookm 69:xxv Mr '29 130w

"In spite of its title, and in spite of the fact that a magic ring figures largely in its plot, this book is not a whimsical romance. And it is not a psychoanalytical novel. Magic and psychoanalysis both serve only as a device for opening up a plot that manages to be unexpectedly novel and unusually interesting." A. B. Parsons
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ja 20 '29 980w

"The story is fascinating and we never lose interest as we usually do in fantastic romances. It is told in good and pellucid English and reproduces the different periods in which the dreams take place with spirit, skill and directness."
+ Boston Transcript p3 F 16 '29 300w

"The book has humor, charm and the real historical sense."
+ Cleveland Open Shelf p48 Mr '29

"A piquant and charming book which appeals to one no less for its capable story-telling than for the uniqueness of its theme."
+ N Y Times p9 Mr 3 '29 530w

"The book is a dramatization of emotional growth. It is also a well written and entertaining story. And for us it expresses certain things much more clearly by refusing to be bound by time and space and actuality. There often is more truth and reality in one small fairy tale than in the entire works of the humdrum school." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 151:192 Ja 30 '29 130w

"Timidity in conception and execution, and an inadequately covered allegorical skeleton, keep this from being very effective fantasy."

— Sat R of Lit 5:669 F 9 '29 130w

BURDEKIN, MRS KATHARINE. Children's country. 262p il $2.50 Morrow

29-17259

"An inventive kind of adventure story in which the children encounter strange fairy people and experiences."—N Y Times

---

"While the author writes easily she does not succeed in bringing Donald and Carol to life. There is no humor, no element of surprise in 'The Children's Country.' . . We are left with the impression that while the book is worth reading because of its pleasant style and agreeable atmosphere, the author has not done Donald or Carol complete justice in the matter of their Adventure. The illustrations in color by Beth Krebs Morris are in no way contributory. They are, in fact, extremely poor." Livingston Goddard

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 S 8 '29 500w

"Sophisticated children, familiar with fairy-tale conventions and not too much in love with them, will like this book. . . The children's country, where differences in the sex of children and in the resultant different work for boys and girls are looked upon with amused tolerance by the inhabitants, is pictured with a curious blending of modern standards and Victorian moralizing and in a style which shows a lively imagination and a sense of what is dramatic."

+ Nation 129:602 N 20 '29 100w

"If its fancifulness were a little more clear it would have emerged as a better book. The book has a nice idea and, in part, lives up to it." M. G. Bonner

+ — N Y Times p36 O 6 '29 50w

BURDEKIN, MRS KATHARINE. Rebel passion. 306p $3 Morrow [7s 6d Butterworth]

29-18417

"Through visions revealed to Giraldus of Glastonbury, monk with the soul of a woman, in the seventh year of the reign of King Stephen of England, [the author] shows the growth of pity in the heart of man. Through this unique and effective method, she interprets a series of significant historical events beginning with the first man, continuing through the present age, then ventures to prophesy the future development of the world for a period of twelve hundred years."—Bookm

---

"There is beauty of style, and a rare, mystic quality in the writing. On the whole, The Rebel Passion is an unusual and stimulating book."

+ Bookm 70:xxxii O '29 130w

"The book is written simply and with reverence, but it adheres so closely to the imagined character of the young monk that it contains nothing but naive and charitable comment. The fanciful tale of Miss Burdekin's monk does not shed a new lucidity upon the problems of the earth. It simply reinterprets, at some length, the reaching out of humanity toward an ultimate, organized peace."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 D 1 '29 250w

"Mrs. Burdekin's new novel is bigger than 'The Burning Ring,' and one which will in all probability live longer than most novels can live. It has about it some of the austere beauty which distinguishes the mediaeval vision literature. It belongs in spirit to that vision literature and it shares the same difficulties. . . In every sense, this is a very unusual novel. It is not a novel to be read at a sitting, but one to be read slowly and imaginatively, for it is very full of substance." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 19 '29 750w

"The historical background is well drawn, the atmosphere of the story excellent, the monastic quality being kept throughout the telling, and the theme is out of the ordinary." E. A. C.

+ Churchman p16 D 28 '29 100w

" 'The Rebel Passion' is a thoughtful and stimulating book which commends itself to the attention as much by the beauty of its style as by the matter contained in it."

+ N Y Times p9 D 15 '29 900w

"Very fascinating book, fascinating despite its inconsistencies."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p312 Ap 18 '29 1050w

BURDETT, OSBERT. The Brownings. 345p $4 Houghton [15s Constable]

B or 92 Browning, Elizabeth (Barrett). Browning, Robert 29-6264

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Booklist 25:282 Ap '29

"In spite of Browning's reiterated declaration that the private life of an artist is nobody's business, both he and Elizabeth Barrett unlocked their hearts in poems and letters with fullness unparalleled—not for publication, of course. But all has been published, in a multitude of books which few people have time or incentive to read. It was high time that some one should make a connected narrative out of such scattered materials, and this has now been done with a frankness and completeness such as the earlier biographers could not compass." R. M. Gay

Bookm 69:202 Ap '29 230w

"Altogether, though by no means an exceptionally brilliant or original book, this story of two noble lives is readable and worth while. The subject is, of course, far from fresh, though not much has been written on it of very recent years; and the method of approach has the merit of novelty." S: C. Chew

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ja 27 '29 850w

Reviewed by Frances Bartlett

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 19 '29 1350w

"The romance [of the Browning's] exacts many a sacrifice of critical narrative. It overbalances the author's consideration of their intellectual relationship and intercourse and it sets at naught his attempt to treat the poetical product of their married years as a unified whole." Johan Smertenko

— Nation 128:318 Mr 13 '29 160w

"Mr. Burdett's book does not enlighten us or thrill us. . . The facts that he selects are not organized; he discovers a few principles, or motives, which would correlate the details that the subject forces upon him." P. R. Lieder

— N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 12 '29 480w

"A more than ordinarily interesting study of opposing, yet mutually attracting, psychologies; and a vivid presentation of a paternal dominance that can be seen today only as comedy, albeit at the time it appeared tragic enough to the two it all but crushed." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 6 '29 1600w

"Mr. Burdett seems to me to have failed to get down to rock bottom in his analysis of the poetry of the two, preferring to skate on the surface of particular poems." C. H. Grattan

+ — N Y World p4e F 24 '29 1000w

St Louis 27:168 My '29

Reviewed by Desmond McCarthy

Sat R of Lit 5:657 F 9 '29 1750w

"To readers already familiar with the great mass of Browningiana this book cannot be said to add much illumination. Yet there is room for a newcomer and fresh points of view, and no one can regret that Mr Burdett has added his version of an immortal idyl of poetry, genius and love!" Lilian Whiting

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 3 '29 2050w

Wis Lib Bul 25:100 Mr '29

BURDETT, OSBERT—Continued

"The chief virtue of Mr. Burdett's book is that here for the first time the whole story of the Brownings is made available in one volume. His service is one of condensation and elucidation. Mr. Burdett's point of view is not new, and he would have saved himself a number of errors of fact had he depended upon the authoritative Griffin-Minchin 'Life of Browning' rather than upon Mrs. Orr. Fortunately Mr. Burdett's understanding of human nature is better than his scholarship. One is grateful for the sympathetic and just portraits of the chief characters." W. C. De Vane

+ — Yale R n s 18:598 spring '29 620w

BURGESS, ERNEST WATSON, ed. Personality and the social group. (Univ. of Chicago sociological ser.) 230p $3 Univ. of Chicago press [13s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

301 Personality. Social psychology. Sociology 29-13396

This volume brings together the researches of sociologists and social psychologists who are studying personality from a new point of view, as a product of group life. Among the subjects studied are the following: The personality of mixed bloods; Hotel life and personality; The sect and the sectarian; Types of political personalities; Stereotypes; The rôle of religion in the dissociated family.

---

Booklist 26:10 O '29

Boston Transcript p2 Je 19 '29 130w

"The studies here presented cannot be considered more than a preliminary survey of this fruitful field of investigation. Various types of economic, political, cultural and religious situations are considered with reference to their significance for the persons involved in them. Of special interest are the contributions of Ellsworth Faris on sects and sectarians, Robert E. Park on migrations and the mingling of groups, and Ernest W. Burgess on the family and the person."

Christian Century 46:713 My 29 '29 170w

St Louis 27:304 N '29

Spec 143:132 Jl 27 '29 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p563 Jl 11 '29 40w

BURGESS, JOHN STEWART. Guilds of Peking. (Columbia univ. studies in history, economics, and public law) 270p $4 Columbia univ. press

338.6 Peking—Gilds. Peking—Social conditions. Gilds 28-29144

"A scholarly study which throws light upon the difficulties which China is meeting in its endeavor to adopt the ideas and methods of western civilization. The history of the gild is traced, and a description given of the membership, organization, meetings, finance, and charitable work."—Am Econ R

---

+ Am Econ R 19:266 Je '29 100w

"Here is a detailed report of an actual investigation of the guilds of Peking by a competent American student with the assistance of competent Chinese. It will take its place with the few studies of Chinese guilds, such as those by Morse and MacGowan, which are now available. The report is written with restraint and with a willingness to allow the facts to speak for themselves." C. F. Remer

+ J Pol Econ 37:368 Je '29 580w

"The volume deals with the purely local and comparatively unimportant aspects of a subject which, as a field of sociological research, had never much to yield (because of the Guild's complete lack of written records), and which has already been explored by H. B. Morse, and other observers."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p969 D 6 '29 90w

BURGESS, MRS MAY (AYRES). Nurses, patients and pocketbooks; a report of a study of the economics of nursing. 618p $2 Com. on the grading of nursing schools, 370 7th av., N.Y.

610.73 Nurses and nursing 28-14379

"This detailed study of nursing conditions and survey of economic facts connected with the employment of nurses has been made with an eye to creating a better state of co-operation among the three factors—physician, hospital and nurse—to the consequent benefit of the fourth factor—the patient. With its more than 600 pages of text, its sixty diagrams and seventy statistical tables and its seven chapters of quotations from questionnaires, it presents a thorough and well digested examination of the facts."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"The investigation has been thorough, the conclusions being based upon 34,000 returns from nurses, 28,000 from physicians, 3,400 from hospitals, and 3,200 from patients, registrars, etc. The book is easy to read and easier to remember because of the summary at the end of each chapter. The liberal use of good diagrams also aids the presentation. The practice of giving excerpts from letters of physicians, nurses and patients has helped in giving an adequate picture of the situation, as well as making the volume more readable." Allan Peebles

+ Am J Pub Health 18:1553 D '28 550w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Jl 29 '28 130w

"The report on nursing is an excellent example of the way in which fundamental conditions can be ascertained and described as a basis for the guidance of a profession in improving its organization and in preparing those who are to be admitted to its ranks." C: H. Judd

+ School R 37:227 Mr '29 480w

BURGESS, THORNTON WALDO. Burgess seashore book for children. 336p il $3 Little

591.92 Marine fauna—Juvenile literature. Seashore 29-24074

Danny Meadow Mouse went to visit the seashore, where in company with Jimmy Skunk and Reddy Fox he explored every nook of the surroundings and learned much about crabs, lobsters, clams, etc.

---

"This volume, the fourth in Mr. Burgess's admirable series of nature books, should be an invaluable companion to any child spending a seashore holiday. It will not only help him to identify any one of the living creatures he may find along the shore or in the rock pools, giving him information about its habits and peculiarities, but it also will tell him what to look for and where to look for it." M. W. Bianco

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 N 17 '29 650w

"The veteran nature lover, in his usual clear, interesting, quiet, palatable way, gives a mine of information about the little known habits of the animal life that swarms about the seashore. There are many accurate and beautiful pictures in color and black and white by W. Hamersley Southwick of the American Museum of Natural History."

+ Cath World 130:378 D '29 260w

Nation 129:600 N 20 '29 80w

"It deals in a simple, lucid way, without scientific terms, with the natural history of the seashore and makes the creatures to be found there—clams, crabs, fleas, sandpipers, meadow mice, lobsters, worms, oysters, bitterns, sea eels and other queer things—tell about themselves as they talk together, and carry on their life affairs. There are no humans in the narrative. A long appendix gives the scientific names and descriptions of all the creatures mentioned in the text."

+ N Y Times p12 N 17 '29 150w

"There seems to be a high degree of accuracy in the facts presented, although the impression may be got at times that various species which occur quite widely separated from each other geographically are encountered by Danny Meadow Mouse just around the corner from each other. But this may be allowable in such a book which must be lively to maintain the interest of children." B. W. Kunkel

+ Sat R of Lit 6:538 D 7 '29 230w

BURLEIGH, LOUISE. Story of the theater. (City and country ser.) 69p il $1.25 Harper

792 Theater—History 29-14474

Traces the history of the theater from the early days in Greece and Rome, thru the time of the English mystery plays and of the strolling players, to the established theater of the days of Queen Elizabeth, ending with the theater as we know it. Written for boys and girls.

Booklist 26:74 N '29

Cleveland Open Shelf p135 N '29

BURMAN, BEN LUCIEN. Mississippi. 285p il $2 Cosmopolitan bk.

29-18162

The feud between Captain Lilly, steamboat owner and pilot, and a group of shanty-boat people who lived on the river where his ship plied, forms the background. Captain Lilly's adopted son finds that he really belongs to the shanty-boaters and goes back to them, marries a shanty-boat girl, and hates the Captain cordially. Eventually the river gets obstreperous and Captain Lilly rescues the whole family. Once more the piloting of the steamer calls to the boy and peace is declared.

"Mr. Burman knows a lot about shanty-towners, about their odd customs and beliefs, and their talk. He has a fondness for quaint characters, and there is none quainter than Captain Lilly of the Morning Glory. Indeed, the whole book wears a quaint air; it is not without a simple charm, but its characters are romanticized; even if one knew them they would hardly be credible. Mr. Burman has opened up an odd corner of our civilization." Herschel Brickell

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 D 1 '29 380w

"As a craftsman, Mr. Burman leaves much to be desired. Nevertheless he has succeeded in presenting people who live in repulsive ignorance, superstition and squalor and making them lovable human beings, a feat not to be despised. His material is fresh and obviously he knows whereof he speaks. For that reason alone his novel would be worthy of attention."

+ — Boston Transcript p5 O 11 '29 170w

" 'Mississippi' is a somewhat pretentious title for this extended short story. And the story itself occasionally lapses into exaggeration, sentimentality, and banality. But Mr. Burman evidently knows the Shantytown folk, those nomadic, unlettered outcasts who live in houseboats along the banks of the river, and he writes of them wisely and entertainingly."

+ — Nation 130:51 Ja 8 '30 170w

"It is an interesting, carefully worked out story. One has the feeling in reading it that 'Mississippi' is more of a study in American folkways than a novel."

+ N Y Times p6 N 3 '29 700w

"Mr. Burman is new to the novel, but obviously has a talent for observation and neat writing. Unfortunately the machinery of his book creaks painfully. Setting aside the technical flaws, however, we have an interesting and significant book." C. H. Grattan

+ — N Y World p11m N 17 '29 150w

"Out of the ordinary and therefore freshly interesting. . . Here is a side of southern life that is close to both the earth and its water courses."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 20 '29 130w

BURNETT, WILLIAM RILEY. Little Caesar. 308p $2 Dial press [7s 6d J. Cape]

29-12494

This is the inside story of a Chicago gang, told from the gangster's point of view and in his language. Rico and Sam Vettori fight for leadership and Rico wins. He is a little Caesar to the gunmen who obey his orders without question. During a night-club hold-up Rico kills a policeman. The gang is broken up—one turns state's evidence, another is shot as a squealer—and Rico himself becomes one of the hunted, until a policeman's bullet cancels the score against him.

Booklist 26:32 O '29

"The story is written in that hard American English which has now gone silly with Sherwood Anderson, and threatens to go literary with Ernest Hemingway. With Mr. Burnett, it has gone just about right. . . The people, as simply and effectively outlined as the silhouettes of a poster, first arrest our attention by their violence and crudity, and then hold our interest by the sureness of their pantomime." T. S. Matthews

+ Bookm 69:427 Je '29 500w

"To my mind Mr. Burnett has written not only the most exciting book of the year but the most important novel of the post-war underworld that has ever been published; and in his principal character, a brutal gunman named Cesare Bandello, but more popularly known as Rico, he has created as true and accurate a figure as can be found anywhere in American fiction." Herbert Asbury

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Je 2 '29 1050w

"The story of it all is very quietly told, there is no striving for effect, no trying to curdle the reader's blood with the sinister and the gruesome. Well written and exceedingly interesting from the standpoint of the seeker for information regarding that strange product of the post war period, that combination of good and evil, of honesty and dishonesty, of loyalty and treachery, the modern gangster, is this story of 'Little Cæsar' Rico, the killer." G. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 22 '29 380w

Cleveland Open Shelf p126 S '29

"Aside from its casual realism and the fact that its characters possess no moral virtues, 'Little Caesar' is not radically different from any good action-and-adventure story."

+ — Nation 129:177 Ag 14 '29 130w

"For the most part 'Little Cæsar' bears the stamp of authenticity; it is exciting, moves rapidly, has humor. It is not literature, but it is a good deal more than journalism." G. T. Hellman

+ New Repub 59:213 Jl 10 '29 700w

"A mercilessly unsentimental yarn of Chicago racketeers in a style harsh and terse as a gun battle. Mr. Burnett grazes monotony occasionally by his repression, but his book is filled with an authenticity usually withheld from such tales." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p7m Je 15 '29 80w

"This is an unusually good story about Chicago gunmen. It is written in the clipped, swift style that our age so much admires. The sentences are as hard and abrupt as the bullet shots that clear the way for Rico's rise to gang dominance and his downfall. The great virtue of this sort of writing is that it never wanders far off the track."

+ N Y Times p8 Je 2 '29 560w

"This book seems to us nothing more than another—fairly honest, fairly interesting—one of those hard-boiled gangster stories." W. R. Brooks

Outlook 152:275 Je 12 '29 150w

"Some of us are growing a little weary of the flood of plays and novels about Chicago racketeers and gunmen. . . Mr. Burnett's story, however, is the best of the lot, or at any rate the best of the half dozen or so novels on the theme which have come to this reviewer's notice; for which thanks are due not only to the author but to Ernest Hemingway." Elmer Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1110 Je 15 '29 600w

"The best that can be said for the little Caesar of the title is that we come to have a slight affection for him, and are moved very

BURNETT, W: R.—Continued
mildly to sorrow when he is at length trapped by the 'bulls.'"
— + Spec 143:104 Jl 20 '29 120w

"The book has no literary pretensions, but is a well-knit and fast-running story."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 16 '29 260w
Times [London] Lit Sup p492 Je 20 '29 500w

BURNHAM, JOHN BIRD. Rim of mystery; a hunter's wanderings in unknown Siberian Asia; approved by the Boone and Crockett club. 281p il $3.50 (18s) Putnam

799.2 Chukotski Peninsula—Description and travel. Hunting—Siberia. Chukchi. Mountain sheep 29-6552

Mr Burnham set out for southeastern Siberia to look for sheep of rare or undiscovered species in the Chukotski Peninsula. This is the story of his wanderings with a companion in regions and among Eskimo peoples of whom little has hitherto been known.

---

Booklist 25:354 Je '29

Reviewed by C. L. Skinner
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p29 S 15 '29 240w

"It is plain that Mr. Burnham is a good judge of human nature. The book abounds in absorbingly interesting stories concerning their contact with the natives." A. C.
+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 20 '29 800w

"Mr. Burnham has made a good, straightforward, honest story of his adventure. Although Mr. Burnham does not add much to what has already been recorded, his simple, almost casual, descriptions are very convincing."
+ New Statesman 33:supxii My 4 '29 630w
N Y Times p12 Mr 24 '29 330w

"Regarding 'The Rim of Mystery' as a book offering enlargement to experience, it must be set down as being as near to perfection as a book of swift travel can be. I would not exchange it for a dozen books of adventure, and I set its author in high place as a writer of distinguished and vivid prose." C: J. Finger
+ N Y World p11m Ap 21 '29 600w

"Travelers, active and passive will enjoy 'The Rim of Mystery.'"
+ Outlook 152:149 My 22 '29 100w
Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 15 '29 240w

"It will be gathered that Mr. Burnham laid himself out to understand the people he met and that he can make a good tale out of raw material."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p335 Ap 25 '29 680w

BURR, MRS ANNA ROBESON (BROWN). Weir Mitchell; his life and letters. 424p il $6 Duffield

B or 92 Mitchell, Silas Weir 29-21521

The biography of the distinguished American physician, novelist and poet is based upon the uncompleted fragments of an autobiography. Mrs Burr has used chiefly those referring to childhood and youth; the latter portions have been supplemented with letters. A record of Dr Mitchell's many activities as a physician, his work during the Civil war, and his experiments and discoveries are given. Extracts from his poems are also included, and a discussion of circumstances related to the writing and publishing of his well-known novel, "Hugh Wynne, free Quaker." Of equal interest are Dr Mitchell's letters to his friends, among whom were Oliver Wendell Holmes, Andrew Carnegie, Dr Osler, Phillips Brooks, Andrew Lang, Roosevelt, and Noguchi, the Japanese physician. With portraits.

---

"In the finest sense of the term, Mrs. Burr gives us a portrait of a man of the world." Logan Clendening
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 N 10 '29 600w

"Aside from its intrinsic interest as a biography, this record of Dr. Mitchell's many-sided activities will make its appeal in far separated intellectual directions. The scientist and physician will find in it something to add to his knowledge of the progress of American medicine, the reader of books will find it essential to the completeness of his knowledge of the progress of American literature." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p2 O 19 '29 1600w
Cleveland Open Shelf p147 D '29

"Mrs. Burr's narrative, with its generous collection of letters, re-establishes a period of American culture that is pleasant to look back upon, for it was a period which emphasized human values and the human side of men and works."
+ N Y Times p11 O 13 '29 900w

"It is to Mrs. Burr's credit that, fairly overwhelmed with the facts of his career, she has yet succeeded in giving a faithful portrait of the man who was a striking, outstanding figure in his day, a true Philadelphian of the old school." E. R. Pennell
+ Sat R of Lit 6:508 D 7 '29 1050w

BURR, WALTER. Small towns; an estimate of their trade and culture. 267p $2.50 Macmillan

630.1 Farm life. Community life. Cities and towns. Agriculture—Economic aspects 29-22969

An attempt to set forth the basic facts in the present-day agricultural and small town situation, which goes back to similar conditions in pioneer days for its starting point, and estimates the relationship of these groups to the life of the United States as a whole.

---

"Professor Burr's approach is more or less independent of previous work in the field. At the same time he is well acquainted with the literature of the subject, and is thus enabled to view it in an invaluable historical perspective. His own ideas are neither conventional nor spectacular, though intended, as he desires, to provoke discussion and criticism." B. M. F.
+ Boston Transcript p6 D 7 '29 320w

"It does not belong to the repressed, student-lamp, research type of book that usually embodies the results of such investigations. Mr. Burr, who is Professor of Rural Sociology in the University of Missouri and has spent many years studying rural life in that and other Western States, has taken his facts, not from other people's books and reports but from his own observations. . . Most of [his conclusions] are more or less upsetting to conventional ideas and traditional formulas and abruptly challenging to opinions widely held. But they are the outcome of realistic knowledge and they have their feet on the ground and not in books or accepted theories."
N Y Times p44 D 8 '29 380w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:31 D '29 80w
Springf'd Republican p10 O 22 '29 700w

BURRELL, MARTIN. Betwixt heaven and Charing Cross. 328p $4 (15s) Macmillan

824 29-26480

"The various papers that make up this volume may be placed somewhere between the essay proper and the book review. Almost all of them were written originally from week to week for the Ottawa Journal. . . Mr. Burrell's subjects range from Herr Ludwig on Napoleon to Mr. Boyd on Milton and from Lincoln's Gettysburg speech to manners and etiquette."—N Y Evening Post

---

Booklist 25:351 Je '29

"Here are no mere oratorical excursions into the domain of literature. The author does not collect his impressions ready-made; they are the fruits of his own meditation. Concerning subjects more closely allied to his career the writer is equally assured and definite in his judgments."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 24 '29 130w

"Mr. Burrell has a style which befits his opinions, straight from the shoulder and straight from the heart. It is a good omen that men of his experience and knowledge of affairs take time to write essays." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 6 '29 680w

Reviewed by W. S. Wallace

Canadian Hist R 9:363 D '28 200w

"To the unaccustomed American, an M. P., a 'representative of the people,' writing general articles on literature is remarkable enough; that such articles should be eminently readable and sound and scholarly borders on the remarkable." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 19 '29 160w

BURTON, MARGARET ERNESTINE. Mabel Cratty, leader in the art of leadership. 248p $2.50 Woman's press

B or 92 Cratty, Mabel. Young women's Christian associations 29-15937

"Mabel Cratty died in New York City in the Winter of 1928, at the age of 60 years, after giving twenty-four years, more than half her adult life, to the work of the Young Women's Christian Association. Two years of this time were spent on the staff of the American committee, and then, when the National Board of Young Women's Christian Associations was organized in 1906, she became its general secretary and for twenty-two years, until her death, continued in that office. This book is a memorial to her personality and her service." —N Y Times

---

"This study of the late general secretary of the national board of the Y. W. C. A. wisely omits any detailed enumeration of the events of Miss Cratty's life and concerns itself with revealing the woman as she was. Partly it accomplishes this by means of a personality study written, obviously con amore, by Miss Cratty's associate, Miss Burton, and partly by excerpts from the speeches, notebooks and letters of Miss Cratty herself. It is a joy to have it this way. For Miss Cratty was a woman of unusual stature, and this treatment gives the reader an adequate chance to see her in her true greatness."

+ Christian Century 46:1441 N 20 '29 170w

"Feeling has been restrained by good taste and the outsider will find in it nothing of that fulsome eulogy that sometimes disfigures works of this sort, but only that tenderness of touch and that inward glow of loving admiration without which such a tribute would be cold and unfeeling. . . The book reveals and portrays an interesting, beautiful and beneficent character."

N Y Times p16 Ag 11 '29 450w

BURTON, RICHARD. How to see a play. new [2] ed 247p $2 Macmillan

808.2 Drama 29-18774

New edition of a book which appeared in 1914, to which has been added a chapter on later developments which sketches the more important happenings during the fifteen intervening years and gives an idea of the current American situation.

---

Booklist 26:81 N '29

"Professor Richard Burton wrote his 'How to See a Play' in 1914. It was, and is, a good if simple manual for playgoers who wish to increase their critical understanding of the art they watch. But the chapter he has just added to bring a new edition up to date is quite inadequate. Much has happened since 1914 which puzzles many theatergoers, and even some of the dramatists perhaps. Professor Burton had an opportunity to explain as well as merely catalogue. Possibly he is a bit weary of the subject." W. P. Eaton

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 D 8 '29 80w

BURTON, RICHARD. Why do you talk like that? not to mention: why do you write that way? 294p $2 Bobbs

422 English language—Etymology. English language—Errors—Use of words 29-9539

A clear and readable discussion of the use and abuse of the English language, of the origin of certain phrases in the accepted American idiom, of the coinage and the evolution of words and phrases, and kindred matters.

---

Booklist 25:380 Jl '29

"The contents prove interesting now and again to the student of the well used word. But for the most part Mr. Burton indulges in the generalities allowable in the essay. It is the theory of a cultured use of words rather than practical information that he aspires to offer his reader."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 18 '29 100w

"Between and around the flaws [instanced] there lies much wisdom about the uses of words and a contagious enthusiasm for crisp, vigorous and picturesque English."

+ — Christian Century 46:490 Ap 11 '29 170w

"Here is an illuminating, vigorous, juicy discussion of the genius of the English language which any one who is, or wants to be, interested in the art of words can read with abiding pleasure and great profit. The title is most unfortunate, even misleading, since the inevitable inference to be made from it is that it must caption a book pointing out mistakes and vulgarisms and locutions to be avoided in speech and writing. Instead, the author brings his wide, rich scholarship in the English language, its parent tongues and their relatives, out upon the floor of daily, cultivated usage of English."

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 14 '29 380w

BURTON, WILLIAM HENRY. Nature and direction of learning. (Appleton ser. in supervision and teaching) 595p $2.25 (8s 6d) Appleton

371.3 Teaching. Psychology, Educational. Education—Experimental methods 29-12158

"Prepared for teacher training courses which precede special methods courses and practice teaching, this book presents the psychology of learning and the teaching techniques which are based upon it. The questions at the beginning of each unit are well chosen and useful readings follow."—Cleveland Open Shelf

---

Booklist 26:54 N '29

Cleveland Open Shelf p118 S '29

Reviewed by W. S. Monroe

El School J 30:227 N '29 650w

St Louis 27:306 N '29

BURTON, WILLIAM HENRY, ed. Supervision of elementary subjects. (Appleton ser. in supervision and teaching) 710p $2.40 (8s 6d) Appleton

371.2 School supervision and supervisors 29-16832

"This volume is an effort to supply the generalist (superintendent, assistant superintendent, general supervisor, building principal) with a brief, compact summary of material of value to him in supervising the various elementary-school subjects." (Preface)

---

Cleveland Open Shelf p118 S '29

J Home Econ 21:859 N '29 80w

BURTT, EDWIN ARTHUR. Principles and problems of right thinking; a textbook for logic, reflective thinking, and orientation courses. 590p il $3.50 Harper

160 Logic. Thought and thinking. Science—Methodology 28-14269

"The traditional problems of logic are by no means neglected, even the syllogism receiving exhaustive treatment in a somewhat altered form. But the addition of 'reflective thinking' to the survey has enabled the author to set these rather abstract matters in a wider and more concrete perspective. 'Thought' is here

BURTT, E. A.—Continued
treated in its concrete sense, starting from Dewey's familiar analysis, and is made to include those problems of scientific method which only recently found their way into logic books, and even questions of value and criticism which still appear as a distinct novelty. This combination of the more congenial problems of the 'orientation course' with the more substantial matter of traditional logic appears here as of profit to both. The book contains a wealth of concrete material for analysis, and the student will not need to go beyond its covers for authoritative instances of 'right thinking' in operation."—Int J Ethics

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 N 18 '28 680w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 6 '29 360w

"In reality few scholarly treatments of serious subjects are written with more charm. There is not a class-room cobweb in the whole book."

+ Christian Century 46:991 Ag 7 '29 100w

"He exhibits an admirable capacity for clear statement and for keeping in close touch with the concrete interests of his readers." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 46:1091 S 4 '29 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p74 My '29

"A thorough, concrete and surprisingly complete introduction to the problems of 'right thinking.' . . The book as a whole is heavy, both in bulk and style, and is more likely to impress the student by its matter than by its manner. But teachers of logic will have good reason to be grateful to the author none the less." A. E. Murphy

+ — Int J Ethics 39:253 Ja '29 480w

"The book is well written throughout. It contains selected annotated references at the end of each chapter, excellent marginal side-headings, numerous diagrams, some illustrations, and a fair index. It is the most comprehensive logic textbook that has emanated from pragmatist circles in this country." D. S. Robinson

+ — J Philos 26:159 Mr 14 '29 1700w

BURTT, HAROLD ERNEST. Psychology and industrial efficiency. 395p $3 Appleton

331.015 Psychology, Applied. Efficiency, Industrial 29-27516

A book on industrial psychology written for the business executive and the labor manager. Topics such as training the worker, eliminating unnecessary fatigue and monotony, and how to promote satisfaction and morale among employees, are discussed.

Booklist 26:99 D '29

"The personnel problems which the employer, department head, and office manager face are well organized and ably discussed with many concrete suggestions for the recognition and removal of psychological handicaps to efficiency. Prof. Burtt is of the department of psychology at Ohio State University. The volume should prove valuable alike to student and employer."

+ Boston Transcript p7 O 19 '29 150w

BURTT, PHILIP. Railway electrification and traffic problems; with a foreword by Frank Pick. (Pitman's transport lib.) 197p $3 (10s 6d) Pitman

621.33 Railroads—Electrification [29-18916]

A study, from an English traffic officer's point of view, of the advantages to be derived from a wider application of electric traction to railways.

N Y New Tech Bks 14:42 Jl '29

"The work is fully documented and well illustrated, and deserves serious attention, especially from railway shareholders."

+ Spec 142:945 Je 15 '29 150w

BUSH, CHILTON ROWLETTE. Newspaper reporting of public affairs. 406p $3 (12s 6d) Appleton

070 Reporters and reporting. Journalism. Municipal government. Trial practice 29-4810

An advanced course in newspaper reporting and a manual for professional newspaper men which explains for them the practical working of municipal government, the machinery of the law courts, the elements of practical politics and the workings of the agencies engaged in promoting civic improvement and private commercial enterprise.

Am Pol Sci R 23:519 My '29 90w

Booklist 25:305 My '29

"Mr. Bush, who is connected with the School of Journalism at the University of Wisconsin, has accomplished that most difficult task, the writing of a book suitable both for the professional and the amateur newspaper man. . . A practical desk-book for active newspaper workers, if there ever was one, has here been compiled from their own viewpoint."

+ Boston Transcript p10 Ap 6 '29 350w

Wis Lib Bul 25:272 Jl '29

BUSH, CHRISTOPHER. Perfect murder case. 314p $2 Doubleday, Doran

29-18413

Signed "Marius," letters come to Scotland Yard announcing that a "perfect murder" is to be committed, giving time and place. The murder is accomplished. By means of an almost perfect alibi thru the use of a double, the murderer escapes detection and eludes Scotland Yard; but ex-detective John Martin finds him out.

Bookm 70:xxxii O '29 50w

"Mr. Bush provides some capable sleuthing and exciting incident, but one well wisher hopes he will go more thoroughly into the subject of composition." Will Cuppy

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 S 15 '29 150w

"The story is as intriguing as it is improbable, and it ends with a melodramatic thrill."

Spec 142:550 Ap 6 '29 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p297 Ap 11 '29 170w

BUTLER, ELSIE MARIAN. Tempestuous prince: Hermann Pückler-Muskau. 307p il $5 (12s 6d) Longmans

B or 92 Pückler-Muskau, Hermann Ludwig Heinrich, fürst von 29-6363

"The Prince resurrected by Miss Butler was the German Princeling Hermann Ludwig Heinrich Pückler-Muskau, who was born four years before the French Revolution and died, at the age of eighty-five, on February 4th, 1871. A minor Casanova, a great traveller, an author who, in his day, was a best-seller, an eccentric —the Prince is a subject made for the art of the modern biographer. Miss Butler's method is biographically sound, and not that of the hack writer. She first gives us a general sketch of the Prince's life, and then in a succession of chapters exhibits to us the various facets of his character."—Nation and Ath

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 Ap 7 '29 100w

"Miss Butler has produced a fascinating biography of her 'tempestuous prince,' whom she has salvaged from the obscurities of time." W. S. B.

Boston Transcript p2 My 1 '29 900w

"Miss Butler has produced a readable and amusing book which only just stops short of being something even better than that. She writes well, and is not content with the easy, superficial, brilliant effects which are characteristic of so much which is written and published as 'modern biography.' She is really interested in the character of her hero, in his psychology as well as in the drama which can be extracted or concocted from him and his experiences. Where Miss Butler fails is in not remaining herself sufficiently detached and impartial. She has become so fascinated by her hero's life that she has ended by becoming fascinated by her hero. She romanticizes the Prince." Leonard Woolf

+ — Nation and Ath 44:842 Mr 16 '29 600w

"Miss Butler has given us, not a biography so much as a character-study written in the spirit of a novelist intent on dissecting a character and extracting its psychological kernel. This, then, is the interest of her book—that it is a variant in the art of fiction. . . Pückler-Muskau belongs to Miss Butler almost as securely as Harry Richmond belongs to Meredith. He is her queer, brilliant creation, with just this to add to his interest, that we have her word for it that she has dug him out of reality by the most meticulous investigation of all the documents she could lay her hands on. . . . It is a strong, ingenious, and brilliant book . . . a modern, rather sinister, and highly accomplished fairy tale." R. A. Scott-James

+ New Statesman 32:794 Mr 30 '29 1300w

Sat R 147:406 Mr 23 '29 360w

"Miss Butler's biography is both vigorous and authoritative. She has a story to tell which is among the strangest in the world. Pückler seems to us more of a demon than a man; of the line of William Beckford and Mephistopheles; magnificently gifted, lawless and egocentric. The narrative of his comet-like existence is in good hands."

+ Spec 142:393 Mr 9 '29 850w

"Miss Butler will not take it amiss if it be declared one of the most striking features of her very striking book that there is hardly a trace of femininity in a book which few women could have written. Miss Butler's admirable determination to do her hero all the justice possible makes one regret a little that she felt constrained so fiercely to condense the book itself, which might with definite advantage be one-fifth as long again."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p159 F 28 '29 3250w

BUTLER, GUY MONTAGUE. Modern athletics; with a foreword by P. J. Noel Baker. 152p il $4 Macmillan [12s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

796.4 Track athletics 29-16465

The author, a great Cambridge athlete at one time president of the Cambridge university team, writes for schoolboys who are keen to make the most of their training and club athletes who want to improve their performances. The many diagrams and action photographs of champions are a valuable feature of the book.

Booklist 26:18 O '29

Boston Transcript p5 Je 29 '29 360w

St Louis 27:310 N '29

"His book is particularly well illustrated and planned. By a study of the action photographs —showing, for instance, the difference in body carriage, leg and arm action when striding and when sprinting—the adolescent athlete can learn a number of invaluable tips direct from the champions themselves."

+ Spec 142:547 Ap 6 '29 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p258 Mr 28 '29 410w

BUTLER, SIR GEOFFREY GILBERT, and MACCOBY, SIMON. Development of international law. (Contributions to international law and diplomacy) 566p $9 (25s) Longmans

341 International law and relations—History [28-31098]

"Believing that the changes in international law have been the reflection of changes in the political theory and practice of states, the author has divided his work into three major periods—the Age of the Prince, the Age of the Judge, and the Age of the Concert. In each period the major changes and developments are traced with an unusual sense of the important and with admirable clarity and simplicity."—Yale Law J

"Against a clearly drawn historical background, this book contains much useful information on the social and economic forces which contributed to the evolution of principles and institutions of the law of nations. In addition to this wealth of information, The Development of International Law should be commended for its judicious handling of controversial points. . . Despite its many qualities the book has some weak points. The division into three periods seems arbitrary and unsatisfactory because overlapping. The exhaustive treatment of the law of aerial warfare would seem to warrant some consideration of aerial law in peace time." Francis Deák

+ — Columbia Law R 29:685 My '29 350w

"Its importance is that it opens up a field of research which no one else, historian or lawyer, has ever explored systematically and as a whole, and whatever minor criticisms the book may invite, that is no small achievement." J. L. Brierly

+ Eng Hist R 44:667 O '29 1000w

"A most valuable treatise this is. The method is unconventional and very interesting. The general attitude toward world problems is practical. . . The writers deserve the highest praise for the liveliness of their style and vigour of their judgments. All through the book one feels the appreciation of living issues; and it is a better advocacy of peace and co-operation between nations than many a propagandist pamphlet." C. D. B.

+ Int J Ethics 39:372 Ap '29 200w

"Sir Geoffrey Butler and another Fellow of Corpus have achieved a solid piece of work in their large volume."

+ Spec 142:203 F 9 '29 200w

"The most striking feature of this work is the method of treatment—quite the most effective which has yet been employed in dealing with the subject. . . Based on a wide knowledge of history, filtered through an objective and realistic brain, this book must take its place as one of the most valuable contributions to the history of international law yet made." J: P. Bullington

+ Yale Law J 38:843 Ap '29 750w

BUXHOEVEDEN, SOFIIA KARLOVNA, baroness. Life & tragedy of Alexandra Feodorovna, empress of Russia; with an introd. by J. C. Squire. 360p $7.50 (25s) Longmans

B or 92 Alexandra, empress consort of Nicolas II, emperor of Russia [29-2796]

The Baroness Sophie Buxhoeveden was for years lady-in-waiting to Alexandra Feodorovna, last unhappy empress of Russia. Her biography of the Empress tells with loving detail the story of her life, but provides little in the way of interpretation of her character.

Reviewed by R. J. Kerner

Am Hist R 35:168 O '29 540w

Booklist 25:318 My '29

"An authentic and sincere interpretation of many facts which have been twisted to suit the purposes of enemies of the imperial family."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 F 10 '29 150w

Boston Transcript p4 D 29 '28 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p140 N '29

"Considered only as an historical document, the book possesses the fundamental value of being the product of an eye-witness of noteworthy events; and as a literary exercise, it at least illustrates the virtues of clearness, simplicity, and comparative candor. Naturally enough, the Baroness shows little sympathy for the Bolshevist regime."

+ Nation 129:49 Jl 10 '29 80w

+ Nation and Ath 44:218 N 10 '28 300w

BUXHOEVEDEN, S. K.—Continued

"She often tells too briefly the things that ought to be told at length and vice versa. Yet, even with such shortcomings, her book contains interesting and important features. The excellent first-hand material filters into the last chapters much more often than in the earlier ones, and this makes the end of the book far more vivid and rich in characterization than is its beginning." A: I. Nazaroff

+ — N Y Times p4 D 30 '28 1100w

Pratt p35 summer '29

Spec 141:740 N 17 '28 1050w

"The authoress was a Lady-in-waiting to the unhappy woman whose life she tells; but it does not appear from her pages that she enjoyed that degree of personal intimacy which was given to Mme. Virubova and one or two others. Indeed, there is really nothing in this book which adds to our knowledge of the Empress, and little attempt is made either to analyse her character or to demonstrate how it came about that her unpopularity exceeded that of any other individual in Russia."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p824 N 8 '28 1000w

BUXTON, LEONARD HALFORD DUDLEY. China: the land and the people; a human geography; with a chapter on the climate by W. G. Kendrew. 333p $5 (15s) Oxford

915.1 China—Description and travel

"Mr. Buxton went from Oxford to China and spent some time there as the holder of an Alfred Kahn Fellowship. . . He deals with the natural history of China, the geographical relations of her agriculture and industries, her trade routes, the geographical aspects of Chinese culture, the general topography of the eighteen provinces, Mongolia and Tibet, and the history of the great land formations."—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Reviewed by Barton Field

Boston Transcript p1 D 14 '29 550w

"Mr. Buxton seems to have enjoyed galloping over the dreary Mongolian plains much more than we have enjoyed wending our way through his pages, which appear to us almost as flat. . . The book is too large to be used in schools, too dull for the general reader, and too general for the specialist."

— Nation and Ath 46:58 O 12 '29 450w

"It is a competent study of the topography, the flora and fauna, the climate of China, and the way the ethnic mixture which has become Chinese Man has used them and adapted himself to them. It is a well-printed, well-made book, with sufficient maps and unusually good illustrations." Isidore Schneider

+ New Repub 61:116 D 18 '29 60w

"Much of this, with its parched details, makes heavy reading; but the specialist in one subject or another will come upon interesting passages. Mr. Buxton does not go very deep into the cultural and social institutions of China, but he brings out a number of significant points."

— + New Statesman 34:98 O 26 '29 170w

"Mr. Buxton's China is refreshingly novel because it avoids recent history and politics and deals solely with 'human geography.' . . The book will repay careful study."

+ Spec 143:532 O 19 '29 160w

"This scholarly work gives, in very readable form, the condensed results of a wide range of study and of carefully tested information from reliable sources. . . Particularly interesting is the author's interpretation of the evolution of China's agriculture and its effect upon her social system, ideals and type of civilization; also of the fundamental differences between that civilization and our own."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p799 O 10 '29 150w

BYNNER, WITTER. Indian earth. 77p $2.50 (6s) Knopf

811 29-20132

"The first part of 'Indian Earth' consists of half a hundred minatures of Chapala, the lake, and the town in a pattern of eight-lined stanzas of unrhymed verse. In the second and shorter Mr. Bynner has undertaken to convey something of the appealing magic quality of the dance-dramas of New Mexico, the rain dance at Cochiti, the buffalo dance at Santo Domingo and half a dozen others."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

Booklist 26:110 D '29

"Mr. Bynner's is the troubador's acceptable task of gathering his happy impressions in more gardens than are visited by the other nine of the ten most arresting American poets among whom he has the good fortune to be listed. . . 'Indian Earth' has earned the recognition it is likely to receive from the soil that produced it." Mary Austin

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 S 8 '29 1200w

"Witter Bynner will always be remembered in connection with 'Spectra.' Whether he has ever achieved anything equally sublime in the serious vein, is perhaps doubtful. Yet many of his lyrics are truly delightful, especially those in which he forgets to philosophize and the quality of his work in general has been such as to assure him a position of distinction in contemporary American poetry." E. B. H.

+ Boston Transcript p3 O 5 '29 430w

"His precision of language, fluency in rhythms, delight in all physical experience are here brought to focus on material which he understands and interprets excellently. The Chapala poems are among Mr. Bynner's very best." E. L. Walton

+ — Nation 129:558 N 13 '29 230w

+ N Y Times p5 S 29 '29 750w

"Through the book the selection of material indicates a deep appreciation of poetic values; and the treatment, especially of the short descriptive lyrics, suggests an Oriental influence. What at first appears to be an unstudied directness of expression—almost a series of factual statements—is in reality a deliberate condensation of thought and emotion into a delicate prism of words." J. D. Tasker

+ Outlook 153:28 S 4 '29 280w

BYRNE, DONN. Field of honor. 435p $2.50 Century

29-18549

On a thread of romance the author has hung a series of events taking European history from before the battle of Trafalgar to the battle of Waterloo. Even Lady Hester Stanhope and the poet Shelley make their appearances, altho the story purports to be the love story of a young Irishman who works under "bloody Castlereagh." This is Donn Byrne's last novel.

---

Booklist 26:69 N '29

"In Donn Byrne's finest flights there is to me a tinny sound, as though he were not sure of himself in spite of his efforts to convince us. His prose, which Mr. Cabell has praised, seems to me commonplace, his metaphor conventional, his learning the reach-me-down exploits of a user of encyclopedias. Those who like Donn Byrne, and they are many, will probably like this book. He is the Zane Grey of Irish literature." W: McFee

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 S 8 '29 630w

"The lilt of Donn Byrne when writing Irish scenery or Irish people is ever-recurrent in the book. Sometimes it almost equals Synge. Perhaps Donn Byrne never wrote a finer thing than 'Field of Honor,' and his farewell has been one of beautiful imagery, understanding characterization and a noble idealism." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 14 '29 1350w

"What the admirers of Donn Byrne will like most in his posthumous work is the atmosphere of Ireland—at least, the atmosphere which the not too heavily initiated like to think surrounds Ireland. There is the romanticism which leads the Irish to fight for lost causes, the Irish song and folklore, the mad, unaccountable actions of the Irish." V. G. Byers

N Y Evening Post p6m S 21 '29 600w

" 'Field of Honor" displays its author's gift for valiant, colorful prose. He writes of Ireland with a keen, nostalgic appreciation of her loveliness and pretty much in the same vein, tempo and words he has used innumerable times heretofore. Furthermore, the book sprawls. It tells a disjointed story in short, unsatisfactory spurts." F: F. Van de Water

— + N Y Evening Post p7m S 21 '29 380w

"The slender story is little more than an excuse for a series of more or less detached scenes of the period, always effectively and sometimes superbly drawn. Whatever one may think of its historical angle, the book is a big, even a splendid piece of work, a fitting swan song for an author whose death is a genuine loss to English letters." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p5 S 15 '29 1050w

"The effect is kaleidoscopic. The reader has the feeling of watching a series of flashes on the cinema screen, disconnected flashes that are run too fast to be quite clear. For no apparent reason, the author has inserted stretches of historical narrative and long paragraphs of nature description, both of which fail to advance the action in the least. So at times it carries one along with a rush, while at others it proves very dull reading. Those who care for it, however, may find recompense in the rich, romantic style for which Donn Byrne was famous." Jennings Rice

— Outlook 153:68 S 11 '29 280w

Sat R of Lit 6:608 D 28 '29 370w

Springf'd Republican p6e D 15 '29 300w

BYRNE, DONN. Ireland; the rock whence I was hewn; foreword by T. P. O'Connor. 146p il $2.50 Little [5s Low]

914.15 Ireland 29-15348

Photographs of Irish scenes, beautifully reproduced, illustrate this little book of sketches by Donn Byrne, in which he describes the land and the people of whom he loved to write, evoking once more the charm of speech, character and scene which fills his stories and novels.

---

Booklist 26:26 O '29

"Donn Byrne can make a guide-book read like romance, and certainly he knows the music that is hid in Irish place names. He can make music himself, too, out of English or Irish words. But, when the fiction-writer turns to fact, that is quite another matter, for he is apt to write very strange fiction indeed." Norah Meade

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Je 30 '29 900w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 31 '29 200w

"It is as compact as a soldier's kit and as full of color as an opal. One reads with rising admiration of the skill which enabled him to say so much in so few words and to infuse it all with that elusive spirit which is Ireland."

+ N Y Times p11 Jl 21 '29 380w

"To some of the author's information and opinions I have to take dissent. He thought we owed our civilization partly to Roman missionaries, partly to the Danes. But there are in existence hundreds of pieces of bronze and gold metal work which no unciviliżed race could have made and which archæologists date long before the Roman invasion of England. . . It has been written quite obviously from the heart and it appeals to the heart more than the mind. The author was in love with his own country and to those who read this book this is apparent; indeed, he has succeeded in making something of the mystery and charm he sensed in Ireland pass to the readers of this book. The volume is well illustrated with some very good photographs." D. C. Russell

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:24 Ag 3 '29 520w

"Writing romances had not left Donn Byrne much time to read Irish history; but he had worked up a great head of sentimental steam about Ireland. It blows off in this little volume, which is very vague about topography and about history and has no continuity of thought or order of arrangement. It is like a long enthusiastic after-dinner speech illustrated by lantern slides."

— Spec 142:391 Mr 9 '29 130w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 7 '29 800w

"A brilliant piece of impressionistic journalism, eked out with numerous photographs, this paragraphic sketch of Irish manners, literature, history and ethnic peculiarities is chiefly remarkable for its pleasant blarney and absurd generalizations. A picturesque and devil-may-care style, though effective in romantic fashion, is scarcely suitable for subjects belonging to scholarship, history or politics."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p210 Mr 14 '29 200w

BYRON, ROBERT. Byzantine achievement; an historical perspective, A.D. 330-1453. 345p il $5 Knopf [15s Routledge]

949.5 Byzantine empire. Art, Byzantine [29-17338]

"Mr. Byron's book was intended to present a history of the Eastern Mediterranean between the years 1919 and 1923; he was thus led to investigate the historical foundations of modern problems, and in consequence the book became a study of the Byzantine achievement. . . 'The present volume,' he writes, 'is in no sense one of research among original sources'; it is an essay in interpretation of which the most interesting section is the chapter devoted to Byzantine art."—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"There is no attempt in the book to present the results of research among so-called original sources, yet the author shows a command of history ample enough to make his thesis impressive." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 7 '29 770w

"Beginning pompously, often too allusive to be clear, and sometimes vague in its terminology, this book becomes nevertheless brilliant and valuable." V. S. P.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p8 S 21 '29 1100w

"If he is advocate, not judge, his frankly partisan attitude makes his book more interesting, more of a challenge to the reader. There is vigor and intelligence in the writing, plenty of drama in the subject, as well as a deep significance in its relation to the world of today. It is not often that we have so ably unfolded before us the substance, material and spiritual alike, of an entire civilization." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p11 S 1 '29 1200w

"Positively detestable over-writing presents a grave obstacle to the reader at the opening of the book. As Mr. Byron proceeds, he settles down to his work and begins to think more of his matter and his argument than of his purple patches, until he is capable, in his account of the fall of the City, of writing a fine, stirring and wholly unself-conscious passage of prose." E: Shanks

— + Sat R 147:577 Ap 27 '29 1620w

"Mr. Byron's book is not history so much as description. Its chapters deal with culture, politics, trade, manners, and art. They are well documented, and if not to be regarded as first-hand history, are a most excellent introduction to what was civilization to the surrounding nations for until at least the thirteenth century. Most striking is the comparison of the Byzantine budget with that of modern Great Britain, and the extent of its trade, conducted entirely on a hard cash basis, with modern systems of credit. But most interesting and probably most important is the subtle analysis of the Greek sense of a pervasive religion which was the state."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:587 D 21 '29 600w

"This book is well illustrated; the defence of the Byzantines is conducted with spirit and with accuracy. Mr. Byron has the saving grace of enthusiasm, but it must be confessed that he is at times exasperating. He is too strident in the expression of his dislikes, and they are many; his style is too frequently cumbrous and obscure. . . If greater self-discipline had been exercised in the writing of this book, it would have been at once more enjoyable and more persuasive."

BYRON, ROBERT—Continued
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p395 My 16 '29 1350w

BYRON, ROBERT. The station; Athos: treasures and men. 292p il $5 Knopf [18s Duckworth]
914.96 Athos, Mount. Art, Byzantine
[28-29091]

The adventures of an archeologist who with three companions sharing his tastes penetrated to that storehouse of archeological treasures of Byzantine art, the monasteries of Mount Athos in Macedonia, founded in the ninth century by St Athanasius. Mr Byron's rambling narrative is enthusiastic, entertaining and highly informative, with a number of photographs.

---

"Mr. Byron gives us a spirited account of sojourns in about a dozen of the monasteries. In addition to the excellent illustrations (some of them from photographs and sketches by the author himself), the most valuable pages in the volume are those which discuss the kinship between the painting and architecture of Mount Athos and the modernist creations of to-day. Mr. Byron will write even more interestingly when he has outgrown the habit of wearing his ego on his sleeve." Lawton Mackall
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 10 '29 330w

"Wielding a vivid, picturesque, highly-colored style, Mr. Byron with equal skill draws a picture with his pencil and levels his camera at scenes never before attempted. Moreover, he preserves amid whatever tribulations a hilarious spirit, tuned to the eternal comic, which is the best part of a serene philosophy of life." N. H. D.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 9 '29 1000w

"Within the confines of the monasteries indescribable treasure of Byzantine art lie buried and hidden from unholy eyes. This is a noble subject, but Mr. Byron has treated it in a style almost entirely without emphasis. The result is a curious and confusing mixture of holy relics, icy winds, fleas, and nauseating food. He has mixed his details, relevant and irrelevant, so casually that one misses many of them. One misses, too, among the illustrations, all but a few of the marvelous frescoes which Mr. Byron so ardently describes."
— Nation 128:291 Mr 6 '29 180w

"While it is instructive and stimulating, the book is also very entertaining. Mr. Byron is as happy in his descriptions of natural scenery as of art and architecture; and his narrative of personal adventures, moods, and impressions contrasts breezily with his otherwise grave dignity."
+ Nation and Ath 44:22 O 6 '28 680w

"One cannot but be grateful to Mr. Byron for producing so remarkable a book about so fascinating a subject; for writing, not like a scientist, a soldier, or a rambler in Tuscany, but like an intelligent human being, and for creating for the reader's imagination so beautiful a picture of this monkish republic which still remains almost impossible of access."
+ New Statesman 32:364 D 22 '28 200w
Pratt p30 summer '29
St Louis 26:388 D '28
Sat R 146:333 S 15 '28 600w

"Mr. Byron has found a subject entirely worth while and has brought to it a deal of hard work and unusual equipment. Mr. Byron has high spirits, which express themselves a deal more pleasantly in this book than before: and he shows at least the beginnings of a power for revealing things in their true relations which nothing in his earlier book had led one to expect."
+ — Spec 141:37 Jl 7 '28 380w

"Mr. Byron has written a fascinating book, in rather a challenging style, of amusing intolerance and vigorous enthusiasm."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p527 Jl 19 '28 880w

C

CABELL, JAMES BRANCH. Way of Ecben. 209p il $2.50 McBride
29-23485

"In The Way of Ecben, James Branch Cabell, announcing his fifty years, takes a literary farewell of the family of Dom Manuel of Poictesme. The short tale is another delicate fantasy, a variation on Mr. Cabell's old theme of the artist and the search for perfection."—Outlook

---

Reviewed by Carl Van Doren
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 O 27 '29 750w
Boston Transcript p8 D 14 '29 900w

" 'The Way of Ecben' is carved and cool, chastely unadorned; there seems little possibility that the story may ever be more austerely told, and thus perhaps little temptation for the artist to pursue it further." Lorine Pruette
+ Nation 130:17 Ja 1 '30 950w

Reviewer by Allen Tate
New Repub 61:201 Ja 8 '30 1650w
New Statesman 34:395 D 28 '29 240w

"For all the charm and flavor of its writing, 'The Way of Ecben' is inferior to the perfect true myth; and not merely because it is interwoven with irony. It lacks the perfect true myth's restraint, its simplicity. Mr. Cabell the stylist has always sacrificed beauty to the beautiful, the final effect of prose to the specific effect of phrases. His style is not only admissibly studied and archaic; it is also, if the word can be so applied, slightly sentimental. He has not the classic feeling—for proportion and restraint and gusto purified by contemplation—which makes so kindred a writer as Anatole France so immeasurably finer an artist." L: Kronenberger
+ — N Y Times p2 O 27 '29 1400w

" 'The Way of Ecben' is well designed and beautifully written, of course. It is chiefly by comparison with the earlier narratives that it seems hollow and pretentious. It marks a decline, certainly, but a slow decline from a very great height." P. D. Stong
+ — N Y World p11m N 10 '29 750w

Reviewed by F. L. Robbins
Outlook 153:348 O 30 '29 550w

"Will not be to everybody's taste, but will appeal to readers who enjoy fantasy shot through with allegorical significance and inspired by a spiritual ideal. He is still so fresh and spontaneous, in spite of his fifty years, that we hope he will reconsider his decision—expressed in some appended essays—to write no more." Gilbert Thomas
+ Spec 143:827 N 30 '29 120w

CABELL, JAMES BRANCH. White robe; a saint's summary. ltd ed 95p il $10 McBride
28-30361

"It relates how Black Odo as a lad made a pact with the Dark Master and coursed in the shape of a wolf, how his wolfishness put him into difficulties with the authorities and he was committed to a monastery, how he grew in grace and ecclesiastical pomp, and how eventually he died and to his great astonishment sailed up on a cloud to the very Heaven he had preached about and never believed in."—Bookm

---

"Forgetting the patient growth of Mr. Cabell's reputation for twenty years and forgetting those who have fought for him, I found a fancy fluttering in and out of my mind. I yielded and dreamed that The White Robe was a first novel by a quite young man, for did it not show all the stigmata? The false archaic speech: the love of double entendre: the 'beautiful' repetitions: the delight in naughty slyness: the bookishness: the pretentiousness?. . . In short, I had but a moderate opinion of this first work of a very young man: The White Robe was talented but sophomoric. . ." G. B. Munson

— Bookm 68:335 N '28 400w

Reviewed by Carl Van Doren

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ja 6 '29 750w

"Even the most rapturous Cabell admirer—if he brings to a perusal of 'The White Robe' any honest memories of 'The Cream of the Jest' or 'Jurgen'—will be compelled to admit the relatively feeble quality of these latest double entendres, the thinness of these latest insinuations."

— N Y Times p12 D 30 '28 600w

CABOT, ELLA (LYMAN) (MRS RICHARD CLARKE CABOT). Temptations to right-doing. 311p $2.50 Houghton

170 Moral education. Character

Temptations to right doing consist of specific attractions which, in the field of child training, lead the young person to prefer the right and reject the wrong, rather than vice-versa. Mrs Cabot outlines for educators—parents, teachers and social workers—some means by which they can create a fine moral spirit among the boys and girls in their charge.

---

"Out of a rich and varied experience with children and with their elders—parents, teachers and social workers—Mrs. Cabot has arrived at certain definite conclusions which she here presents most convincingly, illustrating her points with examples gleaned from experience, observation and reading." G. R. B. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 16 '29 700w

"In the exposition of her theme Mrs. Cabot is fundamentally logical and systematic, classifying her factors and arranging them with regard to their development in the child's growth. But in her treatment she is as inciting and attractive as she wishes to make the practice of rightdoing."

+ N Y Times p26 N 3 '29 420w

CADMAN, SAMUEL PARKES. Christ of God. 180p $1.75 (7s 6d) Macmillan

232 Jesus Christ 29-5902

Dr Cadman, whose national reputation has been extended thru his sermons over the radio, discusses in these lectures (originally delivered at Northwestern University) different aspects of the significance of Christ. Contents: The Christ of Christian tradition; The threefold approach to the person of Christ; The Christ of a growing experience; The Christ in the modern world; The Christ of to-morrow.

---

Booklist 25:377 Jl '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Ag 18 '29 150w

"Behind all this discussion one can feel Dr. Cadman's abounding vitality and personality. His message is positive and constructive, virile in a different way from Bruce Barton's, optimistic though never blind, stimulating and inspiring but always sane." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p5 S 7 '29 400w

Reviewed by M. G. Evans

Crozer Q 6:501 O '29 120w

"The lecturer covers too wide a field for adequate treatment of the theme he outlines. This is rather a pity, for the form of the argument is admirable and it contains much that must help those who desire the assistance of a vigorous and orthodox apologia."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p542 Jl 4 '29 120w

CADOUX, CECIL JOHN. Catholicism and Christianity; a vindication of progressive Protestantism; with a foreword by J. Vernon Bartlet. 708p $7.50 Dial press [21s Allen & U.]

284 Protestantism. Roman Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works [29-10531]

This scholarly work is a thoro and authoritative statement of the case of progressive Protestantism against the claims of Rome. The argument centers on the ancient dispute about the real seat of authority in religion.

---

Boston Transcript p5 O 11 '29 1000w

"This monumental treatise will at once take its rightful place as the most complete and the most important discussion in English of the issues between Roman Catholicism and Protestantism. In scholarship, in thoroughness, in the adequacy of its historical data and theological analysis, in documentation, and in sheer bulk, it so far distances any competitors for that honor that one may fairly say there are no competitors." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 46:1342 O 30 '29 1000w

"The book is extremely pleasant to read, both because it is beautifully printed, and because its author is transparently anxious to be fair and courteous. He probably regards his opponents as men crippled by minds which they have deliberately closed; but he never uses so much as a single slighting phrase, and he is at immense pains to let them state their own case in their own words. Theological disputation has never produced a book so completely free from odium theologicum, and Dr. Cadoux displays a most admirable and Christian temper throughout."

+ New Statesman 32:334 D 15 '28 380w

"The best and most fully documented statement of the Protestant case which has appeared in a generation." E. B. Chaffee

+ Outlook 153:154 S 25 '29 180w

"Dr. Vernon Bartlet, introducing Professor C. J. Cadoux's monumental work, unfortunately shows signs of a doctrinaire intolerance, which may prejudice some persons against his friend's book. This is unfortunate; for the 700 pages in which the Professor expounds the errors of Rome and the evangelical soundness of his own opinions, contain many useful facts and interesting suggestions, and are wonderfully free from bitterness of spirit. Dr. Cadoux's sincerity, and the conviction which he brings to this task, are beyond doubt: and if some may feel that his promised appreciation of the strong points of Catholicism leaves something to be desired, at least his temper is never acrimonious."

+ — Spec 141:738 N 17 '28 350w

"Dr. Cadoux does not escape the controversial habit of using divers weights and divers measures. Neither has he escaped from the control of certain fixed ideas. In spite of his immense industry, his wide reading, his refreshing candour, he remains insulated. The island of Protestant Christianity is a very large one, much larger than that of Anglicanism, not very much smaller than that of Romanism, but an island. He looks out from its shore with good will and sympathy, but with lack of understanding, as Englishmen look from their own island."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p976 D 13 '28 1300w

CAHUET, ALBERIC. Moussia; the life and death of Marie Bashkirtseff; tr. by Keene Wallis. 300p il $3 Macaulay

B or 92 Bashkirtseva, Marīĭa Konstantinovna 29-21382

A worshipful biography of the talented young girl whose promising artistic career was terminated at an early age by tuberculosis. M. Cahuet presents her as a charming, captivating girl with ardent intellectual and social ambitions, altho it is quite evident from his analyses that a complex of exhibitionism dominated her, and that, with her narcissism and romantic tendencies, and her virginal neuroticism, she was a true representative of the more emancipated women of her generation.

CAHUET, ALBERIC—Continued

Boston Transcript p7 N 20 '29 420w

"Alberic Cahuet has written of Marie Bashkirtseff just such a biography as she would have desired. Adoringly, reverently and chastely he has told the story of the girl who might well be the ideal of all true romanticists. : . Her beauty, the breathless beauty of the consumptive, her charm, her wit and her painting won the admiration of her contemporaries, and her diary gave her immortality. M. Cahuet hardly makes the use he might of this diary. Especially for an American audience, his assumption that every one has read it makes his narrative a bit incoherent." D: Loth

+ — N Y World p11m N 10 '29 400w

CALLAGHAN, MORLEY. Native argosy. 371p $2.50 Scribner; $2 Macmillan (Toronto)

29-9880

"In the fourteen short stories in 'A Native Argosy,' Morley Callaghan tries an entirely able hand at the character-incident sketch; and in the two long stories, 'An Autumn Penitent' and 'In His Own Country' he writes sombre, slow-moving tragedy and ironic comedy."—Outlook

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:618 My '29

"His dogmatic realism, his determination to deal only with the most unpromising material and never to exceed by a fraction of an inch its natural limitations makes the stories even of so objective a writer as Hemingway seem wildly romantic by contrast. That Callaghan should succeed so well within these boundaries is evidence of his remarkable talent. His characters are clearly seen and solidly done. Their thoughts, acts and feelings seem not only natural but inevitable. They live dully, but they live completely. Callaghan has written a competent book and an honest book. When he has the assurance to let himself go, he may write a great book." R. N. Linscott

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ap 7 '29 800w

Boston Transcript p2 My 15 '29 250w

"Some of Mr. Callaghan's tales in this volume rise just above the level of intelligent, objective journalism. Others, such as the novelette In His Own Country, are moving and tragic in their very listlessness. Mr. Callaghan observes as much as, perhaps more than, Mr. Hemingway; his main inferiority is in the matter of style." C. P. F.

+ — Nation 128:654 My 29 '29 200w

"At his best, as he is in his short stories, Mr. Callaghan is one of the younger writers who count for something. But his school is not the whole of American literature, not any more than the dreamy school comprises the whole. Both schools could learn much from the Elizabeth Madox Robertses and the Glenway Wescotts who, with lapses, have steered the more fruitful middle course. Mr. Callaghan could do it and increase the scope of his art." J: Chamberlain

+ — N Y Times p9 Mr 24 '29 900w

"His characters, situations and conflicts are typically American; and his style perfectly appropriate to them, compact, colloquial, hard, fresh and full of color. At present, his field, like Hemingway's, is limited—limited to the size of a peep-hole. But within it he is a master." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 151:548 Ap 3 '29 400w

"One is tempted to wonder if Mr. Callaghan is not exaggerating the helpless stupor in which he shows his characters, yet his manner in the end carries conviction with it. He writes with an externality like that of Maupassant; one may guess that he feels pity, but it is only a guess; one can be sure only that this is life as he sees it." Basil Davenport

Sat R of Lit 5:909 Ap 20 '29 320w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 30 '29 250w

Wis Lib Bul 25:162 My '29

CALLAHAN, JACK. Man's grim justice: my life outside the law; with an introd. by Charles S. Whitman. 296p $2.50 Sears [12s 6d Long]

B or 92 Crime and criminals 29-1948

This autobiography of an ex-crook is written in rough and ready style and in the vernacular of the underworld. It describes an unusually crooked career from the author's first offense and commitment to reform school, thru a succession of crimes and prison terms to the efforts at rehabilitation of the last ten years. His revelation of prisons and prison authorities is as frank as that of his own wrong doings.

"No doubt there is some worthy purpose served by books of this particular type. Whatever of literary merit they may possess, however, is apt to be submerged by the necessarily ruthless cynicism of their characterizations. A man, whose career of crime began at the tender age of twelve and continued with unabated zeal through two decades, has of necessity a contumacious viewpoint of life; he is barricaded behind a bulwark of disparagement." H. F. M.

— Boston Transcript p4 Ja 2 '29 480w

"His style is of the 'I confess' type, nevertheless he has written an intensely absorbing book." G: Joel

+ — N Y World p11m My 5 '29 120w

"If you have never read the autobiography of a crook by all means read this one, but if you have ever read any other it is hardly worth your while to take the trouble." E: H. Bjerstadt

— Outlook 151:388 Mr 6 '29 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p343 Ap 25 '29 200w

CALTHROP, DION CLAYTON. "I will be good!" 276p il $3.50 Little [10s 6d Cassell]

914.2 Great Britain—Social life and customs 29-23930

Mr Calthrop has taken the words of the eighteen-year-old Queen Victoria, as she ascended the throne, for the title of this book about England under her rule. The Victorian atmosphere is recreated in chapters covering a wide range of subjects—street manners, theater, restaurants, fashions, sport, crime, racing, funerals, the Victorian Sunday—and amply illustrated.

Booklist 26:113 D '29

Nation and Ath 46:sup224 N 9 '29 180w

"Here, in 'a series of vignettes,' Mr. Calthrop offers his readers a familiar but quite charming lament for what he himself comprehensively regards as the I-will-be-good-old-days. . . He may not compel his younger readers to share his nostalgia but even for them he will make pleasant reading."

+ New Statesman 33:790 O 5 '29 220w

"His touch is light, his mood is modernly realistic and frank, but touched with sympathy, understanding and affection, his tendency is to personalize and dramatize the spirit and activities of the past—which he does very well indeed—and his treatment varies from philosophic discussion of causes and consequences, motives and results to feather-light touching off of manners and modes. His book is a personal interpretation of Victorian times, chiefly pictorial, that illuminates some phases of that puzzling period and is very entertaining."

+ N Y Times p13 O 20 '29 500w

"This is not the most informing book that has been written about life in the Victorian age, but it has the authenticity of memory and the flavor of an individual and discerning mind."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 N 2 '29 480w

CALVERTON, VICTOR FRANCIS, and SCHMALHAUSEN, SAMUEL DANIEL, eds. Sex in civilization; with an introd. by Havelock Ellis. 719p $5 Macaulay [20s Allen, G.]

176 Sex. Sex (psychology). Social psychology
29-7602

Among the thirty-two recognized authorities who have contributed to this symposium on the many aspects of sex in civilization are: Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale, Mary Ware Dennett, Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Joseph Jastrow, Ben B. Lindsey, V. F. Calverton, Harry Elmer Barnes, Samuel D. Schmalhausen, Smith Ely Jelliffe, Margaret Sanger, Ira S. Wile, and William J. Fielding. Contents: Sex through the ages; The rôle of sex in behavior; Sex and psycho-sociology; Sex and psychoanalysis; The clinical aspects of sex; Sex in poetry and fiction.

---

Booklist 25:377 Jl '29

Bookm 69:viii Ag '29 150w

"The historian of our muddled age a hundred years hence will find this book valuable as an indication of its chaotic nature, for no age has ever been quite so muddled, and no age, therefore, could have produced so chaotic a book. . . Altogether, we have a catholic assortment of all the things which make up current sexual problems and current solutions for them, and our grandchildren will probably be able to sort out the sense from the nonsense." J: Langdon-Davies

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Mr 31 '29 1800w

"An elaborate treatment of the sex issue, wider in its range and more critical than any previously attempted." E. N.

Boston Transcript p6 Mr 30 '29 550w

"The book is hardly the kind to be read at one stretch, but if consulted as a reference book it should prove of considerable value, not only because of the extensive field it covers but because of the great diversity of points of view represented." H. M. Adler

Chicago Daily Tribune p9 Je 15 '29 230w

"Thirty-one individuals, not including Havelock Ellis, who writes the introduction, have contributed to this volume. Consequently, one need not anticipate evenness of performance, unity of outlook, or cohesion in treatment. But, unlike many composite works of this sort, these contributors have succeeded in sketching a theme which holds together. In spite of misgivings and difficulties, this book actually serves as fascinating reading. Its chief contribution to the literature on sex consists, not of new statements or positions, but of wholesome clarification. In view of this needed service, one hesitates to dwell upon minor points demanding criticism." E. C. Lindeman

+ New Repub 59:159 Je 26 '29 420w

"The frankest and the most comprehensive book on the subject that has yet appeared in print. . . As a whole it contains an immense amount of authentic material in the shape both of careful observation and of pertinent and stimulating commentary."

+ New Statesman 33:610 Ag 24 '29 280w

"Altogether the thirty writers of this book have done a useful and a valuable job in summarizing. And if the summary itself seems to total up to a kind of chaos, it is because its subject matter must for a long time remain chaotic." H: J. Forman

+ N Y Times p15 Je 9 '29 1300w

"There is a good deal of really first-rate stuff in this volume, and some hard common sense. There is also some piffle, and one is privileged to wonder just what the effect of the whole business will be." Herschel Brickell

No Am 227:adv My '29 320w

St Louis 27:279 O '29

"Almost entirely disappointing as a serious discussion."

— Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 14 '29 300w

"What the papers have in common is a serious and honest attempt to understand ourselves. As a collection they are a significant witness of the progress at which we are aiming by a score of different methods; and an even more significant witness of the start we already have made toward 'coolness and thoroughness' in regarding sex." Mary Ross

Survey 62:370 Je 15 '29 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p751 S 26 '29 80w

"One cannot in a brief description do justice to the magnitude and complexity of Sex in Civilization." Harry Bone

+ World Tomorrow 12:376 S '29 200w

CALVIN, JACK. Square-rigged. 334p il $2 Little

29-18706

Bert Lindsay, son of the president of the Nushagak salmon company, spent a few months as a common sailor in an attempt to discover the reason for the falling off in his father's business. It was a dangerous piece of work for a boy, but Bert found out what he needed to know and became an able seaman besides.

---

N Y Times p12 N 17 '29 130w

St Louis 27:315 N '29

"This is surprisingly well written. Calvin reiterates and very evidently has trouble with the chapter endings, but against this difficulty one may set the fact that he has created a protagonist who is a wholesome American boy, neither impossibly brave and cunning, nor mawkishly good." R. L. Roe

+ Sat R of Lit 6:327 O 26 '29 180w

CAMBRIDGE ancient history; the Hellenistic monarchies and the rise of Rome; ed. by S. A. Cook, F. E. Adcock and M. P. Charlesworth. 8v v 7 987p $10.50 Macmillan [37s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

930 History, Ancient. Greece—History. Rome—History (23-11667)

"The Cambridge Ancient History pursues its majestic course and with the seventh volume reaches the Hellenistic monarchies of the third century before Christ and recounts the rise of Rome to the eve of the Second Punic war."—Spec

---

"The volume unquestionably ranks with the best of its predecessors." A. B. West

+ Am Hist R 34:790 Jl '29 1800w

"The 'Cambridge Ancient History' is an ambitious and worthwhile work. Scholars will find it reliable and useful both for reading and for reference. The selected and up-to-date special bibliographies and lists of sources are particularly convenient. The layman, too, will be well repaid for a careful study of these handsome volumes, but he will not find them easy reading." H. V. M. Dennis

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Jl 14 '29 880w

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 6 '29 400w

"The Cambridge Ancient History is a great and noble work, but the emotion it commonly inspires is respect rather than affection. It is too ponderous, too pontifical, too conscious of its dignity as 'the standard work for years to come,' too prone to unjustifiable dogmatism one minute and irritating vagueness the next. It is all the more pleasant, therefore, to record how attractive many of the sections of this volume are. Mr. Angus's chapter on the literature and philosophy of third-century Athens, for instance, is a fine summary. The History's maps, each with its own index, are beyond criticism or praise." A. W. Braithwaite

+ Nation and Ath 44:592 Ja 26 '29 680w

"The whole work is a mine of learning, and cannot fail to seize and hold the attention of all who love history."

+ New Statesman 32:414 Ja 5 '29 500w

Reviewed by W: L. Westermann

Pol Sci Q 44:458 S '29 1600w

CAMBRIDGE ancient history—Continued

"The main task of this volume, so far as the general reader is concerned, is to lay a firm foundation for that story of the advance of Rome which will bring the whole work to its close. This is done with marked ability by Professor H. Stuart Jones, Mr. Hugh Last, Professor Homo, Professor Adcock and Professor Tenney Frank—an admirable collaboration of Wales, England, France and America." E: Shanks

+ Sat R 147:111 Ja 26 '29 1500w

"This volume may be recommended as a convenient and reliable record of our knowledge up to the time of publication." N. W. De Witt

+ Sat R of Lit 5:851 Ap 6 '29 1100w

"To do justice to so imposing a collection of monographs a corps of specialists would be required. We must be content to note its skilful planning, its varied interest and the literary charm of the more important chapters. The scholarly apparatus of maps and bibliographies is as usual excellent."

+ Spec 142:391 Mr 9 '29 280w

CAMBRIDGE history of India; v 3, Turks and Afghans; ed. by Sir Wolseley Haig. 725p il $11 Macmillan [42s Cambridge univ. press]

954 India—History (22-12332)

"The third volume of this six-volume work has been practically written, as well as edited, by Colonel Haig, for eighteen of its twenty-three chapters are from his pen. It covers the confused and sanguinary period when Turkish and Afghan sultans ruled in Delhi (1200-1526), from the Moslem invasion to the advent of Babur."—N Y Evening Post

"Not since the appearance, many years ago, of Mr. Edward Thomas's so-called Pathan Kings of Delhi has such a careful, comprehensive, and scholarly study of this period of Indian history been made. . . It is more than probable that this volume will stand for years to come as the premier authority in English on this first period of Muslim rule in India. It will, no doubt, have its critics, but so far it has no rivals." M. T. Titus

+ Am Hist R 35:117 O '29 1050w

Boston Transcript p4 F 9 '29 320w

Reviewed by C. F. Andrews

Nation 129:120 Jl 31 '29 880w

N Y Evening Post p8m F 2 '29 50w

"Sir Wolseley has treated a difficult subject in a masterly manner, giving an adequate account of the period, but without excessive emphasis upon unimportant details. One is impressed with the careful comparisons of the original sources, which often conflict, and with the intelligent scholarship."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:840 Mr 30 '29 260w

"The volume displays, as one would expect, a much greater unity in conception and design than has usually been possible in volumes of the Cambridge Histories. Nor in the present case has this been secured by any sacrifice of specialist knowledge. Sir Wolseley Haig has made the subject peculiarly his own. His learning sits well and easily upon him. His views are distinguished by a sane moderation, and he never loses sight of the essential facts of the situation."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p950 D 6 '28 2100w

CAMBRIDGE history of the British empire; v 1, The old empire, from the beginnings to 1783; ed. by J. Holland Rose, A. P. Newton and E. A. Benians. 931p $9.50 Macmillan [35s Cambridge univ. press]

942 Great Britain—History (29-14661)

"This History of the British Empire is to consist of eight volumes in all. Three of them deal with the Empire as a whole. Of these three the present volume is the first and carries down to 1783, when the old North American Colonies parted company with their Mother Country."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 26:25 O '29

Boston Transcript p2 Je 26 '29 1050w

Christian Century 46:1016 Ag 14 '29 60w

"The Cambridge History of the British Empire, of which the long-awaited first volume has at length appeared, promises to be true to type. Like the other monumental histories which bear the name of Cambridge it is to be a comprehensive and voluminous work of cooperative scholarship, consisting of contributions by many specialists intended for the use of students and for reference rather than for the general reader." R. L. Schuyler

+ Nation 129:198 S 21 '29 650w

"One looks in this volume not for emotional accounts of stirring deeds, but for detailed information, and one is not disappointed. All the contributors are first-class craftsmen at their job of unearthing and verifying the details in published and unpublished sources, and they set out their facts with the greatest economy of language. . . On the three major counts, fullness of detail, breadth of outline, and soundness of judgment this volume must command the greatest admiration." F: Milner

+ Nation and Ath 45:308 Je 1 '29 780w

New Statesman 33:276 Je 8 '29 770w

"No compliments have been wasted on the volume, for the strength and wealth of any Cambridge history go without saying. This one is an immense production, like its predecessors; which, for any one who has read a Cambridge history, tells everything." C: W. Thompson

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 11 '29 1600w

"This work is a step in the right direction. It is not, and it could not be, for obvious reasons, either the final step, nor one which takes us within sight of the end of the road; for before that road assumes its proper form there is yet much to be done in laying it out, in assembling the materials from which it must be made, grading, levelling, and constructing it. . . There can be little but praise for this enterprise. It not merely brings together a great mass of information already more or less known; it adds an extraordinary amount of new information. And, more than any amount of mere information, it offers a new point of approach to a great historical problem. It is probably not too much to say that it will inaugurate a new school of historical writing, and inspire another great advance in knowledge, which has already been too long delayed." W. C. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 6:106 S 7 '29 1050w

"If the very high standard set in the first volume is maintained, the new work should be the most successful of all the Cambridge cooperative histories. It is well planned and well written.'

+ Spec 142:866 Je 1 '29 180w

"In this massive volume, greatly to the advantage of those who will turn to the book as a book of reference, the separate chapters are more or less self-dependent. Yet they are on the whole skilfully and well fitted into a continuous narrative."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p409 My 23 '29 2400w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p523 Jl 4 '29 2300w

CAMERON, JENKS. Development of governmental forest control in the United States. (Inst. for government research. Studies in administration) 471p $3 Johns Hopkins

634.925 Forests and forestry. Forest reserves 28-28344

A study of the development of governmental control of forests in America, and the gradual growth of a public policy against wasteful destruction of existing forests and a policy of reforestation of cut-over lands.

"This is too interesting a book for so formidable a title. Two features are of particular value. It goes behind the scenes to analyze the attitude and motives of government, lumbermen, and public. It includes, moreover, the only adequate history of the middle period of our forest history, between 1776 and 1876. The only weak part of the book is the chapter on the colonial period, based largely on secondary sources and not even the latest of those. The extensive bibliography should be a useful guide through the maze of official publications and periodical literature. The book is well written and well linked together." R. G. Albion

+ — Am Hist R 34:883 Jl '29 500w

Am Pol Sci R 23:219 F '29 280w

Booklist 25:105 D '28

"The story is far more interesting and graphic than a novel, the author writes with a sweeping style that makes even figures things of delight." S. T. C.

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 3 '28 540w

Survey 61:515 Ja 15 '29 60w

CAMERON, JOHN. John Cameron's odyssey; transcribed by Andrew Farrell. 461p il $4.50 Macmillan

910 Voyages and travels. Seafaring life 28-25332

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Booklist 25:280 Ap '29

"There is the flavor of extremely salty seas in this book. Particularly vivid are the pictures of the old Pacific. Here are the South Sea Islands long before the colorful Frederick O'Brien discovered them; before Robert Louis Stevenson went to live at Vailima." A. B. Maurice

+ Bookm 69:xxiii Ap '29 200w

Reviewed by Arthur Warner

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 Ja 27 '29 250w

New Statesman 32:704 Mr 9 '29 660w

"Captain Cameron's book is not a record of romantic adventure; but as one of real adventure in a now departed age of its geographic locale it is worth any one's reading, for it is a genuine evocation of the men and manners of the day of the sailing ships." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 5 '29 110w

"It seems to us that 'John Cameron's Odyssey' is among the best of old-time sailor reminiscences." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 5 '29 150w

Reviewed by F: O'Brien

N Y World p11m D 23 '28 1200w

St Louis 27:60 F '29

"Cameron was a natural adventurer, and, as such, an object of interest; but his experiences, though unusual, are the common stuff of South Sea stories; and it cannot be claimed for him that as a narrator he possesses the gift of selection or that he has thrown any new light on the ways of traders, missionaries and 'blackbirders' in the South Seas in the last century."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p255 Mr 28 '29 650w

Wis Lib Bul 24:344 D '28

CAMPBELL, MRS ALICE ORMOND. Water weed. 380p $2 Farrar [7s 6d Hodder & S.] 29-23881

"There is no super-sleuth, either amateur or professional, in this story. The young American girl, Virginia Carew, who solves the murder mystery in it, is interested in the case only because the man she loves is accused of the murder. The circumstantial evidence against Glenn Hillier is so damning that everybody else believes him guilty, but Virginia is sure that he is innocent. Since the authorities do not share her views, and since Hillier refuses to give any explanation of his conduct, there is only one thing to be done, and that is for Virginia to find the real murderer. That she succeeds is due largely to chance."—N Y Times

---

Bookm 70:xxxii N '29 80w

"A smoothly written and ingeniously plotted story of love and strangling. 'Water Weed' is even better than its predecessor, 'Juggernaut.'" Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 O 6 '29 130w

Boston Transcript p4 D 14 '29 170w

"While 'Water Weed' is an excellent mystery story, it is something more than that. It is a study of character and of abnormal psychology."

+ N Y Times p32 O 6 '29 200w

"Mrs. Campbell's new novel has just escaped being a really good story. She has allowed theory to prevail at the expense of action, though the actual working out of the crime with which the book is concerned shows her to be an interesting writer of this type of novel."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p540 Jl 4 '29 280w

CAMPBELL, GORDON. My mystery ships; with a foreword by William S. Sims; and an introd. by Sir Lewis Bayly. 318p il $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [20s Hodder & S.]

940.451 European war, 1914-1918—Naval operations 29-6355

The exciting rôle played by the British Q boats during the war in decoying German submarines to destruction is revealed by the commander of one of the earliest of the mystery ships in this personal narrative of his experiences.

---

Booklist 25:315 My '29

"Of the adventures of Admiral Campbell and his men, of the dangers they underwent, of their heroism while three ships were torpedoed under them, I can say nothing more than to advise those who love the sea, who love adventure, who thrill to the battle of wits and strategy against unseen enemies, to read 'My Mystery Ships.' . . Admiral Campbell has painted a picture of the sea which the years will not dim in the minds of those whose privilege it is to read his book." E: Ellsberg

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Mr 3 '29 1000w

Boston Transcript p6 Mr 16 '29 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p71 My '29

"The thrill of these pages is the thrill of discipline. The success of the business hinged on men who would stick motionlessly to their concealed guns while the ship was sinking. . . In writing his book, Admiral Campbell has three advantages; he writes it himself, he writes without rancor, and he is always profoundly modest." C. A. C.

+ New Repub 58:53 F 27 '29 180w

New Statesman 32:94 O 27 '28 580w

"Throughout it is noteworthy that Admiral Campbell writes with the utmost appreciation and admiration of the spirit, the courage, the loyalty, the fine discipline and the intelligent service of the men under his command. The many anecdotes and incidents which he recounts wherein they figure substantiate all his praise."

+ N Y Times p18 My 26 '29 330w

N Y World p11m Mr 3 '29 100w

"Campbell had the engaging job of fighting in a good cause and under sporting conditions. . . Out of all the bloody welter of seafighting in the World War his exploits stand as a beacon of courage, sportsmanship, and determination. If you want to read of heroism and self-sacrifice for a great national ideal, here is your chance." J: Carter

+ Sat R of Lit 5:878 Ap 13 '29 400w

Spec 141:sup541 O 20 '29 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p769 O 25 '28 1000w

CAMPBELL, ISABEL (MRS WALTER STANLEY CAMPBELL). Jack Sprat. 290p $2 Coward-McCann

29-19779

A simple story in which a beautiful and strong-minded woman holds together her wilful family thruout long years, but goes down to defeat in the end.

"Mrs. Campbell has a gift for the kind of detail which delighted the Dutch genre painters. She describes very neatly and precisely the stiff parlors of the early nineteen-hundreds and all the small particulars of middle-class family life. But her characters, with the exception of Papa, are flat and a little dull."

+ — Bookm 70:317 N '29 230w

"Mrs. Campbell's novel has a certain charm. But it is a remote, faded, tepid quality. In a design to attain simplicity she has washed the warmth from her story. Like a piece of material which has lost its brilliant pattern, 'Jack Sprat' is a pallid remnant of what might once have been a vivid tapestry."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 O 20 '29 380w

"As a whole, this novel is a rather diverting piece of realism a la mode." F. E. Dunn

+ Portland Evening News p10 O 15 '29 300w

CAMPBELL, JAMES MANN. Transplanted heather; a Scotch preacher in America; ed. by W. Douglas Mackenzie. 311p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

B or 92 28-28693

In these mellow pages Dr Campbell looks back over a long and devoted ministry in Scotland and the United States. His parishes in this country were in Illinois, Wisconsin, and California.

"It tells in rich and racy manner the story of an unusually eventful life, and is one of those biographies which have throughout the human touch and the charm of wide experience."

+ Christian Century 46:266 F 21 '29 280w

"Never in charge of large or important churches, he gave himself with all the vigor and all the depth and warmth of a capable, generous and ardent nature to the upbuilding of weak and struggling parishes in small towns and cities. . . Perhaps because he lived his life with ardent interest his book about it is very readable as a record of human experience and of the transplanting process which makes Americans. His accounts of his problems and work in various regions have value for the social student and the young preacher."

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 7 '29 480w

"This book is more than a preacher's diary. It is an interesting portrayal of the background, both Scotch and American, against which his life stands out, and of the people who were his fellows in service, and of others, quaint, curious, who were his neighbors or parishioners."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 26 '29 680w

CAMPBELL, JOHN LYLE. Miracle of Peille. [2] 223p $2.50 Dutton

29-29982

Thérèse Ursule lived in a ruined monastery high up in the hills back of Monte Carlo. Her father was a shepherd hated by the villagers, her mother a gipsy for whose death the villagers were responsible. Thérèse, a cripple, was miraculously restored to the use of her limbs and from that time was regarded as a saint. Her life work, she decided, was to rebuild the monastery where she had found shelter during the happiest years of her life. Thru a strange chain of coincidences she accomplished her desire.

"Mr. Campbell works with deft, sure strokes, and the result is a little masterpiece of life and color. No lovelier book has come out this year." Harriette Esch

+ Bookm 70:561 Ja '30 240w

"The book has the naive reverence, the utter simplicity of an Italian primitive. No matter that it bears no relation to our daily life. No matter that its fragile color and elusive spirit of devotion are alien to the mood of the day. It stands alone in quiet dignity." V. P. Ross

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 D 8 '29 1100w

"This story of a modern saint has much to recommend it, especially a simple, lovely prose and a sincerity that quite prevails over our incredulity." Edwin Seaver

+ — N Y Evening Post p12m N 16 '29 250w

"Here is a novel of religious mysticism which is as refreshing as an oasis in the desert of clamorous, materialistic fiction. Whatever one's own views may be upon the lives of the saints and the actuality of miracles, one can have no quarrel with 'The Miracle of Peille.' Its effectiveness as a work of art is its sole justification."

+ N Y Times p6 N 17 '29 700w

CAMPBELL, LILY BESS. These are my jewels. 183p $2 Norton

29-5961

"Miss Campbell, like other novelists, has discovered that the drunken slum mother who smothers her children in bed may be kinder than the woman who by trying to live her children's lives for them kills them by a sort of spiritual overlaying. Her Mrs. Masterson has four children and ruins three of them quite thoroughly; the youngest, growing up when her mother is preoccupied with the affairs of the older brothers and sister, manages to escape."—Sat R of Lit

Booklist 25:321 My '29

"The theme, which is that of the parasitic mother living on the emotions of her children, while it is modern, is not new, since 'The Silver Cord' appeared on the New York stage and Miss Bryner wrote 'Andy Brandt's Ark.' But Miss Campbell's treatment, remarkable for the direct, unimpassioned manner of its presentation, distills its own peculiar concentrated bitterness." Garreta Busey

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Mr 10 '29 480w

"Written with quiet irony and told with the utmost simplicity, it is an impressive story." M. M.

+ Boston Transcript p8 Mr 16 '29 330w

Cleveland Open Shelf p110 Jl '29

"Here we have the dangers of that well known, smothering, suffocating mother-love set forth in plain narrative without the least dialogue. It is a quick book. The author has kept her story lively with the obvious, natural, daily occurrences of both family and national life during the two periods she depicts. Her characters are as deadly dull and middle-class as they could be." C. A. C.

+ New Repub 58:234 Ap 10 '29 280w

"If you like vindictive satire at its most effective, by all means aid W. W. Norton's entry into the publishing of fiction by investigating this book."

N Y Times p6 F 17 '29 630w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

N Y World p4e F 24 '29 1000w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 227:adv Ap '29 110w

"It is an extremely short novel, written realistically and distinguished by sustained irony."

+ Outlook 151:430 Mr 13 '29 40w

"The only novelty in the treatment of this not unfamiliar theme is that Mrs. Masterson, although a clubwoman, was, for the 'nineties, remarkably advanced and open-minded; she had everything but sense. The book is written with admirable clarity. The first novel to appear among Norton publications, it is a very handsome piece of bookmaking and a mildly entertaining bit of reading."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:797 Mr 23 '29 220w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '29 300w

Wis Lib Bul 25:127 Ap '29

CAMPBELL, MRS OLIVE ARNOLD (DAME). Danish folk school; its influence in the life of Denmark and the North; with a foreword by Paul Monroe. 359p il $2 (8s 6d) Macmillan

373 Education—Denmark. Education—Scandinavia. Rural schools—Denmark. Denmark—Social conditions 28-19129

The present head of the new folk school at Brasstown, North Carolina, gives her impressions of the Danish folk high schools, which she gained while on a visit to Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Finland. Her record of facts and routine observations is made vivid by her sympathetic picture of the life of the people of the countries visited.

---

"Of treatises and publications concerning the Danish folk-schools, this is the best available to American readers." J: Johansen

+ Am J Soc 34:938 Mr '29 350w

Booklist 25:193 F '29

"Mrs. Campbell's book is packed with life from cover to cover. Incidentally, it is a history of Denmark and a view of the conditions of agriculture there . . . It is a book worthy of all praise. American educators may read it with profit. Its abundant illustrations of the scenes described, from photographs by Mrs. Campbell, helps out the interest." J. E. C.

+ Boston Transcript p8 N 3 '28 1000w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 F '29

Pratt p12 autumn '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:123 Ap '29

CAMPBELL, OSCAR JAMES, and PYRE, JAMES FRANCIS AUGUSTINE, eds. English poetry of the nineteenth century. 784p $3.50 Crofts

821.08 English poetry—Collections 29-15242

A textbook designed for college courses in nineteenth century poetry, containing the work of the most important poets of this period, with introductory essays concerning the life and work of the authors.

---

Booklist 26:61 N '29

Springf'd Republican p12 Jl 12 '29 100w

Wis Lib Bul 25:320 O '29

CAMPBELL, THOMAS BOWYER. Old Miss. 302p $2.50 Houghton

29-18545

The life of a Southern woman during the epoch prior to and concluding with the Civil war. First we see Charlotte Steppleton as a small girl at Pine Grove Manor in Virginia. Then as a young lady, and her marriage to Robert Tirwell. The children are born—four girls—and after that comes the war, in which Master Robert is killed. "Old Miss" is left with fortune gone, a plantation deserted by Negroes, and herself dying.

---

"The book is a memorable picture of the period."

+ Bookm 70:xxxii O '29 100w

"A usual story for Old Virginia, but Mr. Campbell tells it with a vital and an intimate charm."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 O 27 '29 730w

Boston Transcript p5 N 13 '29 430w

" 'Old Miss' is a long and successful panorama of lives and events. The only possible charge to be brought against it is one of dullness. There are few dramatic high spots in the narrative, and those there are—like the surrender of Lee—depend for their effect upon the power of previous association. Nevertheless, the book actually captures some of the fragrance and futility of the old order."

+ — N Y Times p26 O 6 '29 600w

CANBY, HENRY SEIDEL. American estimates. 287p $3 Harcourt [7s 6d Cape]

814 Literature—History and criticism. American literature—History and criticism 29-7862

A volume of critical essays continuing the series begun with "Definitions" and ranging over the field of contemporary letters, English and American. Contents: Literature in America; Meditations in the woods; Persons and personalities; Reflections, none too cheerful; The American scholar; Literature abroad; Style in English; Criticism, theoretical and applied; Comment on several subjects; In time of confusion; Diadems and fagots; Quakers and Puritans; Too soon—and too late.

---

Booklist 25:351 Je '29

"There are statements here which will outrage the private judgment of every reader, although it will by no means always be the statements. And there are others which will delight because they echo one's deepest and most unexpressed thought. Some of these American Estimates are accurate and convincing; some are convincing without any special appearance of accuracy; and some—by all odds the best of them—are merely entertaining." Margaret Wallace

+ Bookm 70:107 S '29 580w

"In the collection every well disposed reader will find something to his taste, and most readers will enjoy the nimble intelligence that marks the whole." Van Wyck Brooks

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ap 21 '29 500w

"Keen discernment, cultured appraisal of values, sound style and sterling command of simple but richly expressive English, entitle 'American Estimates' to a high place in American letters of the present generation." R. S.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 22 '29 1200w

"Not a very interesting book. It is repetitive—points are made over and over again; it is lacking in emotional force; and it is not distinguished by any extraordinary intellectual acuity. It is distinguished rather by an unusual command over the data of modern literature and the clarity of the writing. Dr. Canby suffers by being presented in extenso. He is better in small doses." C. H. Grattan

— Nation 129:20 Jl 3 '29 600w

"In spite of a general lack of sensitiveness, in outlook as well as style, this book deserves to be read by anyone interested in the cross-currents of modern American literature."

+ — New Statesman 34:372 D 21 '29 580w

"One regrets the diffusive character of Dr. Canby's book and wishes that he had taken the time to elaborate his major theses. Made up as it is from editorial articles which appeared in the Saturday Review of Literature it spreads itself over too wide a range of topics, and one finds it somewhat lacking a unified effect. It is nevertheless a discerning, stimulating book, worth the attention of any American who gives thought to the cultural development of his country."

+ — N Y Times p2 My 12 '29 750w

Reviewed by J. M. Nathanson

N Y World p7m Jl 7 '29 450w

"Written with the fine critical skill that is characteristic of Dr. Canby." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv My '29 40w

"The essays illustrate Mr. Canby's versatility and catholicity of mind; a mind that has few equals among semi-academic critics for its penetration and broad understanding."

+ Outlook 151:588 Ap 10 '29 150w

Pratt p28 autumn '29

St Louis 27:268 S '29

"Canby's writing strikes me as extraordinarily good. There is never any strain in it, never any sacrifice of simplicity to effect, but all the same it shows hard and honest effort. To write thus, painstakingly and yet, so to speak, innocently, is surely not easy. I seem to see signs of epigrams, of eloquence turned off just in time. . . In Canby, despite the debaucheries

CANBY, H: S.—Continued
of New York, a trace of the schoolmaster survives. He tries to give his customers their honest money's worth in light and leading." H: L. Mencken
+ Sat R of Lit 5:849 Ap 6 '29 2400w

"Mr. Canby's book is far from being the comprehensive analysis which he or some one ought to provide. But he says things worth saying which are not always said."
— + Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 23 '29 800w

Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 6 '29 980w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 22 '29 380w

"Each of the dozen or so sections of the book is complete by itself, but the same alert intelligence and discriminating enthusiasm run through all of them. Mr. Canby writes wisely and wittily, if at times rather too easily; the volume as a whole makes refreshing reading."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p818 O 17 '29 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 25:192 Je '29

CANNAN, JOANNA (MRS. H. J. PULLEIN-THOMPSON). Sheila both-ways. 301p $2 Stokes [7s 6d Benn]
29-6791

Sheila marries safe and solid Douglas Toye and is comfortably happy with him for a long time. Then Douglas sends to call on her a man he met during the war. Out of this casual acquaintance grows a stimulating friendship, and finally a romance. For a time Sheila has it both ways—the security of marriage and the excitement of a love affair; but when it comes to an actual choice, she is unable to leave her husband and children.

---

"The problem of Miss Cannan's book is so common that it is no exaggeration to call it universal; she has made her heroine choose what the majority of adults have, at some time or other, chosen. Yet her book has warmth and gaiety, shrewdness, humor and, in one episode, real tragedy. She does not cheat by overemphasizing bitterness or resignation, and Sheila is left facing no dull and joyless future."
+ Bookm 69:xxiii Jl '29 150w

"There is no doubt but that Miss Cannan knows how to write, searchingly enough to scatter wisdom through her pages and cleverly enough to make us smile over her well turned phrases. Miss Cannan made us know her characters so well, through the understanding only a touch of genius can lend, that we felt infinitely sorry at the end when nothing very definite came from any of them." Brett Yates
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Ap 7 '29 270w

Boston Transcript p4 My 18 '29 420w

"Above the average in conception and in treatment, and makes quite interesting reading." Edwin Seaver
+ N Y Evening Post p11m My 11 '29 50w

"The book leaves the reader with an impression of careful characterization. Even the least important figure has individuality, and the more important are people one can remember."
+ N Y Times p9 Ap 21 '29 220w

"Without being in any sense remarkable, the story is pleasantly written, its characters drawn with restraint and plausibility, its treatment of a marriage problem sure in understanding."
+ N Y World p11m My 12 '29 160w

"This novel of modern marriage is sincere and thoughtful but not especially original."
+ — Outlook 151:554 Ap 3 '29 100w

Pratt p37 autumn '29

"Done with competence, grace, and humor, 'Sheila Both-Ways' is one of the most promising first novels which has appeared from the pen of an Englishwoman since Rose Macaulay's 'Told by an Idiot' bore witness to the emergence of a new school of English literature, that postwar group of Englishwomen who are doing the best work of their generation in the field of letters and of which Miss Cannan is now a member in her own right." J: Carter
+ Sat R of Lit 5:853 Ap 6 '29 720w

CANNON, WALTER BRADFORD. Bodily changes in pain, hunger, fear and rage; an account of recent researches into the function of emotional excitement. 2d ed rev and enl 404p $3 (12s 6d) Appleton

612.821 Emotions. Mind and body 29-13978

A revised edition of a former study of the effects of emotional disturbance on bodily functions. Fear, rage, and pain, and the effect they have upon digestion, as opposed to normal secretion of the digestive juices; the nature of hunger; and the physiological basis of thirst, are among the more significant chapters of the book.

---

Booklist 26:81 N '29

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 31 '29 180w

CANOT, THEODORE. Adventures of an African slaver; being a true account of the life of Captain Theodore Canot, trader in gold, ivory & slaves on the coast of Guinea, his own story as told in the year 1854 to Brantz Mayer; now ed. with an introd. by Malcolm Cowley. 376p il $4 Boni

B or 92 Slave trade 28-18373

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Reviewed by E. F. Frazier
Am J Soc 34:738 Ja '29 330w

"It is absorbing, if rather horrifying, as a story and valuable as a historical document."
+ Nature 123:672 My 4 '29 50w

"We dread to think what would have become of his story in the hands of a modern American journalist. Fortunately, Brantz Mayer was an American writing in the middle of last century. His prose is a windy confection, but it does not seriously spoil Canot's adventures, his touches of character, or his Americanised Latin bombast."
+ New Statesman 32:448 Ja 12 '29 380w

"A good book this. On second thought, one can forget Brantz Mayer's flowery moralizings and remember only that he has preserved a very human document, Don Teodore's tale. The illustrations in the book are singularly good." D: W. Bone
+ Sat R of Lit 5:704 F 23 '29 550w

CANTOR, EDDIE. My life is in your hands; as told to David Freedman. 300p il $3 Harper

B or 92 Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 28-31120

"As a youthful resident of New York's East side, Eddie Cantor couldn't keep a job but he could always get a laugh, and the latter faculty has made him a millionaire with a career of surpassing interest, and a host of friends. Mr. Cantor's amusing and brilliant personality is so evident in this biography as to assure its popularity. Published serially in the Saturday Evening Post."—Wis Lib Bul

---

Booklist 25:282 Ap '29

"Mr. Cantor has the sort of genius that makes anything and everything divinely ridiculous. The pace of the book is as giddy as Mr. Cantor's rise from the Ghetto urchin to one of America's foremost clowns."
+ Bookm 69:xii Mr '29 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p61 Ap '29

"It is never dull; often funny; always, in its own way, 'human'; but viewed as genuine autobiography, rather too much is arranged and dramatized; too often the reader is 'kidded' along for a paragraph or a page, in order that the author may snap his wisecrack at the end." Arthur Ruhl
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:851 Ap 6 '29 950w

"Mr. Cantor, throughout his narrative, is always the same quick-witted opportunist, but one may accept the cat simile and say he has described two of his lives—one before and one after he had made his name."

Times [London] Lit Sup p435 My 30 '29 600w

Wis Lib Bul 25:73 F '29

CAPELL, RICHARD. Schubert's songs. 294p il $6 Dutton

784 Schubert, Franz Peter [29-11782]

Preliminary to his analysis of the music and the meaning of Schubert's songs Mr Capell writes on the sources of Schubert's inspiration, the lyrics for which he composed settings, and explains, with reference to other composers, characteristics of Schubert's style.

"Without indorsing all of the author's opinions, one may praise warmly both the contents and the manner of his book in view of its particular purpose. So far as the present reviewer's observation has gone, no other book in English that has issued from the Schubert centenary is comparable in real importance and usefulness with this one. Especially well considered and illuminating are the introductory chapters, entitled 'Schubert's Sentiment,' 'Schubert's Poets' and 'Schubert's Style.'" P: Bowdoin

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 S 8 '29 550w

"Capell's book is an excellent compendium on what seems to be all the knowledge extant concerning the shorter pieces of the greatest of song writers. . . The author, as befits one who takes upon himself so ambitious a work, displays a not too scholarly and rare style. There is meat for many program notes in his book, but at the same time he does not frighten the reader away by an impossible display of erudition, imposingly backed by a towering mass of notes." S. H.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '29 300w

New Statesman 32:293 D 8 '28 180w

"Reveals in generous measure the discernment, scholarliness and cultural breadth which make of English musical writing so splendid a thing. Although the work is concerned chiefly with a detailed explanation of the genesis of the entire body of Songs, and a promulgation of an especial Schubertian technic for musicians, there is much in it of importance to the lay lover of music." Leonard Ehrlich

+ N Y Evening Post p6m Ag 17 '29 780w

St Louis 27:309 N '29

"Mr. Capell provides the most solid contribution to the discussion of Schubert's art. His analysis of the songs is something more than an ad hoc essay of ephemeral worth. Indeed, it must have been the labour of many years and is certainly the outcome of a close knowledge of the whole of the songs, which few men can boast." Dyneley Hussey

+ Sat R 146:654 N 17 '28 200w

CAPUANA, LUIGI. Italian fairy tales; tr. by Dorothy Emmrich. 209p il $2.50 Dutton

29-17316

Fairy tales which, under the title "C'era una volta," have been well known in Italy for over fifty years, translated into English by Dorothy Emmrich. Some of the stories were told to children in the New York libraries and proved great favorites.

Booklist 26:74 N '29

"The book is so well known to Italians that it is almost a classic. No English words can ever quite express the quick-moving emotions of the peasants of northern Italy; but Miss Emmrich has succeeded admirably in keeping the humor and the liveliness of these tales. She has kept, too, the touch of vulgarity that must be there because it is a part of the make-up of these primitive and fun-loving people. And Miss Freeman's decorations strike the same note. They too are lively and humorous, and boys and girls are going to take to the book instantly because of them." M. G. Davis

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ag 11 '29 650w

"It is hard to say when apparent horror has ever been made more amusing and more matter-of-fact. The blood-thirsty characters are redeemed by the most delicious humor and a convincing Italian atmosphere well rendered by the translator."

+ Nation 129:598 N 20 '29 40w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver

N Y Evening Post p14m N 16 '29 100w

Sat R of Lit 6:427 N 16 '29 100w

CAREY, GORDON VERO, and SCOTT, HUGH SUMNER, comps. Outline history of the Great war. 279p il $2.40 Macmillan [6s Cambridge univ. press]

940.4 European war, 1914-1918—Campaigns. European war—Great Britain [29-10315]

"The authors' purpose is to provide an account of the British share in the Great War for those young people who are 'often ignorant of the very names of the chief battles.' They eschew politics so far as possible, and pay but little attention to the troubles and triumphs on the 'Home Front,' important as was the bearing of these on the progress of the War oversea. But they do provide a reasonable account of the fortunes of the British Army in the field, short enough to enable the reader to follow a campaign without being bewildered by the magnitude and complexity of the operations."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Am Hist R 34:681 Ap '29 90w

"The political issues and complications which were a part of the war have been largely avoided and the story of the actual combat is pictured in a graphic, vivid, but straightforward way, which enables the reader to grasp the war as a whole. It bears the mark and atmosphere of men who are no mere theorists, but of men who have done things."

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 16 '29 200w

"The authors justly observe that 'it is sometimes a shock to find that the youth of to-day is often ignorant of the very names of the chief battles of the War.' They have done their work with skill, and their own experience of the war—one was a Major in the Rifle Brigade, the other a Captain in the Artillery—has enabled them to add to their severely compressed narrative an occasional touch of the true stinking, gloomy, yet inspiring atmosphere in which so many lived and so many died in those years of trial. . . No better book could be put into the hands of those who ought to know what the war was like and how it ran its course."

+ Sat R 146:516 O 20 '28 150w

Spec 142:sup283 F 23 '29 110w

"They are to be commended for their illuminating maps of the swaying of the West Front and for their choice of illustrations."

Times [London] Lit Sup p862 N 15 '28 90w

CARFRAE, ELIZABETH. Distant stars. 238p $2 Harper [7s 6d Mills & B.]

29-4641

Martin Bradley, an English doctor, married a charming young American girl, Barbara Jeffries. There were just two things in Martin's life—his wife and his profession, and when he trusted his wife to his partner he lost her, or he thought he had. The next ten years of his life were martyrdom to Martin. Then thru a strange coincidence old difficulties cleared up and Martin had once more his wife and his profession.

"This is a complicated but highly moral tale of the upper circles. Miss Carfrae shows considerable skill in working out a plot that contains so much misunderstanding and so little misbehaving."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 31 '29 150w

CARFRAE, ELIZABETH—Continued

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 17 '29 200w

"Above the average in conception and in treatment." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p11m My 11 '29 50w

"The time-worn plot apart, this is an interesting and well-written story."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p808 N 1 '28 250w

CARHART, ARTHUR HAWTHORNE, and YOUNG, STANLEY PAUL. Last stand of the pack. 295p il $2.50 Sears

599.7 Wolves, Trapping 29-19609

"In collaboration with Mr. Carhart, Stanley P. Young, principal biologist of the U. S. Biological Survey, who had charge of the work, relates the story of the government's campaign, several years ago, to exterminate the last of the predatory native wolves which ravaged the sheep and cattle ranges of Colorado. There are nine chapters, each depicting the life of an outstanding wolf, a ferocious killer, either hunting his prey alone or as pack leader, and the grim, relentless endeavors of the most skilled Federal hunters to destroy these scourges."—Sat R of Lit

---

Boston Transcript p7 O 26 '29 170w

"A grand story for boys about the work of extermination of wolves of the prairie. They must go, these old killers who make their stand one by one against civilization, but the men who overcome them learn to respect them and write about them here with respect." M. L. Becker

+ Outlook 153:590 D 11 '29 70w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 80:18 N '29 150w

"Though the book is written in the rugged style of Western thrillers, the solid authenticity of the contents renders it a contribution of value to American wild animal literature."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:276 O 12 '29 150w

"The material is utterly authentic. The study of the background, of the men involved in the business of pitting their own hunting skill against the wolf packs that until a few years ago haunted the mid-region of the Rockies, is explicit and unprejudiced. There is even that respect which the good hunter allows for a worthy foe. . . The reviewer admits a sympathy almost wholly engaged on behalf of the Pack, feeling that the country could well have spared a last pack, and reimbursed the losers among cattle men, for the sake of a pack to study, a pack to provide the last fillip of wilderness in a country already too much the sufferer from our American rage for extirpation." Mary Austin

+ Sat R of Lit 6:587 D 21 '29 850w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 19 '29 350w

CARLETON, GEORGE. Memoirs; ed. with an introd. by Cyril Hughes Hartmann. (Background of hist.) 301p il $5 Dutton [10s 6d Routledge]

B or 92

These are the memoirs of an English soldier of the late seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries, and of his campaigns against the Dutch by sea, and against the Spanish by land. The present edition of the memoirs follows the edition of 1808, and retains the preface written by Sir Walter Scott.

---

Reviewed by S. L. Cook

Boston Transcript p4 Jl 6 '29 1250w

"The 'Memoirs of Captain Carleton,' accepted as genuine during the eighteenth century, were during the nineteenth century attributed to Defoe, and are now given back to Carleton. Mr. Hartmann, in a learned introduction, gives us a deal of new information about Carleton, and argues, convincingly, that there is no reason to suppose that the book was written by Defoe or Swift, or by anybody except Captain Carleton. We are glad to welcome him once more as an original author." Francis Birrell

+ Nation and Ath 45:212 My 11 '29 600w

"The story moves on fast and direct—Defoe was certainly not discredited by the critics' attribution—and, apart from the interest of the historic events, is kept lively by countless small adventures and intimate observations of the Captain's."

+ New Statesman 33:86 Ap 27 '29 780w

"Whether or not Defoe had a hand in Carleton's memoirs, the book is not unworthy of him. The easy, lucid prose, the rapid narrative, the wealth of precise details, the clear vision, the humor, the satire, the strong common sense, the plain, matter-of-fact, off-hand manner which carries such immediate conviction, by all these marks one has learned to identify one of the greatest of English story-tellers."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:540 D 7 '29 400w

CARLISLE, HELEN GRACE. See how they run. 304p $2.50 J. Cape & H. Smith

29-14149

"The author takes three girls, one from a tenement district of Chicago, one from suburbia and the third from the unindicated household of a writer on sociological subjects. They want life in the amorphous way that people have who are given to capitalizing or italicizing that word. So they come to New York, to experiment, to get entangled with men, to seek adventure. All of them have romantic ideas about things, and all of them are rudely let down."—N Y Times

---

"Miss Carlisle displays a keenness of analysis and facility of expression which would seem to promise that some time she may give us a work of real distinction."

+ Bookm 70:xxii S '29 130w

" 'See How They Run!' is an intimate book. Miss Carlisle does not shy away from the nooks and crannies of the mind. She plays a searchlight on them. She plays it daringly, dangerously, but with honesty. It is not the harsh light of judgment. It is the warm, clear light of understanding." V. P. Ross

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Je 30 '29 850w

Boston Transcript p4 Jl 17 '29 360w

"The wonder is that the author has been able to make a breath-taking book out of such mildewed material. Miss Carlisle's gifts are those of directness, penetration and passion. Her chief failing is her lack of humor, which occasionally leads her into wondrous absurdities. . . Miss Carlisle is convincing. She has made this book harsh and powerful, ugly and alive. One may like it or not—of its kind it is superior." Martha Gellhorn

+ New Repub 59:295 Jl 31 '29 630w

"We miss greatly, in the sort of fiction that 'See How They Run' represents, the lineaments of the human countenance, the characterizing gestures and words."

— N Y Times p6 Je 30 '29 730w

"It is difficult to say why, in spite of its deficiencies, 'See How They Run' stands out from its own kind as it does. Perhaps it is because of the sharp freshness of the book, its utter refusal of old forms (good or bad), its insistence on everything being expressed first hand as it were. Perhaps the uniqueness arises from a quivering intensity the novel has as if life so pressed in upon the author that she feared to take time to set it down to best advantage lest some of it escape her." Gladys Graham

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:1191 Jl 20 '29 780w

"One may doubt whether it will carry significance to many. Even as an example of the 'stream of consciousness technic' it is far from distinguished."

— Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 21 '29 540w

CARMAN, BLISS. Wild garden. 75p $2 Dodd [6s Lane]

811 29-7427

Poems filled with expressions of the author's love for nature.

---

Booklist 25:351 Je '29

Bookm 70:x S '29 70w

"All through this musical book the poet shows us God through the lens of nature. The measures flow evenly and the words are the words of Arcady, sprites, water nymphs. Indian summer, enchanted spirits, whispering grasses, Master of the Open, Spirit of the Wild—nor are they bad words for people who never read any poetry unless it be static." T: H. Ferril

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 My 26 '29 380w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 20 '29 550w

Nation and Ath 45:540 Jl 20 '29 20w

Reviewed by Horace Gregory

N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 30 '29 70w

Reviewed by Granville Hicks

N Y World p10m Ap 28 '29 80w

"There are no new flowers, no gaudy orchids in this garden, nothing exotic or disturbing. It is June, and everything is clean and sweet and a bit old fashioned, and why not? It is a pleasant, quiet corner to linger in for a while, and enjoy verses that are graceful and musical, and full of starlight and dew and a nice feeling for nature." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 151:520 Mr 27 '29 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p518 Je 27 '29 220w

CARMAN, MRS DOROTHY (WALWORTH). The glory and the parlour. 276p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

29-2816

"If the whole of this book were as good as the first half it would be a rather outstanding one. The story of Nancy Hale's childhood and early girlhood on the poverty-stricken farm with her weak foolish mother, her brutal father and her indomitable grandmother, the strongest influence of her life, is vivid and convincing. From the time she has a year in Chicago in the home of a rich uncle, the picture begins to fade, only a little at first through her college life and courtship, but more and more after her marriage until as a mother she is an unsubstantial figure."—Cleveland staff notes

---

Booklist 25:321 My '29

"Mrs. Carman's full-length portraits of these four women are conceived in sound sense and gracefully executed."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 19 '29 130w

"The novelist has handled her differing generations with a humorous tolerance that allows her readers to laugh with the foibles of another day rather than at them. Too, she shows a complete understanding of today's so-called modernism with its frank inability to be reconciled with a past decade."

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 6 '29 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p63 Ap '29

"The best and most appealing part of the book is the account of Nancy's life on the farm, which is reproduced with apparently photographic exactness."

+ — N Y Times p9 F 24 '29 580w

"Its simplicity and rather maidenly complexion place this book in the same category with Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, Anne of Green Gables and other delights of adolescence, but the too evident haste and naivete now prevent Mrs. Carman's worthy succession to the Kate Douglas Wiggins and Annie Fellows Johnstons of literature."

+ — N Y World p11m F 10 '29 100w

"Although its faults are legion, it holds the attention consistently. It is both a period novel and a novel of theme."

+ — Outlook 151:188 Ja 30 '29 520w

Sat R of Lit 5:838 Mr 30 '29 200w

CARNEGIE LIBRARY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION. Our holidays in poetry; comp. by Mildred P. Harrington, Josephine H. Thomas and a committee of the Association. 480p $2.25 Wilson, H.W.

808.8 Holidays—Poetry 29-26163

The volumes of holiday poetry compiled by the Carnegie Library School Association and printed separately have been combined in this volume. The holidays are Easter, Arbor day, Mother's day, Memorial day, Thanksgiving and Christmas.

---

Booklist 25:240 Mr '29

"Exceptionally easy of consultation by children is this compilation of holiday poems and verse selected by a committee of the Carnegie Library School Association. . . Like all holiday anthologies, this one includes some mediocre verse, but unlike some of them it also includes a good proportion of genuine poetry with excellent representation of contemporary poets." A. C. M.

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 F 17 '29 400w

St Louis 27:202 Je '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:98 Mr '29

CARPENTER, CHARLES EVERLY. Dollars and sense; preface by C. K. Woodbridge. 256p $2 Doubleday, Doran

659 Advertising. Commercial products

29-214

" 'Dollars and Sense' is the answer to charges made against advertising methods by Stuart Chase in 'Your Money's Worth.' Mr Carpenter attacks the authors of 'Your Money's Worth' in no uncertain terms. He calls the book one of 'the muckraking type' that made a 'mild sensation by outrageously maligning business and grossly libeling business men.' He specifically attacks the contentions in the other book 'that all advertising is made up largely of false and misleading statements, that it is waste paid for by the consumer, that brands are for the most parts swindles.' "—Springf'd Republican

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 F 10 '29 270w

" 'Neither of them (the authors) ever faced a pay roll,' declares Mr Carpenter. Therefore 'Your Money's Worth' is basically communistic propaganda, whether or not it was so intended. All this is not very convincing argument. The author is on stronger ground when he becomes concrete."

Springf'd Republican p7e F 24 '29 500w

CARPENTER, KATHLEEN E. Life in inland waters, with especial reference to animals; with an introd. by Julian S. Huxley. (Textbooks of animal biology) 267p il $4.50 Macmillan [12s Sidgwick & J.]

590 Fresh-water fauna [Agr29-44]

A scientific treatise interestingly presented and illustrated on the various species of animal life found in fresh water streams and lakes.

---

"The author has succeeded in bringing an element of novelty to her researches. She has made a general survey with not too much stress on technical minutiæ."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ap 28 '29 100w

"This well-illustrated volume can be recommended as an illuminating supplement to any handbook of pond and stream creatures with which the amateur naturalist may prepare to extend his field of knowledge in the coming season."

Times [London] Lit Sup p701 O 4 '28 930w

CARR, HERBERT WILDON. Leibniz. (Leaders of philosophy) 222p $3 Little [12s 6d Benn]

B or 92 Leibniz, Gottfried Wilhelm, freiherr von A29-508

The first volume in a new series entitled "Leaders of philosophy." Professor Carr places Leibniz in the perspective of his times, sums up his philosophical thought and measures his influence on later generations.

---

Booklist 25:357 Je '29

Reviewed by H. M. Kallen
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Jl 14 '29 450w

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 19 '29 500w

Reviewed by C. E. M. Joad
Nation and Ath 44:694 F 16 '29 450w

Reviewed by Denver Lindley
New Repub 58:260 Ap 17 '29 130w

"Leibniz requires a different treatment. Dr. Carr has treated him as a storehouse of striking ideas, and half-developed lines of thought. He does not succeed in making Leibniz any more coherent or convincing, nor does he really answer any of the difficulties monadism presents." J. D. M.

— New Statesman 32:538 F 2 '29 780w

"Professor Wildon Carr was the true man to choose for this exposition of Leibniz. . . He is thoroughly well equipped to draw modern parallels and re-interpret Leibniz in our own terms." Alan Porter

+ Spec 142:93 Ja 19 '29 150w

"Dr. Carr marshals his case with a power and a mastery which can hardly fail to achieve their object and to dispel, at least in some measure, the prevailing blindness to the greatness of Leibniz with which British philosophical thought is chargeable."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p132 F 21 '29 1200w

CARR, LEWIS FRANCIS. America challenged; a preface to a point of view. 322p $3.50 (15s) Macmillan

630.973 Agriculture—United States. Agriculture—Economic aspects 29-9190

This study of the American farm problem maintains that agriculture in its present condition does not, and cannot, pay; that because of natural limitations it cannot compete with other industries in efficiency and ability to pay high wages; and that large-scale commercial farming should not be allowed to supersede the family farm.

---

"This book is a popular presentation of the so-called agricultural problem by one who has been a farmer and an agricultural editor. It therefore contains much illustrative material of farming situations in all parts of the country as well as an interesting combination of historical perspective and current economic facts relating particularly to the agricultural industry. A significant feature of the book is a recognition of the fact that the ills of different types of farming require different remedies. In this connection the novel suggestion of assistance by private capital and enterprise to maintain an American level of prices is made. We are not told, however, how such an enterprise would function. Moreover it is difficult to understand how the enterprise could operate successfully except as it had complete control of the marketing of a given product; and it is doubtful whether the American people would be willing to grant such control of foodstuffs to private monopolies." H. B. Price

+ — Am Econ R 19:677 D '29 400w

"The volume is readable and well printed. Technical terms are completely avoided; authorities well chosen; an outline carefully and entertainingly developed. Charts, graphs and tables enliven the textual material. The volume should interest all intelligent consumers." W. M. T.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 5 '29 580w

"'America Challenged' is a vigorous and readable presentation of the darkest and gloomiest phases of the agricultural situation; a provocative book that appears on the scene about five years after its proper time." Wheeler McMillen

+ — N Y Times p5 Je 16 '29 900w

"As a corrective to the roseate pictures of industrial prosperity in the United States the book is well worth reading."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p653 Ag 22 '29 260w

Wis Lib Bul 25:273 Jl '29

World Tomorrow 12:425 O '29 100w

CARRE, JEAN MARIE. Goethe; tr. from the French by Eleanor Hard. 308p $3 Coward-McCann

B or 92 Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von 29-19472

A biography of Goethe which proposes "to let the reader see the various stages and the more characteristic scenes of his life, leaving aside all questions of philosophic or æsthetic interpretation, and taking as my main guides Goethe's autobiographical writings and correspondence, as well as contemporary memoirs and commentaries." (Preface)

---

"No new material regarding the 'genius of Weimar' has been obtained for this book, yet in its presentation of Goethe's life, literary career and personality the volume is one that has been rarely equalled and still less often excelled." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p5 S 28 '29 550w

"While it is certainly more enjoyable and profitable than scores of ephemeral books of fiction, this novelized biography, weak as it is in just those phases of the man that made him worthy of the many books written about him, is quite patently an 'easy' story, meant for those who have not the patience for the master's own writings. One comes to wonder why biographers do not stick to pure fiction if their goal is not the whole truth." R. G. Berkelman

— + Portland Evening News p13 S 17 '29 500w

CARRICK, ALICE VAN LEER (MRS PRESTON ORDE SKINNER). Shades of our ancestors; American profiles and profilists. 205p il $5 Little

741 Silhouettes. Portraits. Artists, American 28-29265

A delightful study of silhouettes and silhouette making in America, generously illustrated with samples of the work of the great and the lesser craftsmen of this charming art.

---

Booklist 25:199 F '29

"One might think that the account of such a tame and negative art would make pretty dull reading. But not so in the hands of Mrs. Carrick. She is a born collector, a versatile and accomplished antiquarian, who has searched for shadows in every corner of Colonial America. . . Mrs. Carrick's enthusiasm is at times excessive and her book would be greatly improved by a judicious condensation."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ja 20 '29 330w

"A delightfully human chapter on the framing and hanging of profiles closes the volume. Here the author's whimsicality of expression lends color and vigor to what might easily be a dull subject. As it is, it forms one of the most interesting discussions in the book. A bibliography and an index help us to remember its scientific character, which is not lost in the charm of the style." R. R. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 19 '28 480w

Sat R of Lit 5:716 F 23 '29 80w

Wis Lib Bul 25:124 Ap '29

CARRITT, EDGAR FREDERICK. Theory of morals; an introd. to ethical philosophy. 144p $1.50 (4s 6d) Oxford

171 Ethics 29-3318

"This book is in a sense a companion volume to the author's 'Theory of Beauty,' and in its method of treating the problems of ethics follows the same plan as did the earlier volume in treating aesthetic theories. Beginning with that simplest view of duty which makes it a means to pleasure, the author works his way, in order of difficulty, through all the more important moral theories, appraising, accepting, and rejecting as he goes."—Nation

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 26 '29 750w

"Clear in thought, rapid in the movement of its argument, marked with frequent clever turns of repartee, one meets in these pages a critical account of historic moral theories which can scarcely fail to bring refreshment to the philosopher who has plodded longer and dustier roads over the same general territory, and stimulus to the novice who seeks enlightenment upon the meaning of life and the solution of its complex situations." C. L. Barrett

+ J Philos 26:304 My 23 '29 1100w

"The book is not merely another textbook of ethics, but a sustained and exceedingly able argument for a moral position of its own. Though it comprises less than 150 pages, the author has managed, by confining himself throughout to the essentials, to discuss with surprising adequacy every problem of first importance in ethical theory. Such a statement could not be made of any but a masterpiece of compression."

+ Nation 123:624 My 22 '29 140w

"It is possible that less diffidence, producing a longer work out of the same material, would have served the author's avowed purpose better. A natural power of terseness and compression operating in difficult matter, coupled with a conversational savour of common-room arguments which promotes vividness but not clarity, has betrayed Mr. Carritt in certain passages (e.g., in his criticism of Green's 'Prolegomena') into some measure of obscurity; and it is probable that his 'introduction' to Ethics will appeal less to the undergraduates for whom he seems to have designed it than to their pastors and masters."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p680 S 27 '28 1000w

CARROLL, LEWIS, pseud. (CHARLES LUTWIDGE DODGSON). Collected verse; with an introd. by John Francis McDermott. 228p $3.50 Dutton

821 29-25491

The humorous verse of the author of "Alice in Wonderland" collected from various sources by Mr J. F. McDermott, together with the poems from Carroll's one volume of published verse, "Rhyme? and Reason?" The poems appearing in the Alice books are included, and in a special appendix a number of dedicatory and other serious pieces.

"As a writer of verse for children, Lewis Carroll has neither the morbid sentimentality of Eugene Field, nor the superficiality and acuteness of A. A. Milne. Literature for children has taken such eccentric ways, such morbid points of view, that Lewis Carroll is refreshment that reminds us again of Stevenson and Mother Goose. Besides restoring to the children their inheritance, as it were, Mr. McDermott has made a valuable study of one of the minor figures of our literature." R. C.

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 13 '29 400w

Reviewed by E. L. Walton
Nation 129:594 N 20 '29 370w

"Here, for the first time in one volume, is the verse of Lewis Carroll, most of it 'light,' but enough of it serious to relieve the charm of the former. If any program notes are needed, they may be found in Mr. McDermott's introduction. It is a serviceable, scholarly, well-documented account and laudable as a step toward clearing Carroll's name of treacle. His personality was not greatly significant, but his work has a disarming, idle charm which merits the able redefinition Mr. McDermott gives it." H. R.

+ N Y Evening Post p13m D 21 '29 200w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 153:270 O 16 '29 200w
Springf'd Republican p10 N 22 '29 170w

CARRUTHERS, JOHN, pseud. See Greig, J: Y. T.

CARTELLIERI, OTTO. Court of Burgundy; studies in the history of civilization; [tr. by Malcolm Letts]. (Hist. of civilization) 282p $6 Knopf [21s K. Paul]

944.4 Burgundy—Court and courtiers. Burgundy—Civilization. Civilization, Medieval [29-20060]

"Professor Cartellieri's study describes the almost Oriental splendour of John the Fearless, Philip the Good (1419-68), and Charles the Bold, who was killed in 1477. Burgundy under them was a middle kingdom stretching from the Zuyder Zee to the Alps, that rivalled France and the Empire in wealth and power."—Spec

"One of the most informative contributions to the history of the fifteenth century that has yet appeared." G. R. B. R.

+ Boston Transcript p1 N 9 '29 800w

"Professor Cartellieri's richly-illustrated volume is a learned and engaging guide to the culture of late medieval society at its most brilliant."

+ Sat R 148:300 S 14 '29 450w

"Professor Cartellieri's elaborate and attractive study of The Court of Burgundy supplies a real need. [His] book is well worth reading."

+ Spec 143:280 Ag 31 '29 180w
Times [London] Lit Sup p695 S 12 '29 1100w

CARTER, BURNHAM. Mortal men. 313p $2.50 Boni

29-12493

"Allan Levering's story is the story of a struggle against a hereditary way of life, conditioned in his flesh, but denied by his keen and unsatisfied mind. It was a partly unconscious struggle, since there was no one to tell him which was good or bad. Neil Morrow watched, haunted by the shadowy line of dissolute, pleasure-loving, life-denying Leverings which converged in the boy he loved, and tried deprecatingly, half-cynically, to preserve Allan from his heritage. Yet, his preservation depended ultimately upon the substitution of something else for the Levering way of life, and not even Neil could find a remedy other than the swift and painless removal of Allan's illusions. Three friends of his own age contributed to this very negative process."—N Y Evening Post

"There is the mellowness of old ivory and sunsets in Mr. Carter's prose. . . It is a theme that holds possibility of cheapness and overemphasis, but Burnham Carter has softened the raw edges and deepened the incipient shallowness of the average portrayal of a young man." Elizabeth Sanderson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Jl 14 '29 450w

"A good beginner, beyond a doubt, if one is to judge by this first book but one who needs much practice and severe disciplining of self."

+ — Boston Transcript p5 Je 22 '29 110w

"This book is typical of the pleasant inconsequential entertainment that is offered by the general run of contemporary American novels. Wise, witty, and modern-minded, Mr. Carter's fictional excursus on the sons of the wealthy seldom rises above readability."

— + Nation 129:202 Ag 21 '29 90w

"The book is consistently sentimental and at the same time consistently cynical. The prose is smooth as velvet: sometimes it is witty;

CARTER, BURNHAM—Continued
sometimes there is a word misused. There is no such word as 'overly.' It is as though a young Walter Pater had returned to give his version of that particular nostalgia captured in such novels as 'This Side of Paradise' or 'The Wife of the Centaur.' It is poisonous and agreeable. It is not intended to be taken too seriously." C. A. C.
New Repub 59:241 Jl 17 '29 180w

"This is a first novel of unusual flavor—curiously compounded half of naivete, half of maturity. It is mature in the sense that it is well considered, thoroughly polished, complete in itself. In its workmanship, at least, there is no hint of feverish adolescence. Its naivete goes deeper than workmanship. It is suggested, rather than expressed, in a sort of nostalgic hunger for glamorous and far-off things." Margaret Wallace
+ — N Y Evening Post p9m My 18 '29 530w

" 'Mortal Men' says nothing which has not been said before and in both treatment and theme lacks the freshness of authentic creation. Mr. Carter comes to the writing of it indebted more to literature than to life."
+ — N Y Times p9 My 12 '29 600w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 152:552 Jl 31 '29 120w

CARTER, JOHN FRANKLIN. Conquest; America's painless imperialism. 348p $2.50 Harcourt
327 United States—Foreign relations. United States—Economic policy. World politics
28-24816

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Am Econ R 19:105 Mr '29 50w

"Although the general reader may find in the book points of interest, the student of history will discover little to merit his attention. The material usually classed as factual is worth little because where it is not available in more convenient form elsewhere the absence of citations to sources of information renders it useless. The selection of facts indicates a lack of insight and proportion, while their interpretation shows a disposition to prove a preconceived thesis, namely that the United States is almost always right and other nations usually wrong." L. F. Hill
— Am Hist R 34:664 Ap '29 320w

"This book is refreshing in its clear exposition of international relations. Pithy phrases and pregnant construction constantly occur. Diplomats should read it in spite of its pungency. The style is trenchant and great international problems are analyzed so tersely and yet so almost flippantly that he who runs may read their meaning. . . This book is a remarkably keen criticism of American political life and of our foreign policies." H. T. Collings
+ Ann Am Acad 141:272 Ja '29 600w

"This book contains a good deal of useful information concerning America's growth to predominance in world affairs, and says several true things which cannot be too often repeated. Whether or not, as Mr. Carter thinks, 'the self-governing nations of the world have nothing to fear from the political expressions of American power,' the statement is one to be proved by facts, not by analogies. And facts, as distinguished from statistics and items of record, are missing from crucial portions of the book." Hiram Motherwell
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Mr 3 '29 650w

"It is not only a philosophical study, but a statistical and historical treatment. It is really an economic interpretation of the history of our foreign relations. As such, even though there are contradictions and inconsistencies, it should be given careful consideration in a course in American diplomacy." A. C. Wilgus
+ Hist Outlook 20:142 Mr '29 980w

"Mr. Carter must have written this tumultuous book in instalments, and changed his mind between way-stations. For he begins with a cheap and ignorant attack upon Europe and glorification of everything done by our State Department. He pauses in the middle of the book to pen two excellent chapters picturing the extent of the American economic empire. Then he concludes with several sweet and reasonable chapters which, considerably condensed, might almost be made into a Nation editorial. . . The reason for devoting so much space to pointing out the absurdities of this book is that the author has recently been appointed economic adviser to the State Department in Washington." L: S. Gannett
— + Nation 128:86 Ja 16 '29 510w

"Though stuffed with valuable information, the book fails to make a decided impression on the reader's mind because it lacks a sharply defined thesis. Even as a description it lacks convincingness. It is not always complete and it is far from being well balanced." C. H. Grattan
— + N Y World p11e Ja 6 '29 600w

St Louis 27:157 My '29

"The impression prevails that he has searched long and faithfully for his material and knows this subject. His description of the manner in which trade, investment, international advertising and mass production have gained a leading position in the world for America, and how impossible it is for European countries to compete, with his analysis of the historic background of the movement for painless imperialism, is clear and understandable."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 14 '29 400w

CARTER, WINIFRED. Rose—the dancer. 275p $2 Crowell [7s 6d Rivers]
29-22922

Chronicling the phenomenal success of a young dancer who is a hit from her first night. Lady Marcia is Rose's friend, and Lady Marcia's friends are Rose's suitors but Rose passes them all by for Humphrey, the playwright whom she met in a London fog.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 5 '29 150w

"In spite of the almost too-sweet-to-be-true nature of little Rose, one takes her to heart, actually loves her as much as does her family and those with whom she comes into contact, and follows her stage career with suspense." M. F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p3 My 8 '29 300w

"Rose is one of those rare souls too good to be true, surfeiting the reader with an excess of sweetness and light. The story of her phenomenal career is a success story of the Alger type gone feminine. Modesty and maidenly gentleness replace the manly virtues and sentiment replaces the cruder plot conflicts, but the effect is similar."
— N Y Times p7 Je 30 '29 170w

"This novel should be immensely popular with very young women."
+ Spec 141:746 N 17 '28 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p940 N 29 '28 200w

CARTLEDGE, GROVER HOWARD. Introductory theoretical chemistry. 553p il $3.60 Ginn
541 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical
29-3930

"Text-book of university grade. Part I deals with the newer theories of matter, but has much of historical interest. Parts II and III treat of solutions and reactions respectively; and Part IV with special ionic equilibria. Numerous problems. Author is Associate Professor of Chemistry in Johns Hopkins University."—N Y New Tech Bks

---

"An outline at the beginning of each chapter and many excellent exercises increase the usability of the book. Altogether the author has given us an interesting book, quite free from errors. The reviewer feels that this work will find favor as a text in a chemistry curriculum in which the ideas of Physical Chemistry are reserved to special courses. The theoretical chemistry which should be given college freshmen is reviewed, so that the book should be a valuable reference work for advanced students." Merle Randall

+ Am Chem Soc J 51:2843 S '29 300w
N Y New Tech Bks 14:36 Jl '29

CARVALHO, CLAIRE, and SPARKES, BOYDEN. Crime in ink. 296p il $2.50 Scribner

343 Crime and criminals. Carvalho, David Nunes. Writing—Identification. Forgery
29-24607

The daughter of David N. Carvalho, famous detective and handwriting expert, describes in this book her father's methods, and how he solved a good many famous crime cases. She tells of the part his discovery of forged handwriting played in the Dreyfus case, the Molineux case, and several other interesting, if less important, cases of crime that could only be cleared through an examination of handwriting clues.

"A most readable account of some score of trials in which Carvalho's evidence decided the fate of forged signatures, questionable wills and dubious documents of many kinds."

+ Books ( N Y Herald Tribune) p10 D 15 '29 120w
N Y Times p31 N 10 '29 230w

"Won't raise your blood pressure to danger point, but if you're an amateur criminologist it offers interesting facts and methods you should know about." W. R. Brooks

Outlook 153:468 N 20 '29 50w

CARY, LUCIAN. The Duke steps out. 288p $2 Doubleday, Doran
29-4994

A rather superior prize-fighter goes to college incognito because he has fallen in love with a striking young co-ed. Difficulties of every kind beset him; the girl's father is particularly hard to convince. When the big fight of his career comes off he finds himself suddenly, startlingly successful in his love affair too.

"Mr. Cary has a decided gift for producing the spinal thrills which never come amiss in a rollicking tale."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 17 '29 130w

"Lucian Cary has skilfully combined a great deal of what we have seen in some form or other in the cinema or on the musical comedy stage."

Boston Transcript p5 F 23 '29 230w

"To achieve light literature is no ordinary feat, if only that literature be truly light and actually entertaining. Lucian Cary in 'The Duke Steps Out' has succeeded in writing a book that will hold the reader entranced for an evening or the duration of an ordinary train journey."

+ N Y Times p8 F 3 '29
+ Sat R of Lit 5:838 Mr 30 '29 250w
Wis Lib Bul 25:101 Mr '29

CARY, M., and WARMINGTON, ERIC HERBERT. Ancient explorers. 270p $4 Dodd [12s 6d Methuen]

910.9 Discoveries (in geography)

Discusses the methods of the ancient explorers, demonstrating the opening up of the Mediterranean seaboard, the Atlantic and Indian oceans, and of Europe, Asia and Africa. The book traces the growth of geographic knowledge in the light of these explorations, and explains their importance on the later 15th and 16th century discoveries. There is a chapter on imaginary discoveries.

Nation and Ath 46:sup232 N 9 '29 320w

"The authors of this work are Readers in Ancient History in London University, and apparently intended their book rather for students than the general reader. As such, it is excellent."

+ New Statesman 34:204 N 16 '29 200w

"Dr. Cary and Mr. Warmington have compressed into a scholarly and most readable volume an account of what the ancients knew about the several regions and of the principal explorers through whom they obtained this knowledge."

+ Spec 143:690 N 9 '29 600w

CASEY, ROBERT JOSEPH. Four faces of Siva; the detective story of a vanished race. 373p il $5 Bobbs [12s 6d Harrap]

915.9 Angkor, Cambodia. Khmers. Cambodia—Description and travel. Cochin China —Description and travel
29-8123

In a narrative which combines legend with fact, the traveler's sketch with the archeologist's précis, and employs the story teller's art to link them all, Mr Casey describes the discovery of the hidden cities of the Khmers, and reconstructs as far as possible the story of the race that built them and vanished.

Booklist 25:355 Je '29

"Mr. Casey presents vividly the awe-inspiring beauty of these monuments to an extinct civilization; he writes with wit and restraint about the theories advanced to explain the annihilation of a highly intellectual race."

+ Bookm 69:vi Je '29 200w

"Mr. Casey has brought the substance of much research into one volume, generously illustrated."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Ap 21 '29 150w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 19 '29 420w

"Mr. Casey tells the story ecstatically and colorfully, so breathlessly indeed that the reader is sometimes at a loss to tell what is history and what is Mr. Casey's literature."

+ Nation 129:332 S 25 '29 180w

"Burdened with the classic faults of travel essays, facetiousness and self-conscious lyricism, and a devious prolixity all its own, it may serve to interest new tourists in Cambodian ruins, but as 'the detective story of a vanished race' it does not get very far." Lyman Bryson

— New Repub 59:106 Je 12 '29 100w

"Mr. Casey's literary manner resembles nothing so much as one's imaginative conception of a high-speed, record-breaking Channel swimmer in action. He plunges into his subject with a brief lyrical proem and a freely reconstructed account of the way in which Mouhot, the French naturalist, came first upon the ruins of the city of Angkor. Then swiftly he is away, speeding ahead with a purposive enthusiasm which scatters facts and phrases, indiscriminately mingled, like breaking foam in his wake. Whatever he touches enters, as by magic, the category of the superlative."

+ New Statesman 34:202 N 16 '29 260w

"A very thrilling and fascinating narrative. The author is dowered with an imagination and a gift of words that enable him to portray vividly and dramatically glimpses of the story of the ancient Khmers and the cities they built."

+ N Y Times p21 My 26 '29 400w

"His book is a fascinating one, whether as a story of travel or as a collection of legends, archaeologic theory, and interesting comments upon the art of the Khmers." Kenneth Saunders

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1066 Je 1 '29 1200w

"Mr. Casey's book presents a great deal of reliable information about the ruins of Angkor and the neighbourhood. He describes the buildings in considerable detail, sketches in history and relates local legends and traditions, so that his book cannot be ignored by those interested in the subject."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p859 O 31 '29 330w

CASEY, ROBERT JOSEPH. Secret of thirty-seven Hardy street. 322p $2 Bobbs
29-23795

"Old Cyrus Bradley, a simple, kindly soul with a frightful past, turns up murdered at the breakfast table; hard by is a jigsaw piece of

CASEY, R. J.—Continued
toast and a spot of face powder that may have been left by the corpse's daughter Esther or by a lady taking subscriptions to 'The Christian Herald.' . . With Chief Crewe and Jim Sands, an ex-reporter, on the job, the clews lead to an explanation that stands to reason."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"Mr. Casey's detective employs luck, shoe leather and a good memory to excellent purpose—not forgetting Oscar Gloph, the comic coroner." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 N 3 '29 170w

"Robert J. Casey's seems to us, despite a clumsy title and a clumsier murder device, the best of the current run of mystery novels." F: F. Van de Water
+ N Y Evening Post p11m N 9 '29 50w

CASPARY, VERA. Ladies and gents. 288p $2 Century
29-17042

Rosina Monticelli, the daughter of a pair of famous acrobats, would not follow in the footsteps of her illustrious parents. She ran away from her circus home because she did not want to be a tattooed woman in a side show. From the lower reaches of vaudeville fame she rose to be the sweetheart of American vaudeville, but thru it all she never ceased to be a sort of shy, confused little girl. Then she found her happiness with the man she loved, which was as it should have been for the confused little Rosina.

"People rush on and off this scene turbulently and without purpose. The emotions of these ladies and gents are fired at one in rapid succession, with smart little digs at their expense. The would-be humorous, patronizing attitude of Miss Caspary toward her story makes it a little brittle."
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 S 1 '29 250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p126 S '29

"Gaudy and noisy yarn."
— N Y World p11m O 13 '29 320w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 3 '29 160w

CASPARY, VERA. White girl. 304p $2 Sears
29-1200

Solaria Cox is anxious to improve herself. She leaves her home in the South for Chicago, where she has no trouble in passing as white. But thru all the joy of the new life and the excitement of new friendships runs an undercurrent of fear of discovery of her Negro blood. Her love affair ends, inevitably, in tragedy.

Bookm 69:xxv Ag '29 100w

"The author's understanding of the life with which she deals is unclouded, and the story which she tells is vividly presented. Quite as much as an approach to the racial problem, 'The White Girl' concerns itself with the loneliness of lives in a great city."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 7 '29 100w

"There is an obvious lack of propaganda about it, as there is too a lack of humor. It is amusing in spots, but without that touch which is needed to lighten the heavy earnestness of the story." M. M.
— + Boston Transcript p3 F 9 '29 400w

"On several counts Miss Caspary is to be commended. The objectivity of her theme is unusual for a first novel. So also is the objectivity of her handling of it. In plot construction as well as in character the author's machinery creaks noticeably; the obvious irony of the denouement is not easy to excuse." Ruth Seinfel
+ — N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 19 '29 680w

"Tense, but never hysterical, the novel is especially notable for its balance, its sanity, the lack of sensationalism with which it handles a difficult theme."
+ N Y Times p8 Ja 20 '29 720w

"The book is written in the hard materialistic style of Fannie Hurst and Edna Ferber. It is vivid, harsh, realistic and completely photographic in its effect. The life of lower class working girls is described with a complete absence of illusion."
N Y World p11m Mr 17 '29 160w
Sat R of Lit 5:863 Ap 6 '29 180w

CASSEL, GUSTAV. Post-war monetary stabilization. (Columbia univ. lectures. Julius Beer foundation) 109p $2.50 Columbia univ. press [12s 6d Milford]
332.4 Money 29-1580

In these three essays Professor Cassel of the University of Stockholm studies the inflation and stabilization of the world's currencies since the war, the stabilization of the value of gold and the new gold standard.

"This little book can be recommended as a brief account of Professor Cassel's views on money and foreign exchange. It can be read in less time than his Money and Foreign Exchange after 1914, and contains much of the same material with less explanation and proof. Although the book has only one hundred pages of text, it has a complete index, nine pages in length, and so is conveniently arranged for reference." Caroline Whitney
+ Am Econ R 19:495 S '29 850w
Times [London] Lit Sup p282 Ap 11 '29 1050w

CASSEL, GUSTAV, and others. Foreign investments; lectures on the Harris foundation, 1928. 231p $3 Univ. of Chicago press [15s Cambridge univ. press]
332 Investments. Finance—United States. Debts, Public. European war, 1914-1918—Finance 29-4310

"In these lectures, given on the Harris Foundation at the University of Chicago in 1928, four publicists reflect upon the meaning of international investments."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"Mr. Norton's spirited defence of loans to backward countries goes far to justify our policy in the Caribbean, and serves as an appropriate finale to a small volume whose light on the troubled questions of foreign investment is far greater than its size." H. T. Collings
+ Ann Am Acad 144:151 Jl '29 500w
Booklist 25:269 Ap '29
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 F 10 '29 130w

Reviewed by F. D. Graham
J Pol Econ 37:495 Ag '29 1200w

"Rarely does a course of lectures yield as valuable a series of papers as these 1928 lectures on the Harris Foundation at the University of Chicago. Professor Cassel's study of international capital movements, especially the war debts, Professor Gregory's analysis of the British foreign investment situation, and Dr. Kuczynski's brief paper on American loans to Germany are all fresh and suggestive discussions, while Mr. Norton's lecture on loans to backward countries is the best popular defense that has been made of present American policy."
+ Nation 128:324 Mr 13 '29 100w

CASSERLEY, ANNE THOMASINE. Whins on Knockattan. 179p $1.50 Harper
Fairy tales 28-30109

Delightfully matter-of-fact tales of the Fairy Girl and the wilful Little Black Lamb and their Irish friends, with unpretentious and amusing illustrations by the author.

Booklist 25:215 F '29

"The reader gets into a very thoroughly fairy atmosphere with its Irish background, its abundance of things out of the ordinary." M. G. Bonner
+ N Y Times p8 D 16 '28 70w

"There is a wealth of imagery and color, and sometimes a riot of words in these stories." B. E. Mahoney

+ Sat R of Lit 5:488 D 8 '28 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p475 Je 13 '29 100w

CASSON, STANLEY. Some modern sculptors. 119p il $2.75 (7s 6d) Oxford

730 Sculpture [29-26161]

"The main trend of modern sculpture is discussed in the text, emphasizing as representative of this age the work of Barye, Maillol, Bourdelle, Bernard, Despiau, Meštrović, Rosandić, Gill, Gaudier-Brzeska, and Epstein. The book is attractively illustrated from photographs."—Booklist

Booklist 25:238 Mr '29

Reviewed by T: Craven

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Je 16 '29 950w

"The excellence and lavishness of the reproductions only make one regret that the sculptors chosen by Mr. Casson are not more representative of the progress which their art has made. He had, of course, the right of selecting his own subjects, and, so far as it goes, his book is a handy introduction to their work."

— + New Statesman 33:138 My 4 '29 210w

Reviewed by E: A. Jewell

N Y Times p5 My 19 '29 1050w

"Mr. Stanley Casson treats a dozen artists with an admirable discrimination. The scheme of text and illustration in this volume is orderly and intelligent, and there is an excellent opening chapter on 'Methods and Aims.'"

+ Spec 142:318 Mr 2 '29 180w

"The author of this comely book rightly says that it would be impossible to survey the whole of modern sculpture in a small volume. He has done less; he has not even surveyed the corners of the field. He has glanced at a few aspects and apologized for the rest. . . There are many things in the book that are good and some which might have been omitted with advantage. It is, however, of some gallantry to have attempted to ride a steed with so little equipment for the adventure."

Springf'd Republican p7e My 12 '29 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p202 Mr 14 '29 1150w

CAVE, EDNA SELENA. Craft work; a series of lessons in the various crafts for the use of student and teacher. 272p il $3 Century

680 Handicraft 29-10725

Simple lessons in craft work of various kinds designed to meet the needs of students, teachers, and home-makers. Among the crafts described are the decorating of furniture, lampshade making, batik and tie-dye, stenciling, toy-making, and reed and raffia baskets. With drawings and photographs.

Booklist 26:15 O '29

"Directors of impatient groups of youngsters who must carry on their classes on a tiny budget will not find much help in 'Craft Work,' since practically all the industries treated call for extensive if not expensive equipment and demand a degree of skill that children can scarcely bring to an hour's club work."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Je 9 '29 180w

"An authoritative manual of handicraft that is both concise and stimulating is here offered to the amateur and professional worker and teacher. Practical lessons with explicit instructions as to methods and equipment are given in a very workable way as a guide to a dozen of the popular handicrafts of the day. In each of the branches discussed the information and the schedules are clear and practicable. Miss Cave has won a place of esteem in the field, and her book is to be recommended to teachers of others in the varied and colorful fields of popular handicraft."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 29 '29 200w

"A valuable guide to many forms of craft work now popular will be found in 'Craft Work', and it should be helpful for the worker at home as well as for teachers."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 S 17 '29 180w

Survey 63:111 O '29 40w

Wis Lib Bul 25:319 O '29

CAZAMIAN, LOUIS FRANCOIS. Criticism in the making. 196p $2 Macmillan

801 Literary criticism 29-19319

That the course of critical opinion is a movement forward is the belief of the author, who is professor of English literature at the University of Paris. The book opens with a discussion of the relations of history to criticism, and continues with such topics as the part psychoanalysis plays in modern criticism, the possibilities of the near future in English letters, and the trend toward a European culture.

"M. Cazamian has the critical virtue of starting more questions than he settles. His mind is academic in the good sense of the word, refined and stabilized by tradition but flexible and responsive to any fresh and genuine artistic manifestation."

+ Bookm 70:324 N '29 470w

"Mr. Cazamian writes from the point of view of the scholar, and puts forward his own conclusions with a modesty that borders on hesitation. He is so averse from being a dogmatic critic that he does not always escape the charge of being a vague one."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 O 13 '29 120w

Boston Transcript p6 N 13 '29 320w

Reviewed by G. B. Munson

N Y Evening Post p10m O 19 '29 400w

Reviewed by Johan Smertenko

Outlook 154:31 Ja 1 '30 140w

"A volume which deserves the attention of all teachers, critics and serious readers. Here French skill in the statement of general principles is allied to sane preception and sound knowledge—which French logic sometimes outruns in the pursuit of formal completeness."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 S 21 '29 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p1024 D 5 '29 1000w

CECIL OF CHELWOOD, EDGAR ALGERNON ROBERT GASCOYNE-CECIL, 1st viscount. Way of peace; essays and addresses. 256p $3 Day [12s 6d P. Allan & Co.]

341 Peace. League of nations. International cooperation [29-2232]

These are essays and addresses of the last ten years, on the national politics of Great Britain, and interational problems, particularly those of war and peace.

"These addresses and essays, prepared for different places, audiences, and occasions, lack a certain unity and symmetry which is found in a book with each chapter consciously planned as an integral part of a literary undertaking. Yet, there is a surprising degree of unity in the different chapters, even though reproduced substantially as delivered or published. Certainly there is a singleness of purpose running through them all, and a sincere desire, at times amounting to a crusade, to relate the peace movement to the whole of civilization and to all of life." C: E. Martin

+ Ann Am Acad 146:272 N '29 460w

Booklist 26:10 O '29

"In this volume Viscount Cecil utilizes his long experience as parliamentarian and statesman for a vigorous argument in the interest of international peace, nor does his book lose anything of its value from the fact that its chapters are reprints of articles written and addresses delivered by him during the past ten years." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p1 My 18 '29 620w

CECIL OF CHELWOOD—Continued

"By comparison with Señor Madariaga's splendid analysis and record of events, Lord Robert Cecil's book is unimportant though high-minded." Norman Thomas

+ — Nation 129:44 Jl 10 '29 130w

Reviewed by Clarence Britten
N Y Evening Post p10m My 4 '29 250w

Reviewed by W: MacDonald
N Y Times p10 S 1 '29 800w

"There are many books cataloguing the details of organization and the minutiae of accomplishment of the Geneva organization, but this book is imbued with the spirit of the League and that spirit has probably found no better expression." H: K. Norton

+ Sat R of Lit 5:113 Je 15 '29 450w

Reviewed by H. C. Englebrecht
World Tomorrow 12:282 Je '29 200w

Reviewed by E: W. Evans
Yale R n s 19:170 autumn '29 200w

CEDERHOLM, BORIS. In the clutches of the Tcheka; tr. by F. H. Lyon. 349p $4 Houghton [15s Allen & U.]

914.7 Russia—Social conditions. Prisons—Russia

"M. Cederholm is a Finn. He went to Russia in 1923 to try and make trade connections for a South American firm, and, by his own account, talked too much. His indiscretions brought him before the Tcheka. His account of his experiences (he was sent to a concentration camp in the Arctic regions) is reminiscent of Mr. E. E. Cummings's war book, 'The Enormous Room,' and contains some disgusting details [which] are involved in this unspeakable story enacted mainly in overcrowded prisons."—Nation and Ath

---

"The narrative of his long battle with the Russian police, which has been competently translated from the Russian by F. H. Lyon, is as fascinating a history of intrigue and cruelty as one might find in fiction."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 N 17 '29 220w

Boston Transcript p2 O 9 '29 700w

Nation and Ath 45:806 S 21 '29 350w

Reviewed by M. P. Levy
New Repub 61:121 D 18 '29 120w

"The detailed story is realistically engrossing, for Mr. Cederholm was a sharp observer of all that went on about him and had a gift for winning the confidence of his fellow prisoners." R. C. B. B.

+ N Y Evening Post p7s Ja 4 '30 190w

Reviewed by A. O. McCormick
N Y Times p3 D 15 '29 550w

Spec 143:642 N 2 '29 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p693 S 12 '29 1200w

CENDRARS, BLAISE. Little black stories for [2] little white children; tr. from the French by Margery Bianco. 138p il $2 Payson & Clarke

29-29841

African animal stories told for children. Translated from the French and illustrated with woodcuts made by a French artist.

---

"The cult of the horrible and the coarse in life and in art, does not yet prevail among our little ones. These stories will be of interest rather to the student of ethnology. Some of the illustrations, all of which are from original wood-blocks by the French artist Pierre Pinsard, are in the best, or shall we say worst, modern manner, striking, but scarcely appealing to one's aesthetic sense."

— Cath World 130:378 D '29 220w

"As in the case of the Artzybasheff illustrations, those in this book are indispensable and add greatly to a text whose clarity, humor, and originality are in themselves quite exceptional. The tales might be called the Just So Stories of Africa, but they are briefer and more striking."

+ Nation 129:599 N 20 '29 50w

"Stands by itself as one of the most unusual and satisfactory books of the year for little children. . . The woodcuts, by Pierre Pinsard, are African grotesques full of action and fun; the stories are jungle wisdom, direct in appeal, calling out to the reader in large black type."

+ Outlook 153:590 D 11 '29 150w

"This book of tales is of a sort to please the young mind, if there is proper discrimination and a thought that the interest appeals to that age lying between 'Mother Goose' and Grimm. Going beyond that age you misplace the book. Also the wise reader-aloud should be apt and ready with synonyms, because to thunder out such words as 'vanquished,' 'delirium,' 'consumed,' husbandman,' 'supreme,' 'gesticulated,' is to run the danger of whirling young listeners out of the land of fairy and fancy into a void of dull fact and mystification. For, verily I say unto you, whoso carries a dictionary shall not walk in glowing and shining realms. In that lies a gentle hint for the translator of the book." C: J. Finger

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:394 N 16 '29 500w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 22 '29 100w

CENTER, STELLA STEWART, and HERZBERG, MAX JOHN. Secretarial procedure. 401p $3.25 Ronald

651.3 Secretaries, Private. Office management

29-13554

This manual for students preparing for positions as secretaries makes an analysis of secretarial procedures in business and professional offices. The survey shows the qualifications and training required in different situations.

---

Booklist 26:57 N '29

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 3 '29 170w

CERIO, EDWIN. That Capri air; with a foreword by Francis Brett Young. 201p $3.50 Harper [8s 6d Heinemann]

[29-11566]

These sketches of celebrities, scenes and customs indigenous to Capri are in flavor and substance inevitably to be compared with the work of Norman Douglas. Francis Brett Young, who translated the book, vouches for the authenticity of the portraits of Capri characters, and himself draws an interesting portrait of the author.

---

"To say that the sketches are history would be wrong, for they are too fantastic. To say that they are fiction would be a misstatement, for there is too much fact in them. It appears, however, to be fact of the spirit. . . It is mad, fantastic, provocative of constant chuckles and suggestive of that strange land that Alice found when she went down the rabbit-hole." Herbert Gorman

+ Bookm 70:109 S '29 630w

"Mr. Cerio writes of Capri 'characters' and of certain Capri myths with urbanity and a wealth of learning which, Mr. Young assures us, is pleasantly unreliable. Yet there is a too even tension in most of the tales and a selfconscious straining after that final curious twist which spoil the wit and make the book, on the whole, rather heavy going."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Je 23 '29 340w

"They are interesting, mildly humorous, full of delightful atmosphere and color of that most fascinating island, each one revealing a distinctly peculiar personality with a decided artistry of portrayal and scientific clarity of thought that are peculiarly characteristic of Cerio's versatility."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 22 '29 250w

"This volume contains many pleasing things, but it should not be taken as a whole. The tone of the author's irony is a little too thin and a little too high-pitched for a long continuance. His jokes, too, vary in quality." E. S.

+ New Statesman 33:184 My 18 '29 180w

"If Edwin Cerio is the distilled and concentrated projection of Norman Douglas, 'That Capri Air' is equally the distilled and concentrated projection of 'South Wind.' None of the other pedestrian reporters of Capri has matched, as Cerio has, the imaginatively ironic world created by Douglas's intricate wit and enshrined in his impeccable prose. Edwin Cerio deserves, almost, to be regarded as Norman Douglas's merriest invention." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Evening Post p8m My 25 '29 760w

"Edwin Cerio has not written a masterpiece or anything resembling it. He is much gifted in ways that Norman Douglas is gifted, with wit and sophistication and mad exaggeration and nimble mind. But his gifts are not only of limited appeal; they are of limited effectiveness, and whatever their occasional brilliance they are of the sort which ultimately bores the reader."

— + N Y Times p9 My 26 '29 550w

"Cerio is said to be the king-pin of Capri, that 'sunny place for shady people.' He knows something funny and not always too flattering about every one who lives there, and much about the highly colored past of the lovely island. The book is a diverting introduction to Capri society."

+ Outlook 152:147 My 22 '29 130w

"Some readers will probably be intensely irritated by 'That Capri Air.' Others will as surely be delighted. Others, again, will think they ought to be delighted and will be actually mystified. And all the time one can imagine Signor Cerio smiling with a bland expression: explanations, one feels, are not in his line." R: Curle

+ Sat R of Lit 6:54 Ag 17 '29 300w

"Signor Edwin Cerio has not done so well as either Mr. Norman Douglas or Mr. Compton Mackenzie. Yet the book has been much talked about both in Italy and England and may amuse those who know the island intimately."

Spec 142:873 Je 1 '29 100w

CESCINSKY, HERBERT, and HUNTER, GEORGE LELAND. English and American furniture. 312p il $7.50 Dean-Hicks co., 217 Ellsworth av., Grand Rapids, Mich. [35s Batsford]

749 Furniture 29-3668

A pictorial handbook of furniture made in Great Britain and in the American colonies, some in the sixteenth century but principally in the seventeenth, eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. The pictures of the various articles of furniture are arranged in chronological order with the names of the maker in each case.

Booklist 26:18 O '29

"The work is extremely important to all who are in any way interested in the subject."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 3 '29 270w

CHADWICK, MARY. Difficulties in child development. 411p $4 Day [15s Allen & U.]

136.7 Children—Management. Child study [L29-48]

A discussion from the psychological standpoint of the problems arising in the training of children. Miss Chadwick explains for parents and teachers the findings of the psycho-analysts concerning these problems and the part in them of both parent and child, and provides at the end of each chapter a bibliography for those interested in further study.

Bookm 69:xxiii Mr '29 80w

"Miss Chadwick's conclusions have been arrived at by careful and patient and sincere research and they form a genuine contribution to psychology."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Mr 17 '29 230w

"Its characteristics are thoroughness of observation, analysis of implications, clarity of recommendations." W. M. T.

+ Boston Transcript p10 Ap 6 '29 380w

Reviewed by Elisabeth Irwin

Nation 129:175 Ag 14 '29 350w

"The reasons for feeling the necessity for criticism are two. First, sweeping generalizations are made as if true of the entire population. Many of these generalizations are based only on the study of individuals who are sufficiently maladjusted to present themselves for psychoanalysis. Second, statements are made which may be true but which can never be checked. . . There is undoubtedly wheat among the chaff in this book. To separate the two satisfactorily should be possible after much reading and experience, but because of these two prerequisites it could hardly be recommended as a handbook to the young and inexperienced mother, to whom it might cause much needless anxiety." Ruth Washburn

— + Sat R of Lit 6:75 Ag 24 '29 600w

"A book that is indicative of the author's wide knowledge of her subject and her understanding of the minds of little folk. It would have been an advantage had the English been crisper and the sentences shorter." Ethel Dukes

+ Spec 142:sup281 F 23 '29 700w

Reviewed by A. S. Lorand, M.D.

Survey 62:144 Ap 15 '29 300w

"Comprehensive, clearly written, and well arranged. The book is based throughout on the work of the psycho-analysts; and here, where it is to some extent stripped of its mythological extravagances, and applied to normal, practical problems, we can better judge how valuable much of that work really has been—though the authoress does, it is true, occasionally indulge in rather fantastic explanations of simple phenomena."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p259 Mr 28 '29 520w

CHALLENGER, C. G. Excellence of revealed religion; an enquiry into the meaning of revelation; the Hulsean prize essay, 1927. 100p $2 Macmillan [5s Cambridge univ. press]

231.74 Revelation

The essay is a study of the origin and history of the conception of Christianity as revealed religion, a conception which the author calls the classical view, contrasting it with the modern view of revelation.

"A valuable little book." W. H. Doggett

+ Churchman p17 Ap 27 '29 350w

"Mr. Challenger's work is always interesting, and in its historical part is frequently remarkable for illuminating conciseness. His account of the tenets of the Montanist 'heretics' is a noteworthy case in point."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p47 Ja 17 '29 300w

CHALMERS, BARRY. Boy scout and his law. 174p $1.25 Macmillan

369.43 Boy scouts 28-29141

A scoutmaster talks over with his boys each phrase of the Scout law and, using brief stories in explanation, shows what it means and how it may be kept. With illustrations.

Booklist 25:215 F '29

"The chief Scout executive recommends the book to Scouts, scout leaders and others interested in the Scout movement."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 23 '29 80w

Cleveland Open Shelf p91 Je '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:104 Mr '29

CHALMERS, STEPHEN. House of the two green eyes. 389p $2 Doubleday, Doran

28-29076

The scene of this murder mystery is the New York City Tenderloin in the early nineteen hundreds. Belle Villiers, elderly wife of a millionaire and formerly a show girl, is found strangled on a park bench. A newspaper reporter, untangling the crime, finds curious ramifications in the family history of the Vil-

CHALMERS, STEPHEN—Continued
liers which affect certain of the reporter's friends and the girl he loves.

Bookm 69:xxvi Mr '29 50w

"The author paints a lively and reasonably accurate picture of the old Tenderloin, but there are times when he appears to be a bit uncertain about the exact period of his story."
+ — N Y Times p34 N 25 '28 180w

Reviewed by W: Bolitho
Sat R of Lit 5:453 D 8 '28 250w

CHAMBERLIN, THOMAS CHROWDER. Two solar families; the sun's children. (Univ. of Chicago science ser.) 311p il $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [12s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

523.2 Solar system. Cosmogony. Planets. Comets 28-31102

"This book, which appeared on the author's eighty-fifth birthday, and less than two months before his lamented death, is a summary of the well-known planetesimal hypothesis of the origin of the solar system which, with the collaboration of Prof. F. R. Moulton, he developed during the last thirty years. While the greater part of the book is a restatement of previously published results, some new material is included, and the whole forms a compact and useful account of a hypothesis which, whatever may be its ultimate fate, must take high rank among the generalisations which have stimulated and elucidated geophysical research during this century."—Nature

Booklist 25:271 Ap '29
Nature 123:555 Ap 13 '29 1600w
St Louis 27:48 F '29

"Before the reader has turned many pages he cannot fail to be impressed with the vigor and lucidity of the style. The book is admirably clear and eminently readable. To achieve this success in writing of technical matters for the general public is no mean feat, and one conversant with its difficulty must recognize the work of a master hand. It is rarely that an opportunity is offered to the reader devoid of special training to follow the genesis and growth of a notable scientific advance along so clear a path, and to see for himself how the exploration of new territory has actually been accomplished." H: N. Russell
+ Sat R of Lit 6:7 Jl 27 '29 1100w

CHAMBERS, ROBERT WILLIAM. The Happy Parrot. 335p $2.50 Appleton [7s 6d Cassell]

29-14907

A story of the troublesome days preceding the War of 1812, and of Eric Strake who commanded the topsail schooner, The Happy Parrot, engaged in the slave trade. There are pirates and slavers and men-of-war on every hand, and a beautiful young Irish girl for good measure.

Bookm 70:xxii S '29 50w

"An entertaining venture in the historical-nautical-romantical, with benefit of the author's practised style." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Jl 21 '29 90w
Cleveland Open Shelf p127 S '29
N Y Evening Post p6m S 7 '29 180w

"An often thrilling and always entertaining romance of one of the comparatively neglected phases and periods of American history, 'The Happy Parrot' is an interesting if often decidedly sanguinary tale of brave men and gallant vessels."
+ N Y Times p6 S 29 '29 800w

"There is no reality, no literary grace—but there is lots of swift and violent action. And after all, that's what we want in a pirate story." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 152:552 Jl 31 '29 200w

"The story should prove a fascinating one for imaginative boys in their early teens."
+ Sat R of Lit 6:99 Ag 31 '29 150w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 3 '29 150w
Times [London] Lit Sup p1060 D 12 '29 230w

CHAMBRUN, CLARA (LONGWORTH) comteese de. His wife's romance. 298p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

29-17220

Amy Dale has left her unsatisfying American husband, Mathew, to marry Prince Hogwitz of Germany. After great misery and disillusionment she comes to Paris to appeal to her son for aid. But it happens that she arrives at the time of her son's marriage, and finds that Myron Kester, his friend and adviser, is her ex-husband with an adopted name. Mathew, while seeking a means of vengeance on Prince Hogwitz, decides to chastise Amy by treating her as the mistress of Myron Kester; but he discovers the sincerity of her new love and respect for him when she insists on accompanying him to Morocco at a time of warfare and dangerous political intrigue. There, however, Mathew encounters the contemptible Prince Hogwitz, defeats him in combat, and achieves final reconciliation with his ex-wife.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 O 20 '29 350w

"A novel of the middle-aged, ripened by wisdom in its analysis of the ever-youthful theme of crisscrossed love."
N Y Times p7 N 3 '29 800w

"Madame de Chambrun's novel is marked by creative energy and color. The mixture of sophistication and melodrama is, however, rather bewildering. Though the outer action is clear enough the play of the mind is not so clear. Originality of conception and novelty of circumstances will certainly be conceded to the story, however." F. E. Dunn
+ — Portland Evening News p10 O 15 '29 280w
Times [London] Lit Sup p1036 D 5 '29 150w

CHAMPION, PIERRE HONORE JEAN BAPTISTE. Louis XI; tr. and adapted by Winifred Stephens Whale. 309p il $5 Dodd [15s Cassell]

B or 92 Louis XI, King of France. France—History—House of Valois, 1328-1589 29-17405

A French scholar, going back to the original sources, has drawn a portrait of Louis XI which differs greatly from the king of legend and fiction. Louis XI is here shown as one of the greatest kings of France, a beneficent ruler, an admirable administrator, a man in advance of his time.

"The book, based on the most exhaustive scholarship, is written with delightful ease, and at times with the brilliancy of a fifteenth century miniature. Although addressed to the general public, it is not a 'romanced biography': the technique is neither that of the novel, nor of standard political history. It is rather a Chronicle of the Reign of Louis XI, perhaps too rich in minute details, all placed on the same level: the artistic impression suffers a little thereby. The study will not supersede Commynes, Walter Scott and Victor, but it will be enjoyed as collateral reading by the devotees of those three masters." Albert Guerard
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 S 15 '29 1000w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
+ Nation and Ath 45:240 My 18 '29 1200w

Reviewed by C: W. Thompson
N Y Times p5 Ag 18 '29 2050w

"The three hundred pages of this book are packed with facts and marred by bad writing The facts are the fruit of painstaking research in original sources by an able French historian. As the translator is an 'adapter' as well, we incline to believe that the bad writing may be laid to her door."

+ — Outlook 152:670 Ag 21 '29 370w

St Louis 27:342 D '29

"M. Pierre Champion declares that he has no intention of writing an apology for his hero. Yet that is what he has written. . . True or false, so far as likeness is concerned Mr. Champion's picture is intensely interesting."

+ — Spec 142:595 Ap 13 '29 960w

"His book presents to the reader a real figure, peculiar in its way, able and so very wise, kindly and yet so very cunning, and still not a historical freak. Perhaps it is not too much to say that, under Monsieur Champion's careful treatment, Louis XI receives his just due." J: M. S. Allison

+ Yale R n s 19:422 winter '30 380w

CHAMSON, ANDRE. The road; tr. by Van Wyck Brooks; with a foreword by Ernest Boyd. 245p $2 Scribner

29-26491

A quiet story of French peasant life. Combes leaves his farm to work on the construction of the new road, and later, urged by his young wife Anna, abandons his ancestral home and sets up housekeeping in the valley town below where they both find work as artisans. But Combes never loses his love of the soil and when his wife dies he goes back, an old man of seventy, to renew his spirit in the loved surroundings of his ancient farm.

---

"Some books become classics, others furnish the material upon which classics are erected. This work belongs to the latter group; let us hope that its author will use it to erect the grandiose structure the subject merits and which he has here shown himself capable of building." Howard Becker

Ann Am Acad 143:381 My '29 160w

Booklist 25:359 Je '29

"On account of the special nature of a work like 'The road,' the quality of the prose is an important factor in one's judgment. For, although the book is a distinguished fiction, it is not a novel in the strictest sense of the word. It contains two or three real and very appealing characters, yet it is not a character study. It is dramatic in places without being a drama. In essence it is really a long poem, a sort of quiet rhapsody, or rather a bleak idyll in which the mountains themselves are the hero, and in which the slow desertion of the lands is the one tragic note." Malcolm Cowley

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Jl 7 '29 950w

"Mr. Brooks's translation is done with the restraint and the little formal touch instinct in Mr. Chamson's style. There is, in spite of its sadness a great deal of splendor and consolation in the picture he has drawn. It has some of the light of 'Marie Chapdelaine' though not all its grandeur. Mr. Chamson is a young writer, and this is his first book to be translated into English. Appreciative readers will look forward to another one." G. K.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 6 '29 630w

Cleveland Open Shelf p111 Jl '29

"Chamson writes a simple, moving prose that conveys a depth of feeling less by its vocabulary than by the force of what is told." L. S. Morris

+ New Repub 59:79 Je 5 '29 270w

"The story runs deeply and slowly through the course of a mountaineer's life. For him there are no inner conflicts, no spiritual writhings; only the plenitude and ceaselessness of life; life like a river deep and flowing always, bearing him to an appointed end. The book ends magnificently." Leonard Ehrlich

+ N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 30 '29 500w

"This is a quietly moving tale of peasant life, of hardship, sacrifice, small hopes and smaller achievements. Its charm lies in its lucid simplicity, in its lack of unnecessary details."

Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '29 200w

CHAMSON, ANDRE. Roux the bandit; tr. by Van Wyck Brooks. 198p $2 Scribner [5s Gollancz]

29-18556

Roux, a young French peasant, would not enlist at the outbreak of war because, as he explained, his conscience forbade him to fight and destroy. He lived alone in the mountains for three years, but was finally captured by the gendarmes and imprisoned. His case has passed into legend, and he is now looked upon by the country folk as a supernatural figure.

---

"André Chamson has made a fine story out of this simple legend and the language is not unlike that of Merimée at his best."

+ Bookm 70:xxxi O '29 150w

"Mr. Chamson has managed very subtly to tell us much more than the simple story of Roux. Finiels unfolds his own character in explaining that of Roux, and the minor characters are unforgettable. Yet the final impression is not so much of man's character, which is mortal and fleeting as of forbidding relentless, eternal nature. This book was not written by a scientist, who looks on nature as conquerable, but by a poet, who knows it is not. In its simplicity, its restraint, its profound understanding of life, the book is poetry almost from beginning to end." T: Fansler

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p41 S 29 '29 730w

Boston Transcript p2 O 9 '29 370w

"The book loses as little as possible of the original flavor in Mr. Brooks's exemplary translation."

+ Nation 129:363 O 2 '29 240w

New Statesman 34:66 O 19 '29 250w

" 'Roux the Bandit,' the second of Andre Chamson's trilogy of studies upon the mountaineers of the Cevennes remains an unusual and variously rich book. It is not as consistently vital as its predecessor; but its theme is significant. And that quality, savor of earth, which made 'The Road' signal, is present here, too. It is instinct with earthiness, yet retaining the unique sense of heroic destinies lived out in the midst of an austere nature. Its people draw their richness from a 'narrow but profound experience of life, from that severe but incontestable dignity which is conferred by daily work on the land more than by any other labor.' " Leonard Ehrlich

+ N Y Evening Post p6m S 7 '29 620w

"In the peasantry of the Cevennes, André Chamson has found an artistic metier as thoroughly his own as Wessex was Hardy's. Chamson has lived with the Cevenols and spoken their langue d'oc patois, he has hunted with them upon the slopes of their almost uninhabitable mountains, he has sat with them around the fire after a day's hunting and listened to their stories—humble tales, for the most part, never destined to be heard beyond the narrow circle where they originated, legends which are little more than family traditions accepted by a few neighboring families. In 'Roux the Bandit' he has transcribed one of their most popular tales. It concerns a man who, while still living, has become a legend."

+ N Y Times p8 Ag 18 '29 750w

"The frequent comparison of Chamson with Hardy,—made generally by Frenchmen who have never read a word of the Wessex novels,—is justified by many outward signs, but the inward spark which gives life to the whole sometimes ponderous apparatus of a novel of the soil is generally missing. Chamson's book remains a French parody of Hardy, which is far from admirable in itself."

— + Sat R of Lit 6:460 N 23 '29 230w

CHANCE, ROGER JAMES FERGUSON. Until philosophers are kings; a study of the political theory of Plato and Aristotle in relation to the modern state; with a foreword by H. J. Laski. 293p $4 Oxford [10s 6d Univ. of London press]

320.1 Political science. Plato. Aristotle. State, The [29-11034]

Mr Chance has sought in the teachings of Plato and Aristotle a solution for the political and social problems of the modern world. His book is addressed to the general public in the hope of increasing the group of intelligent and active citizenry.

CHANCE, R. J. F.—Continued

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '29 400w

"Mr. Chance's book was originally a thesis for the degree of 'Doctor of Philosophy,' and it suffers from the defects which are apparently almost inseparable from such University exercises, the lifeless academic jargon, the repetitions, the tangential irrelevancies, the retention of scaffolding as well as edifice. For all that, there are some needles in this haystack; and some of them are scattered even through the first six chapters though these are unfortunately too heavy to appeal to the general reader for whom they are professedly designed."

— + New Statesman 32:445 Ja 12 '29 650w

"The style is at times rather clumsy and verbose, though generally readable. . . The book could be both pruned and polished to advantage; but nevertheless it is a valuable contribution to one of the most important problems of the day—that of disposing the greatest possible number of individuals to realize the significance of that democratic state of society in which they live and their personal responsibility for making the best of it."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p266 Ap 4 '29 650w

CHANDLER, ANNA CURTIS. Story-lives of master artists. 303p il $2.50 Stokes
29-17162

Seventeen stories from the lives of as many famous painters, told for boys and girls. The artists included are Giotti, Filippo Lippi, Luca della Robbia, Leonardo da Vinci, Michelangelo, Benevenuto Cellini, Frans Hals, Rembrandt, Van Dyck, Velasquez, Gainsborough, Reynolds, Millet, Rosa Bonheur, Gilbert Stuart, Edwin Austin Abbey, and Winslow Homer.

Boston Transcript p2 O 19 '29 280w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans
N Y Times p38 O 27 '29 100w

"The author is uniquely qualified to write such a book as this since she is by profession the story-teller for children at the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art and knows from experience just how to interest young people. Although the stories were written primarily for the very young, older people will enjoy them. The book is a valuable addition to the reading material designed particularly for children in the upper grades and junior high school. While amusing and entertaining, the book is informative, awakening an interest in the arts and stimulating a desire to know more of the great masterpieces of the world." K. D. Lee

+ School R 37:715 N '29 400w

CHANDLER, ANNA CURTIS. Voyage to Treasure land. 220p il $2.50 Harper
29-18320

The outgrowth of the author's story-hours for children at the Metropolitan museum of art is this book of stories on typical fields of artistic activity in ancient Greece, Belgium in the fifteenth century, France, China, England, and even New York in the days of Captain Kidd.

Booklist 26:124 D '29

"The author, well known for the story hour for children which she holds at the Metropolitan Museum, reveals this museum as a place of magic rather than one of stuffy objects in cases. . . The story teller likes and knows her subject and likes and knows her audience, and succeeds in making children's lives that much more complete by entertainingly introducing them to art." M. G. Bonner

+ N Y Times p34 O 6 '29 360w

"The choice of subject, the illustrations, and the manner of criticism are all excellent, but the stories are not exciting enough in themselves to tempt the child into swallowing incidental information. Furthermore, there is a stiltedness of style. The book falls short through lack of the personality which is the compelling force in the museum story hours." Catherine Woodbridge

— + Sat R of Lit 6:492 N 30 '29 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '29 100w

CHANNON, HENRY. Joan Kennedy. 255p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Methuen]
29-16168

An English girl whose background has been the leisurely, charming one of country-house life, marries a bustling young American whom she nursed during the war, and is transplanted to the busy, restless environment of a middle western city, the young Chicago. Her husband is rich, his family powerful in their own way, but it is not the way of the English wife.

Bookm 69:xxiv Ag '29 120w

" 'Joan Kennedy' is well written and absorbing and has elements of beauty that raise it above the ordinary run of novels." Douglas Tyacke

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Jl 21 '29 400w

"Mr. Channon is particularly skilful in drawing character. If he rather over-emphasizes the insularity of the well bred British gentlewomen and their husbands and sons, he scores the well bred Americans for their meaningless activity and self assurance. His studies of Chicago (El Dorado) social life are quite as intensive and convincing as his descriptions of life in Wiltshire or in London. Gifted with intuitive imagination Mr. Channon is able to make every scene that he draws vivid." D. F. G.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Jl 17 '29 480w

"Henry Channon has made Chicago a strangely different place from the Chicago that we know, and he has done it by seeing it through the eyes of some one rooted in an entirely different culture." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Daily Tribune p7 Jl 27 '29 460w

"His novel is in no way startling, but it is much more readable than most because the author obviously knows his settings well and has acute comments to make upon them." Raymond Mortimer

+ — Nation and Ath 44:915 Mr 30 '29 70w

"A rather competent and tiresome novel. Mr. Channon's story is like life itself—that is, it is tolerable, although not always interesting." Edwin Seaver

— + N Y Evening Post p7m Je 29 '29 220w

"We have had, in recent years, many novels lamenting the passing of the amiable and leisurely country life of England, and setting over against it for invidious comparison the noisier and more heterogeneous civilization which America has grafted upon the world at large. Many of them have been more delicate, more beautiful, more completely atmospheric than this one, the work of a young American, a native of Chicago. But few have managed to convey a livelier contrast of the two orders, or a more concrete sense of the change that is taking place."

+ N Y Times p7 Je 30 '29 550w

"The book has a quality of needless wretchedness about it, but it is dramatic and psychologically interesting."

+ — Outlook 152:431 Jl 10 '29 150w

"The book leaves no impression of sterility or emptiness because it is packed with well-observed facts—trivial facts, maybe, but all first-hand and contributing, as few novels have, to an understanding of the real points of similarity and difference between England and America. And for this alone 'Joan Kennedy' is well worth reading." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 147:684 My 18 '29 320w

Sat R of Lit 6:324 O 26 '29 330w

"The justice of this unbending criticism of the rich man's America is a matter of opinion; yet, whatever his sympathies, the reader has the benefit of an interesting book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p340 Ap 25 '29 170w

CHAPIN, FRANCIS STUART. Cultural change. (Century social science ser.) 448p il $3.50 Century

301 Civilization—History. Culture. Sociology
28-21352

The author studies the development of the cultures of Greece, Rome, and medieval England, and postulates from these a theory of cultural change applicable to modern times.

---

"Should interest students of social anthropology. The book is especially significant as indication of the diffusion of anthropological methods, data, and conclusions representative of the progress sociology is making." M. G. Smith

+ Am Anthropol 31:786 O '29 300w

"Professor Chapin's work is to be welcomed by all who are interested in the social studies; not only is its material taken from many fields; but its conclusions and hypotheses, if verified, will be fruitful, also in the hands of other students." M. G. Smith

+ Am Econ R 19:105 Mr '29 360w

"As a whole, the book is one of the very best on the borderline between history and sociology. Any historian, desiring to discover what possible contributions sociology might make to a more exact and scientific study of historical development, would find this book one of the most characteristic and useful which he could consult." H. E. Barnes

+ Am Hist R 35:388 Ja '30 280w

"Dr. Chapin knows what culture is, and also the fundamental ideas of social change as they are now known are his property. And here he has added significantly to our understanding of cultural change. It is a book which all students of culture and change will find rich in suggestive ideas and in important new studies in the measurement of social change. It is undoubtedly a distinct and significant step forward in the development of the study of social change." W: F. Ogburn

+ Am J Soc 35:488 N '29 850w

Am Pol Sci R 23:236 F '29 330w

Christian Century 46:205 F 7 '29 40w

CHAPMAN, MRS ELISABETH (COBB). Minstrels in satin. 330p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran 29-9879

Fanny was charming but as irresponsible as her children. Of the little family group drifting happily about Europe, only Penelope had any sense—the others specialized in temperament, particularly Camilla. Camilla expected, and achieved, an operatic career. Penelope, with twice her sister's character, became Camilla's selfless slave. The story follows from childhood to maturity this vagabond group of Fanny's children, with Penelope as unacknowledged heroine until in the final break with Camilla she comes into her own.

---

"This sparkling novel shows observation and insight as well as humor, and skilful analysis of character. One feels in the whole work maturity and considerable richness."

+ Bookm 29:xxiv Je '29 90w

" 'Minstrels in Satin' is entertaining light fiction, its chief defect lying in its lack of originality. In retrospect it appears as a veritable patchwork of used situations and stock characters." Garreta Busey

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Je 30 '29 580w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '29 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p94 Je '29

"It is an interesting novel, showing careful writing and considered characterization. Miss Chapman has written a tale that is readable and sympathetic."

+ N Y Times p9 Je 9 '29 430w

"Judging from this book, Irvin S. Cobb's daughter will not need to bask much longer in the reflected light of her father's effulgence. 'Minstrels in Satin' is good. Here we have humor, powerful characterization, clever dialogue, rapid fire story and interest sustaining plot."

+ N Y World p11m Ap 28 '29 200w

"The shrewdly contrasted characters of the three, particularly those of the daughters as they pass from childhood to early maturity, are drawn with the utmost clarity and conviction. A novel which strikes that rare, happy mean between the serious and the gay."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1147 Je 29 '29 300w

CHAPMAN, JOHN ALEXANDER. Papers on Shelley, Wordsworth & others. 171p $2.25 (6s) Oxford

821 English poetry [29-18896]

Contents: Shelley and Francis Thompson; Wordsworth; Coleridge; Poetry and experience; The greatest poetry; The future of English poetry; Dr Saintsbury's heresy; Walt Whitman; Richard Middleton; Dr Edward Thompson's poetry; Publishing lyrical poetry; In conclusion.

---

"It is a pleasure to read these highly discriminating and well expressed essays."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 31 '29 200w

"Mr. Chapman would seem to be a critic of good judgment, although it is difficult to find on just what grounds he bases his judgments. His taste would seem to be very sound. I should say Mr Chapman talks too much of great poetry and the greatest poetry. The critical question about poetry is not whether it is great or greater or greatest, but whether it is poetry at all." Edwin Seaver

+ — N Y Evening Post p7m Jl 20 '29 180w

"There is no gainsaying the critical acumen of Mr. Chapman. There is a high dignity of style—if, at times, also too much of turgidity—which compels attention."

+ N Y Times p2 S 8 '29 220w

"It is not often that we have the pleasure of reading such sober and enlightening criticism as Mr. J. A. Chapman gives us in his Papers on Shelley, Wordsworth and Others. Their distinguishing trait is their honesty in judgment."

Spec 142:864 Je 1 '29 150w

"Mr. Chapman's pages have the charm of being wholly his own, a charm which is the greater because he gives back to us originally things already very near our hearts. A man of mature experience, with a passion for poetry, and having written poetry himself, he discusses the problems of literature out of a background of strenuous self-proof, and with [an] unfaltering sense of the continuity of literature with life."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p353 My 2 '29 660w

CHAPMAN, MRS MARISTAN. Homeplace. 275p $2.50 Viking press
29-16827

"Homeplace" has the same scene as "The happy mountain"—Glen Hazard in the Tennessee hills—many of the same characters, and the same racy, mountain idiom. Here is told the story of Fayre Jones who loved Bess Howard but lacked the resolution to secure her a homeplace.

---

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:324 N '28

---

Booklist 26:69 N '29

"Miss Chapman has more than skill in transcribing. If her language is borrowed and her plot banal, her characters are real creations. Their manner of speaking is responsible for some of their charm." M. C. Dawson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ag 11 '29 800w

"The story, uninvolved as it is, seems less spontaneous than that of 'The Happy Mountain,' and in proportion lacks power to lay hold upon the reader. Its claim to attention rests on the diction and on the writer's unfeigned love for her people."

CHAPMAN, MARISTAN—Continued

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 28 '29 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p126 S '29

"Maristan Chapman has written a second novel which, for its craftsmanship and the verity of its artistic achievement, deserves to be ranked alongside, and possibly above her first. All the color of 'The Happy Mountain' and all the rich simplicity of its language are reproduced here. But in 'Homeplace' the fusion of form and matter is, if anything, more perfect. The theme is perhaps less consciously poetical, but it is more native and more convincing." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 11 '29 900w

"The mountain dialect bears slight plot and simple characterization on its broad bosom as the mountains bear hard-tilled potato patches and wild azalea groves. . . This is not to deny the quiet charm of Maristan Chapman's tale and characters or the freshness of her descriptions. It is simply to place those things as secondary to the idiom which she uses."

+ Outlook 152:627 Ag 14 '29 320w

Pratt p37 autumn '29

"Page after page may be read for the sheer pleasure that is to be had from the contact with unfamiliar words, all crisp and sharp at the edges. . . 'Homeplace' is a genuinely entertaining book." Herschel Brickell

+ Sat R of Lit 6:53 Ag 17 '29 1150w

"Mrs Chapman's theme is not so new, but her method of handling it is her own. She lets her story tell itself. It moves forward with ease and rapidity, and there is a lightness of touch which shows skill. . . The author loves the people she writes about and evidently wants to acquaint others with them. One finds wisdom, humor, pathos and a love for life evidenced throughout the book."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 6 '29 400w

Wis Lib Bul 25:323 O '29

CHARNLEY, MITCHELL V. Boy's life of the Wright brothers. 291p il $2 Harper

B or 92 Wright, Wilbur. Wright, Orville. Aeronautics—History 28-24601

"As we are celebrating the twenty-fifth year of powered flight by man it is fitting that there be a suitable book written for boys about the original inventors. The story of these devoted Wright brothers is one of intense interest."—Sat R of Lit

Booklist 25:169 Ja '29

Reviewed by D. C. Lunt
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 F 3 '29 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p48 Mr '29

"Mr Charnley has made the story exceptionally fascinating by his method of keeping close to the intimate, daily life of the two and picturing them constantly as they lived, absorbed in their ideas and experiments. His material has been furnished by the relatives and close friends of the Wright brothers."

+ N Y Times p26 N 11 '28 130w

St Louis 27:33 Ja '29

"Mr. Charnley has written a great book for wide awake English-reading boys here and elsewhere."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:672 F 9 '29 130w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 23 '28 70w

Wis Lib Bul 24:347 D '28

CHARPENTIER, JOHN. Coleridge, the sublime somnambulist; tr. by M. V. Nugent. 332p $3.50 Dodd [15s Constable]

B or 92 Coleridge, Samuel Taylor 29-18653

A sympathetic study of Coleridge's life and work. The development of the man, the poet, and the philosopher is recorded in the light of the strange hallucinations which governed Coleridge's actions and guided his genius.

"In effect the broken surfaces of Coleridge's life are better rendered than the deep glacial drift of his personality. Yet the biographer has given a brilliant account of Coleridge's many-sided activities in poetry, creative criticism and philosophy." G: F. Whicher

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 O 6 '29 730w

"Mr. Charpentier has handled his subject almost dispassionately, and yet with such a subtlety of understanding and sympathy that the reader both feels Coleridge's miraculous power and pities his human frailty. The total impression of the subject is unified, almost uncannily, and the feeling is one of sorrow for the master-poet." W. M. T.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 2 '29 720w

"Our French critics are piling up our debt to them so fast that repayment will become difficult before long. In the case of Coleridge we are peculiarly grateful that so much attention should be accorded to him by so acute a biographer." D. M. Stuart

+ Nation and Ath 46:180 N 2 '29 730w

"What lends charm to M. Charpentier's book is the sympathy with which he studies the poet's unhappy life, and the persistence with which he endeavours to explain it."

+ — New Statesman 34:200 N 16 '29 720w

"It is as the study of a mind and its development that 'Coleridge: the Sublime Somnambulist' is most valuable. With a clarity and rational development that is assuredly supremely French, M. Charpentier approaches his great subject and disposes of it in the most tidy manner imaginable. There are no rough edges left, no untied strings of speculation. When the last page of the book is reached the subject appears to have been exhausted but not overargued." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p5 S 22 '29 1800w

CHARTERIS, JOHN. Field-Marshal Earl Haig; with a foreword by John Buchan. 407p il $6 Scribner [25s Cassell]

B or 92 Haig, Douglas Haig, 1st earl. European war, 1914-1918—Great Britain 29-10190

The author served with Lord Haig in India, at Aldershot, and for the whole of the Great war except the last two months. The book is a military life of the great soldier, following his campaigns closely from Mons to the battle of the Aisne, with a concluding chapter on Haig's place in history.

Reviewed by T. H. Thomas
Am Hist R 35:363 Ja '30 1000w

Booklist 25:391 Jl '29

"General Charteris has produced a book which is at once a notable piece of biography and a stalwart defense of Haig as a commander in the World War. This high praise will hardly go unchallenged, but General Charteris has at least marshaled the evidence more thoroughly than it has been marshaled before, and those who differ from him must reckon with his facts." W: MacDonald

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Ap 28 '29 1400w

"This is neither a 'new-mannered' nor an 'old-fashioned' biography. It deals straightforwardly with facts. It is a soldier's story of a soldier and leaves decoration to future biographers who cannot but find Haig a fascinating figure." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 27 '29 1500w

"General Charteris has written a highly controversial book. It will be many years before a final verdict on the strategy and leadership of the Great War is possible. Since it is the eternal habit of historians to disagree, no unanimous verdict may ever be reached. At any rate, General Charteris, in much the manner of a barrister, has prepared, learnedly and eloquently, the case for Earl Haig. It should be added that the book is throughout marked by lucidity, and also by dignity."

Nation and Ath 45:210 My 11 '29 650w

Reviewed by L. H. Titterton
N Y Evening Post p6m Jl 13 '29 570w

"Of all the books written on the war, this is, we submit, the book that best fulfills its function. . . The theme is one on which General Charteris lavishes military exposition, an eager enthusiasm, a formidable array of facts and, last but not least, an absolute personal conviction. He writes with an exceptional authority." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p1 My 5 '29 3300w
St Louis 27:342 D '29

" 'A personal narrative of how Lord Haig appeared to a colleague and a friend,' General Charteris's interesting book should take its place in every library of the Great War."
+ Spec 142:sup703 My 4 '29 450w

"Brig-Gen John Charteris has drawn an excellent picture of the British leader, and in addition—with remarkable clarity and fairness, too, it seems—has disclosed the relations of Haig with a number of the other outstanding figures of the war period. His portrait is of course a sympathetic one but if it explains Haig's character and actions in a favorable light, it at the same time presents the facts and everyone can interpret them to suit his own judgments."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 14 '29 1250w

"General Charteris leaves his book largely undocumented. Many of his statements rest, so far as appears at present, on his personal word; but one must conjecture that, in a volume so inevitably destined to provoke criticism, he would not have committed himself to any assertion which was not going to be borne out in the more detailed life which is promised by General Maurice, in the official history of the War, or in the personal documents left by Lord Haig."
Times [London] Lit Sup p326 Ap 25 '29 650w

CHARTERIS, LESLIE. Daredevil. 344p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Ward, Lock] 29-19786

The "Alpha Triangle" has instituted a reign of terror over London. Storm Arden, of the Metropolitan police force, knew the man who headed the Triangle, but was powerless for a long time to make an arrest for two reasons: lack of evidence, and the fact that this man was his own father. It was not till after several prominent men had been murdered, a mine had been exploded under Piccadilly Circus, and the life of the girl he loved endangered, that Arden succeeded in breaking up the infamous Alpha Triangle.

---

"A book full of thrills, excitement and chuckles."
+ Bookm 70:xxxiii O '29 40w

"It is a fierce and fantastic story, but the reader will forgive much to an author who makes such good use of a bank-manager, in spite of that worthy's almost scandalous neglect of his financial duties, and provides his hero with such refreshingly picturesque and unfettered diction."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Mr 7 '29 110w

CHARTERIS, LESLIE. Meet—the Tiger! 296p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Ward, Lock] 29-8649

A battery of shocks and thrills on the north Devon coast where a likable young girl and a seasoned adventurer survive the horrors set for them by the Tiger's cubs, and win the loot in the Tiger's lair.

---

"This unusual item is recommended for its flavor of burlesque. It is a skillful kidding of the mystery racket and at the same time a treat for those fans who insist upon Desperate Desmond thrills." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Mr 24 '29 110w

"There are several truly novel situations in this story, and the manner of its telling is concise."
Boston Transcript p3 Ap 27 '29 150w

"A crook story which depends for its interest upon the excitement aroused by its incidents, and those who do not object to the devices of melodrama will find them very exciting indeed."
+ New Statesman 32:26 O 13 '28 70w
Times [London] Lit Sup p808 N 1 '28 110w

CHARTERS, WERRETT WALLACE, and WAPLES, DOUGLAS. Commonwealth teacher-training study; introd. by Samuel P. Capen. 666p $4 Univ. of Chicago press [20s Cambridge univ. press]
370.7 Teachers—Training 29-7183

The volume embodies the report of a three-year investigation in the field of teacher-training curricula, together with the findings of the committee. The subjects covered by the investigation are traits of teachers, activities of teachers, and in regard to curricula, the revision of existing courses, and the construction of new courses.

---

"This book is amazing and almost incredible. And its importance as an index of our cultural level may be missed because of its subject matter of educational technique—specifically, what shall be the curricula most suitable for teacher training courses." J. S. Temple
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 F 17 '29 280w

"The objections to this bulky volume are three: (1) the amount of detail is nothing short of staggering; (2) classifications and conclusions are hidden in the text, not adequately condensed; (3) the style is too involved and academic to merit widespread attention."
— Boston Transcript p2 Ap 6 '29 230w
Cleveland Open Shelf p118 S '29

"Notwithstanding the indicated limitations of the report, most of which are clearly recognized by the investigators, the study represents a comprehensive and thoroughgoing effort to provide a dependable technique for the making of professional curriculums for teachers. All who would improve courses in education will find here a large and useful contribution to their efforts." M. E. Haggerty
+ El School J 29:627 Ap '29 850w

"The reviewer leaves the volume with a sense of disappointment growing out of the fact that the practical teacher-training administrator will have to work too hard to reduce the mass of material here offered to usable dimensions." Edgar Dawson
— + Hist Outlook 20:357 N '29 1100w

"The authors present an extraordinarily ordered and thorough treatment of a colossal amount and variety of data, only a portion of which could be included in the book. . . The reviewer has never encountered a more honest document. The authors evade no issues, conceal no weaknesses, and fearlessly expose every step to the severest critic." H: Harap
+ School R 37:467 Je '29 1700w

"In 1920 the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching published the first comprehensive study of the professional preparation of teachers. This study revolutionized the organization, the curricula and the general administration of normal schools and teachers' colleges in the United States. The volume under review will undoubtedly have as important an influence upon teacher-training institutions as the original study." E. G: Payne
+ Survey 62:259 My 15 '29 250w

CHASE, DANIEL. Pines of Jaalam. 346p $2.50 Bobbs [7s 6d Skeffington]
29-4537

By her own efforts Lavinia has developed her New England farm into a fruitful nursery of seedling pines. But as the project grows it absorbs her; she loses consideration for everything and everyone else. Her fiancé, hurt by her indifference, breaks the engagement. Matt

CHASE, DANIEL—Continued
Ledyard, whose cool criticism has always enraged her, finally restores Lavinia's lost sense of perspective, and the pines of Jaalam retire to their proper place in her life.

Booklist 25:359 Je '29

"In this 'Pines of Jaalam' Daniel Chase has written of the New England countryside with a sensitive and poetic realism that places it high among the recent novels of the soil." E. D. Goldsmith
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Mr 17 '29 500w

"Mr. Chase writes with assurance and dignity. His is the true dignity that is the very root of New England's being, and to which she clings in the face of tauntings from those who neither love nor understand her." H. F. McDade
+ Boston Transcript p4 F 16 '29 1500w

"To the already long list of inadequate attempts to plum the involutions of New England character, the latest, 'The Pines of Jaalam,' by Daniel Chase, is no exception."
— N Y Times p16 Je 16 '29 150w

"The story moves interestingly, and the character portrayal, while not firmly conceived has some obvious truth. The descriptions of New England life and scenery are pleasant."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 7 '29 400w

"Mr. Chase has a quiet unassuming way with him, pleasant after many pretentious efforts of this kind and much more effective."
+ Times [London] Lit. Sup p706 S 12 '29 180w

CHASE, JOSEPH CUMMINGS. Romance of an art career. 238p il $3.50 Sears

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 28-23287

"One of the chattiest of recent books is Joseph Cummings Chase's 'Romance of an Art Career.' Mr Chase is a well-known artist, specializing in portraits. There is more, of course, to a real portrait than a photograph can reveal of its subject, and Mr Chase tells, among other things, how he catches the pose or feature that makes a decided difference. The general reader will get chief enjoyment probably from the author's reminiscences of his human contacts. Nearly 100 faces greet the reader here and there in the book, from Bruce Barton, Jr., to Woodrow Wilson and Gov. Smith. Mr Chase was sent to France near the end of the war to paint portraits for the government. American and foreign generals, and especially the doughboys, in scores of characteristic poses, filled his canvases and sketchbooks."—Springf'd Republican

"These pages are essentially conversational; even when the purpose is to impart knowledge the manner is never academic. The artist discusses his subjects and his methods with equal zest, and whether he is dealing with the practical side of his craft or the informal side of his famous sitters he is unfailingly diverting."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ja 20 '29 130w

"While it is but natural that this volume will make its strongest appeal to the young art student with much to learn, looking eagerly toward accomplishment that may still be pretty far off, a wider public will doubtless read it for the pleasantly chatty anecdotes about people—often very celebrated people—who sit for their portraits." E: A. Jewell
+ N Y Times p4 D 23 '28 680w

"The volume is written in a light, easy style suggestive of the author's paintings. Mr Chase was the official painter of the American Expeditionary Force in France, and he has a number of interesting anecdotes to tell of his experiences painting the 'great men' of the war."
N Y World p11m Mr 10 '29 120w
Pratt p32 spring '29
St Louis 27:164 My '29

"A layman might never guess the little details so familiar to the artist which make his work a success, but many of these are expounded in a conversational way. Secrets of mixing colors are told, to the surprising illumination even of well-informed readers; details of work and remuneration in the advertising field are given, and in other branches of art. The book should be helpful to the young art student."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 7 '29 320w

CHASE, STUART. Men and machines. 354p il $2.50 Macmillan [10s 6d Cape]

338.4 Machinery in industry. Machinery—History. Inventions 29-14725

A philosophic discussion of the effect of machines upon modern life and civilization. By the author of "The tragedy of waste" and co-author of "Your money's worth."

Booklist 26:10 O '29

"You may not agree with Mr. Chase. You may argue that he has painted the picture in his own colors. You may even essay to wash those colors away in a stream of your own figures and illustrative instances. But a considerable portion of his pigmentation will remain to distort your own version of the situation. And the process of restoring much of his picture will surely alter, somewhat, the perspective of this Age of Power as you see it."
+ Bookm 70:221 O '29 600w

"Stuart Chase is no mere wanderer in quest of a new thrill, but a practical man. What he discovers he wants to organize and bring under cultivation. His style is racy of the American soil. It is American in its cheerful efficiency, its dynamic directness, its shrewd humor, its healthy disregard of subtleties and mere verbal felicities. It is simple, but not naive; civilized, not sophisticated. It pleases the scholar, the engineer, the business man, the man in the subway." Albert Guerard
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Jl 7 '29 3400w
Boston Transcript p3 Ag 7 '29 500w
Cath World 130:370 D '29 550w

"The value of his approach to the topic grows largely out of the fact that he is neither a professional viewer-with-alarm nor a sentimentalist who sees the past through a rosy haze and wants to escape from the noise and smoke of urban today back to the flowery fields of rural yesterday. He has no illusions about the possibility or the desirability of such a return, nor does he undervalue the actual contribution of the machine to our comfort. There is a balance and sanity in his judgments which are a reproach to all excited fanatics who can see but one side of a question." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 46:1250 O 9 '29 960w
Cleveland Open Shelf p151 D '29
J Home Econ 21:859 N '29 90w

"With an indisposition to accept sweeping generalizations of any sort, a voracious appetite for significant concrete facts, and an ability to paint vivid pictures in words, he has written a book which the everyday man of intelligence will read with interest and pleasure, and from which he will learn more sound economics and sound sense than is to be derived from most of the portentous tomes on our library shelves." H: R. Mussey
+ Nation 129:92 Jl 24 '29 1350w
Nation and Ath 46:260 N 16 '29 380w

"This is quite the best recent book on the subject."
+ New Statesman 34:342 D 14 '29 150w

"It is as penetrating and as moving a piece of what is called, for want of a more descriptive name, 'non-fiction,' as this writer has seen in many a day. . . In 'Men and Machines' Mr. Chase is far more the scientist than he has ever been before—to this reviewer, an immense gain in his stature as a writer; and yet in his new objectiveness he has lost none of the refreshing color and vigor of his style. This book is neither an attack nor a defense. It is a brilliant analysis of cause and effect." Evans Clark

+ N Y Times p1 Jl 7 '29 1600w

"A fine, timely book. Go out and buy it, but do not open it until you have five hours of leisure ahead. It will take four to read it intelligently, and through them must be scattered sixty minutes in which to make the gestures necessary for the release of the emotions which it will rouse in you." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 152:228 Je 5 '29 800w

"A book replete with provocative ideas. With much careful data of a statistical character, for those who must have figures with their food. And running through it all a series of most striking and imaginative woodcuts by W. T. Murch." W. H. Crook

+ Portland Evening News p13 Jl 30 '29 1200w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 80:12 Ag '29 320w

St Louis 27:281 O '29

"Mr. Chase writes exceedingly well. He is blessed with a style which is limpid, alive, and at times humorous. No heavy-handedness curses his statement; his audience is always in his mind. And the result is a study requiring attention from all who want to be aware of the true nature of their surroundings today and of the human purposes implicit in the challenge which the machine environment offers to human nature. Mr. Chase has joined the honorable company of the positivists of his generation like Lippmann, Bourne, Edman, Tugwell, Mumford, and Laski in England, who see conditions as they are, but insist that in creative effort alone will be found the genuine source of generative power and regenerative hope." Ordway Tead

+ Sat R of Lit 6:3 Jl 27 '29 1700w

"Since the publication of Erewhon, we have been constantly told that man has become the slave of the machine. In his stimulating and provocative new book, Men and Machines, Mr. Stuart Chase has set himself the task of analysing to what extent this statement is correct. On every page and, in fact, in every paragraph he has something significant to say about this momentous problem, and he says it in such a way that not only economists and politicians, but every man or woman, with the welfare of humanity at heart, will certainly find the book profitable reading."

+ Spec 143:822 N 30 '29 800w

"In an exceedingly well written book, at once brilliantly analytical and soberly reasoned, Stuart Chase attempts to balance the account between men and machines. The method of presentation is concrete, spirited and entertaining."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 11 '29 700w

"These pages are rich, popular, picturesque. You need fear no technical hazards. They are dynamic with speculation. Stuart Chase has a concrete mind plus imagination and humor. He is the kind of poet-explorer we need in an age lost in its own filing-system. He has enough facts but is not clotted with them. I presume he makes a healthy per cent of errors but also he makes you think. He is, to my guess, the most important American interpreter of present material phenomena and their social reactions. This book and Middletown are this year's principal contribution to the queer task of knowing ourselves." Leon Whipple

+ Survey 62:498 Ag 1 '29 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 25:273 Jl '29

"Here is as neat and orderly and open-minded, and withal imaginative, a rendering as you will find of the account between the Machine and the men and women who have built the Machine and tended its fires. . . Here is a mind of remarkable comprehensiveness, gathering a horde of facts and figures and free speculations, classifying them all so as to retain the most significant, and then arraying them as on two sides of a ledger to present the picture of an age." V. R. Lorwin

+ World Tomorrow 12:422 O '29 900w

Reviewed by C: A. Beard

Yale R n s 19:159 autumn '29 1100w

CHATFIELD, CHARLES HUGH, and TAYLOR, CHARLES FAYETTE. Airplane and its engine. 329p il $2.50 McGraw

629.13 Airplanes 28-27561

"Intended primarily . . . for persons interested in acquiring a sound knowledge of the basic facts and theories of the airplane—who still do not desire to give to the subject the intensive study which is essential for the designing engineer or the expert mechanic. It has been our aim to avoid the use of any but the simplest mathematics, and to require of our readers only such knowledge of physics and mechanics as is required in the first two or three years of a high-school course."—Preface

Booklist 25:196 F '29

"It is up to date, it is complete, it scrupulously avoids propaganda and is technically without flaw. It might be better illustrated in some of its chapters, notably in the one on airplane manoeuvres, but in general the pictures are satisfactory. If you are hunting a general introduction to the technicalities of aviation, this is your book." Daniel Sayre

+ Bookm 68:586 Ja '29 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:3 Ja '29

Pratt p16 spring '29

St Louis 27:51 F '29

CHATTERTON, EDWARD KEBLE. On the high seas. 319p il $5 Lippincott [10s 6d P. Allan]

910.4 Seafaring life. Sea stories 29-21186

Tales of adventure at sea and informative sketches of ships and seafaring life make up this new book by a well known writer on his chosen theme. Illustrated chiefly from old prints.

Booklist 26:65 N '29

Boston Transcript p5 Jl 24 '29 500w

"Literarily Mr Chatterton is always vividly afloat." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p6m Ag 10 '29 70w

"E. Keble Chatterton has written almost thirty such works, and although none of them can be ranked high in value of any sort they are all capably done, full of dependable information, workmanlike in the collecting and the weaving together of their material and interesting in the way it is set forth. And, what is equally important to their general effect, they are all born out of his own deep love for and extensive knowledge of the sea. These qualities are all to be found in this latest of his books."

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 28 '29 430w

Outlook 152:433 Jl 10 '29 50w

"His latest collection of papers shows no falling off. The chapters in which he gravely discusses the advantage and disadvantages of piracy as a business proposition in the seventeenth century are as entertaining as anything that he has ever written."

+ Sat R 147:840 Je 22 '29 120w

"Written without any literary distinction, Commander Chatterton's seagoing medley is good reading after all for those who have tasted in fact or imagination the hazards of service in ships. What we have is episodes of life at sea through three centuries, assembled without much order or other bond of relation than the sea itself."

Sat R of Lit 6:276 O 12 '29 140w

"Though it is fair to say that the volume, as a whole, is scrappy, each yarn is told with a good journalistic care for details and with the skill and knowledge which are expected of the experienced author."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p578 Jl 18 '29 100w

CHATTERTON, EDWARD KEBLE. Through [2] sea and sky. 259p il $1.75 Lippincott

29-27795

A sea mystery story for older boys in which the "Gannet," a British super-flying-boat, pursues to the bitter end a black hand gang, which had stolen the Z-ray, most deadly of all rays.

CHATTERTON, E: K.—Continued

Boston Transcript p3 N 9 '29 200w

"The story contains excellent bits of history and geography which make the older reader wish that Mr. Chatterton hadn't so conscientiously 'written down' to what he has apparently taken to be the mental level of his readers, but small boys who have not yet learned to look their adventure stories in the mouth will delight in this swift and vivid tale." A. H. Bill

+ — N Y Evening Post p14m N 16 '29 280w

"The fiction treated here is a good deal less interesting than the fact. . . The story suffers from the inability of the crooks to do anything effectual." R. L. Roe

Sat R of Lit 6:403 N 16 '29 100w

CHENEY, SHELDON WARREN. The theatre; three thousand years of drama, acting and stagecraft. 558p il $10 (42s) Longmans

792 Theater—History. Drama—History and criticism [29-22263]

A history of the theater, acting, and stagecraft from the beginnings to modern times. Mr Cheney traces the growth of the physical stage, the forms of acting and the changes in the concept of the drama thru Greek and Roman tragedy and comedy, oriental art, the medieval period, the Renaissance, the theater of Spain, the influence of the Puritans, the French influence of Racine and Molière, and the development of opera, up to the growth of democracy, the twentieth century, and machine-age developments. With drawings and illustrations.

---

"Sheldon Cheney in his comprehensive book about the theatre and its first three thousand years has written a book that is expansive in its spirit as well as in its bulk. And may the gods be with Mr. Cheney for telling his story of the theatre in his own way. He has presented many facts, with their corresponding names and dates, so that his story has its chronology according to the Christian calendar. But he has also written a history of the spirit of the theatre, recognizing the crowd as well as the dramatist." Stirling Bowen

+ Bookm 70:574 Ja '30 650w

"Mr. Cheney, with a boundless enthusiasm and freshness, sees all the stages of the past with his vision as a sensitive theater-goer, and thus makes his book one of unique value, even though serious exceptions may be taken to some of his conclusions. . . The book is full of facts, and, by combining the histories of the drama, acting, and stagecraft (including, of course, theater design and stage decoration), it presents a picture of the changing playhouse through the ages which it would be difficult, if not impossible, to secure elsewhere in a single work. The illustrations, which Mr. Cheney has been many years assembling, add greatly to the book's value for students." W. P. Eaton

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 N 10 '29 900w

"I strongly recommend the reading of Cheney's informing and fascinating book." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 46:1473 N 27 '29 1000w

"It is not entirely irrelevant to remark that the author has weakened portions of his book by trying to be funny. Nevertheless, Mr. Cheney has written a valuable book. It is a book more to be praised than damned, and the author deserves the thanks of all who are interested in the theater." F: Schlick

+ — New Repub 61:149 D 25 '29 400w

"It is well that the first comprehensive history of the theatre in English should be written from an ideal viewpoint, for it is all too easy to set down a factual record, or to judge history according to the fashions of the moment. It is the author's ability to view the entire panorama personally which has enabled him to interpret the significance of masks in the Oriental drama; to give full weight and justice to the comedia dell' arte; to dwell on the Puritan opposition to the Elizabethan theatre; to set forth the various modern theories of the theatre succinctly and critically. It is not Mr. Cheney's fault that his report on the actor's craft through the ages leaves one with a vague impression. No doubt all this will be corrected for the future, as the phonograph and the cinema and the talkies immortalize the mannerisms of our Barrymores and Moissis. What there was to be found Mr. Cheney has garnered. The illustrations in the book are admirably selected from among thousands available to the author from two continents. And the quotations are shrewdly chosen." Hiram Motherwell

+ N Y Times p11 N 17 '29 1700w

"A thoroughly readable, well documented and beautifully illustrated history of man's whole adventure in the theatre."

+ Outlook 153:349 O 30 '29 50w

"Mr. Cheney has written the first comprehensive work on the history of the World Theatre in the English language. Hitherto Mantzius, the Danish author (whose works are translated), has alone held the distinction of writing a complete survey in his six large volumes of material, stimulating to read, but in many respects of dubious authenticity. Unquestionably Mr. Cheney deserves no small praise for the very accomplishment of such a feat. The material for this world excursion is finely proportioned and is handled compactly; yet its compactness is concealed by simple and imaginative writing." Donald Oenslager

+ Sat R of Lit 6:583 D 21 '29 900w

"When he started out to write, Sheldon Cheney could hardly have hoped to do quite so complete, valuable and unique a thing as he has accomplished. It is rarely that a man achieves in full measure what he hopes to do, and much more rare for him to create something larger than his image of it." E. J. R. Isaacs

+ Theatre Arts Mo 13:940 D '29 900w

CHER, MARIE, pseud. See Scherr, M.

CHERINGTON, PAUL TERRY. The consumer looks at advertising; with an introd. by Stanley Resor. 196p $2.50 Harper

659 Advertising 28-27548

"Attacking the question, Is advertising an economic waste, the author replies to some recent critics, chiefly Stuart Chase, altho names are not mentioned. He also brings in the question of certain unadvertised professions, notably medicine and law."—Wis Lib Bul

---

Am Econ R 19:127 Mr '29 40w

Booklist 25:196 F '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ja 27 '29 350w

Reviewed by M. M. Riordan

N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 12 '29 500w

St Louis 27:94 Mr '29

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 10 '29 80w

Reviewed by F. J. Schlink

Survey 62:318 Je 1 '29 620w

Wis Lib Bul 25:70 F '29

CHESTERTON, ADA E. (JONES) (MRS CECIL CHESTERTON) (JOHN KEITH PROTHERO, pseud.). St Teresa. 273p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

B or 92 Teresa, Saint 28-17429

A readable life of the great sixteenth century mystic saint, in which extracts from her autobiography are incorporated.

---

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes

Bookm 68:581 Ja '29 280w

"We found the biography inadequate and disappointing. Mrs. Chesterton has attempted a task beyond her powers. She has not the theological knowledge, the historical perspective, the spiritual sense, the literary style needed to paint a St. Teresa."

— Cath World 129:250 My '29 230w
Cleveland Open Shelf p134 D '28

CHESTERTON, GILBERT KEITH. Generally speaking. 291p $2.50 Dodd [6s Methuen]
824 29-4662

The title is aptly chosen, for there would seem to be few subjects on which Mr Chesterton does not touch. Several of his brief dissertations are on literary matters.

Booklist 25:275 Ap '29

"In a country in which the short essay is as favored a vehicle for literary expression as the comic strip is in America, Mr. Chesterton is second only to Mr. Wells as a popular producer of fifteen-hundred-word observations. . . 'Generally Speaking' contains more meat than an occasional display of wit or pathos. . . As usual, paradox runs riot." G. T. Hellman
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Ap 21 '29 700w

"Racy, stimulating reading. It is very quick reading; Chesterton's stream of thought tears along at quite a rapid rate, and carries the reader's frail canoe along with it. Occasionally we cry 'Nonsense!,' seeing that the stream has taken us completely out of the course, but we never wish to quit the journey. Our guide is at least entertaining, and the scenery is novel and amusing." G. K.
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 27 '29 500w

"One quality seems to strike the reader with particular force in these essays—that refreshing clearness which acts like a tonic on minds jaded with the mistiness and irresponsible juggling with catch-words which passes for 'thought' in so much contemporary writing."
+ Cath World 129:378 Je '29 230w
Cleveland Open Shelf p56 Ap '29
— + Nation 128:433 Ap 10 '29 250w

"Mr. Chesterton does indeed like arguing, and in the present volume has indulged his taste with a relish which communicates itself to the reader. In almost every case the cream of the essay has accumulated in the first paragraph, which is an essay in itself, in structure and almost in length. These first paragraphs frequently cover two pages or more: they are little masterpieces of tangled wisdom, provocative and witty."
+ Nation and Ath 44:452 D 22 '28 120w

"There is a deep-seated serenity in him that rounds off his jokes, that gives them the satisfying quality of the whole-hearted. But it is the book's very strange defect that, though it conducts itself as if its aim were to comment garrulously on topical events, it has actually no relation to anything that anybody has been doing in England for the last ten years." Rebecca West
+ — New Repub 59:34 My 22 '29 450w

"A pleasantly controversial set of opinions on a diversity of subjects. The uniform length of the essays hints at newspaper origin. Mr. Chesterton does not heave paradoxes about as madly as heretofore, but he is, as usual the spokesman for the minority on almost every question." F: F. Van de Water
+ N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 2 '29 100w

"Chesterton is not profound. But he is sagacious. The great Opener of Windows. 'Generally Speaking' is an enormously refreshing book. Likewise, it is enormously entertaining." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p2 F 10 '29 1300w

"Common sense is expressed with uncommon wit. . . Chesterton follows, in his prose, the traditional English essay. If, like us, you find this precise, finished, predictable prose style restful and delightful, you are bound to enjoy 'Generally Speaking.' "
+ Outlook 151:267 F 13 '29 220w
St Louis 27:166 My '29
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p59 Ja 24 '29 250w

CHESTERTON, GILBERT KEITH. The poet and the lunatics; episodes in the life of Gabriel Gale. 269p $2.50 Dodd [7s 6d Cassell]
29-17227

Gabriel Gale, poet and artist, appears in each of the eight stories in the book. A poet may be accredited with some insight into the psychology of lunatics; by reason of such sympathetic insight, Gabriel Gale is able to solve the mystery of the yellow bird, to save a young man from madness, to discover the body of a vanished scientist, and the murder of the thirteenth guest at a dinner party.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 D 8 '29 250w

"These are extraordinarily good stories, as surprising as good mystery stories should be, and subtle as few of them are."
+ Christian Century 46:1513 D 4 '29 200w

"Mr. Chesterton has in this book presented a new character worthy to stand side by side with Father Brown. . . The stories are told in the true Chestertonian manner, which is why they do not in the least resemble the common, run-of-mine detective story."
+ N Y Times p22 N 3 '29 300w

"As a detective type Gabriel Gale probably has more integrity and more originality than any sleuth since Sherlock Holmes. It is not Gale's fault if one who is no more than a mere author to him, Gilbert K. Chesterton, rudely intrudes on his triumphs with sermons not less unctuous because they are ill-timed, ill-conceived and ill-mannered." P. D. Stong
+ — N Y World p11m N 3 '29 360w
Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 153:511 N 27 '29 50w

" 'The Poet and the Lunatics' presents the paradox of all his novels—very poor novels but delightful books. These new tales are very bad detective stories but make a very good book." R. C. Halliday
— + Sat R of Lit 6:504 D 7 '29 60w

"Despite his ingenuity and vigour, Mr. Chesterton cannot always prevent his rather ponderous stage-machinery from creaking. He produces, nevertheless, some brilliant and engaging effects." Gilbert Thomas
+ — Spec 143:134 Jl 27 '29 150w
Times [London Lit Sup p590 Jl 25 '29 520w

CHESTERTON, GILBERT KEITH, and SHAW, GEORGE BERNARD. Do we agree? a debate, with Hilaire Belloc in the chair. 47p $1 Mitchell [1s 6d C. Palmer]
335 Socialism. Capitalism 29-19448

This small book contains a report of a public debate between G. K. Chesterton and Bernard Shaw, presided over by Hilaire Belloc. The subject of the debate was the evils of capitalism, a subject on which the renowned antagonists brilliantly disagree.

"With two such brilliant opponents and with Hilaire Belloc presiding, the discussion must have had an edge which cold print can but feebly reflect. Mr Chesterton, as president of the Distributionist League, upholds the tenets of that foundation, while Mr Shaw lounges comfortably beneath the subdued lights of Fabian Socialism. Both sides retire in good order, after igniting a variety of verbal skyrockets in each other's honour."
+ Dial 86:530 Je '29 100w

"Shaw at least is realist enough to know and to say flatly that he and his kind are madmen—and he wonders why madmen have always been admired and listened to by normal, respectable citizens. I think I can tell him: he and Mr. Chesterton are the spiritual bread and the intellectual circuses which the rest of us eagerly consume. They are our sacred lunatics; the minor deities of a dying faith to which we continue to cling because it simplifies life and points to easy and comforting conclusions about complicated problems." Freda Kirchwey
Nation 128:106 Ja 23 '29 650w

CHESTERTON, G. K., and SHAW, G: B.—Cont.

"They are both very entertaining and both say things occasionally that are provocative of further thinking. A reader schooled in dialectics would be greatly diverted by the skill with which each of them eludes the other's central thought and makes valiant flank attacks. The debate must have afforded an excellent evening's entertainment."

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 13 '29 350w

CHEVALIER, JULIER C. Noah's grandchildren. 291p il $2 Doubleday, Doran 29-17891

Life in a typical Georgian family, pictured in the story of the everyday experiences of Gogi and his sister Keto who lived on the southern slopes of the Caucasus mountains, where the people claim descent from the greatgrandson of Noah.

---

Cleveland Open Shelf p131 N '29

Reviewed by O. M. Fuller

N Y World p11m N 17 '29 170w

St Louis 27:316 N '29

"While perhaps a trifle overloaded with information and detail, this is a stimulating and successful book, well written, well printed, and well illustrated." K. W. Seitz

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:401 N 16 '29 100w

CHEW, SAMUEL CLAGGETT. Swinburne. 335p il $3.50 Little

B or 92 Swinburne, Algernon Charles 29-7621

The publication of the definitive Bonchurch edition of Swinburne's works is made the occasion for a critical biography by Samuel C. Chew, professor of English literature at Bryn Mawr college. This new estimate, while putting its emphasis on Swinburne's lyric poetry, devotes more than the usual amount of space to his tragedies and prose writings.

---

Booklist 25:357 Je '29

"An honest, conscientious, scholarly work." H: Leffert

+ Bookm 69:318 My '29 520w

"The study is marked by an admirable insight, good temper, balance and wealth of information that must place it among the best-considered critical works of the time." Van Wyck Brooks

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Ap 14 '29 650w

"The book is a thoughtful and comprehensive study and a competent complement to the definitive edition." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 6 '29 650w

"In his strict reticence about the poet's life this critic is positively courageous. Not that he ignores Swinburne's personal career, which he sketches in as a background of the artistic career, but he feels that enough has been already told in Gosse's exhaustive and intimate record. He chooses rather to provide a fresh and careful illumination of the entire range of Swinburne's achievement. . . His analysis of poems and their qualities is always expert, his critical judgments fair, sympathetic, and searching, his expression always competent and often felicitous."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 8 '29 780w

"Professor Chew has brought to his record of the poet's life and to the interpretation of poems and dramas the same shrewdness of method and judgment which was apparent in his earlier studies of Hardy and Byron; and he has succeeded in giving us a considerable number of incidents which are lacking in the biographies of Edmund Gosse and Harold Nicolson, and an estimate which, though admittedly prejudiced in favor of Swinburne's rich imaginative powers and stylistic virtuosity, ranks considerably above those of Drinkwater, T. Earle Welby, and Woodberry, finding its place with the studies of Mackail, Lafourcade, and Paul de Reul." M. D. Zabel

+ Nation 128:536 My 1 '29 650w

"Exact in scholarship, sound in judgment, sensitively responsive in style. In a real sense, Mr. Chew's volume is final—his work will not have to be done again." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 59:103 Je 12 '29 1050w

"Professor Chew displays fine critical justness. His scholarship is admirable and the book, besides correcting errors of both Nicholson and Gosse, is a running guide to the mistakes of the Bonchurch Edition. Yet despite his equipment, Professor Chew is somehow baffled and confused by the poet . . . and his book, though praiseworthy, and useful, is something less important and exciting than the poet deserves." Lionel Trilling

+ — N Y Evening Post p8m My 18 '29 700w

"Swinburne's need is not a biographer but a sensitive and comprehending anthologist. Professor Chew quotes far too little of his poet's poetry. But his work is sympathetic, and, in the main, understanding."

+ — N Y Times p2 Mr 24 '29 1600w

"On the critical side the book sustains comparison with the best of its predecessors, such as Nicolson's monograph and Welby's second study, and in many respects surpasses them. It is well articulated, firm in its handling of fact, fresh in the treatment of familiar themes." C. K. Hyder

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1091 Je 8 '29 400w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 14 '29 100w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 12 '29 150w

"He has gathered a considerable body of interesting detail and presented it with clearness and judgment. Occasionally, as in other recent studies, we find the cream of the chapter, not rising to the top, but settling to the bottom and becoming a footnote. The volume does not change materially our previous estimates, but unites them into a firmer and richer synthesis." F: E. Pierce

+ Yale R n s 19:203 autumn '29 450w

CHIDECKEL, MAURICE. Strictly private! being the intimate diary of a medical practitioner; should the doctor tell? Well, I am telling. 335p il $2.50 Stratford [7s 6d Jarrolds]

610 Medicine 28-27738

A doctor confides to his journal the baffling, exciting, humorous, or discouraging events of his daily routine, and comments, parenthetically, on the chiefly sad spectacle of human behavior.

---

"The book embodies accurate medical diagnosis, and is written in a style that is both humorous and entertaining."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 26 '29 200w

"Some of his scenes from the human comedy are as simple and effective as Sherwood Anderson or Jim Tully: others are too labored. A practical brother-in-law and a sceptical wife form a chorus which is sometimes amusing."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:609 Ja 19 '29 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p458 Je 6 '29 70w

CHIDSEY, DONALD BARR. Bonnie Prince Charlie. 330p il $3.50 Day [16s Williams & Norgate]

B or 92 Charles Edward, the Young Pretender 28-23226

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"His book is plausible and sound. Its style is light and readable and cannot fail to interest anyone with even a faint leaning toward romanticism."

+ Bookm 68:xviii F '29 90w

"It will rank as a brilliant contribution to the literature of our days. The style is superb—exact yet supple—enriched with apt yet unusual words—and, above all, with short words. The narrative is full of drama, and there is eloquence." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 27 '29 1250w

St Louis 27:100 Mr '29

"In spite of a somewhat flamboyant style, Mr. Chidsey has succeeded in presenting his readers with a portrait of the prince which bears all the marks of verisimilitude. The historical student will be grateful for the exhaustive list of authorities which is printed at the end of the volume."

+ Sat R 147:414 Mr 23 '29 150w

"Mr. Chidsey has read the recent literature on the subject, but there are numerous indications of the limitations of his general knowledge. In spite of these deficiencies, Mr. Chidsey has achieved his object of producing 'a clear, well-rounded view of a complicated but . . . thrilling situation.' He writes vigorously in what he describes as 'common language' and tells his story with spirit."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p243 Mr 21 '29 220w

CHIDSEY, DONALD BARR. Marlborough; the portrait of a conqueror. 308p il $3.50 Day

B or 92 Marlborough, John Churchill, 1st duke of 29-20140

The biography of John Churchill, duke of Marlborough, English general and statesman, who served two kings of England, James II and William III, but who served himself best of all.

---

"In no sense is this biography a contribution to scholarship. It is drawn largely from secondary sources and is marred, in part, by evidences of hasty editing. But it is written in a competent journalistic style with a good deal of dramatic vigor. Save that the events it records are great and true, it might be a commendable work of fiction."

+ — Bookm 70:330 N '29 400w

"Another of the long succession of cynical, paprikaed studies, suave, journalistic, superficial, highly inaccurate, and calmly salacious. Change the names and the framework and you have the same style, the same cheap mechanical tricks and the same sensational appeal that have characterized a hundred works from the pens of the imitators of the Stracheys and the Maurois." A. L. Sachar

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 N 3 '29 750w

"Chidsey's 'Marlborough' is an excellent biography; yes, I will say a great biography; and a good political and military history of England from the latter part of the reign of Charles II to Queen Anne, except for an undervaluation of the revolution of 1688, an overvaluation of James II, and an underestimate of the Catholic peril in England in his time and even of the sincerity of Protestant belief in such a peril." W. E. Garrison

+ — Christian Century 46:1219 O 2 '29 230w

Reviewed by F: F. Van de Water

N Y Evening Post p11m O 19 '29 300w

"By his brilliant study of the Young Pretender, Mr. Chidsey established his right to paint 'the portrait' of a more illustrious subject. He has repeated his former success. Here is no mere scribbling of biography. This book is literature. It may be that the style of writing is rapid; even rough and ready. . . None can read this book without living in the actual company of the hero and his contemporaries." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p6 S 15 '29 2200w

"Superimposed qualities of popularity, in the form of conversational comments by the author, detract a little from the value of this quite impartial study." J. D. Tasker

+ — Outlook 153:111 S 18 '29 300w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 80:24 O '29 70w

St Louis 27:342 D '29

"The book is sadly disappointing. In the first place, the author writes after the fashion of the Sunday newspaper supplement. . . Another fault which will inconvenience a few readers is the unique character of the index. As far as this reviewer can discover from the copy assigned him there is no page reference in the index which bears any relation to the subject matter in the text." W. S. Hayward

— Sat R of Lit 6:367 N 9 '29 600w

CHILD, RICHARD WASHBURN. Writing on the wall; who shall govern us next? 274p $2 Sears

320.4 World politics. Democracy. United States—Politics and government 29-5518

"Mr. Child's major contention is that we are hypnotized in our faith in democracy. He maintains that we are ready for something better than bi-party or multi-party rule. The mass of people desire a strong leader, one who will brook no political interference with the well-being of the nation. In short, and frankly, government can be most efficiently managed by a Mussolini. In several chapters Mr. Child analyzes Italian Fascism, Spanish and Polish dictatorship, Russian Bolshevism."—Boston Transcript

---

"Richard Washburn Child, novelist and essayist for 'The Saturday Evening Post,' after three years as United States Ambassador at Rome, is filled with a sense of the death of 'democracy' and the looming imminence of new and nobler forms of government. Europe, he points out, has twenty-seven governments, and more than half of them are ruled by dictators. . . Mr. Child admires these 'strong men of Europe who have stepped into the breach when the results of futile parliamentarism threaten utter ruin.' " L: Gannett

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 Mr 31 '29 700w

"Mr. Child discusses our present social ailments with much unnecessary repetition, and yet with much reality. It is simply pitiable that his contentions could not have been stated more carefully, with far less repetition of ideas, words, phrases, and even entire sentences." W. M. T.

— + Boston Transcript p8 Mr 30 '29 680w

CHILDE, VERE GORDON. Most ancient East; the oriental prelude to European prehistory. 257p il $5 Knopf [15s K. Paul]

913.35 Egypt—Antiquities. Mesopotamia—Antiquities [29-12168]

"Professor Childe deals mainly with the prehistory (down to 3000 B.C.) of the Nile Valley and Mesopotamia, and introduces us to that of the Indus Valley—of which, as yet, we know little more than the bare existence."—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"A wealth of photographs of the various 'finds' in Sumer, India and Egypt adds greatly to the reality of the descriptions and interpretations. This history at its beginnings is filled with interest by the graphic and yet comprehensive treatment given it by Professor Childe." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 6 '29 370w

"Professor Childe's descriptions of these recently discovered stages in civilization are the first to be given us in a form that enables us to see them in relation to their past and future, and for that reason, though the book is deliberately popular in aim, both the student and the expert will find it of value."

+ Nation and Ath 44:502 Ja 5 '29 650w

"A new book by Prof. V. Gordon Childe is always welcomed by students. . . This book should be of definite interest to the non-specialist reader, as it is pleasantly written, copiously illustrated, and will enable him to place in their historical setting the discoveries that are continually being noticed in the daily Press." A. C. H.

+ Nature 123:559 Ap 13 '29 500w

"The layman will find his scholarship work too detailed and too allusive. . . For those already initiated, his book will be exceedingly useful as a brief compilation, up to the minute, on Near East discoveries." Lyman Bryson

+ — New Repub 59:106 Je 12 '29 180w

CHILDE, V. G.—Continued

"Professor Gordon Childe provides a much needed summary of the recent archæological discoveries at Ur and Kish, at Badari and the Fayum, and in the Indus Valley, which have thrown so amazing a light on the beginning and early development of that great antique civilisation from which the modern world so largely derives. Not only has he summarised the facts, he has also related them with each other and with the stages in human development which preceded and followed them—so far as it is possible to do so at the moment. And he has done all this in a book that the layman can understand and the expert respect and enjoy."

+ New Statesman 32:448 Ja 12 '29 400w

"So well and clearly written that it can easily be read by those who have merely a bowing acquaintance with its subject, this is a fascinating volume, giving us alluring glimpses of the beginning, of the youth of civilization, its first eager graspings and discoveries."

+ N Y Times p3 S 8 '29 550w

"The author's deep knowledge in the field of archæology keeps him from stubbornly thrusting some all too simple theory through the groaning facts, and allows him to admit how slight and hypothetical our knowledge of the past still is."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p952 D 6 '28 840w

CHILTON, ELEANOR CARROLL. Burning fountain. 336p $2.50 Day

29-8255

Janet and Donald were young intellectuals with a definite plan for their lives. The first two children were a part of the plan. But Lynneth, the third child, was born of a moment beyond reason during a wild thunderstorm. She moves among the family aloof, impersonal as a dryad, yet acutely affecting all their lives. The climax of her story comes when on a hot summer's day a storm breaks overhead and Lynneth, defying resistance, rushes out to give herself back to the elements.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:614 My '29

Booklist 25:394 Jl '29

Reviewed by G. B. Munson

Bookm 69:198 Ap '29 520w

"In 'The Burning Fountain' is to be found a blend of such antagonistic qualities as suspense and contemplation, loveliness and rigid reasoning, charm of manner and unmitigated seriousness. It has moreover an admirably firm and well planned structure, so that the endless intellectual explorations of the characters never become mere excursions." M. C. Dawson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Mr 24 '29 720w

"What appeals most in the story is a certain beauty of design which underlies everything else and affects everything in the story. We are conscious that the author herself models in beauty, that the strong forces she summons to her aid are parts of her plan, and that she is master of a difficult and lovely art." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 20 '29 370w

"It is a long, careful, rather uninteresting book." C. A. C.

— + New Repub 59:53 My 29 '29 160w

" 'The Burning Fountain' is a novel to be read slowly and pondered. Miss Chilton's work has the quality of disturbing beauty and her new book is earnest enough that she is a real novelist as well as a real poet." Herschel Brickell

+ N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 23 '29 780w

"There is beauty to her prose. It has color and grace and movement, when Miss Chilton permits. Her fault is intensiveness. She has barred and checked the flow of her narrative with disquisition, and, aiming to make her book profound, has risked making it heavy." F: F. Van de Water

+ — N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 27 '29 320w

"Its writing is seductive, the texture marvelously even, the words clear and precise and luminous and able to move in impalpable regions with a minimum of confusion. That is something for which to thank the gods of prose. But the story is so based on an element of fantastic symbology, so wrapped up with improbable chances, that one cannot forget its working hypotheses. If one can accept these hypotheses, one can accept the story; if the hypotheses are laughed out of court, then the story collapses and goes with them."

+ — N Y Times p8 Mr 24 '29 720w

Reviewed by Margery Latimer

N Y World p10m Mr 31 '29 420w

"The book is the reflection of a highly poetical and intelligent mind. It is a considerable advance over her first book in technique." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv My '29 160w

"With the quality and technique of a composer, the author has written a symphony, rather than a novel, around the Kenwyns, with Lynneth the Fey as the recurring theme. The book is bound to recall, to those who remember, the early work of Algernon Blackwood, and Thunderstorm, by G. B. Stern. 'The Burning Fountain' should find a place among the best of the psychological novels." Elizabeth Onativia

+ Outlook 151:506 Mr 27 '29 130w

"There is in this novel the same delicate distinction of style, almost mystical interpretation of nature, and scalpel-like analysis of personality that marked 'Shadows Waiting.' In the second novel the story obtrudes a little more than in the first and shows some forcing and inconsistencies to meet psychological and symbolic needs. But the same brooding, subterranean strain flows through them both, making for good and evil below the suave level of daily human amenities." Gladys Graham

+ Sat R of Lit 6:155 S 21 '29 400w

CHILTON, ELEANOR CARROLL, and AGAR, HERBERT. Garment of praise; the necessity for poetry. 401p $5 Doubleday, Doran

809.1 Poetry. English poetry—History and criticism 29-6706

A large and comprehensive work devoted to a study of the influence of poetry on life, and written by the joint authors of the collection of poems, Fire and sleet and candlelight (Book Review Digest, 1928). Part I discusses the nature of poetry, its purpose and methods. Part II treats of some of the major figures and trends in English poetry from Saxon days to Victorian. Part III is an attempt to relate poetry and the general life of today.

Booklist 25:351 Je '29

"The book is well informed by scholarship, agreeably written, and genuinely thoughtful. I hope that it will be widely read, for it should both enlarge contemporary perspectives on poetry and restore some standards we have neglected to keep in mind." G. B. Munson

+ Bookm 69:212 Ap '29 550

Reviewed by Newton Arvin

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Mr 17 '29 1300w

"The authors, who really do little more than dilute Matthew Arnold's essay on the study of poetry, woefully misunderstand poets like Chaucer, Pope, and T. S. Eliot, who do not fit their picture. And they throw the word 'spirit' around with shameful familiarity."

— Nation 128:722 Je 12 '29 120w

Reviewed by Horace Gregory

New Repub 58:181 Mr 27 '29 420w

"Both in their historical survey of the poetry of the past (which contains many admirable pages) and in their discussion of the present situation in which poetry finds itself, they tend altogether too much to see poetry as at best, and perhaps even essentially, a kind of spiritual affirmation; in short, a profound yea-saying toward the universe. But where the authors seem to the present reviewer to make a profound mistake is in their comparatively rigid extension of this notion as a dogmatic principle by which poetry may be tested." Conrad Aiken

— + N Y Evening Post p11m F 23 '29 1000w

" 'The Garment of Praise' is to be commended as a discussion on a high scholarly plane, valuable for its scope, illuminating because of its lucidity. To read it will increase one's pleasure in poetry." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p2 F 24 '29 1500w

" 'The Garment of Praise' is not light reading; it is for the special student of poetry. It is full of challenge, even when disagreement is frequent one admires the independent minds behind the solid structure." I: Goldberg

+ N Y World p10m F 10 '29 600w

"There is no doubt about the fundamental rightness of 'The Garment of Praise;' but there is doubt about the treatment. The subtitle of this large volume is 'The Necessity for Poetry;' the contention is that this age lacks poets, and that we need them. The plea may be expressed in writings about and roundabout, or it may be expressed by going straightforwardly to examples. The hazardous, indirect way tempts Mr. Agar, and his remarks, when they are vague, are often dubious, and sometimes dull. . . In spite of that, one's sympathy with Mr. Agar is strong. One is less sympathetic to Miss Chilton. . . She does not give us a close analysis; and throughout her chapters the absence of precision and the dependence on vaguely allusive phrases, make her difficult to read." F. V. Morley

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:826 Mr 30 '29 480w

" 'The Garment of Praise' touches at many points the same themes which are treated in 'The Good Estate of Poetry.' It is an intensely honest, sincere, and in many respects courageous book. It rests its case upon fundamentals, and it is inspired by an almost passionate belief in its contentions. It is worthy of the utmost respect, and the justification of an emphasis here upon its defects rather than on its virtues lies in the conviction that its authors have something to say which is well worth hearing, but which might be, and should be, more effectively said." J: L. Lowes

+ — Yale R n s 18:789 summer '29 460w

CHINARD, GILBERT. Thomas Jefferson, the apostle of Americanism. 548p il $5 Little

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas 29-19875

The original purpose of the author, who is professor of French literature in Johns Hopkins university, was to determine the contribution of the French thinkers to the political philosophy of Thomas Jefferson, but the study grew into a political biography and led its author to the conclusion that Jefferson developed his own ideas without dependence upon either French or English thinkers.

---

"Professor Chinard's excellent biography of Thomas Jefferson is the fruition of years of patient probing into the background of the statesman's mental processes and philosophy. Some fault will be found with the biographer's discussion of Jefferson as a political or party leader. Professor Chinard does not think he was 'such a deep politician.' Practical politicians know that Jefferson was perhaps the most consummate politician we have produced. But in his discussion of the Presidency and of the later period the author is admirable. Chinard's Jefferson is an interesting and a wise interpretation—along with Hirst's, the best one volume full length biography." C. G. Bowers

+ — Am Hist R 35:378 Ja '30 700w

Booklist 26:115 D '29

"Though temperate and even-handed to an extreme, M. Chinard never hesitates to take issue with other students of Jefferson's career where he thinks they have gone astray. Such independence would be temerity were it not that M. Chinard supports his interpretations with an overwhelming wealth of documentary evidence. On only one side is M. Chinard's biography disappointing. We look in vain through these compellingly interesting pages for any appreciation of that amazing versatility, catholicity of culture, creative artistic and literary ability that make the master of Monticello the most fascinating public figure in our history." H: S. Commager

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 N 3 '29 1100w

"A significant and important study which adds measurably to our understanding of the man." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 19 '29 1700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p148 D '29

"What a joy it is to find amid the blinding storm of books one representing years of quiet and unremitting investigation, and characterized by the calm moderation which we rightly expect in the best of French scholars!" C: A. Beard

+ Nation 129:686 D 4 '29 850w

"The special value of this delightful biography is in its annihilation of the old slander that Jefferson was not a great political philosopher in his own right and not an original thinker—in that, and in its demonstration that despite his sympathy with France he was passionately and wholly American. This biography belongs in the library of every Jeffersonian and should be read by every intelligent American. It is a contribution to Jeffersonian literature of the first order." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y Evening Post p6m S 28 '29 1100w

"The author proceeds with his theme in a vein of appreciation, even admiration of Jefferson. Perhaps he considered that any other general attitude would obstruct the development of his conception, which in its present form is a contribution of high merit to American biography. Where his subject seems to need a defender or an expositor he goes to the rescue. A more critical viewpoint might contribute toward carrying deeper conviction to the reader." A. S. Will

+ — N Y Times p4 O 20 '29 2000w

St Louis 27:342 D '29

"Both an able political biography and a penetrating and conscientious study of Jefferson's political, religious and social ideas. . , While Prof Chinard has not presented—or attempted—a full biographical portrait of Jefferson, he has interestingly interpreted Jefferson's career in the light of the man's ideas and principles, and has shown something of their evolution and European relationships."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 29 '29 1400w

CHOATE, FLORENCE, and CURTIS, ELIZABETH, comps. Little people of the hills. 234p $2.50 Harcourt

398 Fairy tales 28-22372

"Stories of dwarfs and giants, and heroes and dragons taken from the hills of Scotland and Ireland and Wales and the Scandinavian countries, and filled with the strange legends, the curious beliefs that people have which keep life from ever becoming commonplace."—N Y Times

---

Cleveland Open Shelf p32 F '29

" 'The Little People of the Hills' seems to me to have a special quality of its own, a freshness and humorous simplicity too often lost in the retelling of folk-tales for children."

+ N Y Evening Post p10m N 10 '28 50w

" 'The Dwarfs' Banquet' is one of the most entertaining of the stories in the volume and will create in each young reader a sense of disappointment that they could not have seen the dance witnessed by Aslog and Orm." M. G. Bonner

+ N Y Times p40 D 2 '28 220w

CHRISTIE, MRS AGATHA (MILLER). Partners in crime. 227p $3 Dodd [7s 6d Collins] 29-17226

Tommy Beresford, ex-secret service man, and his wife, known as Tuppence, took over a private detective agency at the suggestion of Scotland Yard. The former manager of the agency was being detained, quietly, by the authorities. The feuds the Beresfords inherited and the new cases which they solved kept them busy for many a day.

CHRISTIE, AGATHA—Continued

" 'Partners in Crime' is the kind of thing this department especially likes—a number of plots strung loosely together and gently spoofed the while, and preferably written either by Dorothy L. Sayers or Agatha Christie. Required reading."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ag 18 '29 150w

"Though this is not as thrilling as Agatha Christie's novels usually are, it is written in such a humorous and amusing style, its situations are at time so tragic and mysterious and the mystery which includes the lesser ones is so well developed that it is decidedly worth reading and would be a good book to take away when one is having a vacation, for at least one complete tale can be read at a sitting and it will keep one interested and amused if the way is long, or the day is dreary."
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 4 '29 400w

Reviewed by L. L. Irvine
Nation and Ath 46:143 O 26 '29 40w

"This volume is on a level with her best work."
+ New Statesman 33:718 S 21 '29 100w

"The entire book and the separate stories may be taken as hilarious burlesque or parodies of current detective fiction, or they may be taken as serious attempts on the part of the author to write stories in the manner of some of the masters of the art. Taken either way, they are distinctly worth while."
+ N Y Times p38 S 22 '29 270w

"By no means as good a detective story as we have a right to expect from Mrs. Christie, although it is amusing, and contains much good burlesque of modern sleuth yarns."
+ — Outlook 153:70 S 11 '29 80w

"It is soon apparent that in this book Miss Christie is having quiet fun with all the famous authors of mystery stories, including herself. Each story contains its quota of laughs as well as thrills, or rather more than can ordinarily be expected from a well turned out mystery story."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 25 '29 240w
Times [London] Lit Sup p824 O 17 '29 180w

CHRISTIE, MRS AGATHA (MILLER). Seven dials mystery. 310p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Collins] 29-7069

His fellow-guests at the house party hid eight alarm clocks in Gerry Wade's room. At noon next day seven clocks were found ranged in a row on the mantel while Gerry lay dead in bed. Lord Caterham's daughter "Bundle" and her friend Bill Eversleigh go into action as allies of Superintendent Battle to solve the lively mystery of the seven dials.

"All signs indicate that Mrs. Christie has been reading P. G. Wodehouse, and she does it very well in spots; this is her gayest thriller and mustn't be missed." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Mr 17 '29 160w
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 17 '29 120w

"Once Mrs. Christie was the queen of detective story writers. But her power has latterly declined."
— Nation and Ath 44:724 F 23 '29 180w

"One of the best detective stories that Mrs. Christie has written. It has not a dull page and in several respects is an advance upon her previous work in this genre. The plot is really ingenious and well worked out, and the concomitants—the characterisation and the dialogue—are thoroughly amusing, showing a distinct improvement in the writer's technique. The only fault we have to find with the story is that it is thoroughly unfair; the reader is given no chance whatever of guessing the solution one single paragraph before it is revealed."
+ — New Statesman 32:506 Ja 26 '29 320w

"The author has been so keen on preventing the reader from guessing the solution that she has rather overstepped the bounds of what should be permitted to a writer of detective stories. She has held out information which the reader should have had, and, not content with scattering false clues with a lavish hand, she has carefully avoided leaving any clues pointing to the real criminal. Worst of all, the solution itself is utterly preposterous."
— N Y Times p20 Ap 7 '29 200w

"If you like an amusing, exciting, well-written story, with a surprise at the end which has been so cleverly prepared that although you know it's coming you haven't the least suspicion of what it may be, we advise you to read this one. Or any other one by Agatha Christie, for that matter." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 151:480 Mr 20 '29 100w

"Mrs. Christie lacks the haphazard and credulous romanticism which makes the larger canvas of more extensive crime successful."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p278 Ap 4 '29 200w

CHRISTY, ARTHUR, tr. Images in jade; tr. from classical and modern Chinese poetry. 191p $3.50 Dutton

895.1 Chinese poetry 29-6881

Translations from classical and modern Chinese poetry with brief biographical sketches of the poets. Mr Christy has made these English renderings from his own knowledge of the originals and with the collaboration of two Chinese scholars.

"Translators of foreign poetry are usually gifted students of the language, but seldom has one the remarkable equipment possessed by Mr. Christy." A. E. L.
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 25 '29 400w

"Mr. Christy's only contribution of value, in view of the work already done by Arthur Waley and others in the classical field, is his group of poems translated from modern Chinese magazines. Even then there is remarkably little that sounds new. Tradition is strong in Chinese poetry."
— + Nation 128:sup492 Ap 17 '29 50w
Outlook 151:556 Ap 3 '29 30w

Reviewed by Florence Asycough
Sat R of Lit 6:313 O 26 '29 850w

CHURCHILL, WINSTON LEONARD SPENCER. The aftermath. 502p $5 Scribner [30s T. Butterworth]

940.5 World politics. Reconstruction (European war) 29-6360

Strung upon the thread of a personal narrative of the part taken by himself in the events described, the British Chancellor of the exchequer deals with world politics during the ten years following the Armistice. The Peace conference and treaties, the Russian revolution, the Irish settlement and the Greco-Turkish imbroglio are the topics treated at most length. This volume, covering the period from 1918 to 1928, completes the author's history of the war entitled "The world crisis."

"A vivid picture of Europe on the morrow of the Armistice, an intensely graphic description of the struggle with the problems of peace and reconstruction; but partial and incomplete." Theodore Collier
+ — Am Hist R 35:365 Ja '30 1150w
Booklist 25:353 Je '29

"All too frequently Mr. Churchill passes lightly over the story he alone can tell and repeats the stories that other men have told. The Aftermath seems to have been written with no plan at all. Rambling though it is, no one who wants to understand the world he lives in can afford to miss it." J: Bakeless
+ — Bookm 69:330 My '29 570w

"It must be confessed that the present volume seems to fall somewhat short of its powerful predecessors. Like them, it adds important historical notes; it is studded with brilliant passages and memorable scenes; the steady diction sweeps on as before, and almost the whole book is still one long, irresistible invitation to quotation. But perhaps one is a little tired of the method; perhaps it is that the period is resistant to Mr. Churchill's talents; perhaps it is only that the personal backgrounds take a larger place." Walter Millis

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Mr 24 '29 1600w

Boston Transcript p3 My 4 '29 780w

"It is a brilliant and enthralling picture of the tremendous but little understood drama which unfolded itself after the main fighting was over and the world set its hand to the task of rebuilding itself anew. The book both suffers and gains from its necessary identification with Mr. Churchill himself. Where he is dealing with events in which he played a personal part the story is alive and convincing even though at times it reads like an apologia written after the event. Where he had no personal part the historic perspective is less good and great sections of the field are left in obscurity." P. K.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 My 1 '29 650w

"The book is crowded with passages of resonant absurdity, among which the character sketch of Lenin stands out as unsurpassable bosh. But when these things and some others have been allowed for, we have to recognize that Winston Churchill's narrative is a political document of the first importance."

+ — Nation 128:498 Ap 24 '29 560w

"Mr. Churchill has finished his task—by far and away the greatest contribution to the history of the War, the only one which combines the gifts of the historian and born writer with the profound experiences and direct knowledge of one of the prime movers of events. This last volume is not so good I think, as the two which preceded it—a falling away which is probably one more of the disappointing consequences of the author's latest bout of office." J. M. Keynes

+ — Nation and Ath 44:782 Mr 9 '29 1750w

"The chronicle is finished. With what feelings does one lay down Mr. Churchill's two-thousandth page? Gratitude to one who can write with so much eloquence and feeling of things which are part of the lives of all of us of the war generation but which he saw and knew much closer and clearer. Admiration for his energies of mind and his intense absorption of intellectual interest and elemental emotion in what is for the moment the matter in hand—which is his best quality." J. M. Keynes

+ New Repub 58:178 Mr 27 '29 1600w

"Though its material is not so full of intense dramatic interest as that of its predecessors, it is in no way an unworthy sequel to them. The five volumes taken together comprise beyond all question the most comprehensive, the most accurate, the most readable—in short, in all respects the best—history of the war from the British standpoint that has yet been written or is ever likely to be written."

+ New Statesman 32:698 Mr 9 '29 2400w

"The Chancellor of the Exchequer is the first English statesman since Clarendon to present a personal work of such scope, and one can only express the wish that he had refrained—at least from issuing this last volume. For, although in his last chapter Mr. Churchill throws a sop to the present-day trend of mature thought on the subject of peace, his emotions are as hot, as seething today as they have ever been. No one has ever sung a more bitter Hymn of Hate than the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his exposition of the Russian situation; no one has ever been more blandly and bitingly rhetorical than this same gentleman on America's part in the war and peace." Lillian Rogers

— + N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 6 '28 900w

"These pages are couched in that vigorous and vivid style which distinguishes whatever Mr. Churchill writes. Unfortunately, the incendiary character of some of the opinions here expressed—by a member of the British Government—raises a question far more vital than that of style. . . . The mere recrimination in which the book abounds, the underlying pessimism which exults over unattained ideals, the sneers, the indifference to diplomatic propriety have been occasions for transforming Anglo-American relations into a political issue in which, judged by the bye-elections, the Churchillians are enjoying no very evident popularity. In Mr. Churchill's phrase, he has now to face 'the aftermath.'" P. W. Wilson

— + N Y Times p1 Mr 17 '29 2400w

"Colored by the point of view of an English statesman, who, if not always to be trusted as a historian, is rarely dull, and who writes remarkably well most of the time." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv My '29 120w

Pratt p32 summer '29

St Louis 27:207 Je '29

"I can recall no instance of a stateman who has spent twenty out of thirty years of public life in the almost continuous occupation of the highest offices, producing a history comparable in magnitude to Mr. Churchill's 'World Crisis.' . . A story of the Great War which, without flattery, will be a possession for ever." A. A. B.

+ Sat R 147:346 Mr 16 '29 2300w

"Frankness, humanism, breadth of vision, impersonality, and confession of error without any inferiority complex, associate themselves with brilliant judgments of character and accurate measurements of motives. His pages not only instruct the reader and absorb him in the interest of the narrative but also create in him a new regard for humankind." J. W. T. Mason

+ Sat R of Lit 5:793 Mr 23 '29 3200w

"Taken as a whole The World Crisis deserves its place in the front rank of English literature. It is, in every sense of the term, a classic work. And it is, and always will be, indispensable to a study of the causes, course, and results of the greatest War known to history. On balance, this last volume is the best of the five."

+ Spec 142:392 Mr 9 '29 1400w

Spec 142:1015 Je 29 '29 60w

"One lays it down with the feeling that, brilliant though he is as a writer and though his imagination is broad and richly furnished by the study of other times, Churchill is not always trustworthy or even sincere."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '29 1200w

"This last volume of his personal panorama, 1918-1928, is disappointing, not good history, personalia, or rhetoric as were the preceding four. On the War, Churchill was vivid and often convincing; on the aftermath, he is faced with intangibles that he seems neither to understand not interpret." Leon Whipple

— + Survey 62:315 Je 1 '29 320w

"Mr. Churchill's capacity as historian has long been recognized; he writes not as a student but as many of the great English historians have done—as a man of affairs, a politician, an orator—and in consequence he envisages his readers as the audience of an oration. This gives to him the merit of arrangement and concentration; with him we are far from the colourless chronicle, of which we have too many examples, which is satisfied in its unimpassioned progress to specify the orderly sequence of events. He is a master in the use of the limelight and uses it to bring into proper perspective the outstanding causes, principles, events and persons."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p171 Mr 7 '29 2550w

Wis Lib Bul 25:321 O '29

World Tomorrow 12:475 N '29 40w

CLAREMONT, CLAUDE ALBERT. Intelligence and mental growth. (New science ser.) 120p $1 Norton [2s 6d K. Paul]

151 Intellect. Knowledge, Theory of. Thought and thinking. Methodology 28-26465

"The present author puts forward his own thesis in regard to the nature of intelligence, and proceeds to test and validate it, using the

CLAREMONT, C. A.—Continued
methods and some of the results of the most advanced modern psychologists—Fabre, Freud and Montessori."—Boston Transcript

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ag 5 '28 480w

" 'Intelligence and Mental Growth' is particularly pertinent in this age of I. Q.'s and psychological activity." S. V. V. W.
+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 28 '28 250w

"The book as a whole depicts an attempt to dress the concept of intelligence in a new terminological garb, and does not, in the opinion of this reviewer, add appreciably to one's understanding of the subject, by way either of theoretical insight or of concrete information." Arthur Jersild
— J Philos 25:417 Jl 19 '28 520w
St Louis 26:323 D '28

CLARK, BARRETT HARPER, comp. Great short biographies of the world. 1407p $5 McBride [8s 6d Heinemann]
920 Biography 28-28532

"A collection of short biographies, literary portraits, and memoirs chosen from the literatures of the ancient and modern world."—Subtitle

Booklist 25:161 Ja '29

"Mr. Clark has given us abundance, variety and quality. In the collection we encounter all shades of sympathy, understanding and prejudice; we witness every possible angle of approach to the study of a person's life; we meet with all degrees of accuracy and inaccuracy; we run the gamut of style. The richness of the collection is at first bewildering, and thereafter fascinating." B. R. Redman
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ja 13 '29 680w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p5 D 29 '28 300w

"While one may wish to quarrel with Mr. Clark about this or that choice, this compilation, considered merely as a pioneer, is valuable. Here, within a single book, one may at least taste the best biographical productions of all Occidental civilizations from the time of the Greeks, the Latins, and the Medievalists up to and including the present day; and one could not previously do that without ransacking many library shelves." R. F. D.
+ — Nation 128:208 F 13 '29 130w

"Than biography, no line of exploration discovers broader or more fascinating prospects; and so it comes about that, in spite of all its faults—occasional mistranslations and a curious strain of vulgarity which has emboldened the editor to include a fifth-rate Americanised version of the Gospel of St. Luke—Mr. Clark's anthology is one of the most admirable publishing ventures of recent times." P: Quennell
+ — New Statesman 32:816 Ap 6 '29 1800w

"It is really surprising how much good stuff Mr. Clark has managed to get between the covers of this book." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 227:adv Ja '29 70w

"A book which no one interested in biography, scientific or otherwise, or in history, or in world-literature—in fact, which no one who reads at all should miss."
+ Spec 142:sup385 Mr 9 '29 630w
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 31 '29 260w

"A rich treat for the biography fan."
+ World Tomorrow 12:91 F '29 80w

CLARK, ELLERY HARDING. Strength of the hills; a story of Andrew Jackson, and of the pioneers of Tennessee. 350p $2 Crowell
Jackson, Andrew—Fiction 29-1807

The story opens in 1776 when the narrator, a lad of sixteen living in Virginia, tho English born, takes the side of the colonies and with his friend Gideon Ashe, woodsman and scout, takes part in the campaigns against the British and the Indians. Andrew Jackson becomes his friend and hero, and as the story progresses it centers more and more about Jackson, closing with his inauguration as President.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ap 7 '29 100w

"The story of Jackson is carefully told from authorized historical accounts, making Jackson the outstanding figure in every incident. His personality as a soldier is well described, and equally well done is the portion which deals with Jackson as a man among men."
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 4 '29 130w

"Interesting and competently written historical narrative."
+ N Y Times p9 Mr 24 '29 300w

CLARK, ELMER TALMAGE. Psychology of religious awakening. 170p $2.50 Macmillan
248 Conversion. Religion—Psychology 29-3621

Student response to a questionnaire on personal religious experience sent to many colleges and universities thruout the country is the basis of this study. The author is assistant secretary of the board of missions of the Methodist Episcopal church, South.

"The book abounds in tables, graphs, and diagrams. There are copious footnotes, and a rather extensive but heterogeneous bibliography. On every page are evidences of the author's laborious efforts to organize multitudinous details, to grasp and use psychological and sociological terms with nicety, and to take account of all relevant findings already published. His care, indeed, is matched only by the negligence of the proof-reader, who has let misspellings, split infinitives, and grammatical errors slip by. The book is interestingly written. Several case reports vivify the author's categories. Religious educators and ministers should find it of considerable value as a rough indication of trends in religious development." D. M. Trout
+ Am J Soc 35:495 N '29 750w

"Graphs, tables and statistics are used to present the findings in a truly graphic way. Dr. Clark has had the cooperation of sixty college professors in his work and his results and research are a remarkable piece of work, particularly as they show the trend and tendency of the last few years in contrast with a quarter of a century ago."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 9 '29 220w

"An admirable book, much needed to supplement and bring up to date the work of James, Starbuck and Coe of twenty-five years ago." J. H. Titus
+ Churchman 139:16 Je 22 '29 200w

"The book deserves careful study as a splendid illustration of the merits and demerits of a particular type of social method, as well as for the suggestive findings which the author has deduced." S. G. Cole
+ Crozer Q 6:513 O '29 430w

"As a whole the author has skilfully handled a large amount of data and has clearly presented some interesting conclusions." W: W. Sweet
+ J Religion 9:653 O '29 800w

Reviewed by E. B. Chaffee
Outlook 151:433 Mr 13 '29 150w
St Louis 27:26 S '29

"Dr. Clark's book may be commended for its judicial spirit and its fair-mindedness."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p542 Jl 4 '29 210w

CLARK, KENNETH. Gothic revival; an essay in the history of taste. 307p il $6 Scribner [21s Constable]
723.5 Architecture, Gothic. Architecture—England [29-2803]

"Mr. Clark's book traces the Gothic revival from its beginnings in the 18th century which are symbolized for the world in Walpole's Strawberry villa, through the revival of antiquarian studies at the turn of the century to the religious and esthetic theories and architectural activity of 19th century Gothic. The origins of the movement and its relations with literary romanticism are pleasantly sketched. The 19th century movement after the first quarter is presented in a few chapters on individual figures or events."—Springf'd Republican

---

"Mr. Clark's book is a remarkable essay in what is almost a new type of criticism. Rather than a history of art it is a history of taste, since the whole sequence of events is controlled rather by the taste of the amateur than by the special impulses of the creative artist. Our author has seen what a grand tragi-comedy his subject provides, and he has unfolded its fantastic vicissitudes with a dry humorous precision which is very enjoyable." Roger Fry

+ Nation and Ath 45:22 Ap 6 '29 1000w

"Mr. Clark has all the necessary qualifications, and has written an admirable book. . . Like Mr. Strachey writing about Queen Victoria, Mr. Clark writing about the architecture of her reign is at once humorous and tender, and, above all, understanding. He sees clearly the points at issue, and he states them forcibly. He has an uncommon flair for the obscure causes that lie behind complex movements in the history of taste, and an enviable aptitude for discovering new connections of thought in well-recognised phenomena."

+ New Statesman 32:supx D 1 '28 750w

"Mr. Lytton Strachey and others have achieved biography without blind hero-worship. Mr. Clark has applied similar methods in his 'History of the Gothic Revival' and the subject could hardly have been handled otherwise today with an equal chance of popularity. Dealing rather fully and picturesquely with this tragi-comedy of the oppression, exploitation and perversion of the Art of Building, Mr. Clark has produced a work amusing enough to the light-hearted." Walter Bayes

+ Sat R 146:577 N 3 '28 880w

"Mr. Clark's book is scholarly and as delightful as it is important." W. S. Lewis

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1145 Je 29 '29 580w

"Mr. Clark's book is sprightly and sensitive, scholarly and entertaining. Though dissent from individual judgments may be expressed, Mr. Clark has produced an intelligent and delightful 'study in the history of taste,' of even greater interest to the general reader or the literary or social student than to the historian of architecture."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Mr 8 '29 880w

"Wholly fascinating essay."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p823 N 8 '28 1750w

CLARK, KENNETH SHERMAN. Music in industry. 383p il $3 Nat. bureau for the advancement of music, 45 W. 45th st., N.Y.

780 Music—United States. Music in industry. Efficiency, Industrial 29-8318

This survey of the National bureau for the advancement of music bears testimony to the practical value of music in a wide variety of industries and its recognition by successful business men as an economic asset. The latter part of the book is devoted to summaries of reports of musical activities in individual companies, grouped by states.

---

Booklist 25:350 Je '29

Boston Transcript p5 Je 22 '29 530w

CLARK, LEON PIERCE. Napoleon: self-destroyed; foreword by James Harvey Robinson. 253p il $3 Cape

B or 92 Napoleon I, emperor of the French 29-15502

A biography of Napoleon written by a professional psychologist and disciple of Freud in which the Emperor is interpreted as an epileptic. "The object of this study," Dr. Clark says at the very outset, "is so to use incidents in the outer life of Napoleon as to illustrate the inner development of a grand neurosis of a type common even today, a neurosis whose victims are so often ranked as perfectly sane and normal." (N Y Times)

---

"No one will deny the interest of the author's project. An essential condition of success, however, is that the new principles and technique be applied to established facts, and not to phenomena partly fictitious or inexactly described."

— Am Hist R 35:164 O '29 470w

"Dr. Pierce Clark may be a noted psychologist, but he is no historian, and Napoleon can only be approached through an adequate knowledge of history. . . Dr. Clark has looked over a number of 'authorities,' evidently in the most uncritical spirit; they have failed to dispel his total unfamiliarity with the field. This comes out practically on every page—in faulty perspective or actual inaccuracies. . . Dr. Clark is a psychologist. But how can we have faith in his diagnosis if we know him to be so utterly indifferent to facts?" Albert Guerard

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ag 11 '29 1300w

"The value of Dr. Clark's work, and it is a very considerable value, lies in his tracing through the career of Napoleon and showing how, at every turn, it was his inflated ego—or, in other words, his complete and almost maniacal selfishness—which brought first success and then disaster." W. E. Garrison

+ — Christian Century 46:1219 O 2 '29 140w

Current Hist 31:231 N '29 400w

"Dr. Clark has supplied Napoleonic literature with a curiosity. The entire work has the character of a dream, sensational and vivid. Only once does the conception become false. In conclusion, Dr. Clark attempts to retrace the steps of his argument by analyzing various portraits of Napoleon made by at least a dozen artists and reproduced plentifully throughout his volume. Here it is quite impossible to take him seriously." Horace Gregory

+ — N Y Evening Post p7m Ag 3 '29 400w

"The author traces Napoleon's career from earliest infancy to his death at St. Helena, but he eschews all details not directly conducive to proving his case. . . As a prober into the French Emperor's 'Narcism,' this American psychological surgeon is painstaking and merciless. . . The steady development of Napoleon the Narcist is painted by the author with telling strokes." T. R. Ybarra

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 21 '29 1500w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 80:16 S '29 170w

St Louis 27:314 N '29

CLARK, VICTOR SELDEN. History of manufactures in the United States; with an introd. note by Henry W. Farnam; pub. for the Carnegie inst. of Washington. 1929 ed. 3v $15 McGraw

330.973 United States—Manufactures. United States—Industries 29-10065

"These volumes comprise a revision of History of manufactures in the United States 1607-1860, published in 1916, a continuation of this history down to 1914 and additional chapters reviewing the principal facts of one manufacturing development from the beginning of the world war to the present time."—Preface

---

"Readers with particular interest in labor, the tariff, currency, marketing, commerce, business organization, financial crises or in technical processes, may feel that one or more of these aspects have not at various times been adequately weighted; but, in general, Dr. Clark has plotted his way with a sure footing. Without neglecting any of these phases, he has been extraordinarily skillful in avoiding long excursions into related fields, but has made them all subserve his story of the development, organization and interaction of manufactures. At the same time, without in any way sacrificing essentials, the narrative might have been bright-

CLARK, V: S.—Continued
ened by the introduction of some biographical material, and some help might have been extended to the reader in catching the mighty onward sweep of the industrial drama." H. U. Faulkner

+ Am Econ R 19:447 S '29 920w

Reviewed by H. U. Faulkner
Am Econ R 19:664 D '29 250w

"All readers of this book will look forward with enthusiasm and pleasure to reading the second volume of this scholarly monumental undertaking." F. S. Warner

+ Ann Am Acad 144:160 Jl '29 130w (Review of v 1)

"This first volume of Victor S. Clark's 'History of Manufactures in the United States' will be followed before the end of the year by the second and third volumes which will carry on the story, the former to 1893 and the latter to 1928. The three volumes will thus cover the entire history of manufacturing in this country and will offer the first comprehensive account of it that has ever been made."

+ N Y Times p23 My 26 '29 300w (Review of v 1)

Times [London] Lit Sup p950 D 6 '28 320w

CLARK, WILLIAM BELL. When the U-boats came to America. 359p il $3 Little

940.451 European war, 1914-1918—Naval operations—Submarine 29-20137

A history of the operations of German submarines in the western Atlantic during the last six months of the World war, with an account of their effect upon the United States.

Bookm 70:x Ja '30 120w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan
Nation 129:725 D 11 '29 700w

"Mr. Clark's book is the result of extensive and painstaking research and its detailed and accurate narrative, with its many thrilling tales of heroic action and endurance, makes an interesting and important page, of which too little has heretofore been known, of America's participation in the World War."

+ N Y Times p13 N 17 '29 430w

"Mr. Clark's book is a valuable historical record and reminds us that our days of isolation are over. If there ever is another world war raiders will come up out of the sea to attack us on all sides while others are bombarding us from the clouds. 'When the U-Boats Came to America' will make almost any reader eager for world peace. It also will make him feel a bit uneasy and eager to retain some form of adequate protection." Lowell Thomas

+ N Y World p11m D 8 '29 1400w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:16 N '29 100w
St Louis 27:343 D '29

CLARK, WILLIAM MANSFIELD. Determination of hydrogen ions; an elementary treatise on electrode, indicator and supplementary methods, with an indexed bibliography on applications. 3d ed 717p $6.50 Williams & Wilkins [30s Bailliere]

541.2 Ions. Electrolysis. Hydrogen 28-19407

"This third edition is completely rewritten on a broader, more philosophical, more fundamental foundation than the others were, and has been considerably expanded both from the experimental and theoretical sides."—Chem & Met Eng

"The third edition of this work, which has become almost classic, especially in biological fields, is 50 per cent larger than the second edition and more than double the size of the first edition, though it has not become unwieldy. The older chapters have been very largely rewritten and much new matter incorporated, and the appendix, which has been greatly amplified, contains a fund of information."

+ Am J Pub Health 19:125 Ja '29 400w

"Perhaps no book on chemistry in recent years has been accorded such a ready reception by such a large scientific public as was this book in its previous editions; and the names of few authors have become so completely identified with their subject, in the minds of that public, as is the case here. For this book presented for the first time the technique of hydrogen-ion determination, that subject so vital in chemical, industrial, biological, physiological and medical research, in one clearly written, authoritative volume." J. L. R. Morgan

+ Chem & Met Eng 36:97 F '29 320w

CLARK-KENNEDY, ARCHIBALD EDMUND. Stephen Hales; an eighteenth century biography. 256p il $6 Macmillan [15s Cambridge univ. press]

B or 92 Hales, Stephen [29-21113]

"A scientific divine who did much good work in his day is worthily commemorated in this memoir. Hales was born in 1677, went to Cambridge in 1696 and left it in 1709 to become the parson of Teddington, where he died in 1761. He was one of the Cambridge pioneers of natural science, shocked his contemporaries by vivisecting animals to study blood pressure and interested the Royal Society by his researches into the flow of sap in plants so that he was elected F.R.S. Hales was a practical philosopher. He took an active share in the founding of Oglethorpe's colony of Georgia, and he devised a ventilator which greatly reduced the mortality in emigrant and slave ships and which was tried in old Newgate in the vain hope of diminishing the ravages of gaol fever."—Spec

"As a biography, the work is exceptionally well done. The illustrations are numerous and beautiful, and prove Hale's ingenuity in devising and making such apparatus as well as his genius in working up the scientific problems." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 19:1176 O '29 430w

"Dr. Clark-Kennedy's biography is pleasant, concise, and lucid."

+ Nation and Ath 45:404 Je 22 '29 150w

"A good deal of Dr. Clark-Kennedy's excellent work is, inevitably, of a severely technical nature; but, speaking from the lay point of view, we can say we have found nearly all so clearly put as to be quite intelligible; and the main portion is such that it ought to be read by all who desire the stimulus of a noble example, and the pleasure of reading a good book."

+ New Statesman 33:244 Je 1 '29 630w

"Dr. Clark-Kennedy's admirable book is a valuable contribution to the history of science in England."

+ Spec 143:99 Jl 20 '29 180w

"Dr. Clark-Kennedy, who is a Fellow of Hales's own college, had a peculiarly favorable opportunity of producing a fresh and interesting study. He has acquitted himself admirably of his charge and has produced a living picture of a man, as well as setting forth the nature of his scientific achievements in a way that can be understood by those with little or no scientific training. We would add a word of praise of the fourteen collotype plates which illustrate this handsome volume."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p693 S 12 '29 1600w

CLARKE, DONALD HENDERSON. In the reign of Rothstein. 306p $2.50 Vanguard press

364 Rothstein, Arnold. Crime and criminals. Gambling. New York (city)—Social conditions 29-5002

"One who used to be a newspaper man himself presents the low-down on the upper layers of the underworld. Here is the story of the peculiar power which 'A. R.' wielded over criminals, criminal hunters, criminal lawyers and judges. Here is the story of how Rothstein won $800,000 on a single horse race and lost $300,000 on another. Here is the story of Nicky Arnstein, Dapper Don Collins, Fuller and McGee; of bond robberies, fixed baseball, fraudulent bucketshops; of travelling crap-games, automobile stealing and jury fixing. The central figure of the narrative is not Rothstein himself; he is, rather, the background against which others are lined up."—Bookm

Bookm 69:xviii Ap '29 120w

"Just why Mr. Clarke of the New York World has devoted himself to this task is difficult to understand; unless it is for the purpose of serving the society of scandal-mongers with a concentrated supply of their chief stock-in-trade. . . . Loose arrangement of the material, needless repetitions and a general desultory manner are unmistakable indices of the haste in which the book was written."

— Boston Transcript p4 Mr 23 '29 160w

"Mr. Clarke's book is rather a wax gallery of the Broadway he knows than a study of Arnold Rothstein, and character is only incidentally revealed through brief and unarticulated actions in the same way as it is now and then made clear in newspaper accounts. However, it will supplement the memories of New York newspapermen and give to outsiders a remarkable surface-cinema of a strange group of the type which constantly flares across Broadway and the tabloids." Dudley Nichols

Nation 129:199 Ag 21 '29 1000w

"The book is a hodge-podge of scandal and gossip concerning New York's demi-monde. About fifty per cent of it is exceedingly interesting, albeit badly written. The other fifty per cent, which apparently has been added to swell the manuscript out to book size, seems to me to be valueless." E: H. Bierstadt

— + Outlook 151:388 Mr 6 '29 120w

CLARKE, DONALD HENDERSON. Louis Beretti. 285p $2.50 Vanguard press

29-28946

"This is the story of an Italo-American gorilla's ascent from the obscurity of the parental Bowery pushcart to wealth and fame as a terrific bruiser, boss hoodlum, master bootlegger, Broadway night resort and slum speakeasy owner."—N Y World

"Racketeering is the latest of romantic criminal vocations; it is the happy hunting ground of modern Robin Hoods. Donald Henderson Clarke must thank his instincts of a reporter for keeping this story unsentimental. With gusto he lays on local color: girls, junk, booze, swearing and situations are all paraded without censorship, and almost all without clothing. . . . The story is good, and its ending is exciting."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 N 24 '29 500w

"It seems to me that Mr. Clarke has done a very good job with Louis, with most of his gangster and drunken reporter friends and his family. He is not a complex character, but he is a very solid and completely credible one. Not all of his adventures are convincing, but Louis always is. And his story is not only an accurate case history, but a good tale." Malcolm Logan

+ N Y Evening Post p10m N 9 '29 450w

"A fascinating, realistic study of a gangster."

+ N Y Times p33 N 24 '29 250w

"Related in a crudely vigorous style appropriate to depiction of the subject, and those who fancy raw, odorous, tough and gory reading should get a lusty kick out of its pages. Our own opinion is that the book shares with 'Little Caesar' pre-eminent place among the novels of this type issued in the past year, and that people who dread coarse language, evil characters, primitive violence and abysmal squalor should by all means steer clear of it." E. C. B.

N Y World p11m N 17 '29 200w

CLARKE, EDWIN LEAVITT. Art of straight thinking; a primer of scientific method for social inquiry. 470p $3 (15s) Appleton

153 Thought and thinking. Science—Methodology. Propaganda. Antipathies and prejudices 29-19202

"Each chapter is introduced by an extended quotation illustrative of straight thinking or of extremely or insidiously fallacious reasoning. Each chapter proceeds to analyze this quotation and develop from it and from other illustrations the laws of straight thinking, which, while frequently most academically stated, are none the less clear and cogent. Case material, exercises and suggested readings complete the volume."—Boston Transcript

"This is a very useful and eminently practical book which covers the fields embraced in elementary logic, Spencer's Study of Sociology and Lundberg's Social Research. It is designed as an introduction to the methodology of research and interpretation in the social sciences. . . The work is not an original or distinguished intellectual achievement, but it is a sane, thoughtful, and exceedingly helpful compilation." H. E. Barnes

+ Am Hist R 35:388 Ja '30 300w

Booklist 26:54 N '29

Bookm 70:xii O '29 80w

"Every intelligent citizen can profit by reading 'The Art of Straight Thinking.' Every reader will find some of his pet notions and loyalties exploded." W. M. T.

+ Boston Transcript p5 S 14 '29 650w

"It is throughout a study of the methods of thinking, not a defense of any particular set of conclusions. A careful reading of this treatise or some other like it—and I do not know of any other just like it—would go a long way toward making possible a public opinion which would not be a reflection of prejudice and propaganda but would have some reliable relation to reality." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 46:1091 S 4 '29 240w

CLARKE, ISABEL CONSTANCE. We that are left. 320p $2.50 Longmans [7s 6d Hutchinson]

[29-23133]

The Laceys have three children: Olwen, Alison, and Aubrey—the latter a neurotic seventeen-year-old boy, to whom Alison is devoted. For Aubrey's sake she marries the millionaire, Clyde Delarode, for the Laceys have been impoverished since the war. The rest of the story is concerned with the antagonism between Delarode and Aubrey, until Aubrey's death brings Alison's problem to a solution.

"Miss Clarke has written an old-fashioned story about post-war people. It is long and sad. Even the most objective reader (and this is hardly the kind of novel to be read objectively) will not have much patience with Miss Clarke's characters, let alone sympathy with what he understands to be her view of them."

— Nation and Ath 45:632 Ag 10 '29 170w

"Miss Clarke writes from a definite standpoint, though she is too wise an author to give her views the unwelcome weight of obvious propaganda. But it is a matter of opinion whether she has faced her problem squarely—Aubrey's death is really no solution of his earthly difficulties. Possibly this accounts for a slackening of interest in the latter half of the book."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p609 Ag 1 '29 230w

CLARKE, KATHLEEN MACNEAL. Under the skin. 298p $2 Macaulay

29-7086

"Fluctuating between England and Hawaii, the tale is woven around a weakling elder son and his bride. The latter is shipwrecked on an uncharted island among the Hawaiian group, and finally rescued through an old doctor friend of the family. However, when she returns to home and husband, there are two children—one of them the husband's daughter, the other that of a native. As twins the children grow up. Then they are taken to Honolulu on a visit. What happens there complicates an already complicated situation and furnishes a dramatic conclusion."—N Y Times

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ap 28 '29 100w

Boston Transcript p5 S 7 '29 330w

CLARKE, K. M.—Continued

"A good enough yarn, with a colorful background."

+ — N Y Times p19 Je 16 '29 160w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 30 '29 220w

CLAVIJO, RUY GONZALEZ DE. Embassy to Tamerlane, 1403-1406; tr. from the Spanish by Guy Le Strange; with an introduction. (Broadway travellers) 375p $5 Harper

915 Voyages and travels. Timūr, the Great. Asia—Description and travel

In 1406 Clavijo, the Spanish ambassador to the court of Tamerlane at Samarkand, wrote this narrative of his embassy. The first English translation appeared in 1859. The present translation contains maps not available for the earlier editions which, with corrected place names, make the travels easier to follow.

---

Boston Transcript p2 My 1 '29 880w

Cleveland Open Shelf p92 Je '29

Nation 129:257 S 4 '29 150w

"A very welcome addition to the Broadway Travellers, a series to which we are already much indebted. Mr. Le Strange's notes are adequate and informing without running to unnecessary length."

+ New Statesman 31:456 Jl 14 '28 1250w

"The first English translation of this notable document since 1859. Clavijo's account of his days with Tamerlane is curious and vivid." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 13 '29 350w

"Scholars and the general reading public alike will welcome this new edition of one of the most important travel books of the Middle Ages and one of the most vigorous and refreshing narratives of adventures in strange parts of the earth at any time. . . The translator's notes are concise, illuminating, and authoritative; without cumbersome display and designed merely to be useful to the general reader, they contrive to be models of scholarship and good sense. The volume is attractively printed and adequately provided with simple, clear maps. Its publication is a boon alike to the special student of Central Asian geography and history and to the unscholarly reader to whom the romance of other times and strange places makes appeal. The present edition should find many such readers. For Clavijo's is an immortal book." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 6:18 Ag 3 '29 1250w

"Considered merely as a travel-book this old Spanish narrative ought to hold the interest of the general reader, and to students of Byzantine and Mohammedan history it will be found of very special importance. . . The translation, in strong quiet prose, enjoys the double advantage of having been the work of one who is both a Spanish scholar and has himself travelled over the greater part of Clavijo's land-route."

+ Spec 141:248 Ag 25 '28 700w

CLAY, HENRY. Post-war unemployment problem. 208p $3.40 (8s 6d) Macmillan

331.137 Unemployment

Professor Clay begins his discussion with a general examination of the unemployment situation, both before and after the war, showing differences and similarities between the two periods. The remedy which he offers for present conditions is rationalization, or industrial combination, with the object of securing not monopoly prices, but certain productive economies.

---

"As a clear-thinking and practical-minded economist, Professor Clay has made for himself a solid reputation in the industrial world. He never considers economic data in vacua, he has no particular axe to grind, and by avoiding technicalities he reaches a wide public. His present book is a closely argued work which examines the causes of post-war unemployment, criticizes the remedies which have been suggested or tried, and indicates a possible way out of the morass. It is a thesis of considerable topical importance."

+ Sat R 148:547 N 9 '29 550w

"His exposition is so clear that readers with no economic learning will be able to follow it. His method distills clarity; he reiterates deliberately without ever repeating himself carelessly. He looks at the same truth over and over again from very slightly different angles. His meaning can never be misunderstood."

+ Spec 143:599 O 26 '29 750w

"Professor Clay's book reviews the problem of unemployment in this country with the author's usual mastery of details, and indicates with unusual decision the only effective way of solving it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p776 O 10 '29 1600w

CLAY, HENRY. Problem of industrial relations, and other lectures. 322p $4.50 (12s) Macmillan

331.1 Industrial relations. Labor and laboring classes—Great Britain

Studies of the difficulties faced by British industry during the years since the war. Contents: The problem of industrial relations on the eve of the war; Government control of wages in war-time; The post-war wages problem; Unemployment and wage-rates; Export trades and unemployment; The Whitley reports and the machinery of conciliation; Government intervention in trade disputes; The place of arbitration in industrial disputes; Wages theory and the minimum wage; The authoritarian element in distribution; Property and inheritance; The distribution of capital in England and Wales; A word for "laissez-faire"; Index.

---

"The book is confined almost entirely to conditions in England, and as an explanation of war-time and present-day conditions it is a desirable contribution." E. C. Robbins

+ Am Econ R 19:711 D '29 700w

"Professor Clay being a consistent thinker, this method of reprint subjects the reader to a certain amount of repetition, which is however easily to be borne in view of the clarity with which the author expounds his leading ideas and the interest of the historical and statistical studies out of which they spring." D. H. Robertson

+ Nation and Ath 45:479 Jl 6 '29 650w

"Many of Professor Clay's judgments are hesitant, and there is a good deal in his book that tends towards the commonplace."

New Statesman 33:282 Je 8 '29 250w

"Weighty volume of lectures. . . Professor Clay has a judicial mind and a lucid style."

+ Spec 142:827 My 25 '29 400w

"The whole volume has the value of sober and reasoned analysis by a competent economist of many questions that confront us all to-day."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p442 Je 6 '29 1200w

CLAY, ROBERT KEATING. Carmen Sheila. 312p $2 Lippincott [7s 6d Blackwood]

29-7071

Two young adventurers, Andrew Parr, an Irishman, and Lee Wilmot, an American, on board a South American steamer, decide to help a lady in distress. Carmen Sheila de Sotelo is searching for her beloved brother, Juan, who has got mixed up in one of the ever-present revolutions. It happens that Juan was executed on the very day they landed, but that does not come out until later. Carmen falls in love with Parr, which makes his share of the adventure worth while.

---

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 6 '29 250w

"Mr. Clay enters at times into too long and too formal explanations of the states of mind of his various characters, an unnecessary fault when a writer has the ability, as Mr. Clay has, to indicate thought and emotion by more subtle and less direct means. Greater failings could, however, be forgiven him, for he has succeeded in writing a good book in a manner that in detail, if not in outline, differs agreeably from the conventional."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p960 D 6 '28 400w

CLAYTON, PHILIP THOMAS BYARD. Plain tales from Flanders. 167p $1.40 (3s 6d) Longmans

940.478 Talbot House, Peperinghe, Belgium.
Toc H 29-20663

Recollection and reflection, in a series of essays, upon certain spiritual experiences during the war, by an English padre who founded Toc H (Talbot House), and kept it going during the fighting in the Ypres Salient.

"The 'Tales' by the Padre-Founder of Toc H are as sentimental as the basis of that institution: Kipling and holy water, they might be called. But the defects are English defects, and to be cured by understanding, not scorn."
— Nation and Ath 46:sup226 N 9 '29 40w

"In this little book Mr. Clayton draws again upon his memories of the comradeship that endeared the muddy, bloody [Ypres] Salient to him. In attempting to explain how wonderful the men were, he ultimately draws his own portrait, and none can read his pages without understanding the reverence still felt for him even by those who enjoyed no part in his spiritual enthusiasm and had but the most casual experience of his cheerfulness and unfailing hospitality."
+ Sat R 148:584 N 16 '29 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p820 O 17 '29 400w

CLEMENCEAU, GEORGES EUGENE BENJAMIN. American reconstruction, 1865-1870, and the impeachment of President Johnson; ed. with an introd. by Fernand Baldensperger; tr. by Margaret MacVeagh. 300p il $5 Dial press

973.8 Reconstruction. Johnson, Andrew
28-28984

Letters written for the Paris Temps anonymously, while Clemenceau lived in this country from 1865 to 1870, have been unearthed and edited. The letters give the young Frenchman's ideas and impression of the United States during the reconstruction period which followed the Civil war.

Bookm 68:vii F '29 200w

"If there is little in the letters that is new, and not much to suggest the extreme radicalism and savage style of the 'Tiger' in his later years, they are well worth reading as an entertaining and detached view of American politics during the first years of reconstruction and as early illustrations of a journalistic gift which was soon to be displayed in striking fashion in the political battles of France."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 27 '29 950w

"[The letters'] contribution to the history of the reconstruction period, if contribution be the proper term with which to label them, is chiefly as a record of violent prejudices now thoroughly discredited by American commentators. If they are to be taken as interpreting a historical episode, they ought to be weighed in connection with the chapters on reconstruction by historians such as Rhodes and Schouler, and especially in connection with the evidence presented in Robert W. Winston's 'Andrew Johnson, Plebian and Patriot.'" A. S. Will
N Y Times p11 Ja 13 '29 650w

"He followed with closest absorption the legislative sessions in Washington, the rising storm against Johnson, the impeachment proceedings and trial, the nomination and election of Grant, the fight for the adoption of the Fifteenth Amendment, on all of which his reports are remarkable for their lucidity, keenness and accuracy. . . But the book, vigorously written and interesting though it is, offers scarcely anything illuminative of the political history."
+ — N Y World p11m Mr 17 '29 180w
Pratt p33 summer '29

"This book by Clemenceau on our Reconstruction period is immensely amusing in its misrepresentations and misinterpretations, and throws a much clearer light on the Clemenceau of his youth than upon the American struggle. These letters are worth while as indicating the utter madness and blackness of the times." C. G. Bowers
— + Sat R of Lit 5:426 D 1 '28 1000w

CLEMENCEAU, GEORGES EUGENE BENJAMIN. In the evening of my thought; tr. by Charles Miner Thompson and John Heard, jr. 2v 482;525p $12.50 Houghton [30s Constable]

194 Philosophy 29-22819

This book, appearing in Clemenceau's eighty-ninth year and on the eve of his death, is an exposition of his philosophy, his gravest meditations on man and the universe, on life and death. His spiritual autobiography shows him as combative in philosophy as in politics, the foe of clericalism and all revealed religion, a skeptic and materialist. Contents: The fleeting moment; The world and man; Men and gods; Gods and laws; Dreaming and thinking; Knowing; In the defiles of knowledge; The unknown; Doubt; Symbols; Cosmogonies: Revelation, song, poetry, metaphysics; Cosmology; The atom; Our planet; Evolution; The primitive ages; Civilization; And hereafter?

"It is with the deepest sympathy that we read these two bulky volumes; and, as we proceeded, we admired, not only the wisdom of the old man, but the universality of his interests, the keenness of his scientifically trained mind, the unexpected poetic beauty of many passages. There is in the second chapter a description of dawn by the sea shore which would do credit to Chateaubriand, Michelet or Victor Hugo." Albert Guerard
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 D 8 '29 1200w

"What he now gives us is nothing short of a philosophy, discursive here and there, but encyclopedic in its range, showing a profound knowledge of the literature pertinent to his themes, rich in the command of scientific facts —the Einstein doctrines included—and dealing lavishly with issues which have engaged the attention of philosophers since the beginnings of advanced human thought." Edmund Noble
+ Boston Transcript p4 N 9 '29 2200w

"This work, usually clear but at times confused as a result of the heterogeneous readings of a lifetime, may be open to attack by the logician. To the lay reader it is stimulating, provided he be familiar with the terminology of the philosophy of science, and it is a marvelous testimonial to the enduring intellectual vigor of the writer. It will, however, not be an acceptable textbook in the schools of Tennessee." C. H. C. Wright
+ Current Hist 31:428 D '29 1300w

Reviewed by E. E. Kellett
New Statesman 34:299 D 7 '29 1200w

"It is in a way a tragedy that a man who could, if he wished, throw so much light on the history of the war and the peace that followed it has chosen instead to write this very foggy book of antiquated 'philosophy.' One wonders whether the wily old politician can really be so naive as he appears through these interminable volumes. Is the Tiger, perhaps, having his last sly laugh at the world's expense? No doubt the elderly politician has had a glorious time writing his two volumes in the leisure of his retirement. But there is Sheridan's authority for it that 'easy writing may be curst hard reading.' To ask the public to peruse a thousand pages of easy writing is literally as well as figuratively, a bit thick. This book is not the 'evening of thought.' It is Cimmerian darkness, blackest midnight." J: Bakeless
N Y Evening Post p13m N 16 '29 900w

"The plot of his story lacks originality. It has all been told so many times. But it is not in the plot that lies the essence of the book, but in the episodes: in the numberless fine passages, full of the ring of nobility, in which the ancient warrior compresses the wisdom and experience of more than fourscore years. . . There are inconsistencies in his thought, but they are wholly to his credit. . . In theory he is a rigid determinist, denying even the theoretical possibility of free will. But his valiant heart gets the better of his theory, and throughout the whole book he gives splendid counsels of integrity, honesty, courage, altruism—counsels which have a meaning only if the will is free. So the Tiger of France has given us, as the fruit of the evening of his thought, a book which embodies at once the pugnacity of his intellect and the essential nobility of his nature: a parting gift which earns our genuine gratitude." C: Johnston

CLEMENCEAU, G. E. B:—Continued
+ N Y Times pl N 24 '29 2000w

"It is self-evident that the Tiger was no original thinker. As a writer he was apt to be at his best when on the offensive. . . Clemenceau, judging at all events by the present volumes, was chiefly a borrower from the first-rate thinkers and physicists of to-day." Pierre Loving
— N Y World p10m D 1 '29 1150w

"Only time will tell whether this doughty fighter for France will achieve for himself a permanent place among philosophers of the first order. It is a surer prophecy that these volumes will bring about a revival of the positivist cult among European thinkers." C. D. Gray
+ Portland Evening News p5 D 4 '29 580w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 17 '29 350w
Times [London] Lit Sup p989 N 28 '29 1500w

CLERMONT-TONNERRE, ELISABETH (DE GRAMONT) DUCHESSE DE. Pomp and circumstance (Au temps des equipages); tr. by Brian W. Downs; introd. by Louis Bromfield. 355p $3 (3s 6d) Cape
B or 92 29-17324

"Mme. de Gramont's unassailable position in French society, her lively interest in arts and letters, and her famous blood relationships made it possible for her to see history in the making. Her grandfather, the Duc de Gramont, was Napoleon III's Minister for Foreign Affairs, and it was he who read the declaration of war against Prussia in 1870. . . In 'Pomp and Circumstance' she has created a series of brilliant portraits of her family and friends and a number of charmingly conceived 'restorations' of château life and salon activities."—N Y Times

"These subtly indiscreet memoirs reveal much of the manners, customs and modes of thought in the France of the Duchesse's heydey. . . The title, to say the least, is misleading in translation, for it conveys none of the malicious charm of the narrative." Norah Meade
+ Bookm 70:110 S '29 410w

"Madame de Gramont describes the great figures of her varied acquaintance—Anatole France, Genevieve Straus, the Rothschilds, etc. —with a very crisp and determined wit. Though she has always been in the picture—often no doubt, the very center of it—she has managed miraculously to observe it, too, and to combine familiarity with perspective. . . Sad to say, the translation cannot be called anything but wretched." M. C. Dawson
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Jl 14 '29 780w

"She writes just as vividly, just as entertainingly of places as she does of people; Paris, the provinces, the chateaux, London, Oxford, Cannes, Sainte-Assise, Viry, Dampierre, Trouville, Frankfort—all stand forth in that charm which belongs to whatever is bathed in the glory of past splendors. For it is passed—or passing—this elegant, leisurely life she describes and which belonged so entirely to the Temps des equipages." G. R. B. R.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 31 '29 500w

"The picture of it is drawn with skill and charm, and it is interesting to examine this little piece of the eighteenth century, preserved as a faded and meaningless anachronism by its possessors." Leonard Woolf
Nation and Ath 45:566 Jl 27 '29 60w

"She is concerned with the idiosyncrasies, vanities, and tastes of individuals, not of a crumbling stratum of society. For this reason, and because at bottom she tells us little that is amusing or enlivening, her book is inconsequential. The reader will look in vain for a single adult reflection. Nor can Madame de Gramont be called a brilliant, keenly analytical chronicler of the social scene." L: Galantière
— New Repub 60:24 Ag 21 '29 650w

"She excels at little portraits and at rendering atmosphere. The high society of France, moving between the Faubourg St. Germain, Cannes, and its country châteaux, is amusingly mirrored in her pages. Interesting observation too often neighbours trivial gossip and cheap wit. There are too many people in the book, and they are often insignificant as well as unpleasant; while her rambling, coq-à-l'âne manner of writing, regardless of chronological and often of logical sequence, though sometimes attractive, tends to become irritating."
+ — New Statesman 33:583 Ag 17 '29 380w

" 'Pomp and Circumstance' is unique. It reveals in its author an extraordinary character. Born of one of the oldest families in France, brought up in the intolerably hypocritical, stuffy atmosphere that was the heritage of the jeune fille of the Faubourg Saint-Germain, she developed herself into a rare personage. She was equally at home in her own world and that of Anatole France, Marcel Proust and Remy de Gourmont." L: Sherwin
+ N Y Evening Post p7m Jl 6 '29 450w

"Mme. de Gramont possesses more than ordinary skill in re-creating her past—she is, after all, a brilliant writer regardless of her subject—and the result is one of those diverting books drenched in atmosphere. . . Places are pictured as vividly as personages in 'Pomp and Circumstance,' and because of the memorist's keen eye for effect, this adds tremendously to the general effect of the book. Indeed, there are moments when the reader may imagine that he is perusing a carefully conceived period novel." Herbert Gorman
+ N Y Times p5 Je 30 '29 1600w

"Her talent is far slighter and far more akin to that revealed in the conversation of the salons of eighteenth century Paris."
— + Spec 143:193 Ag 10 '29 800w
Times [London] Lit Sup p552 Jl 11 '29 500w

CLEUGH, SOPHIA (MRS DENNIS CLEUGH). Spring. 298p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Hodder] 29-12653

Two mothers, Mrs Stanning, of Boston, and the Contessa Elena, of Italy, have but a single thought—that of directing the affairs of the heart of their son and daughter respectively. Hugo Stanning, going to Italy to escape his mother's plans, runs almost into the arms of the daughter of the Contessa. Incidentally he learns that her young friends next door are his English cousins, occupying his mother's Italian villa. They are scheming to rescue the Contessina from her predicament, and rejoice to see that their cousin is falling in love with her. Meanwhile they play detective and intercept a thief in the act of cutting from its frame a valuable painting belonging to the Contessa. Playing cupid, however, is more to their liking, and it is largely thru their efforts that the story ends happily.

Booklist 26:32 O '29

"The book has a certain gaiety and charm, which, coupled with the glamour of its Italian setting and an innocuous elopement, make it pleasant, though not exciting reading."
+ — Bookm 70:xxi S '29 140w

" 'Spring' should win many new friends for Mrs. Cleugh, who in the past few seasons has advanced to a leading position among creators of light romance. Here is a charming story of young love in Italy, salted with rare gayety."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Jl 14 '29 150w

"Very much at home in Italy is Mrs. Cleugh exactly as she is in England and America. Her background in this story reminds one a little of the delicately etched work of Henry Harland when he wrote his novels of Italian life." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 26 '29 430w

Cleveland Open Shelf p143 N '29

N Y Times p7 Je 16 '29 500w

"Mildly amusing, vaguely romantic, as free from shocks as from surprises, 'Spring' will do for summer reading."

— + Outlook 152:270 Je 12 '29 110w

"The story is light, animated, and dashed with good humor, if not with humor."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Je 23 '29 60w

"Miss Cleugh trips through her story with the grace and gaiety of the born storyteller; she has obviously enjoyed writing every word of 'Spring,' which no doubt is the chief reason for its success."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p670 Ag 29 '29 360w

CLEVELAND, ELIZABETH. If parents only knew; a message from teachers to parents, telling what the modern school is doing for the child and how the home can help. 153p $1.75 Children, the parents' magazine, 251 4th av., N.Y. Norton

372 Education of children. Parents' and teachers' associations. Parents 29-8231

Advice on some of the ways in which the home can cooperate with the school in building up health, character and home habits, in vocational and recreational guidance and in training for citizenship. The book has grown out of experience with parent-teachers associations in Detroit and offers suggestions for activities of such associations.

---

Bookm 69:viii Je '29 120w

"By thus reprinting in book form the material which appeared in Children, The Parents' Magazine, reference material of real value, delightfully written, is made readily available to both parents and teachers."

+ J Home Econ 21:450 Je '29 100w

Survey 63:111 O '29 50w

"The book is not for the sophisticated handful but for the vast majority of conscientious fathers and mothers who would like to check up on themselves."

World Tomorrow 12:378 S '29 80w

CLEVELAND, FREDERICK ALBERT, ed. Modern scientific knowledge of nature, man, and society, by [the editor] with collaborators. 592p il $4.50 Ronald

508 Science. Cosmology. Biology. Psychology. Sociology 29-12008

"The purpose of this sturdy volume is to bring together in short and rapid survey the fundamental principles and outstanding mileposts in the development of the sciences of nature, man and society. Mr. Cleveland's purpose as both contributor and editor has been to make the several surveys, prepared each by a specialist, so dovetail together that the reader will perceive that they are all related and that all this scientific knowledge is an organized whole and not merely so many separate bodies." —N Y Times

---

"This is a large book. Moreover, it has been written with an evident economy of words. Its outstanding merits seem to be its brevity and comprehensiveness, and in them we discover its chief faults, namely, the reader is often left with cloudy conceptions, inadequate comprehension and a serene oblivion of controversial issues and viewpoints." F. H. Hankins

+ — Ann Am Acad 146:274 N '29 450w

"In large measure the book is successful in supplying 'perspective.' If one weakness appears in its richly freighted and informing pages it is that of present-day science itself—its neglect to distinguish adequately between life as such and matter as such." E. N.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Jl 24 '29 800w

"Dr. Cleveland has evidently taken great pains to make the book stimulating as well as clear. Not only have the contributions of his collaborators been so edited as to achieve a uniformity of presentation such as one rarely finds in compendia of this kind, but each chapter has been supplied with a list of questions with references and a selected bibliography. The extraordinarily complete index makes this a handy reference work as well." W. H. W.

+ N Y Evening Post p6m S 7 '29 200w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:42 Jl '29

"In so large a company of scientific specialists it is inevitable that some should have in greater degree than others the gift of clear explanation and graphic presentation of scientific subjects. Since the work is intended for popular reading and has a most useful purpose, it is unfortunate that it contains so much technical phraseology and is not sometimes written in a more illuminating way."

+ — N Y Times p14 Jl 14 '29 450w

Outlook 152:549 Jl 31 '29 40w

"The symposium gives a bird's eye view of the present state of the most essential sciences and anyone who should absorb it all would have an intelligent notion of what there is to know. It may be well doubted if it is a proper book for the South and Middle West Fundamentalists. If religion is 'a working theory of life' it will not deleteriously affect religion. But it knocks Theology, as generally accepted, into a cocked hat." N. H. Dole

+ Portland Evening News p5 O 29 '29 1850w

"Never was such a book so greatly needed as today. The college freshman needs it for most practical reasons, but the man of affairs not less. The college professors who have collaborated with Dr. Cleveland in this work are all men who have won high rank in their respective departments." W. B. Shaw

+ R of Rs 80:12 Ag '29 110w

St Louis 27:306 N '29

CLIFFORD, SIR HUGH CHARLES. Bush-whacking, and other Asiatic tales and memories. 331p il $3.50 Harper [10s 6d Heinemann]

915.95 Malay Peninsula—Social life and customs 29-8979

Sir Hugh Clifford adds to an earlier book of reminiscences and stories of his years of service in Malaya this new collection. It contains chapters in the troubled history of Malaya, and adventures and episodes of native life and of official and native in contact with each other.

---

Booklist 25:389 Jl '29

"Here is the East of a whole school of fiction, mysterious, unchanging."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ag 18 '29 220w

"Few living men know the jungle or the mysterious races found therein as Sir Hugh Clifford does, and no one save Kipling or Conrad has written of the hinterland so clearly, so vigorously as he. His pictures of untouched nature show remarkable accuracy of detail and truth of interpretation." G. R. B. R.

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 4 '29 550w

"For the reader, there is much more glamour than commonplace."

Christian Century 46:589 My 1 '29 80w

"His stories of his service, teaching the blessings of peace with modern ammunition, are sometimes worthy of Kipling."

+ Nation 129:257 S 4 '29 130w

"Sir Hugh is gifted particularly with that unique blend of glamour and decorousness which makes the Blackwood's story a thing with a stamp as unmistakable as a particular University's. His stories and recollections in the present volume are drawn mainly from his early days in Malaya, where he first went in the middle 'eighties; and although several of them seem to have been written over twenty years ago, they have not lost savour in keeping. . . All in all, this is a genial miscellany."

CLIFFORD, H. C:—Continued
+ New Statesman 32:476 Ja 19 '29 300w

"As 'In Court and Kampong,' and 'In Days That Are Dead,' these shorter and, perhaps, somewhat slighter individual studies of Malay character and mores, with their authentic and well-defined touch of the Conradian quality, can only be accorded the praise they deserve for their combination of clear writing and rich folklore flavor." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p6m Je 15 '29 120w

"The stories all have sincerity, color, dramatic power, and they are immensely humane."
+ N Y Times p7 My 19 '29 1100w

"A book which will take its place beside the seven or eight others by the same author on the shelves of those who value fine prose." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 152:111 My 15 '29 160w
St Louis 27:313 N '29

"It is thirty years since Sir Hugh Clifford published the first of the volumes in which he has so brilliantly sketched Malayan life. We are disposed to say of his tenth book, as we said of his first, that some of his pages 'have rarely, if ever, been surpassed as word-pictures.' "
+ Sat R 147:52 Ja 12 '29 200w

"From the point of view of writing, Sir Hugh has done an admirable job. If he has a weakness, it lies in his rather ponderous dialogues—but, then, even Conrad and Tomlinson share that fault with him. In his descriptions of nature, his revelation of the naked spirit of the wilderness, he thrusts home even more surely than, let us say, Tomlinson." Winfield Shiras
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1044 My 25 '29 950w

"A fine study of Malayan psychology by one who has learnt his subject by painful experience in reconciling British and Malayan ideas of justice. Though he is perhaps too fond of pointing a moral Sir Hugh has a good eye for the dramatic, and his stories make excellent reading."
+ Spec 142:201 F 9 '29 120w

"The book as a whole, is a notable contribution to the literature of Malaya."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p55 Ja 24 '29 950w

CLIFFORD, SIR HUGH CHARLES. Prisoners of the forest. 345p $2.50 Harper

A dramatic tale of the Malayan forests. A party of English travelers, including two young women, fall into the hands of natives. The hero is the proverbial rolling stone Englishman, allied this time with the natives. There follow love, battle, murder and sudden death, and plenty of it, but also a happy ending.

"Only a man well versed in the native lore of Malaysia, as well as in its jungle paths, could have written so clever a tale of contrasts in so thrilling and entertaining a fashion. All who enjoy travel and adventure linked with a fascinating story will read 'Prisoners of the Forest' with enthusiasm."
+ Boston Transcript p10 N 2 '29 250w

"Sir Hugh Clifford is so much more something else than he is mere novelist that, although he has written short stories of the very best, even in his latest romance he fumbles badly in his technique and seems amateurish, in spite of the long list of works accredited to him. . . 'Prisoners of the Forest' is what is known as a 'ripping good yarn' for golden boys and girls. But there is in it much of its author's fact; the history and character and doom of the people he has known so long, understands so well and likes so much." F. C. MacDonald
+ — New Repub 61:110 D 18 '29 850w

"The tale moves smoothly and swiftly to its conclusion. It will repay reading principally because of the eloquence and beauty of its stirring, first-hand pictures of life and strife in the Malaysian jungle and its side lights on the brown-skinned primitives its author knows so well." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p11m D 28 '29 220w

"A novel giving an insight into Malay life by a real authority, a former member of the Malayan Civil Service, naturally proves interesting. . . The inevitable love story is too much elaborated, but this is compensated for by the descriptions of the effect of life among the Malay upon an adventurous young Englishman and upon a wrecked 'beachcomber.' "
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:592 D 21 '29 280w

CLOCK, HERBERT, and BOETZEL, ERIC. Light in the sky. 304p $2 Coward-McCann 29-13212

Wherein are conveyed the fantastic adventures of a soldier mysteriously translated from France to a "cavern of enchanted night" where he finds a kingdom whose ruler is a high-priest of light, the magician of the "eighth color"; and a princess who becomes his mate.

"Discarding probability as a cumbersome annoyance, the authors of this fantastic tale have given a quasi-scientific air to their dreams of what might be accomplished through the use of light waves. . . That the authors are not oblivious to motion picture translation for their story is patent."
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Je 30 '29 250w

"Fantastic balderdash and yet as good a scientific romance as we have read for some time, combining some of the best features of Henty and Jules Verne." Edwin Seaver
+ N Y Evening Post p6m Je 15 '29 180w

"The story is ingenious and entertaining, though better in conception and plot than in the manner of its telling."
+ — N Y Times p9 Je 9 '29 420w

CLOSE, EVELYNE. Through the lattice. 288p $2 Henkle [7s 6d Hutchinson]
29-12532

"A harsh north of England story involving four families of hill-men on a meager plateau against the face of Scaur; the dominant note in the theme is Nature. The ironic events of 'Through the Lattice' center around the burial of an old man in a deep grave. Into a few startled hours are crowded tragic occasions which have their roots in the soil of the generations. They happen, for the most part, within range of the lattice through which a moithered old woman stares out upon the churchyard where her sons lie buried."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"The book provokes impatience, disbelief, until it is put down. Then, surprisingly, you realize that you have added to your experience the spell of the Scaur, the knowledge of its simple, heavy people in bondage to the world of mountain and graveyard. The author might have given us a deeper portrayal of these people. Nevertheless, in her achievement of steady, mounting gloom she has created an atmosphere and a picture of strange power." Nina Purdy
+ — Bookm 69:432 Je '29 350w

" 'Through the Lattice' is a sturdy enough scion of the Hardy stock. . . Miss Close wields a facile, competent pen, and has a natural tact for the semblances of life that make up fiction; but she lacks deep instinctive feeling for humanity."
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p32 Ap 14 '29 680w
Boston Transcript p4 My 4 '29 850w

"There is much fine writing in 'Through the Lattice,' and a story well worth telling is powerfully told. Fear and horror impregnate the very landscape, and all the characters move in an ominous silence. Evelyn Close makes her complex story move evenly, powerfully and inevitably. It is, therefore, regrettable that she has chosen to do a little fancy crochet work in the strong web of her narrative." A. M. Stein
+ — N Y Evening Post p11m My 11 '29 500w

"The author has written a novel rich in the depiction of human passions and desires. Fault might perhaps be found for an over-neat and precise joining of the chain of circumstances which forms the plot of the story, but it is a fault barely perceptible in a book holding abundant promise for the future products of the same pen."

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 14 '29 450w

"We don't think we ever read a story in which there were so many burials. Recommended as light summer reading for undertakers." W: R. Brooks

Outlook 152:118 My 15 '29 120w

"Dealing with so many characters in such narrow quarters and so pressed upon by time, it is perhaps inevitable that the author should occasionally seem to hurry one character off the scene to make way for another, or seem to rearrange a property here and there after the curtain has risen. But these are very minor defects and are lost sight of in the strong current of a far from usual novel."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1068 Je 1 '29 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p618 Ag 30 '28 200w

CLOSE, UPTON, pseud. See Hall, J. W.

CLOWES, ERNEST SEABURY. Shipways to the sea; our inland and coastal waterways. 196p il $4.50 Williams & Wilkins

386 Inland navigation. Great Lakes. St Lawrence river 29-12776

"There is here brought within the covers of a moderate-size volume a survey of all the inland waterway improvements which are at present under consideration in the United States. Here the general reader will find clear discussions of the proposed improvements of the Mississippi system with the latest plans for flood control; of the question of water levels in the great Lakes and of the Chicago diversion; of the proposed St. Lawrence deepening and of other proposed improvements, some of them quite impracticable; of the growth and present state of traffic on inland waterways throughout the country."—Canadian Hist R

Booklist 26:101 D '29

"So good a picture of the whole problem is given by no other book. The author has made extensive use of government reports, which he has listed in a well-selected bibliography, and has packed a surprising amount of information into small compass." G: W. Brown

+ Canadian Hist R 10:270 S '29 350w

"Mr. Clowes's book not only has the special interest of the importance of his theme at the present moment, but it has also the advantage of being the only work that covers the whole subject with comprehensive and adequate information brought to date. . . His book is a vital and stimulating contribution to a subject whose importance already looms large before the nation."

+ N Y Times p18 Je 23 '29 500w

"The St. Lawrence waterway, the improvement of the Mississippi to help navigation and diminish floods, the project for a sheltered coastal waterway from Boston to Miami, as well as less feasible and plainly absurd schemes are discussed with learning, remarkable objectivity, and a sense of humour, making this book a readable and valuable contribution to American economic geography."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p877 O 31 '29 200w

COATES, ROBERT M. Eater of darkness. 238p $2.50 Macaulay

29-15568

A burlesque of the mystery novel in which the scene shifts continually from Paris to New York or Hoboken or Erie or whatnot. A creature named Picrolas, a scientist who has invented a sort of radio murder, proceeds to remove from the earth Edward Trulge and nineteen others, including his protegé, Charles Dograr.

Bookm 70:xxiv S '29 200w

"An extraordinarily diverting book, compact with astonishing devices, unusual tricks with syntax, satire, mystery, mirth, and madness. There are moments when it becomes crazily serious, but they do not occur often enough to disturb the reader's complacency in his own amusement." Herbert Gorman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Ag 3 '29 780w

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 31 '29 250w

"One of the most amusing novels of the season. According to Ford Madox Ford, it is a Dadaist novel. This should prove that if Dadaism is not taken too seriously, its very unintelligibility may become quite intelligible."

+ Nation 129:310 S 18 '29 210w

"Those readers who recall Isidor Schneider's 'Dr. Transit' and can imagine the atmosphere of that strange book enveloping a dime novel, concocted by a young man who wears his tongue in his cheek, will have some notion of what the first Dada novel in English is like. But although it has moments of being very funny and moments of being quite exciting, it has also not a few moments of being simply tedious, and one wonders, with some impatience, what this clever young man would achieve if he were to take his tongue out of his cheek." B. D.

+ — New Repub 60:133 S 18 '28 240w

"One of the cleverest tours de force ever contrived by the pen of a wit. He has managed to inoculate more real back-breaking humor into a single chapter than you will find in the mouths of a dozen Groucho Marxes. . . Actually, this is not fiction at all, but the bitterest fact. It is the autobiography of Robert M. Coates sugared to taste. It is a social polemic dressed up like a fairy tale. Of its kind, it is unique and invaluably funny." E. M. Benson

+ N Y Evening Post p6m Jl 27 '29 400w

" 'The Eater of Darkness' is not brilliant. It is sometimes clever, it is often ingenious, it is occasionally funny, and once in a very great while it is exciting; but for the most part it is merely an example of an author letting himself go without plan, without direction and without motive. There is no impact behind the book as a whole; in a word, it does not come off, and its cleverness is, at bottom, sophomoric."

— + N Y Times p7 Ag 4 '29 650w

"Mr. Coates does not take his novel seriously; so why should we honor him with complete seriousness? He continually jests at himself, giggles when he might to his advantage be straight-faced, and plays the slapstick clown with unpleasant monotony. Typographically, rhetorically, and artistically 'The Eater of Darkness' is mad. And madness, unless it be touched by some saving genius, is quite out of place in any novel."

— Sat R of Lit 6:460 N 23 '29 330w

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE. Compass rose. (Songs of today ser.) 96p $1 Coward-McCann

811 29-10639

The collection contains short lyrics of everyday experience touched with imagination, reprinted from many newspapers and magazines.

"There is a crisp relish in the lyrics of New England and New Mexico which Miss Coatsworth has gathered here. Her themes are familiar, often slight, but turned with a delicate, inquiring fancy, and pointed by an eager and accurate feeling for all the values of the five senses."

+ Bookm 70:xii S '29 50w

Reviewed by T. E. Hill

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 28 '29 120w

"There is a ruddiness about Miss Coatsworth's art that is one of the most promising signs in recent American poetry. It is a sign of spiritual health. . . She is content to employ with freedom the traditional meters, and yet her vigor

COATSWORTH, E. J.—Continued
of conception and execution are such as to give them perfect freshness and force." W: S. Braithwaite
+ Boston Transcript p3 My 25 '29 1200w

"It is merely a collection of lyrics about many lands and many episodes and many moods. It has no particularized attitude toward life. It is not, therefore, as vital as it might be. The most successful poems are, to me, those descriptive of the Southwest, its color, its ancient fixity of purpose, its desert-like bloom." E. L. Walton
— Nation 129:22 Jl 3 '29 120w

"Here are verses skimmed from the polite surface of Cook's-tour experience. Miss Coatsworth's best poems are those where she sits, least self-conscious, watching the cat, ungathered apples, a black dog bereaved, three seeds cracked in the macaw's red beak. These, and a few others, perhaps a dozen altogether, are poems with some distinction of matter and manner." Rolfe Humphries
— + New Repub 59:104 Je 12 '29 200w

" 'Compass Rose' is well within the average production of magazine verse. The usual 'poetic' attitudes are here in lyrical forms but they are somehow lacking in emotional validity. In general the book has an atmosphere of 'let's pretend' rather than a realization of a fresh experience." Horace Gregory
— N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 27 '29 80w

"Miss Coatsworth's poetry has, as her title suggests, something of the mixture of accuracy and fancy, of explicit direction and charming vagueness of the old animated maps. When Miss Coatsworth is least ambitious she is most successful. Her purely imaginative ballads are pointed and persuasive; her practised hands strike the notes squarely, running bright scales with ease and something like brilliance. It is in the animal poems that she is happiest and, I suspect, most herself." L: Untermeyer
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:36 Ag 10 '29 650w

COBB, IRVIN SHREWSBURY. Irvin Cobb at his best. 341p $2 Doubleday, Doran 817 29-8034

Contents: "Speaking of operations—"; Eating in two or three languages; The life of the party; A plea for old Cap Collier; One third off; The young nuts of America.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p41 Ap 14 '29 80w

"What a pity that Irvin Cobb at his best could not have been a great deal better." Edwin Seaver
— N Y Evening Post p10m F 23 '29 300w
Sat R of Lit 5:786 Mr 16 '29 100w

COBB, IRVIN SHREWSBURY. Red likker. 339p $2.50 Cosmopolitan bk.
29-16557

"Mr. Cobb starts the story of 'Red Likker' in immediate post-Revolutionary days when the distillery of Bird & Son was established in Kentucky, where it flourished until after prohibition. Through all these years he traces the effect that Bourbon has on succeeding generations of the Bird family. He sees it the cause of the death of Colonel Bird's spoiled son; he sees it as a tonic for Colonel Bird's 83-year-old sister. He sees its place fairly in the scheme of things. His is no plea either for or against prohibition, but merely the background against which are painted vivid word pictures of Kentucky life, of Kentucky viewpoint, of Kentucky types."—N Y Times

---

Booklist 26:70 N '29

"It is a book that will make the new generation marvel and its elders sigh with regret that the old order must pass."
+ Bookm 70:xxii S '29 80w

" 'Red Likker' is Irvin Cobb's natural ideas, and therefore those of any good Kentuckian, who has been to New York and learned to mix Yankee ideas with his julep. We have the North and the South, America and the Allies, the older generation and the younger, many of the vibrations of American thought. For 'Red Likker' is not only old Bourbon, cased in its charred kegs; it is the red blood of Southern life, colored and refined by the events of two centuries." I. W. L.
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 25 '29 1230w

"The book is not sufficiently closely knit; it conveys the impression of diffuseness rather than compactness. It doesn't give, as even the least of Mr. Cobb's short stories are wont to do, the feeling that each word used is essential to it. Then, too, even when the characters are not speaking, the language frequently assumes a colloquial turn and a kind of levity which proves distracting. It is because of what we know Mr. Cobb is capable, because we realize the possibilities in his conception, that we are disappointed that this latest novel does not measure up to his best."
— + N Y Times p9 Ag 18 '29 550w

"While Mr Cobb leaves the liquor question about as he found it, he tells a good yarn with that as his central theme."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '29 300w

COBB, IRVIN SHREWSBURY. This man's world. 314p $2 Cosmopolitan bk. [7s 6d Brentano's]
29-5955

"A baker's dozen of tales by a very competent manufacturer of magazine stories."—Outlook

---

Booklist 25:321 My '29

"Mr. Cobb's knowledge of human nature was never more manifest than in these stories." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 30 '29 420w

"As usual, there are some very good yarns and some pretty bad ones in the current offering from Irvin S. Cobb. Among the thirteen stories in this book there is one that stands out. It is called 'The Wooden Decoy.' "
+ — N Y Times p24 Mr 24 '29 480w

"Mr. Cobb has written a good many short stories, a few of which have been very good indeed. These are about average." W. R. Brooks
— + Outlook 151:440 Mr 13 '29 80w

"Of the thirteen short stories in this volume, one is excellent, four others are passable, and the remainder are best forgotten. In this last group we must put the title story; it suffers from a mechanical plot and an intrusive thesis. Indeed, Mr. Cobb at his worst is always mechanical and preachy."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:863 Ap 6 '29 100w

"The stories are shrewd, simple and rapid, and most of them would make good talkies. Why doesn't somebody try?" V. S. Pritchett
+ Spec 143:691 N 9 '29 230w

"Several of the 13 stories are no better than average experienced reporting. Some are pointless. Four, however, repay the time spent in their discovery. The best of the collection is 'The Wooden Decoy,' based on an incident in police methods of dealing with the underworld."
— + Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 14 '29 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p1083 D 19 '29 200w

COCKERELL, DOUGLAS. Some notes on bookbinding. 105p il $2.25 (6s) Oxford
686 Bookbinding [29-20690]

Based on lectures on bookbinding given by the author to the students of the School of librarianship at University college, London. Contents: Paper; Mending and sewing; Forwarding; Edge gilding and covering; Covering material; Lettering and decoration; Binding books of value; How to judge a binding; Binding as a career; Sizes of printed paper; Note on leather. "A note on bookbinding" first published in 1904 is the last chapter of the book.

---

Booklist 26:57 N '29
Bookm 70:xiv S '29 70w

"Every one who, whether for luxury or of necessity, sends books to be bound will profit by studying this little book, and it is worth buying also as an entirely satisfactory example of modest book production."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p559 Jl 11 '29 180w

COE, CHARLES FRANCIS. Hooch! 295p $2 Doubleday, Doran
29-8650

An exposé of the bootlegging racket and the entangling alliances of the racketeers with politicians and the police. An alderman and a policeman see the money-making possibilities in bootlegging from the start of prohibition. Along with gangsters and gunmen they get into the game. At the end of the fiercely played racket not one of the crowd is alive but a police captain who chose to go straight.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ap 7 '29 100w

"His picture of a great city police organization is extraordinarily realistic, though it seems at times to be merely a caricature."
Boston Transcript p2 My 25 '29 100w

"Here is no fat story; it is worn and threadbare. Mr. Coe has much flinty material, but somehow his steel lacks that expert touch which brings forth the sparks. He makes it plain that he despises his crooks. That attitude is fine in a policeman, but fatal to an author." J. B.
— New Repub 58:368 My 15 '29 180w

"Apparently with first-hand knowledge, without prejudice or favor, the book gives us the real 'low-down' on the leading industry of the underworld to-day."
+ N Y World p11m Ap 21 '29 100w

"This book promises from moment to moment to become an authentic picture of law-breaking as a business in the present-day United States, but never keeps the promise. The result is annoyingly neither one thing nor another. It is too trite and too formless to be good fiction, too stiff and too general and too thoroughly bowdlerized to be good reporting. It is as if it had been rewritten without imagination or insight from newspaper clippings."
— Sat R of Lit 5:961 Ap 27 '29 160w

COE, GEORGE ALBERT. Motives of men. 265p $2.25 (7s 6d) Scribner
150 Psychology 28-25365

The book is a challenging discussion of the motives that control human behavior; of the present wide disillusionment in regard to old criteria of conduct; and of release from habit and precedent to a freedom of choice of new standards for collective and individual behavior.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ja 6 '29 50w
Boston Transcript p3 D 19 '28 260w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 45:1458 N 29 '28 630w

"The author writes with a degree of detachment possible to one who has relinquished his active professional responsibilities, and looks in retrospect over a long and distinguished teaching career that has concerned itself with the conscious reconstruction of human behavior through the processes of education and that has made significant contributions to the literature of both religious education and the psychology of religion. . . As one would expect from Mr. Coe's previous writings, the social note is dominant throughout. Keen as are the author's insights into the factors that have led to changing current conceptions of human nature, one cannot escape the conviction that he has oversimplified the situation in referring the fundamental causes of these changes all but exclusively to industry." W: C. Bower
+ J Religion 9:319 Ap '29 1100w

"Mr. Coe has tackled questions and problems that go to the very heart of modern thinking and has dealt with them so frankly, sincerely and incisively as to make a suggestive and inspiring book. It will be especially wholesome for those who are dismayed by modern tendencies."
+ N Y Times p17 D 23 '28 450w

"One can speak of this book with real enthusiasm. Professor Coe has done a difficult task thoroughly and well." E. B. Chaffee
+ Outlook 152:230 Je 5 '29 180w

St Louis 27:87 Mr '29

"Here is a significant book, an inspiring essay in human orientation." Joseph Jastrow
+ Sat R of Lit 5:705 F 23 '29 600w

" 'The Motives of Men' is clearly a product of many years of energetic thinking. It is a refreshing volume, compact, provocative, and profound. Incidentally, it is a magnificent apologia for the intellectual life." J. M.
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 2 '29 600w

"Motives of Men is essentially an inspirational book, but it is so on the basis of a rich content. It is however on the practical side of enlarging the motives operative in human affairs that the book makes its major appeal to the interest of social workers." Joseph Jastrow
Survey 62:369 Je 15 '29 250w

Wis Lib Bul 25:26 Ja '29

COFFEY, EDWARD HOPE (EDWARD HOPE, pseud.). Manhattan cocktail. 302p il $2.50 Dial press 29-7109

Romantic short stories with a dash of humor and mixed with brief sketches of city life make up the ingredients of this Manhattan cocktail put together by the columnist of the New York Herald Tribune.

"Mr. Hope has both observation and memory, and has employed them in this volume in combination with real story-telling ability and that humor which is the gift of understanding and making allowances. When one picks up a book of sketches and short stories, meaning only to flutter the pages, and perhaps spends fifteen minutes on fifteen pages, and is moved to read from cover to cover, it must be a good book of sketches and short stories. That will happen to many buyers of 'Manhattan Cocktail.' " J. J. Montague
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p38 Ap 14 '29 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p156 D '29

"There is a good deal here that is fine entertainment and a good deal more that is more than mere entertainment."
+ N Y Times p9 Ap 21 '29 380w

"Mr. Hope and his second book are excellent representatives of the state that a style in American literature has come to. This is the Saturday Evening Post love story, a form of writing duplicated in no other soil. . . The stories are all very dull and very similar and incredibly sentimental."
— N Y World p11m My 5 '29 160w

COFFIN, JOSEPH HERSCHEL. The soul comes back. 207p $2 (8s 6d) Macmillan
128 Soul. Personality 29-7516

In the first part of the book, The stairway of the soul, Professor Coffin pictures the soul as it looks to the materialist, the idealist, the fundamentalist, the modernist. In the second half, A soul for John Doe, he follows the career of John Doe's soul to its culmination in the reality which we call personality.

"His book is not only full of interest, it is lucid, suggestive, and at times compelling as with eminent fairness it puts the issue and the question." T. C. R.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 1 '29 420w

"The temper of the book is admirable and fits it to be put into the hands of thoughtful people, young and old, who are confused in their thinking. The great merit of the book is that it presents in simple and arresting language some of the chief principles needed to refute the current idea that it is meritorious and scientific to deny purpose, values, ideals and religious experience." E. S. Brightman

COFFIN, J. H.—Continued
+ Christian Century 46:583 My 1 '29 850w

"The book deserves careful reading, especially by youth who are troubled with shallow thoughts or dogmatism in matters religious." S. G. Cole
+ Crozer Q 6:382 Jl '29 650w

J Religion 9:661 O '29 100w

"In his book all the main philosophical and scientific positions of our day are presented clearly and fairly." E. B. Chaffee
+ Outlook 152:230 Je 5 '29 70w

"No better manual of philosophical theism in its most modern garb could be placed in a pupil's hand; and to the more advanced student it will be a constant pleasure to see the conclusions of the great philosophers brought into play with so apposite a sense of perspective. The original part of the book, in which Professor Coffin argues the case for a return to the psychological triad of cognition, perception and volition under the modified nomenclature of interpretation, appreciation and organization, is also valuable and excellent."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p439 My 30 '29 300w

COFFIN, ROBERT PETER TRISTRAM. Attic [2] room. 304p il $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

814 29-21608

Informal, descriptive essays on subjects gathered from the places and persons within the writer's experience. Schoolboy days come to light in "District Thirteen," the essence of New England is personified in "Aunt Emma," "From Whitehead to Le Havre" describes an experience of war, and "Children of crystal" is a tribute to the unsung beauty of fish. The book is illustrated with sketches by the author.

---

Booklist 26:110 D '29

"This collection of arm-chair attitudes is pleasantly discursive, benign and slightly old-fashioned. The essays are quite accurately characterized by the author—'essays on life as he has found it jovial and beautiful.' Mr. Coffin won the Longfellow scholarship at Bowdoin, and became a Rhodes scholar at Trinity College; the flavor of his thinking is bookish. He chats about such items as 'Codfish Chowder and Sun,' 'Amateurs in Arcady,' 'Oak and Mistletoe' and 'Devon the Delectable.' "
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p30 D 1 '29 80w

Cleveland Open Shelf p156 D '29

" 'An Attic Room' is the book of a poet gone in search of his formative influences. And because Mr. Coffin is a poet in his way of looking at essay material, the formative influences—people, places and books that he has known in his youth—pass through a refracting medium that assembles them in a perspective more lively than reality."
+ N Y Times p2 D 29 '29 750w

COFFIN, ROBERT PETER TRISTRAM. Golden falcon. 70p $1.50 (6s) Macmillan

811 29-10051

Lyrics and sonnets, many of which have seen publication in periodicals.

---

"To say that a book is uneven is an easy way to say little. Yet the most patent quality of Mr. Coffin's Golden Falcon is its unevenness, both of prosody and imagination. The first part of the book is marred by what seems a faulty touch of Blake, a sobering dash of Wordsworth. And the latter part is unstable. Obviously, Mr. Coffin is deft. Rhyme slides gently into rhyme; but there is something pedestrian in their regular motion. The imagery is interesting and varied—sometimes lovely, sometimes annoying as only artificial things can be."
— + Bookm 70:xii S '29 160w

"This latest book of his should increase the reader's feeling that he is a true lyric poet and that the divinity in all this world, even in the cruelties of life, impresses itself upon his mind." C: Divine
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Jl 14 '29 130w

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 7 '29 450w

"His unique gift in verse writing is a gift of language and super-sensitivity. His subjects are slight, but his language is so perfectly explicit, so delicately musical in sentence composition that his poems are unmistakably his own. He has the precision of a scholar and the leanings of a mystic. The combination makes for a chrysalis of wording through which, in its glasslike clarity, one sees the subject matter growing from grub to butterfly." E. L. Walton
+ Nation 129:150 Ag 7 '29 400w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p11m My 4 '29 80w

"There is a stalwart quality in the mind behind 'Golden Falcon' that doesn't quite carry over into the lines, which are neither sonorous enough nor intense enough to bring out the affirmative quality of Mr. Coffin's vision. Some of the images are good, but the poems suffer from an over elaboration that makes them lose through diffuseness."
+ — N Y Times p18 Je 2 '29 200w

"Mr. Coffin's note used to be small and thin; it has become large—a little too large, perhaps—but it is still thin without being scrawny, high-pitched but not false. To continue the musical metaphor, the singer, by nature a quiet baritone, attempts a tessitura that would intimidate a heroic tenor. Therein lies his danger. The voice, raised an octave too high, becomes strained; one hesitates to look for fear of seeing the disheveled hair, the heaving breast, the operatic gesture." L: Untermeyer
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:155 S 21 '29 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p727 S 19 '29 180w

COHEN, ISIDORE DAVID. Principles and practices of vocational guidance. (Century vocational ser.) 471p $3 Century

374.1 Vocational guidance. Ability—Testing
29-4084

For the worker in the field of vocational guidance the book offers, not more theory, but a discussion of the principles and an explanation of the practices of vocational guidance which should be of great practical help. The author is experienced in the field and is now principal of the Brooklyn Boys' continuation school and Instructor of vocational guidance at the College of the city of New York

---

Booklist 25:344 Je '29

"The reviewer was impressed by the great number of usable ideas throughout the book. The author gives evidence of practical experience in dealing with the problems of vocational guidance." Robert Woellner
+ El School J 30:316 D '29 300w

Pratt p14 autumn '29

"School administrators will find in the book a number of practical suggestions in line with the better theories of vocational guidance." Robert Woellner
+ School R 37:709 N '29 430w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 19 '29 180w

"Dr. Cohen's book is no exception to the array of volumes in this field that succeed only in stating the obvious, to wit, we need vocational guidance and need it badly. The author covers his pages with a good deal of common sense material that does not enhance our knowledge of guidance method." A. M. Conklin
— + Survey 62:379 Je 15 '29 320w

Wis Lib Bul 25:128 Ap '29

COHEN, OCTAVUS ROY. May day mystery. 291p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton
29-14911

A beautiful May day was spoiled for Marland College. Pat Thayer, a prominent senior, was found murdered in his room at the Psi Tau fraternity house. Three popular members of the college were known to have visited him in the last hour of his life; the question was, which one was guilty. Detective Hanvey, famous but grotesque, found out in his own peculiar way.

Bookm 70:xxv S '29 60w

"Detective Hanvey, a comic relief detective, solves the none too complex enigma in a satisfactory manner." Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Jl 21 '29 130w

N Y Times p16 Ag 18 '29 230w

Sat R of Lit 6:95 Ag 31 '29 100w

"All the people talk the purest American. Sometimes the British reader needs a glossary."

Times [London] Lit Sup p749 S 26 '29 120w

Wis Lib Bul 25:324 O '29

COHEN, OCTAVUS ROY. Valley of Olympus. 298p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton
29-1677

Larry Wycoff, handsome young lawyer from Alabama, and Tyra Karlson, pretty film actress from Sweden, contracted a marriage merely in order to gain Tyra's citizenship. The first few months of their married life held some surprising events, but the outcome was the old, old story.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 10 '29 280w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 20 '29 1250w

"The perennially amusing Mr. Cohen combines an amazing ingenuity in the invention and solution of a plot with an inability to create character which amounts to a deformity. Even the suspicion that he has drawn several of his characters from life fails to impart blood and breath to the palpable lay figures of this story."

+ — N Y Times p8 Ja 20 '29 500w

"Mr. Cohen never intended 'The Valley of Olympus' to be profound or weighty, but he succeeded in making it appealing."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:935 Ap 20 '29 180w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 5 '29 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p297 Ap 11 '29 230w

Wis Lib Bul 25:102 Mr '29

COHN, LASSAR. Organic laboratory methods; auth. tr. from the general pt. of 5th rev. ed., by Ralph E. Oesper; ed. by Roger Adams and Hans T. Clarke. (World wide chemical tr. ser.) 469p il $6.50 Williams & Wilkins

547 Chemistry, Organic 28-30050

"Lassar-Cohn's work appears in the original German in two volumes, the first of which deals with laboratory technique, and the second with fundamental organic reactions such as nitration, etc. The present work is a translation of volume one. There is a fairly broad diversity of topics, which include among others, distillation, dialysis, passage of vapors through hot tubes, evaporation, decolorization and clarification, extraction, filtration, crystallization, solvents and diluents, dehydration and comminution."—Am Chem Soc J

"Its appearance is timely in that there are not many handbooks, written in English, which adequately cover this important subject. It contains many useful suggestions, and should prove of especial value to graduate students majoring in organic chemistry. The stilted form which unfortunately characterizes so many translations is largely absent from this work." A. J. Hill

+ Am Chem Soc J 51:2844 S '29 120w

"An excellent translation of the General Part of the fifth revised edition of Lassar-Cohn's classic work. The work should be most valuable for that large group of young organic chemists who have not yet properly mastered their German." F. C. Whitmore

+ Ind & Eng Chem 21:392 Ap '29 170w

COLBOURNE, MAURICE DALE. Unemployment or war. 307p $3 Coward-McCann

330.1 Economics. Industry. Money 28-20459

"A popular work on economics, proposing as a remedy for unemployment and tight money that the quantity of money in circulation at any given time be mathematically regulated and that simultaneously prices be held down."—R of Rs

Reviewed by J: Carter

N Y Times p12 D 16 '28 980w

R of Rs 78:adv38 O '28 60w

World Tomorrow 12:91 F '29 60w

COLE, GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD. Next ten years in British social and economic policy. 459p $5.50 (15s) Macmillan

330.942 Great Britain—Economic conditions. Socialism. Labor and laboring classes—Great Britain. Labor party (Great Britain)
29-20229

The book, the author acknowledges in his preface, has resulted from the necessity of formulating afresh the tenets of his social and political creed. Post-war problems demand post-war solutions, and socialism must change to meet the problems of a changing world. The book contains a statement of new social and economic problems to be met by practical socialism in post-war Britain.

Booklist 26:101 D '29

"Throughout the book one is impressed by the simplicity of the machinery suggested when compared with the author's earlier schemes and by a desire to guide modern developments rather than to force economic activities into rigid channels." J. A. Flexner

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ag 25 '29 850w

"There is timeliness in Mr. Cole's book, whatever may be thought of its suggestions and forecasts, for it was written when the coming of a new labor government in Britain became imminent, and is now offered as a 'revaluation and a restatement of Labor and Socialist policy.' " E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 31 '29 500w

"His new views will excite as much opposition in some sections of the Labor movement as outside it, but his book can certainly be welcomed as a stimulating and arresting discussion of difficult problems which will occupy the minds of thinking people more and more as industry, both national and international, becomes increasingly complicated and interrelated."

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 S 7 '29 650w

"It is Mr. Cole's merit that he keeps closely in touch with the needs of living men instead of being bewitched by ghosts. His book is one that no business man who keeps his eye on his own times can afford to ignore." G: E. G. Catlin

+ Nation 129:356 O 2 '29 1000w

"Mr Cole has put an immense amount of hard work and honest thinking into the elaboration of his programme, which is worthy of very careful examination." D. H. Robertson

+ Nation and Ath 45:479 Jl 6 '29 650w

"Mr. Cole's latest volume ought to have a quite special interest for American readers. More than any recently published work, it shows with some exactness just what is happening to British Socialism. It is, let it be said at once, an able book, at once courageous and candid. It reveals him as the kind of person, who, by fertility of mind, and power of intelligent insight into

COLE, G: D. H. and M. I.—Continued
the immediate problem, would make the ideal secretary of an economic general staff." H. J. Laski

+ New Repub 60:77 S 4 '29 900w

New Statesman 33:185 My 18 '29 1250w

"G. D. H. Cole is one of labor's intellectuals. With the faith of a convert, he offers us an admirable disclosure of that evolutionary, as distinct from revolutionary, socialism which is the gospel of economics, according to Ramsay MacDonald and his disciples." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p1 Jl 28 '29 2000w

Reviewed by E: T. Devine
Outlook 152:673 Ag 21 '29 200w

"Although there is not much in this book with which we can agree, let us say unreservedly that it has been a pleasure to follow Mr. Cole through his intellectual exercises. He is honest with himself and with his readers."

+ Spec 142:710 My 4 '29 1000w

"Mr. Cole is a brilliant economist, whose opinions as to the way the world is going deserve the closest attention."

+ Spec 142:1015 Je 29 '29 40w

Springf'd Republican p12 Ag 2 '29 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p393 My 16 '29 750w

COLE, GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD, and COLE, MARGARET ISABEL (POSTGATE) (MRS G: D. H. COLE). Poison in a garden suburb. 352p $2 Payson & Clarke [7s 6d Collins]

29-20652

Insignificant Mr Harold Cayley was attempting to argue down a lecturer on eugenics. The place was the Literary institute of Medstead Garden Suburb near London. Suddenly Mr Cayley was stricken and carried from the midst of the astonished members, and shortly he died—poisoned. Suspicion pointed to a young doctor; next to a young man who was infatuated by Mrs Cayley's remarkable beauty. Superintendent Wilson solved the mystery in time to prevent two more murders.

Booklist 26:73 N '29

Bookm 70:xxxiv N '29 50w

"A Grade A toxicological item by two of the best bafflers in the business." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 O 6 '29 150w

Boston Transcript p5 N 13 '29 250w

"Mr. and Mrs. Cole have written another good book. Year by year they are developing and improving their technique in the art of writing detective stories. Their latest book is their best. To readers of this type of popular fiction it can be recommended with the utmost confidence. This is an odd form of the literary art, but it holds so great financial possibilities that it is certain to be pursued and developed, and there are no writers who are working quite so steadily and intelligently at its development as Mr. and Mrs. Cole. We may pretty confidently expect that each of their books will be better than the last."

+ New Statesman 33:448 Jl 13 '29 110w

"The case presents some interesting problems, which are, of course, eventually solved by Wilson, but the chief interest in the story lies in the character involved. Particularly well drawn is the out-spoken spinster, Miss Lydia Redford, who unfortunately drops out of sight when the story is about half done."

+ N Y Times p38 O 20 '29 180w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 153:520 N 27 '29 40w

"Mr. and Mrs. Cole's new detective story is disappointing. A bewildering number of characters appear in it, and we feel that so many of them are suspicious that the reader's attempts at detection are futile."

— Spec 143:418 S 28 '29 100w

"The authors while they are not aspiring to wring heartstrings avoid the opposite error of appearing too proud for the job they have undertaken. They have performed it in a workmanlike way, and as if they enjoyed it—not as if they were saying 'the taste for these trivialities is yours not ours.' The developments interest them; and, so far as the exigencies of poisoning permit, their people act and speak naturally and so as to hold attention."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p578 Jl 18 '29 200w

COLE, GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD, and COLE, MARGARET ISABEL (POSTGATE) (MRS G: D. H. COLE). Superintendent Wilson's holiday. 291p $2 Payson & Clarke [7s 6d Collins]

29-5408

"A collection of short stories, all dealing with the exploits of Superintendent Wilson. In some of the stories Superintendent Wilson is a member of the Criminal Investigation Department of Scotland Yard, while in others he is a private detective, having retired from his official connection with the police."—N Y Times

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 F 24 '29 80w

"A rather ordinary collection of short detective stories which are told too briefly and with too much haste to permit of the customary suggestive settings and mysterious persons." T. S. L.

— Boston Transcript p2 Mr 27 '29 350w

New Statesman 32:300 D 8 '28 120w

"The outstanding characteristic of Wilson is the speed with which he works. There are eight stories in the collection, and most of them are good."

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 3 '29 140w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 151:440 Mr 13 '29 80w

Reviewed by H. C. Harwood
Sat R 147:137 F 2 '29 90w

"The adventures of the leading private detective are written in a bright, sparkling, and entertaining manner, and in good English."

+ Spec 141:745 N 17 '28 60w

"The plots are ingenious, they are narrated simply and effectively, and there is a wide range of interest in type of crime and character. In the face of a market flooded with conventional thrillers, where false clues are laid for the unwary reader, these stories stand out among the best of their kind."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 24 '29 110w

COLE, HAZEL (MRS PAUL F. SHUPP). Maids will be wives. 313p $2.50 Little

29-13214

The women of Anne Westover's family have been content to be wives and mothers. Anne, though she has vague longings for a career, finds herself, like them, making a career of wifehood and motherhood. When her children are grown and married Anne makes ready to launch her own plans—and is drawn back once more to the business of being wife and mother.

"The rather unhealthy atmosphere of a woman's college, full of false values and sterile emotions, is well given. Miss Cole tempers her criticism of women's education somewhat by insinuating that this is what a woman's education of twenty-five years ago led to, but most of the points she makes against women's colleges are still matters to be taken seriously."

+ Bookm 70:xxii S '29 110w

"Miss Cole, who is really Mrs Shupp, has taught in women's colleges. A married woman, a mother and a novelist as well, she should be able to tell about Anne with the voice of authority." Garreta Busey

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Jl 21 '29 500w

"A strong, firm novel upon a question essentially timeless. . . The story of Anne Westover is indeed one characteristic of all ages." W: E. Harris

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 25 '29 1600w

"That [the author] writes clearly and surely, with a quiet humor and an undercurrent of restrained satire, without platitudes or flurry, makes her book as enjoyable as it is authentic."

+ Christian Science Monitor p8 S 21 '29 780w

"The author has chosen for this, her first novel, material for which she will find sympathy in a good many of her readers because they have lived through it themselves. It is not pretentious. The very simplicity of the story is one of its main charms. And the question that it raises: What will a modern civilization do with women who are strongly maternal? is one that is worth consideration."

+ N Y Times p8 My 19 '29 600w

"The novel is analytical and marked by a sensitive handling of those personal relations which are so acute in many homes."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 16 '29 180w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 11 '29 230w

Wis Lib Bul 25:195 Je '29

COLE, MABEL ELIZABETH (COOK) (MRS FAY COOPER COLE). Savage gentlemen. 249p il $3.50 Van Nostrand

919.14 Philippine Islands—Native races. Philippine Islands—Description and travel. Philippine Islands—Social life and customs 29-19544

Mrs Cole and her husband made on expedition to the Philippine interior for the purpose of studying the customs of the natives, most of them members of head-hunting tribes, whom she calls "savage gentlemen." She describes the mode of living of the Tinguians, their primitive social customs, their hunts, their dances, their food, and their belief in the spirit world and the use of mediums.

Booklist 26:113 D '29

"Savage Gentlemen is a record of courage and high achievement. As George A. Dorsey in his Introduction sums it up. 'The Coles, in three and-a-half years got further into the heart of some of the wildest of the Philippine tribes than the Spaniards got in three-and-a-half centuries.' "

+ Bookm 70:xxxiv D '29 130w

Boston Transcript p3 O 16 '29 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p149 D '29

COLEMAN, MCALISTER. Pioneers of freedom; with an introd. by Norman Thomas. 222p $2.50 Vanguard press

920 United States—Biography 29-8044

The author was asked by the Pioneer youth literature committee "to prepare a number of short biographies of men and women who have fought for the freedom of the workers of this country after their own manner." The pioneers of freedom whom he treats are Thomas Paine, Thomas Jefferson, Frances Wright, Wendell Phillips, John P. Altgeld, Henry George, Samuel Gompers, Eugene Debs, John Mitchell, Charles Steinmetz.

Boston Transcript p2 My 8 '29 250w

"The book, though intended to appeal to children in general, is better suited to the later high-school years. . . The style is simple enough to appeal to children but the political and economic concepts are beyond the range of most youngsters' interests. For use in waking up youngsters who are ready for an antidote to the established patriotic hokum about great men in authority, the book is unique." Roger Baldwin

+ Nation 128:564 My 8 '29 360w

"Mr. Coleman is frankly radical, writes at white heat, reveals a hostile spirit toward capitalism and stands four-square to all the winds that blow." C: J. Finger

N Y World p10m Ap 7 '29 360w

"Mr. Coleman's papers, by design or not, are admirably adapted to the reading of young people. They are simply written, fresh in spirit, warm and free from the tricks of much current biography. Because the longer a man has been dead, the easier he is to write about, the first sketches on Paine, Jefferson and Wendell Phillips are the best."

+ — Outlook 151:429 Mr 13 '29 130w

St Louis 27:270 S '29

"Biographies 'with a purpose' are almost certain to present a somewhat one-sided view of their subjects. Mr. Coleman's series of portraits may be valuable as a corrective of hostile representations, but at least half of them need a similar corrective themselves." R. J. Davis

— + Sat R of Lit 5:930 Ap 20 '29 400w

"In all the recent books seeking to offer young readers something more than the customary hero worship, I should put this first. Not only for its subjects, its rare labor viewpoint, its fine quality of interest, but also for its balance. These stories lead inevitably to admiration, but they do not make heroes out as saints. The book is honest, straightforward narrative of a kind scarcer than hen's teeth." D. A.

+ World Tomorrow 12:522 D '29 360w

COLETTE, pseud. (MME GABRIELLE CLAUDINE [COLETTE] DE JOUVENEL). Chéri; tr. by Janet Flanner. 227p $2.50 Boni 29-22047

"Cheri is the son of a sufficiently successful courtesan, by whom he is supported and groomed for the life of a gigolo. While still a comparatively young decadent, he falls in love with one of his mother's contemporaries at the moment he is about to carry off in marriage a wealthy young woman of the world. The story, of course, deals largely in a light but fairly poignant way with the tragic qualities of the older woman."—Boston Transcript

"The substantial merit which 'Chéri' shares with Madame Colette's best work is an absolute fidelity to the data of sensibility and instinct. Few writers of our time have translated with greater subtlety and precision that portion of human experience which takes place on the purely animal level." Lloyd Morris

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ag 25 '29 1000w

"Although there is a certain appealing quality to this novel of Parisian life, there does not seem to be any great excuse for its having been written, save as a semi-exotic tid-bit for the decadently minded. One admires Mme. Colette for her ability to write delicately and with insight upon themes that would boil with erotic adjectives in the hands of another, but at the same time, one feels that story and characters are somewhat forced for the situation itself."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 S 11 '29 180w

"The thirty volumes of stories, sketches, and dialogues which Colette has produced are chiefly marked by banal plots, but the style and outlook are imaginative and profound. She can be at one and the same time rhythmic, brutal, and delicate in a paragraph which often resembles a teeming passage from nature itself, by virtue not of labored descriptions but of rare divination. . . Colette portrays herself in nearly every book she writes. She keeps her aloofness but she spares none of her major or minor frailties." Pierre Loving

+ — Nation 129:360 O 2 '29 380w

" 'Chéri,' the first of Colette's novels to be published in America, is a pretty good yardstick for measuring her stature—though perhaps it does not wholly explain her vast popularity in France. . . She can lure one into believing, momentarily, that her narrow, sex-absorbed world is normal and self-sustaining. . . We are all animals, yes—but most of us manage to take occasional excursions from the zoo. Because her characters are destitute of those spiritual and intellectual qualities which give mankind some semblance of dignity, Colette's world is limited, lopsided and—ultimately—a little dull." E. H. Walton

COLETTE, pseud.—Continued

— New Repub 60:158 S 25 '29 310w

" 'Chéri' endears itself to the reader partly because of its subject, but more because of the manner of its telling. Its delicacy of sentiment, its tenderness of mood when concerned with matter not usually delicate or tender, makes the reader forget that Mme. Colette is writing of a gigolo and a courtesan, and accept her principal characters as creatures worthy of his more intimate sympathies."

+ N Y Times p6 S 1 '29 580w

"Well written, with delicacy and tenderness as well as with sophistication and gaiety,—as any one who is familiar with Mme. Colette's other novels will know. The translation is excellent."

+ Outlook 153:69 S 11 '29 100w

"The taste of all this is bitter-sweet, and might have been unpleasant without the undoubted magic of Colette's style. The types are good, the atmosphere is incredibly good, and Chéri himself is one of those admitted marvels that come but once in a career even to such authors as Colette. Miss Flanner's translation retains with surprising success the very article de Paris tone of the original, and ought to do much towards making a unique person known in America." T. M. Purdy, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 6:439 N 23 '29 300w

COLLES, HENRY COPE. Voice and verse; a study in English song. 167p $3 (7s 6d) Oxford

784 Music—England—History and criticism. Vocal music. Purcell, Henry [29-13976]

This series of lectures on the development of English song, oratorio and opera, with special reference to the work of Purcell, Handel, and Sullivan, seeks to show that "the English language, having characteristics of its own, some of which raise peculiar difficulties for the musician who deals honestly with them, has in fact produced an English melody."

---

"Mr. Colles' style is smooth, easy and capable, but it would be unfair to call it urbane. It is distinguished simply because it has no irritating peculiarites. His approach to his subject is similarly unimpassioned, sound and scholarly." Jeffrey Mark

+ New Repub 59:240 Jl 17 '29 430w

"This very interesting book contains a great deal of solid learning and persuasive argument, fused together by an attractively clear style. . . All through Mr. Colles seasons his learning with touches of dry humour, which add refreshing spice to serious argument."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p61 Ja 24 '29 1100w

COLLETT, GLENNA, and NEVILLE, JAMES M. Ladies in the rough; with a foreword by Bobby Jones. 237p il $3.50 (6s) Knopf

796.352 Golf 28-27743

Along with chapters of instruction for the amateur golfer, Miss Collett reviews her golfing career, outlines the necessary qualifications for the match-player, and has some interesting comments to make on the controversy between amateur and professional sport.

---

Springf'd Republican p6 D 10 '28 530w

"The instructional chapters are short, straightforward, and intelligible—three qualities not always to be found in this kind of literature—and she has a good deal that is interesting to say about the relative merits of the best men and women golfers."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p191 Mr 7 '29 130w

COLLIER, FRANK WILBUR. John Wesley among the scientists. 351p $2 Abingdon press

B or 92 Wesley, John. Religion and science 28-31129

"The author sets forth John Wesley as being so keen a lover of science that if he had not been a great evangelist he would have been a great scientist, and that he even may be considered an evolutionist in both science and religion."—N Y Times

---

"In support of his thesis Professor Collier has unearthed a wealth of material. From an intensive study of Wesley's life and writings he reaches the conclusion that Wesley's philosophical attitude did not obstruct his loyalty to scientific method, but that there was, in fact, a real harmony between them."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Mr 10 '29 100w

Boston Transcript p8 Ja 26 '29 450w

N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 19 '29 480w

"Mr. Collier has gone into his subject with admirable thoroughness, has searched widely for his material, although finding most of it in Wesley's own writings, and has presented it with cogent effect."

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 20 '29 400w

St Louis 27:271 S '29

Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '29 230w

COLLINS, ARCHIE FREDERICK. Aviation and all about it; an extremely simple and thoroughly practical exposition of all the various branches of aviation. 260p il $2 (6s) Appleton

629.13 Aeronautics 29-10589

Covers in brief space facts about the airplane, historical, scientific and practical, and gives directions for making airplane models. Chapters are included on airplane instruments and navigation aids, airports and airways, and flying exploits and records.

---

Booklist 26:37 O '29

N Y New Tech Bks 14:35 Jl '29

"It has the merit of covering almost every phase of the subject in some way, even to the building of model aeroplanes, while there are useful chapters upon aerodynamics, practical construction, and air navigation instruments. The explanations are simple and informing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p579 Jl 18 '29 80w

Wis Lib Bul 25:318 O '29

COLLINS, ARCHIE FREDERICK. Fun with figures. 253p il $2 (6s) Appleton

793.74 Mathematical recreations. Arithmetic—Problems, exercises, etc. 28-19780

Arithmetical puzzles and tricks jocosely set forth and illustrated for the edification of the youthful entertainer.

---

Booklist 25:109 D '28

"These brain twisters are suitable for almost all ages."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 S 9 '28 80w

"The book contains many curious and interesting puzzles."

+ Boston Transcript p8 S 15 '28 80w

Cleveland Open Shelf p90 Je '29

Pratt p26 spring '29

Wis Lib Bul 24:308 N '28

COLLINS, ARTHUR SIMONS. Authorship in the days of Johnson; being a study of the relationship between author, patron, publisher and public, 1726-1780. 278p $5 Dutton [12s 6d Routledge]

655.52 Authorship. Authors and publishers. Authors and patrons [27-19053]

A statement of the case for authors, from 1726 to 1780, showing their relations to publishers, patrons and public. The greater part of the book is devoted to a study of the copyright struggle and the eighteenth century custom of patrons for the often penniless author.

---

"Notwithstanding the specialized character, the picture of the world of letters from 1726 to 1832, presented here, is an extraordinarily interesting one, populated with a host of forgotten figures and seething with innumerable literary controversies long since dead and, for the most part, forgotten. . . Mr. Collins has brought to a sober and scholarly investigation a very considerable verbal felicity and a slight flavor of dramatic imagination." Margaret Wallace

+ Bookm 69:553 Jl '29 450w

"A valuable and serviceable compendium of information relating to practically every aspect of the profession of authorship and the business of publishing. Mr. Collins's industry has been amazing, and he displays notable skill in giving continuous interest to more than five hundred pages filled with statistics and details." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 22 '29 750w

"The book contains an enormous number of very interesting facts, but Mr. Collins tends to weary his reader by repeating himself. He is in small points annoyingly inaccurate. No doubt its subject is not one which would appeal to a very wide circle of readers, but the facts which it gives have much more than a merely technical interest." Leonard Woolf

+ — Nation and Ath 41:416 Je 25 '27 960w

New Statesman 29:784 O 1 '27 430w

"A very scholarly and comprehensive study. . . The object of Mr. Collins's work is not to point out the behavior of the big boys of literature. It is to give us a historical view of the literary market in England during the period of a hundred years." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p6m Je 15 '29 90w

Reviewed by Edwin Clark

N Y Times p4 Ag 25 '29 700w

"Mr. Collins has produced a thorough and well-documented account of a literary period which is (apart from the necessary research) more easily examined for movements and tendencies than our own. . . It is rather expensive and may, we hope, appear in a cheaper edition, as it should be very useful to students of the period."

+ Sat R 142:981 Je 25 '27 480w

"A sober and thoroughgoing study which students of the eighteenth century will find constantly useful. He presents within small compass more precise and detailed information concerning the status of authors and the publishing trade in the eighteenth century than can be found in any other work I have seen. His chapter on the copyright controversy is the first inclusive treatment of a subject of vital importance to all literary historians." F. A. Pottle

+ Sat R of Lit 6:289 O 19 '29 420w

Spec 138:1026 Je 11 '27 430w

"A book on this subject was badly needed. Mr. Collins's survey is therefore sure of a welcome; and though its use requires caution, it will be found useful by many. The section on copyright is in some ways the most valuable in the book. The subject is unfamiliar, and the lay student, not accustomed to thread his way through the Law Reports, is at a loss for the facts. Mr. Collins has mastered them, and tells the story well. . . With thorough revision, it would deserve a place in the libraries of all who care for this part of literary history."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p371 My 26 '27 1280w

COLLINS, ARTHUR SIMONS. Profession of letters. 279p $5 Dutton [12s 6d Routledge]

655.52 Authorship. Authors and publishers. Authors and patrons. English literature—History and criticism [29-9626]

Continues the study of the relationship between author and publisher, and patron from 1780 to 1832.

---

Reviewed by Margaret Wallace

Bookm 69:554 Jl '29 90w

Reviewed by Edwin Clark

N Y Times p4 Ag 25 '29 700w

Outlook 152:351 Je 26 '29 180w

St Louis 27:303 N '29

"He writes agreeably and his facts, being mainly about money, are always interesting; after all, it is mere hypocrisy to pretend that we do not like to know who got what for this poem or that novel."

+ Sat R 146:778 D 8 '28 480w

"Mr. Collins presumably has at least one more volume under way, and his history of the rise of the profession of writing in England will be one of the valuable works in the cultural history of our extraordinary epoch."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:95 Ag 31 '29 300w

"Mr. Collins's book is full at once of statistics, learning, and entertainment."

+ Spec 141:927 D 15 '28 300w

"The index is of little value. The bibliography does not deserve the name; it is a mere alphabetical rearrangement of the references given in the footnotes, without regard to proportion. Perhaps this is ill-humored criticism. But we are entitled to be out of humour; for Dr. Collins could have done better. His text, fortunately, is much better than its trimmings. He knows very well the importance of exact statement, and if he does not date his quotations he does as a rule give the dates of the events which they report."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p985 D 13 '28 1280w

COLLINS, BERTRAND. Rome express. 341p $2.50 Harper

28-25815

An American girl marries an Italian in the diplomatic service of his country. She is having an unhappy time in Rome with his family —middle class with social aspirations—when he is appointed minister to Esthonia. Greta adapts herself admirably to the new milieu and aids materially in her husband's success. The shocking revelation of Piero's addiction to drugs overthrows her whole world. She becomes the target of his sister's malice and is at the same time harassed by the attentions of a peculiar Russian princess and her too ardent nephew. Two friends of former years, Erik Fersen and his sister Hilda, are pillars of strength to her, helping her thru the frenzied events before and after Piero's death.

---

"The swift motion of the story is fortunately not obscured by the florescence of the style. The contrast between the Latin and the Northern temperament is continually and sharply brought out, with a consequent underlying tragedy of situation."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ja 6 '29 300w

Boston Transcript p8 N 24 '28 170w

"His total effect is one of vigor and spontaneity. His characters, which might easily have become the lifeless puppets of a thesis, have a vivid existence apart from the necessities of the argument."

+ N Y Times p33 N 25 '28 580w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 227:adv Ja '29 50w

"Mr. Collins lines in his eccentric characters with delightful flourishes and with constant freshness; his 'straight' people are in general not so well worth knowing. Some qualification must be made when we consider the novel as narrative. Here we find a little brusqueness and a trace of rigidity that give the whole work a feeling of nervousness and lack of ease. But the fault is not gross. 'Rome Express' remains definitely worth attention."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:694 F 16 '29 300w

Wis Lib Bul 25:31 Ja '29

COLLINS, DALE. Idolaters. 294p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Harrap]

29-16855

A melodramatic novel of the Dutch East Indies. The chief characters are Mr. Dave, "the world's most premier and most small contortionist"; Miles Courtney, a beach combing missionary; April Rose, a beautiful dancer who had been struck dumb during a war-time air raid; Pieter Pieters, a Boer planter; and the Sultan Dato Sebau.

---

"'Idolaters' is one of those rare things, an unusual book." R. B. Sanborn

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ag 11 '29 700w

"The pace is varied. The glossy colors of the tropics are artfully used. Only rarely and at short intervals are they obtrusive. If a slightly less stilted sentence order had been observed, the book world have been one of the best in its class this season." C. A. C.

+ — New Repub 61:76 D 11 '29 170w

"In this melodrama of life in Java Mr. Collins reveals himself as a writer who confuses violence with action, color with atmosphere and costume with character. The result is a lurid tale which is apt for Hollywood, but which will disappoint those readers of 'Vanity Under the Sun' who felt that they had found in Mr. Collins a good story-teller and a master of exotic detail."

— N Y Times p9 Ag 18 '29 650w

N Y World p11m N 10 '29 270w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 8 '29 180w

"The writing of the book is distinguished throughout, the drama is handled with restraint, and the end, when, after April and Pieters have gone and Courtenay has been killed, Mr. Dave remains on the island and finds peace from the mockery of the world, is finely imagined—a satisfying conclusion to this unusual piece of work, which will enhance the author's reputation."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p928 N 14 '29 300w

COLUM, PADRAIC. Balloon; a comedy in four acts. 123p $2 Macmillan

822 29-12299

"Mr. Colum presupposes for his dramatic setting a fabulously sumptuous hotel, named by its architect the Daedalus and representing the 'unbuilt-on earth.' There is a landing field on the roof and a balloon is about to ascend from it. In the square opposite is a worn man with a telescope. He is a philosopher of sorts. But he is tired of gazing on the mountains of the moon and empty seas, and would sell his telescope for one day amid the pleasures of the Daedalus. The architect of the hotel gratifies his wish, and the two change places. The experiment ends as the reader expects—each is glad to resume his sphere."—N Y Times

---

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:567 Ap '29

---

"Caspar, the telescope man, and the rest in 'Balloon' have no reality, and hence can arouse no dramatic emotion. It is not necessary to make them characters out of 'Street Scene.' But within their fantastic and symbolic world they must function with feeling, they must have three dimensions, they must possess sufficient specific gravity to make us take them seriously. . . Yet there is in this fantasy the makings of a wistful and significant comedy. What it needs is less Spengler and more Barrie." W. P. Eaton

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Jl 14 '29 630w

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 3 '29 380w

"'Balloon' is a minor treatment of a major theme. But it has nevertheless a significance that exceeds its own individual scope. For a retrospective summary will show us that Mr. Colum has succeeded in doing what most of the expressionists, in an entirely different mood and more deliberately, have really been trying to do. He has taken a socially vital subject and has presented it in theatrical terms that are both universal and immediately relevant. . . A poet has written a play that has greater theatrical than literary interest." Harold Clurman

+ New Repub 59:266 Jl 24 '29 960w

"There is much of wisdom packed into 'Balloon,' wisdom presented by whimsical characters in whimsical speeches. There is an overtone of poetry that lifts one into a world of unreality and brings the illusion that it is a real world." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p8 Jl 28 '29 430w

St Louis 27:339 D '29

"It does seem as though Mr. Colum has found some kind of a fourth dimension in playwriting, wherein representationalism is reconciled with expressionism, and the action of thought runs parallel to plot, emotion, and characterization. In sheerness of mood there is something about it like Leonid Andreiev's 'He Who Gets Slapped' yet it is tightly knit, and wholly within the logic of its premise." Jane Dransfield

+ Sat R of Lit 6:75 Ag 24 '29 480w

COMPER, FRANCES M. M. Life of Richard Rolle; together with an edition of his English lyrics (now for the first time published). 340p il $3.75 Dutton [10s 6d Dent]

B or 92 Rolle, Richard, of Hampole 29-11513

A study of the life and personality of an English mystic who died in 1349. Richard Rolle studied at Oxford for the ministry and became known as the "holy hermit of Hampole." He first wrote of his mystical experiences in Latin verse and prose, but was one of the first to change to the English vernacular of his day. A collection of his lyrics in modern spelling is included in the present book.

---

"It is doubtful whether even so competent a book as this will quicken any wide new interest in one of the most neglected of early English poets."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 F 17 '29 350w

Boston Transcript p4 F 16 '29 1300w

"In one respect Miss Comper has not been fortunate. Miss Hope Allen brought out her great and definitive monograph on Rolle's writings and genuine texts while this book was still in the press, and owing to a prolonged illness Miss Comper was not able to consult it. It is one of the recurrent chances of literature that two writers should, unknown to each other, be engaged on the same subject at the same time."

New Statesman 32:472 Ja 19 '29 770w

"Miss Frances Comper is already known for her modernized versions of several of Richard Rolle's vernacular works. She has now given us, in modern spelling, the text of the lyrics usually attributed to him; placing together those which are most probably authentic, and giving some account of the chief MS. sources. This is a valuable addition to the accessible works of the early English Mystics; at last allowing the ordinary reader to estimate Rolle's status as a religious poet. . . The larger, but less important, part of the book consists in an elaborate and courageous attempt to reconstruct the life of Richard and analyse his mysticism." Evelyn Underhill

+ Spec 141:995 D 29 '28 250w

COMPTON-BURNETT, IVY. Brothers and sisters. 273p $2.50 Harcourt [6s Heath, Cranton]

29-20650

"Never was a book better named! If the younger generation in Moreton Edge consisted of anything but brothers and sisters who lived, thought, spoke, and even married in pairs, the reader is not informed of it. For the basis of her plot Miss Compton-Burnett takes a brother and sister marrying in ignorance of their relationship, and their children falling in love with (the children's) unknown uncle and aunt! The gradual discovery of the truth is the cause of continually new combinations and permutations, and with each change the various pairs of brothers and sisters move each in unison. . . Practically the whole book is nothing but dialogue, and one is aware not of men and women but of voices and vivid intelligences. The most tragic occurrence does no more than let loose a fresh spate of talk, but the characters seem not so much really modern as simply devoid of genuine feeling."—New Statesman

---

"This is a mordant, compelling book. The plot is the barest. The theme is ancient, but it will reward any who will dare the difficulties of the technique and style, which are oblique to a superlative degree."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 N 10 '29 250w

"All this is somewhat pathological and morbid in its significance, and not at all helped by the conversations through which the facts leak out. All of them love to talk about these matters and about each other, and they all talk very much alike so that it might as well be one or the other as far as any individualization goes." W. S. B.

— Boston Transcript p7 D 4 '29 950w

"A book which is difficult to read, which is at once bleak, poignant, ironical and humane, which will certainly not be to everyone's taste, but which has the merit of being one of the most original things in modern English fiction." V. S. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 S 7 '29 720w

"I doubt if there is a living author who writes better dialogue. It is extremely concentrated, and demands every penny-weight of the reader's attention. But it is not more difficult to read than Henry James's, and I make bold to say that it is usually more rewarding. . . The stony humour and whispered wit of her writing makes one laugh aloud as one reads, the disillusionment is extreme, the acidity almost unequalled." Raymond Mortimer

+ Nation and Ath 44:915 Mr 30 '29 260w

"The essential absurdity of it apart, it is all very convincingly done, and the author has the firmest possible grasp of her characters. . . The book displays considerable originality, cleverness, and wit; the drawing of Sophia Stace, the sister-wife, is masterly down to the last word she utters on her death-bed. But the atmosphere is too rarefied, the cynical humour so dry that it turns to sawdust in the mouth. To read Brothers and Sisters is certainly a new experience, but not one we are anxious to repeat."

+ — New Statesman 33:250 Je 1 '29 200w

" 'Brothers and Sisters' is preponderantly a novelist's novel. The touch is as light as the feathering of two currents of air, and the sufficient human heat as immaterial as that friction might generate. The slim, cool tone stays slim and cool to the end. Wit is present, a wit as appropriate and supplementary as some distinguished woman's perfume." Vincent McHugh

+ N Y Evening Post p12m N 23 '29 400w

"It will seem to many that the author of 'Brothers and Sisters,' having deliberately elected to write a novel bordering on the Oedipus motif, became alarmed at her temerity. On no other hypothesis can her method be explained, or, more exactly, the manner in which she applies her method. With almost a complete absence of description, and scarcely an attempt to carry the narrative forward, the author contents herself with concocting conversation after conversation, now one group of characters taking part, and now another. To be sure, there is nothing inherently wrong in the method. The pity is that Miss Compton-Burnett should have chosen a field in which she is peculiarly inept, that of dramatic dialogue, and this the English critics notwithstanding."

N Y Times p2 O 6 '29 550w

"All other books on this theme are stories of the present defeated by the past; 'Brothers and Sisters' is a story of the present hurt by the past, but not defeated." Basil Davenport

+ Sat R of Lit 6:473 N 30 '29 720w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 5 '30 50w

COMSTOCK, SARAH. The moon is made of green cheese. 310p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran 29-9881

In boyhood Brian and John pledged their devotion to each other and together to the study of astronomy. Brian's is the more positive nature; his gifts are showier than John's, whose love for his friend coupled with a deep self-distrust holds him back. In all things, college, love, work, marriage, the other outstrips him. Yet at the last when Brian's wall of bluff has collapsed John's worthier building is capped with success.

---

"It is a story of drama and psychological penetration, based on an excellent idea and potentially powerful."

+ Bookm 69:xxii Je '29 100w

"As a study in character and causes it falls rather flat. The really interesting question of why life kicks one man and pats another is, one feels, not so easily answered, and the author's suggestion that in the end it is a matter of background plus character is not lifted above the commonplace by application to such obvious cases as the two she has chosen to depict." M. C. Dawson

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ap 28 '29 480w

"In her fantastic study of two friends, linked by common interest in science and common love, Miss Comstock has aimed high and sought to probe deep. Her story has real beauty, a quality of which she is so conscious that it leads her into gross extravagances of style. 'The Moon Is Made of Green Cheese' has originality and nobility. . . One must regretfully add that Miss Comstock is often her story's own worst enemy, all too often spoiling a fine effect by overwriting." J. F. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p3 My 11 '29 680w

CONDON, FRANK. Once in a blue moon. 279p $2 Sears 29-8314

"In this broadly comic story are recounted the adventures of a mature married couple on a seventy-day round-the-world steamship tour from San Francisco to the Orient, Africa and Europe. The husband, a self-avowed sorehead, has been nagged into making the voyage by his romantic wife, who has always yearned to revisit Naples, where, sixteen years earlier, they had first met and loved. Their experiences on shipboard and ashore are pictured as a prolonged endurance of boredom and discomfort, but the crowning blow falls when, at last arrived in Naples, they find the landmarks of their sweetheart days vanished and the ardors which then had stirred them gone forever."—N Y World

---

"A fairly amusing travelogue without benefit of the mellow philosophy one might well expect. John and Esther will provide the reader with occasional entertaining moments."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 17 '29 150w

"Most of it is concerned with the stock tribulations which beset comfort-loving folk in alien surroundings, but the buoyant humor that is so essential for such a tale is lacking. In its place the author gives one a patter of turned phrases that grow irksome with continued reiteration. The book does not pretend to be a travel diary; it fails pretty completely in being a humorous satire on the ways of Americans in strange lands."

— N Y Times p24 My 26 '29 230w

"Despite the prevalent strain of elephantine humor, this book presents a not unreasonable argument against seeing the world by the tourist system."

— + N Y World p11m My 12 '29 130w

CONFERENCE ON UNEMPLOYMENT, Washington, D.C., 1921. Recent economic changes in the United States. 2v 984p $7.50 McGraw

330.973 United States—Economic conditions 29-11912

"Report of the committee on recent economic changes of the President's conference on Unemployment, including the reports of a special staff of the national bureau of economic research, Inc." (Subtitle) The report covers production, standards of living, wealth and income, money and credit, agriculture, marketing, transportation, construction, unemployment, labor, etc.

---

Reviewed by W: F. Ogburn
Am J Soc 35:311 S '29 1000w
Booklist 26:10 O '29
Bookm 70:viii S '29 130w

"The book as a whole is worth the careful study of all who are concerned with the future industrial operations of this country." S. D. Kirkpatrick
+ Chem & Met Eng 36:365 Je '29 600w
J Home Econ 21:789 O '29 150w

"Probably as good a picture of the economic position of the United States as it is possible to draw in our present state of knowledge." H: R. Mussey
+ Nation 129:251 S 4 '29 1450w

"It is not possible, in this brief review, to attempt any detailed criticism of this work, or to indicate, even approximately, the profound scholarship and the scientific acumen which have gone into its making." Horace Taylor
+ N Y Evening Post p5s Je 8 '29 850w

"The two volumes contain together 984 closely packed pages. In them is a stirring story of human achievement, of revolutionary social and cultural change, of swiftly shifting scenes of human life and work. Not only is the theme itself dramatic but the whole conception upon which it has been built and the structure itself are arresting . . . It is doubtful whether more than a few hundred people will ever read the two volumes through and only a few thousand will probably ever set eyes on them at all. The drama, the full sweep of the meaning of the story which they tell is lost to the general reading public under the very bulk of their weight. In the opinion of the present reviewer, the committee has lost an enviable chance to explain America to the Americans by embalming its findings in the shrouds of a highly technical and academic report. But the drama is there for those with mental doggedness and spare time enough to dig it out." Evans Clark
+ — N Y Times p1 Je 16 '29 1800w

"The one thousand pages of these two volumes contain a vast quantity of authoritative information." K. P.
+ World Tomorrow 12:375 S '29 110w

CONGER, GEORGE PERRIGO. New views of evolution. (Philosophy for the layman ser.) 235p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

575 Evolution 29-19460

Evolution interpreted from a philosophical viewpoint, and further discussed in relation to physics, chemistry, geology, psychology and sociology. The evolution of matter, of living organisms, and of culture are among the main subjects of the book.

---

"Dr. Conger's book is a notable contribution to the advancement of the definition of the concept of evolution. He is old-fashioned enough to treat his subject matter philosophically; he views not only both sides of each particular point, but consistently strives to relate every particular to the whole of Being. Thus the book is particularly noteworthy."
+ Boston Transcript p6 O 5 '29 280w

"Here at last is a book on evolution which comports strictly with its title. . . The book is the more interesting, and, for the lay public, the more valuable, because it was written neither by a paleontologist, a zoologist, nor a biologist. Dr. Conger knows the literature of his subject, and brings to his discussion a mind broadened by his studies in philosophy." Maynard Shipley
+ N Y Times p38 D 8 '29 1050w

"A fascinating but scholarly book." E. B. Chaffee
Outlook 153:430 N 13 '29 70w

CONKLING, MRS GRACE WALCOTT (HAZARD). Witch, and other poems. 84p $2 (6s) Knopf

811 29-22827

New collection from Mrs Conkling's work done since the year 1926. Several of the poems have already received publication in magazines; others are now printed for the first time.

---

"A love and knowledge of words, a love and appreciation of nature, and a mastering of the technique of poetics: these do not make poetry. Grace Hazard Conkling's new volume of verse shows all the paraphernalia of poetry except the living coal. The effect is of one reaching for, and just failing to grasp, the magic flame that would turn words into splendor."
— + Bookm 70:xiv N '29 110w

"This American poet is almost as alive to color in outward things as was Amy Lowell, but she has not Amy Lowell's daring in meters, collocation of words, or invention of figures. The academic restraint of her vocation, that of college lecturer on literature, acts as a curb on Pegasus. The result is perhaps greater statelliness of beauty than Miss Lowell attained, but beauty less striking."
+ — N Y Times p36 O 27 '29 250w

"One of Mrs. Conkling's greatest gifts is her ability to sustain a single tone through a series of related poems, and this gift her new book fully displays. In 'Witch,' despite the changing metres and the resourceful modifications of the theme, there is a strong and impressive unity of feeling and expression. The same unity appears in the sonnet sequence, 'Steamer Letter,' where the right tone is chosen with such unerring wisdom that the not altogether novel sentiments acquire unmistakable individuality." Granville Hicks
+ N Y World p11m O 20 '29 360w

Reviewed by W: R. Benét
Sat R of Lit 6:292 O 19 '29 170w

CONNELL, RICHARD EDWARD. Murder at sea. 257p $2 Minton [7s 6d Jarrolds] 29-1189

A man is murdered in his cabin on a Bermuda-bound boat, perhaps before the ship left New York. A reporter promises a solution at sea and is as good as his word.

---

Bookm 69:xxx Mr '29 60w

"Mr. Connell introduces a competent and engaging sleuth in one Matthew Kelton, who does wonders with a tuft of non-human hair, some sniffs of perfume, a cigarette butt and common sense. There are three sanguinary deaths, a striking climax and a clever twist at the end." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 20 '29 100w

Reviewed by F: F. Van de Water
N Y Evening Post p10m F 16 '29 200w

"An absorbing and entertaining yarn, in spite of the fact that Mr. Connell has violated several of S. S. Van Dine's excellent rules for the writing of good detective fiction."
+ N Y Times p25 Ja 13 '29 180w

"The tale is one of the kind which bedevils the reader with incredible coincidences, uncorks an undreamed of conclusion, and leaves one with feelings of exasperation."
N Y World p10m F 10 '29 80w
— + Sat R of Lit 5:669 F 9 '29 150w
Times [London] Lit Sup p404 My 16 '29 150w

CONNINGTON, J: J., pseud. See Stewart, A. W.

CONSTANTIN-WEYER, MAURICE. A man scans his past (Un homme se penche sur son passé); [tr. by Slater Brown]. 250p $2.50 Macaulay

29-13069

"Constantin-Weyer's novel received the Goncourt prize for 1929. The novel is the honest life story of a man who spent his youthful vigor as cowboy, lumberman and fur-trader around the Canadian border and formed his character in a conscious and significant way." —N Y Evening Post

"As a story the book merits little consideration. No real attempt is made to individualize any of the characters involved in the rather complicated plot. As a record of travel and adventure it shows genuine love for wild and beautiful country and for dangerous living." A. B. Parsons

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Jl 7 '29 730w

"Admirably translated by Mr. Slater Brown, the pages of M. Constantin-Weyer glow with vitality and color. The effects are austere and simple, at least in the first half of the story, and the scene is very much alive." J. F. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Jl 10 '29 770w

"It is to be recommended as a virile, finely written narrative and as a revealing study of the Latin tradition transplanted to colonial soil."

+ Nation 129:390 O 9 '29 110w

"Constantin-Weyer is too sophisticated a person to adopt successfully the manner of Jack London—a connection which French critics have endeavored to establish. One feels that he would have done better to write a frank autobiography of his Canadian wanderings. In spite of its fine nervous prose and its vigorous pace, his book—considered as a novel—lacks any real emotional unity."

— + New Repub 60:81 S 4 '29 140w

Reviewed by Parker Tyler

N Y Evening Post p7m Jl 27 '29 450w

"Despite the author's reading and his philosophical bent of mind, the whole narrative is pitched in a conventionally romantic key; the author's outlook upon religion, sex, friendship and death is shallow, commonplace, puerile. He himself emerges at times as a thinking being, but largely as a Jack Londonish man of action admirable for his courage, narrow and melodramatic for his code. The realism which the book unquestionably contains is the realism of Nature herself."

— N Y Times p7 Je 30 '29 650w

"It is the setting of the story that provides the real fascination of the book. M. Constantin-Weyer describes Canada with a vigorous pen whose power has not been diminished in Slater Brown's very able translation." C. S. Parker

+ Portland Evening News p5 Jl 16 '29 500w

"The rhythms of this story essay to be great ground-swells of human emotion and somehow fail even to rock the reader's hammock. The creed and philosophy of the storyteller aim to be very vigorous and stark, but the tale he tells is too fantastically melodramatic to serve for more than a swift moving-picture." Bartlet Brebner

— Sat R of Lit 5:1191 Jl 20 '29 700w

CONWAY, ROBERT SEYMOUR. Harvard lectures on the Vergilian age. 162p $2.50 Harvard univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

870.9 Rome—Civilization. Latin literature. Virgil (Publius Virgilius Maro) 28-22251

"Professor Conway, recently visiting professor at Harvard University, says of the nine lectures included in this volume that they are concerned with a period of about forty years of Roman life (55-17 B.C.) 'a period which in spite of political vicissitudes, has a unity of its own and is the true golden age of Roman literature.' He aims to discover what the poets and historians living at that time really thought of their world. Five of the lectures were given a year ago at Harvard and the collection itself is a continuation of his earlier work, 'New Studies of a Great Inheritance.' "—Boston Transcript

"The pièce de résistance is a persuasive exposition of 'the philosophy of Vergil,' a philosophy, or rather, a poetic intuition, of humanism. . . The other essays are meagre in substance, and, to the browsing reader, will seem to concern themselves too patiently with the minutiæ of verbal interpretation."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p29 O 28 '28 150w

"The volume is well illustrated and has an appendix of the references to Vergil which will make it of especial value to scholars, as its charm of interpretation and beauty of diction will make it a joy to all lovers of literature, for despite its unassailable scholarship it is eminently a book for the layman." G. R. B. R.

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 10 '28 400w

"Those in this country who have any love for the Latin classical writers, and especially for the greatest of them, will doubtless feel that if all the visiting Europeans brought with them a course of lectures like these of Professor Conway, then America could not have too many lecturers coming to her shores." G. D. M.

+ Cath World 130:247 N '29 430w

"The author writes with zest and clearness and knows how to throw a warm light on what he discerns and admires in Livy and Vergil. His arguments for locating Vergil's farm to the northwest of Mantua near Calvisano are very cogent. His inference that the poet outgrew stoicism is new, true, and welcome. Altogether a charming volume even if tantalizing here and there. Adequately indexed." N. W. De Witt

+ Class Philol 24:317 Jl '29 130w

"Professor Conway's book of Harvard lectures will be a disappointment to any whose expectations are aroused by the title. There is, intentionally, no full canvas of 'the Virgilian Age;' the preface indicates as objective 'not to describe those [historical] conditions. . . but rather to discover what the poets and historians really felt about them.' So far, so good; but the capture of this objective proceeds with such vague purpose and feeble strength that one is led to doubts." Rolfe Humphries

— New Repub 57:279 Ja 23 '29 630w

"This book of lectures, read in conjunction with the same author's New Studies of a Great Inheritance, should give to students an invaluable understanding of the Latin poet's background and philosophy."

+ New Statesman 33:716 S 21 '29 870w

Reviewed by E: Shanks

Sat R 147:508 Ap 13 '29 1500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p987 D 13 '28 1200w

COOK, NEIL E. Welcome—stranger. 233p $1.75 (5s) Appleton

29-6456

A new form of prospecting in Arizona is introduced in this book. Dad Dugold, a fiery-tempered old-timer, takes on as a partner the young waif Jerry. A new state road is being built thru Dugold's land, and Jerry decides that setting up a store and a filling station will bring in more money than prospecting. It does. From this humble start the thriving town, "Welcome—Stranger," springs up, bringing adventure and fame to the partners.

"The dialogue is breezy and funny." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 152:391 Jl 3 '29 50w

"This is an unusual story, gusty and original and uninterruptedly amusing. Jerry and the Tarantler start off well as characters, but they cannot keep their heads above the stream of incident, and the book, beginning as humor with a dash of pathos, degenerates into farce. Mr. Cook's ability to contrive ridiculous situations is marked, his sense of human failings can be richly humorous; to hold the one in check while maturing the other is his problem."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:99 Ag 31 '29 210w

COOK, SHERWIN LAWRENCE. Torchlight parade; our presidential pageant. 308p il $3.75 Minton

329 Presidents—United States. United States—Politics and government 29-8442

This colorful and exciting story of American presidential campaigns includes a discussion of presidential problems and the caliber of the men who faced them at each stage in our governmental history from John Adams to Hoover. Illustrated from contemporary cartoons, broadsides and news sheets.

Booklist 26:28 O '29

"To the meticulousness and accuracy of the trained reporter Mr. Cook adds an analytical skill which illuminates every page. . . The book is one no practical politician will neglect to read, if he wants to study the politics of his own country as a guide; and 'Torchlight Parade' will be read with equal zest by all Americans interested enough in their country to vote, even if their relation to politics ends there." W: E. Brigham

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 16 '29 2100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p71 My '29

"A pleasant, generally fair and readable account of that bloodless form of duel whose bullets are ballots. It is as impartial a political history of the Presidency as any author with party convictions could write." F: H. Martens

+ N Y Evening Post p6m Jl 27 '29 100w

"It is a good idea to be selective, since not all campaigns are equally interesting; but Mr. Cook is not always wise in his selections. Another defect in this ably written book is that Mr. Cook has been so immersed, all his life, in politics that he cannot visualize the ignorance of the American people on that subject. The names that are so familiar to him are not even names to most readers. In the main Mr. Cook's judgments are shrewd and true. He has a good style and can say a thing pungently." C: W. Thompson

+ — N Y Times p13 Je 9 '29 1150w

"You are forced to lend an attentive ear to Mr. Cook because of his honesty, his courtesy and his sense of perspective." C: J. Finger

+ N Y World p10m Ap 7 '29 900w

St Louis 27:261 S '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:191 Je '29

COOK, WILLIAM VICTOR. Keys of England. 301p $2 Dial press [7s 6d Harrap] 29-10427

In the days of Henry the Third when England is rent with the Barons' war, Garth Aylwin, fighting sailor and Baron of Rye, is in love with a maid of Rye. Riding forth to fight and falling into the hands of his enemy de Warenne, Garth is wounded and in his delirium is married by the estranged sweetheart of Warenne himself. Thruout the ensuing romantic adventures which bring the lovers together only to separate them again, Garth is true to his first love, until repentant fate reunites them.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 My 19 '29 230w

"A rousing, full-flavored tale in the good old romantic manner, and as such it should be enjoyed." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p9m My 25 '29 100w

"The reader who relishes a story for the sake of the adventures in it, without much regard for the way it is written, will probably find pleasure in this book. It does not reach the top rank of romance."

N Y Times p7 Je 16 '29 220w

"A good story in which fact and fiction are nicely mingled. Good summer reading for high-school students." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 152:311 Je 19 '29 40w

"A gallant, stirring tale of the Barons' War, full of hairbreadth 'scapes, fighting by sea and land, and plenty of picturesque characters, much better drawn than those which usually suffice for 'historical' novels. The turns of thought and speech, if at times a trifle modern, escape the common pitfalls of a too-studied anciently."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p296 Ap 11 '29 300w

COOLEY, HAZEL, and CORWIN, NORMAN L., comps. So say the wise; a community of modern mind. 275p $2 Sully

828 Epigrams. Quotations, English 29-20546

A collection of witty and wise sayings by contemporary wise and witty, or at least well-known, people. Classified under various general headings.

"There are bright spots in 'So Say the Wise,' and there are some dreadful platitudes dished up by our moderns. If it provides a mirror of our times we must concede that they are rather barren. But perhaps the authors have not gone beyond the periodicals for their thoughts. Books should yield a rich harvest for a latter-day book of quotations." Harry Hansen

N Y World p14 O 14 '29 1100w

"Its chief merit lies in the wide range of the writers and speakers quoted, many of whom are unfamiliar to the general public."

Springf'd Republican p7e O 13 '29 350w

COOLIDGE, CALVIN. Autobiography. 247p il $3 Cosmopolitan bk. [10s 6d Chatto]

B or 92 29-24633

Written in Mr Coolidge's accustomed spare and simple style, this modest autobiography gives the barest outline of his career and the principles upon which he has conducted his life. The book contains no politics and no personalities.

Am Hist R 35:426 Ja '30 320w

"From this book another generation will look back upon a figure almost elemental enough to have been hewn from the granite hills of Vermont. The book interprets nothing of his time. It reveals only this man: an old-fashioned Christian gentleman of the 1840's, a throw-back in our national life, of pure New England stock, sustained by an undefiled New England philosophy of Emerson's day. It is as though Ethan Allen had dismounted from his pedestal with the cool waters of New England brooks in his veins and had suddenly begun to function in a sophisticated world." W: A. White

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 N 10 '29 1200w

"Ex-President Coolidge's book is just like himself, blunt and straightforward in style, with occasional amusing little quirks of humor. Although it flows smoothly, it is not the work of a talker. It is obvious that every word was pondered before setting down. But the charm of it is that quality of Calvin Coolidge which allowed him to say that he did not choose to run again, his utter contempt of what the world may care to say or think of him." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 16 '29 820w

"Chuck full of salty philosophy, written with a vein of humor that few have credited this remarkable man with possessing, 'The Autobiography of Calvin Coolidge' is much more than an autobiography. It is a study of the times of this generation; a book that cannot be neglected by intelligent minds." Chief Long Lance

+ Chicago Daily Tribune p14 D 21 '29 1000w

"Nowhere in history or literature is there to be found the life story of a man who has held a great and powerful position told with such simplicity and so complete a lack of egotism as in this Autobiography of Calvin Coolidge." W. J. Abbot

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 N 23 '29 1000w

"Calvin Coolidge is one of those rare persons who can profit by experience and reflection. Philosophy comes to most men when they no longer have any impulses over which to exercise it. But when Calvin Coolidge derived a principle of conduct he forever after acted upon that principle. His whole life, as he reveals it in his biography, has been an exercise in self-discipline and in the perfection of character—that sort of character which his Puritan ancestors had deemed essential if one is to survive. . . This autobiography is not really an autobiography but a book of New England Puritan philosophy." Burton Rascoe

+ Current Hist 31:431 D '29 1950w

Reviewed by Arthur Warner

Nation 129:678 D 4 '29 1200w

"There may have been written, though one would be pressed to find it, a creed which brings public life closer to the average man, or high places within nearer reach of the average American boy." Horace Green

+ N Y Times p3 N 10 '29 1600w

"Perhaps no man ever told his success story with quite so much restraint as Calvin Coolidge. Quite absent are color, heart throbs, drama and humor, in this bald narrative of the Vermont farm boy who became President of his country. In prose so simple that one feels as though one were reading it through a magnifying glass, the tale marches on." Mary Bennett

+ N Y World p10m D 8 '29 300w

R of Rs 80:19 D '29 130w

Spec 143:818 N 30 '29 220w

COOLIDGE, DANE. War paint. 274p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Skeffington]

29-2246

A western story in which a small grey pony causes a lot of trouble between a straight-shooting young man and a straight-talking young woman.

---

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 10 '29 70w

"His invention seldom lags, and his humor enlivens a tale which would otherwise be a trifle too Western for anyone but the wide-open-spaces fans."

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 23 '29 350w

" 'War Paint' has the usual Western make-up and should appeal to all who believe in the parity of human and equine brains." F. H. M.

N Y Evening Post p9m F 2 '29 40w

"A high-powered, hard-riding, quick-shooting tale of the old West, of the sort that Dane Coolidge long ago proved that he can write to the exact taste and full satisfaction of those who enjoy that kind of fiction."

N Y Times p14 Mr 3 '29 180w

Sat R of Lit 5:784 Mr 16 '29 120w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 28 '29 100w

"An enjoyable story with just the right dash of humour and sentiment."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p610 Ag 1 '29 170w

COOLIDGE, MRS MARY ELIZABETH BURROUGHS (ROBERTS) SMITH. Rain-makers; Indians of Arizona and New Mexico. 326p il $4 Houghton

970.3 Pueblo Indians. Indians of North America—Arizona. Indians of North America—New Mexico 29-3433

A comprehensive story of the Indians of Arizona and New Mexico which outlines the history of the Pueblo Indians, their social life, religious rites, arts and crafts, and pictures these in the illustrations. The author is a member of the California state board of education.

---

Booklist 25:279 Ap '29

"A comprehensive, absorbing history. Mrs. Coolidge adds a splendid bibliography to an already excellent book."

+ Bookm 69:xvi Ap '29 220w

" 'The Rain-Makers' is an attractive and practical introduction to the community life, cosmic myths, ceremonies and industrial arts of the Southwest tribes. Mary Roberts Coolidge, who is professor of sociology at Mills College, has been identified for many years with social and economic research in California. Her book welds her own experiences among the Indians with a discriminating survey of scholarly source material." Elsie Weil

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 F 24 '29 1000w

"It is not often that so exhaustive a volume is written with a light and popular touch upon a subject such as the Pueblo Indians. Mrs. Coolidge has undertaken an effective presentation of the subject from many angles. She has accomplished the adventure in a solid, serious but readable fashion."

+ Boston Transcript p8 Mr 16 '29 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p92 Je '29

"The author is a member of the State Board of Education of California. She has supplemented her wide reading on the Southwest with years of intimate contact with the Indians of New Mexico and Arizona. She has made wise selections and quoted extensively from the best authorities. The book is direct, refreshingly free from the errors of first enthusiasm and those minor prejudices on which others devote whole chapters. On the interpretative side there are lapses." T: H. Ferril

+ — Nation 129:47 Jl 10 '29 560w

"Where Mr. Crane has an eye for the picturesque and the living, Mrs. Coolidge is more scientific and historical. Her book may, for this reason, be more serviceable—but no more interesting—than Mr. Crane's [Desert drums] for the novice who wishes to have a general idea of what's what in the Indian country of Arizona and New Mexico."

N Y Times p4 Ap 14 '29 350w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 227:adv Ap '29 70w

"So painstaking has been Mrs. Coolidge's research, summarized in The Rain-Makers, that we do not expect anyone to challenge the scientific accuracy of her statements. At the same time her book has those vital qualities that result from first-hand contact with the subject." W: B. Shaw

+ R of Rs 79:10 My '29 120w

"The book is frankly an intelligent gleaning from the works of the few authorities on Indian life, and is freely acknowledged to be such. I do not at the moment recall any book which gives so comprehensive a survey of the origins of our southwestern peoples in the light of the most recent information about them. As was probably unavoidable, with this dependence upon collected material, there is much more, and much more pertinent, information about the Pueblos than about the Navajos, the Apaches, the Pimas and Papagoes, and other local groups. One feels that a little wider range of research would have remedied this shortage." Mary Austin

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:830 Mr 30 '29 480w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 4 '29 360w

Reviewed by F. F. Kane

Survey 62:192 My 1 '29 700w

Wis Lib Bul 25:125 Ap '29

COOPER, CLAYTON SEDGWICK. Understanding Spain. 304p $2.50 Stokes

914.6 Spain. National characteristic, Spanish 28-24964

Brief and easily assimilated chapters on every angle of modern life in Spain by the author of similar books on South America and Italy.

---

"Mr. Cooper's ambitious title is not justified by what is at best a superficial book." Herschel Brickell

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p29 N 25 '28 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p44 Mr '29

"This volume immediately engages one's attention as being what is patently a sincere and able analysis done in the manner of an exposition. It will be most useful to those who expect to be in Spain for a short time, who wish to acquire some viewpoint on life as it goes on there today." W: Spratling

COOPER, C. S.—Continued
+ N Y Times p11 Mr 24 '29 180w
Pratt p29 summer '29
Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 9 '29 520w
Wis Lib Bul 24:343 D '28

COOPER, LENNA FRANCES; BARBER, EDITH M.; and MITCHELL, HELEN S. Nutrition in health and disease. 546p il $3.50 Lippincott

613.2 Diet. Cookery for the sick. Diet in disease 29-18034

Reprint of a book first published in 1928. Intended primarily as a text for the professional nurse, it is of equal value to the homekeeper who would keep her family in good health. Part one is devoted to the principles of nutrition, part two to food selection, part three to diet in disease, and part four to cooking for the sick and convalescent, which comprises excellent small quantity recipes.

---

"The comprehensive nature of nutrition in health and sickness is simply and adequately presented in this volume. The facts are correctly given, and the presentation of the material is clear, understandable and substantiated by authoritative references, illustrations, tables and charts." E. G. Robson
+ Am J Pub Health 19:458 Ap '29 320w

"The presentation is clear, simple and interesting. No knowledge of chemistry or physiology on the part of the students seems to be assumed, and much skill is shown in avoiding both over-simplification and excessive scientific precision." Ruth Wheeler
+ J Home Econ 20:825 N '28 550w

COPELAND, EDWIN BINGHAM. Natural conduct; principles of practical ethics. 262p $3.50 Stanford univ. press [16s Oxford]

171.7 Ethics, Evolutionary. Ethics 28-29458

"The author states in simple terms a theory of ethics based upon the principles of evolution. Three doctrines constitute the framework of his theory. The real, ultimate goal of conduct is the permanence of life—the permanence not of individual life but of the life of our people. Happiness is the natural result of such conduct, and is, in general, evidence of nature's endorsement of our conduct. We owe our lives to society; and since payment of debts is a necessary condition of society and hence of the continuance of life, it is our duty to do whatever is for the good of society."—Int J Ethics

---

"The content of the book is exceptionally well organized and presented; the typography makes it easy to read."
+ Bookm 69:xxi Mr '29 180w
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Mr 10 '29 230w
Reviewed by C. M. Perry
Int J Ethics 39:513 Jl '29 120w

"To those who can accept the premises the book will be an honest and simple presentation of a way of life close to nature; to those who cannot accept the premises it will have missed the whole point of man's struggle for a distant perfection." R. M. Eaton
Sat R of Lit 5:1130 Je 22 '29 650w

COPPARD, ALFRED EDGAR. Silver circus. 272p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d J. Cape]

29-5410

A new collection by one of the best of the younger English short-story writers. Contents: Silver circus; Darby Dallow tells his tale; That fellow Tolstoy; Rifki; The ape and the ass; The martyrdom of Solomon; Fine feathers; The almanac man; A looking-glass for Saint Luke; The birthday party; The third prize; The presser; Adolf Plumflower; Purl and plain; Faithless Phœbe; Polly Morgan.

---

Booklist 25:285 Ap '29

"A. E. Coppard's elfish tales have already won him a sort of moonlight fame. In Silver Circus he continues to show his delicate mastery as a prose Puck." L. S. Morris
+ Bookm 69:95 Mr '29 350w
Reviewed by Margery Latimer
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 F 10 '29 980w
Boston Transcript p2 F 27 '29 230w

"The beauty of his tales lies in their naturalness, in a certain freshness of appeal that is neither realism as we have come to know it nor fantasy as it has come to be exploited, in a rare gift of surprise and originality that almost always keeps them from following the straight line of development that is inherent in the short story."
+ N Y Times p8 F 10 '29 600w

"Mr. Coppard is a skilful craftsman whose sophisticated wit and irony distinguish even his least important creations. The art of storytelling is his to the nth degree, as a purely cerebral activity, and his smooth, polished flow of prose requires nothing more from the reader than willingness to be entertained and amused. It is unfortunate for Mr. Coppard that his manner frequently causes the reader to resist his bland approaches, so that his most telling effects, his cleverest climaxes, act as irritants rather than charms. Given the raw materials of human conflicts, the elemental stuff of life, he abstracts a few glittering patterns and ignores the obscure, formless residue. The method is rather obvious, and shallow." Bernard Smith
— + N Y World p11m F 10 '29 250w

"As in all of Coppard's work, gracious, easy writing and humor distinguish the book. The impression which one receives from 'Silver Circus' is of Coppard as a sort of Lob-lie-by-the-fire, a slightly malicious sprite, peeping with a wry smile upon the privacy of his characters."
+ Outlook 151:229 F 6 '29 160w

"One of the great charms of Mr. Coppard's work is that it is founded in the life of to-day and continually nourished by the life of to-day, yet it is free from the sense of worry, of strain, of introspection, of the unlovely manifestations of self-will. The exactions of the self, grievous alike in modern fiction and in modern life, Mr. Coppard makes light of, even when (as here) he writes of vindictive ghosts and Galician professors willing death to their oldest friends." L. P. Hartley
+ — Sat R 146:477 O 13 '28 500w

"This volume of stories, painfully shallow, confirms a longstanding suspicion that the author, while a consummately skillful craftsman, has never met his artistic problems squarely. He takes refuge from them in the quaint, the picturesque, and the merely decorative, for he possesses a nice sense of the 'effective'—though it is true most of his effects are 'literary' rather than genuine."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:983 My 4 '29 250w

"It is always a pleasure to recognize the hard, fine edge of the short story as shaped by Mr. Coppard. Though he begins as easily as if he entered into conversation, and ends almost with an airy gesture, you are left with a little piece of experience impeccably and irrevocably expressed, complete as a sonnet, and with something of poetic or symbolic quality in its content." R. A. Taylor
+ Spec 141:501 O 13 '28 120w

"Mr. Coppard turns his pen to all styles, and if he is by no means uniformly successful he is very seldom less than interesting. Even the most trivial incidents—and some of his tales contain no more—he vitalizes by his power to give in a few lines authentic life to a scene, an individual, a group."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p730 O 11 '28 520w

COPPARD, LILY ANNE (MRS ALFRED EDGAR COPPARD). Orange court. 316p $2.50 Washburn [7s 6d J. Cape]

29-9004

" 'The Orange Court' is a story of emotional convalescence under peacock blue skies, amid orange groves, mimosa bloom and the picturesque life of a small seaport on the Italian Riviera. Pauline Branch is a young English woman for whom romance ended when her lover jilted her and married Joan, her best friend. To solace her heartbreak she seeks a summer of forgetfulness by the Mediterranean. At the pension she meets three men friends, friends that give her back the happy serenity that comes from knowing one's self loved and desirable."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

" 'The Orange Court' is a first novel by the wife of A. E. Coppard, English short story writer. A certain skill in character incident and facile conversation counteracts a lack of restraint in descriptive detail, but the book is too thoroughly identified with its setting to permit one to judge fairly of its significance as a first novel."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p30 Ap 14 '29 450w

"The descriptions are exceedingly good. . . . These bits of description are almost the sole merit of the novel, as the characters and incidents are unreal and the plot most confusing and lacking entirely in unity. The glimpses of the peasants are full of charm and verisimilitude but the movement of the story flags."

— + Boston Transcript p8 Ap 20 '29 150w

Reviewed by Milton Byron

Outlook 151:512 Mr 27 '29 100w

"There's something appealing, if a little inconsequent, about the tale. But why does Mrs. Coppard, whose descriptive style promises well, freely indulge in a barbarism like 'enthuse'?. It makes one shiver among the orange trees." R. A. Taylor

— + Spec 142:247 F 16 '29 110w

"There is an air of unreality about the whole of this odd little book, with its many familiar quotations, its slightly stilted sentimentality, and its absence of volition."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Mr 7 '29 110w

CORMACK, WILLIAM EPPS. Narrative of a journey across the island of Newfoundland in 1822; centenary issue; ed. by F. A. Bruton. 138p il $1.20 (3s) Longmans

917.18 Newfoundland—Description and travel

28-18660

In 1822 William Epps Cormack, scholar, explorer, and naturalist, made a hazardous journey on foot across the island of Newfoundland with an Indian guide as companion. His narrative of the difficult march across unknown territory reveals much of the island's natural history and resources. It is illustrated in this new edition with later day photographs of the region traversed, and a map of the explorer's route.

---

"The narrative of that journey, written by one so well equipped with scientific knowledge, has become a classic in the literature of Newfoundland."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Mr 17 '29 200w

"We are indebted to Mr. Bruton's editing for several appendices listing natural features mentioned by Mr. Cormack with adequate descriptions useful for school work or interesting to the nature-lover, and a considerable group of illuminating notes. There are several illustrations drawn from modern sources." R. S.

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 29 '28 450w

CORNELL, WILLIAM BOUCK. Industrial organization and management. 653p il $5 Ronald

658 Factory management. Efficiency, Industrial

28-22953

"A textbook for schools of commerce and business organization and for engineering schools, but also intended to serve as a practical aid to those concerned with developing modern operating and control methods in manufacturing plants and shops."—Pratt

---

Am Econ R 19:293 Je '29 60w

"This book contains a wealth of material pertaining to the subject of Industrial Organization and Management treated primarily from an organization point of view. While individual chapters are well written both from the standpoint of clarity and material presented and in general are handled in an excellent manner, the general arrangement of the chapters could have been improved upon. The treatment of the subject almost entirely from an organization point of view results in the failure to emphasize properly such important subjects as simplification and standardization, the development of operating standards and managerial costs." V. S. Karabasz

+ — Ann Am Acad 142:464 Mr '29 130w

Boston Transcript p5 D 15 '28 100w

Pratt p19 spring '29

St Louis 27:163 My '29

CORTES, HERNANDO. Five letters, 1519-1526; tr. by J. Bayard Morris; with an introd. (Argonaut ser.) 435p il $4 McBride [15s Routledge]

B or 92 [29-11435]

"In the letters of Cortes we have a clear picture of Mexico through the simple eyes of the conqueror who admires his enemies. If Cortes had no literary graces he could write a masterly report. The second and the third letters are the clearest piece of narrative that we can ask for. We see the advance into the country, the conscientious determination to penetrate by peace, diplomacy or the sword to Montezuma's capital, leading up to the final dramatic meeting with Montezuma himself."—New Statesman

---

"For the casual reader of adventure the book will prove entertaining, but for persons who want to make scholarly use of the Cortez episode recourse must be had to the earlier editions." H. J. Priestley

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 9 '29 200w

"This book abounds in passages of pure description, so quaintly mannered as to leave an indelible impression of charm. It is difficult to recall such soft-toned rhythm as we find here." M. G.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 23 '29 650w

New Statesman 32:296 D 8 '28 320w

Sat R 146:729 D 1 '28 480w

"Cortes' 'uncouth speech,' as Mr. Morris assures us in the introduction, is not literature in the highest sense of the word. But there is the same unconscious under-statement which is so effective in the case of the old French chroniqueurs, and, after all, the readers of tales of adventure and imagination are not usually fastidious in the matter of style. We feel we must congratulate the translator on the way in which he has captured the spirit of the original. The introduction, too, is a model of incisive exposition."

+ Spec 141:927 D 15 '28 300w

"These letters, well edited and attractively published, tell of a great conqueror, fearless and courageous, fighting for God and his king, and reveal in great detail the mighty proportions of the truly Elizabethan character that was Hernando Cortés."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p1001 D 20 '28 1000w

COSGRAVE, MRS JESSICA (GARRETSON). Psychology of youth; a book for parents. 234p $2 Doubleday, Doran

136.7 Youth. Children—Management. Adolescence 29-3644

This discussion of the mental growth of children and youth is simplified of technicalities so that it may be intelligible to adults without psychological training. Mrs Cosgrave is also author of "Mothers and daughters" (Book Review Digest, 1926).

---

Booklist 25:377 Jl '29

Bookm 69:x Jl '29 130w

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Mr 17 '29 150w

"Modern knowledge is here made to render valuable service in the practical bringing up of children. Illustrations from life liven the discussion and make the book entertaining as well as useful. Far away from mere technicalities Mrs. Cosgrave brings information and inspiration of the highest order to thoughtful and responsive parents."

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 9 '29 230w

"Here are the A B C's of some of modern psychology and its relation to mental action and effort which should enable parents to understand their children better while gaining somewhat more insight into themselves." I. S. Wile, M.D.

+ N Y Evening Post p10m F 16 '29 350w

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 27 '29 320w

"Particularly worth while are the discussions of the training of the young will, in which Mrs. Cosgrave pleads with parents not to take the easy road with this most difficult of all problems. Some of the examples she gives out of her wide experience with young people are breath-taking in their vividness." Mrs. H: C. Brown

+ N Y World p11m My 19 '29 380w

St Louis 27:155 My '29

"All in all this book is written in a simple and direct manner and will do parents no harm." P. J. Trentzsch, M. D.

Survey 62:371 Je 15 '29 90w

"The book shows a kindly insight into young people's difficulties, without any disrespect for parental prestige and authority, and parents will find in it advice of a helpful and original kind for almost every stage of a child's development."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p437 My 30 '29 150w

COSSLEY-BATT, JILL LILLIE EMMA. Last of the California rangers. 299p il $2.50 (10s 6d) Funk

979.4 Howard, William James. California—Gold discoveries. Frontier and pioneer life 28-30766

"The Last of the California Rangers gives a stirring picture of pioneer days in the Southern states of Virginia, Mississippi and Texas, and then in the great Western state of California. Captain William J. Howard, one of the most distinguished of the Rangers, is the central figure."—No Am

---

"Here is an entertainment with Jill Cossley-Batt as impresario and the ninety-eight-year-old William J. Howard, formerly of the California Rangers, as star. When the impresario bows herself off the boards and lets the star shine in his own modest way, then comes sudden glory. The war horse in his sunset days reaches back into the past and says what he has to say with the fine simplicity of Baring-Gould, or of Wilfred Blunt, or of W. H. Hudson, or of any other old timer who did his job and for whom adventure and startling experience have been put on a rear shelf as obvious and commonplace." C: J. Finger

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ja 13 '29 720w

"Not much can be said for Miss Cossley-Batt's part in this work; it is a crude, almost illiterate, production. Structurally it is a careless jumble. Captain Howard is interesting for himself, however, if not always for what he tells. While he was alive, the long history of our frontier lived also." Dwight MacDonald

— + New Repub 58:76 Mr 6 '29 250w

"A richly romantic chronicle, which should have an appeal to American youth, provided they can forget a mechanical civilization long enough to be interested in Indians, bandits, and so on." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv F '29 120w

"In this record of three hundred pages there is little more, when all is said and done, than a picture, dim and a little pathetic, of a very aged man salving out of that extraordinary past little homely anecdotes, or minute didactic corrections of incidents long since forgotten."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p54 Ja 24 '29 500w

COTTRELL, MRS DOROTHY. Singing gold. 298p $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d Hodder] 29-800

The early part of the book describes a child's life on a Queensland sheep farm and her delight and wonder in its ever-changing natural beauties. The story of the little girl grown, her romantic marriage and honeymoon on an island fairyland, and the poverty and disaster which follow, is overlaid with sentimentality.

---

Booklist 25:247 Mr '29

+ Bookm 69:xxv Ap '29 40w

"A not unattractive portion of the work deals with Joan's experiences on a somewhat incredible island off the Queensland coast; but for the most part readers of the slightest realistic bent must be warned away."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 F 10 '29 100w

"Mrs. Cottrell breaks all the rules. But in the long run you yourself will be severely put to flight by pure charm. The author of 'The Singing Gold' gains much from the quality of complete artlessness with which she adorns her story throughout. Nevertheless, there are times when many of the best scenes seem merely episodes in some delightful essay or travelogue dedicated to the beauty of the Queensland plains. The form of the novel is not sufficient to hold the fragments tightly together." W: E. Harris

+ — Boston Transcript p5 Ja 12 '29 1200w

"The Singing Gold ripples and sparkles like a chattering stream in the sunlight, but a stream which has occasional depths. . . The thing is beautifully done, with delicacy and humor, with sentiment and sanity." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 46:393 Mr 21 '29 160w

+ N Y Evening Post p11m F 23 '29 80w

"Mrs. Cottrell is one of those writers with an effortless style, a true sense for narrative and a refreshing sense of humor. The sentimentalism she allows herself in this novel seems all the more deplorable because it is so shrewd. She rings all its changes with a knowing dexterity. She makes those who value sentiment for its own true sake writhe. And she makes 'The Singing Gold' hardly bearable at times because of it."

+ — N Y Times p9 F 3 '29 360w

"Modern in tone, the book is written in an old-fashioned way, with ease and leisure. There is an atmosphere of peace and naturalness throughout the book which makes it quietly enjoyable."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:783 Mr 16 '29 180w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p208 Mr 14 '29 200w

+ Wis Lib Bul 25:75 F '29

COULTER, ELLIS MERTON. College life in the old South. 381p il $3 Macmillan

378.73 Georgia. University. Education—Southern states 28-27567

In writing this history of the early days of the University of Georgia the author, professor of history at the University, has revived a pleasant picture of college life in the old South from 1800 to 1869.

"We have here an accurate portraiture done in living colors. Considerable sympathy with human nature and a sense of humor add perceptibly to the interest of the narrative." P. H. Buck

+ Am Hist R 34:654 Ap '29 480w

Bookm 70:viii S '29 130w

"A collection of facts necessarily unimportant to most people. But these bits furnish a piecemeal picture of a college life that differed as widely from that of the North socially as academically." Emily Clark

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ja 27 '29 620w

Boston Transcript p8 Mr 9 '29 250w

"This is a spirited and entertaining book, ably organized and sympathetically conceived. Any one who is collecting authentic information about social or cultural conditions in America at different periods will be thankful for the author's industry, candor and ability."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 22 '28 170w

COUNCIL ON FOREIGN RELATIONS, incorporated. Political handbook of the world; parliaments, parties, and press; ed. by Malcolm W. Davis and Walter H. Mallory. 198p $2.50 The council, 25 W. 45th st, N.Y.; Yale univ. press

329 Political parties. World politics (28-12165)

This 1929 edition of the Political handbook continues the survey of political parties, governments and the press of the world, and includes a section on the United States.

"There are few more useful handbooks for students of political and world affairs."

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:510 My '29 70w

Ann Am Acad 143:386 My '29 90w

Booklist 25:405 Jl '29

"The volume is invaluable to every newspaper editor and student of foreign affairs."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Ap 28 '29 60w

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 27 '29 100w

N Y Times p20 Ap 14 '29 180w

Sat R of Lit 5:819 Mr 23 '29 230w

"Almost indispensable to students of international matters is this new Handbook, comprehensively showing the composition of the governments of the world, the names, character and aims of political parties, and the affiliations and general color of the leading newspapers of each country. The book is unique in both character and value, and will appeal, in the character and range of its very precise information, alike to editors, lawyers, teachers and students dealing with any aspect of government and journalism." J. P. G.

+ Survey 60:611 S 15 '28 100w

COUNTS, GEORGE SYLVESTER. School and society in Chicago. 367p $2.50 Harcourt

379.773 Chicago—Public schools. Education—Illinois. Education and state. Thompson, William Hale. McAndrew, William 28-24924

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Reviewed by J. T. Cavan

Am J Soc 34:1205 My '29 220w

Booklist 25:148 Ja '29

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 F '29

Reviewed by Franklin Bobbitt

El School J 29:390 Ja '29 420w

"The main purpose of the book is to set before the reader a definite picture of the social conditions under which our school system operates in large and industrialized cities. In that task it succeeds admirably. The book ought to be 'required reading' not only for administrators and teachers, actual and prospective, but for all newspaper men who are called upon to write about the schools." J: Dewey

+ New Repub 58:231 Ap 10 '29 1250w

COUPLAND, REGINALD. Kirk on the Zambesi; a chapter of African history. 286p il $6.50 (18s) Oxford

916.79 Kirk, Sir John. Livingstone, David. Africa—Discovery and exploration [29-12691]

"John Kirk was a young doctor who cast his lot with Livingstone and his expedition which ascended the Zambesi in 1858—an expedition which led to the discovery of Nyasaland and the occupation of a large part of Central Africa by the British Empire. Although Sir John Kirk, as he was subsequently called, acquired most of his fame as consul general at Zanzibar, Professor Coupland shows the invaluable aid which he gave to Livingstone during the exploration period."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Mr 17 '29 150w

"The story of the Zambesi expedition of 1858 was well worth telling, and Professor Coupland has done his work admirably. The interest is not only in the ideas which lay behind this venture of Livingstone, but also in the light which is thrown upon the character of that remarkable man."

+ Nation and Ath 44:664 F 9 '29 70w

"Apart altogether from its more serious aspects as a chapter in African history, it deserves to be read by anyone who cares for a good narrative of adventurous travel in territory then unknown to any white man. . . . The book is illustrated by a number of Kirk's own photographs and watercolour sketches; the former have a freshness and clarity not often found in the photography of seventy years ago."

+ New Statesman 32:606 F 16 '29 820w

"In spite of Mr. Coupland's inability or unwillingness to characterize his people, the three main figures of the expedition (Kirk and the Livingstone brothers) come out clearly enough. Baines, Captain Bedingfield, Rae, and the other, lesser figures remain mere names, however—a serious defect, for the story is one of men rather than events. In general, the author has told it without imagination and in a clumsy, jumbled way."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:1008 My 11 '29 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p3 Ja 3 '29 720w

COURNOS, JOHN. Modern Plutarch; being an account of some great lives in the nineteenth century, together with some comparisons between the Latin and the Anglo-Saxon genius. 428p il $5 Bobbs [15s T. Butterworth]

920 Biography 28-23229

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"Agreement with Mr. Cournos's choice of title for the papers he has here assembled is difficult. One is more impressed by a certain journalistic cunning than convinced by argument. If one takes with no great seriousness Mr. Cournos's linking of the subjects of his essays, and is not already acquainted with the sources of his material, his studies take on a more satisfactory aspect."

— + Bookm 68:ix Ja '29 70w

"Done with information and insight."

+ Christian Century 46:110 Ja 24 '29 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p73 My '29

"He is an intelligent writer, and the attempt was worth making. But it is not entirely successful, partly because the comparisons seem, on the whole, strained."

+ — Nation and Ath 44:450 D 22 '28 50w

COURNOS, JOHN—Continued

"In too many of the 'comparisons' which he offers after each pair or trio of characters, one feels that he is moving along a path—and a tortuous one at that—of words rather than of thought. There are a good many signs of haste and inaccuracy and the bibliography is inadequate. However, there is plenty of entertainment in the book. The scenes are well staged, and most of the protagonists are well visualised."

— New Statesman 32:608 F 16 '29 580w

"A book of colorful personalities and forceful ideas. It gives an interesting presentation of some highlights of the nineteenth century." Edwin Clark

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 20 '29 1100w

Pratt p31 spring '29

St Louis 27:59 F '29

"The volume reveals a gifted and hard working author who challenges intelligent criticism. He gives unusual portraits of some of his subjects and is not deeply concerned to echo popular verdicts. Taken in moderate doses, the book is palatable and stimulating."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 28 '29 400w

COURNOS, JOHN, comp. and tr. Short stories out of soviet Russia. 206p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]

Short stories—Collections 29-23877

Stories strongly individual in treatment, reflecting their authors' love of the dramatic incident in life. They are representative of the best work of certain younger writers in Soviet Russia, such as Isaac Babel, V. Ivanov, Boris Pilniak, and Efim Zozulya.

"The renderings by Mr. Cournos in his miscellany of Soviet tales signally fail to convey Babel's quality. He has, it is true, chosen representative bits, but he has translated them very badly, and he has unfortunately omitted to give an example of Babel's tenderly humorous sketches of his own people." Babette Deutsch

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 O 27 '29 900w

"In none [of the stories] is there the least approach to distinction. The three best stories are: S. Sergeev-Tzensky's 'The Man You Couldn't Kill,' Boris Pilniak's 'The Human Wind,' and Mikhail Prishvin's 'A Werewolf of the Steppe.' The rest, lacking both an interesting complexity of plot and tightly knit unity, are rather amateurish."

— + Boston Transcript p5 S 28 '29 180w

"[The] fusion in Soviet Russia of mediæval habits and modern freedom in artistic expression creates something which has no parallel elsewhere. Whether the reader cares for it or not depends a good deal upon the strength of his stomach. . . But the detachment of spirit which even the lesser Russian writers achieve so easily is an admirable and most enviable quality. With them if human beings are ruthless it is a thing neither to deplore nor to admire, merely to observe and to describe." L. L. Irvine

+ Nation and Ath 46:143 O 26 '29 250w

"Though this volume does not introduce any striking new writers or tendencies in Soviet fiction, it does include work by some of the best of the younger Russians. Babel, Ivanov, Sergeev-Tzensky, Pilniak, Zozulya and others are represented in a collection that is characteristically post-Revolution in tone and yet one in which we have no difficulty in recognizing the tradition of Dostoievsky and Tolstoy." C. S.

New Repub 60:383 N 20 '29 220w

"With but a few exceptions these stories do not possess high literary merit; yet, as reflections of the contemporary Russian scene, of a reality so strange and joyless as to seem unreal, they are typical and interesting. One of the salient features of this volume is that the stories contained are translated not only well, but excellently."

+ N Y Times p28 N 24 '29 280w

"These stories are primarily the work of recorders rather than the product of imaginative art, and are subject to the limitations set thereby. The authors do not attain to the magnitude of Tolstoy or Dostoevsky, or of other giants of Russian literature. They share with their greater compatriots, however, the vividness of simplicity, the strength of realism, and an insight into the human soul, which has placed Russia in the front ranks of literary production." K. C. Pierce

+ Portland Evening News p8 O 22 '29 700w

Sat R 148:554 N 9 '29 100w

COURSEN, DOROTHY. Beauty? I wonder. 291p $2 Coward-McCann

29-14760

"Miss Coursen has written the story of a man and a woman who, brought up in different parts of the country and among different sorts of persons, at length meet, marry and live together a more or less happy and contented life. Their families, their friends, their loves, their hopes and disappointments are faithfully described. The story of Jacob and Emily is delicately embroidered with the joys and sorrows that befall all persons in their journey through life."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"The change from the emotional freshness of childhood and youth to the deadening compromises of early maturity is the subject of Miss Coursen's book. Her thesis is beautifully, if somewhat unevenly, handled. . . The delicate, clear-cut style and the genuine perception, neither mawkish nor Pollyanish, with which Miss Coursen views her characters, make her book one of the few that will still be read when they are a few months old."

+ — Bookm 69:660 Ag '29 450w

"Miss Coursen has written a book that is moving and in a measure distinguished. But that a reader is diverted so often from her matter to her manner is criticism of both. Between the scenes of real beauty and power are places which seem slighted by their author. She has left out too much." Dorothy Van Doren

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ag 4 '29 580w

"Her manner of relating the incidents that make up Emily's childhood and girlhood has literary pretensions. Nevertheless, the effort to be original with exceptionally uninteresting situations gives its style a strained and exaggerated quality. . . One hopes that beauty of style will make up for the loss of other literary values."

— + Boston Transcript p2 S 14 '29 230w

"Its author has a scrupulous sense of the color and quality of words. Meticulously, and with a kind of limpid purity, she describes the adolescence of Jacob and Emily, whose lives eventually meet and blend. Her emphasis is almost wholly on spiritual experience, and she evokes the atmosphere of the last century by delicate indirection. Despite her gifts as a stylist, however, Miss Coursen is completely lacking in humor, warmth and vitality. Surfeited by so much arid elegance, one is tempted to pick up the nearest tale of Chicago gunmen and to inquire coarsely, 'What price style?' " E. H. W.

+ — New Repub 60:133 S 18 '29 140w

"While one wants to like Miss Coursen's book for its charm and truth and tenuous poignancy, the experienced reader must admit that he desires his literature compelling rather than persuasive—unless the exception be a very particular kind of experienced reader, and, if so, to him I recommend Miss Coursen's book without any reservations." P. T.

— + N Y Evening Post p6m Ag 17 '29 320w

COURTHS, FRAU HEDWIG (MAHLER). String of pearls. 317p $2 (7s 6d) Lippincott

29-28053

A novel by one of Germany's best sellers. Ralph von Lersen has purchased the country house Solitude, and fallen in love with its part-owner, Freda von Dörlach. During the course of the story a number of entanglements surrounding the past history of Lersen, which include diplomatic dishonor due to a wife's treachery in order to gain a string of pearls, have to be unravelled before Lersen and Freda can marry.

---

"It may be said once more that an author who provides sentiment in huge doses, characters pitchy black and glaringly white and incidents from the universal store of romance need never lack for an audience."
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 N 3 '29 130w

"An element of humor is introduced in the character of Frau Wengerli, the farmer's wife, which makes the story far more entertaining than its somewhat ordinary plot leads one to expect."
+ — Boston Transcript p6 My 11 '29 150w

"There seems little justification for translating the author's works, as has been done, into half a dozen languages; more especially is an English translation somewhat pointless. There is a naivety about her work that recalls the mid-Victorian era, and the sharp division of the characters into villains and saints is an affront to the most ordinary intelligence."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p705 S 12 '29 210w

COWAN, ANDREW REID. War in world-history; suggestions for students. 120p $2.40 (6s) Longmans

355 War. Civilization. History—Philosophy
29-15673

"Mr. Cowan has been made by his studies, if he was not originally so, a pessimist about mankind. . . Beginning with man as a prehistoric savage and rapidly tracing his course in his wars and their purposes and methods through the early civilizations and on down to the present time, discussing briefly but with suggestive brilliance each phase and epoch, the author draws from the long panorama he has surveyed the conclusion that man develops in the mass a malignity that seems to be inherent in him and to drive him into the predatory and destructive enterprise of war. He can see at present no other conclusion than that war is a 'biological imperative' and must continue to the end of time."—N Y Times

---

"An essay of a highly opinionated character, which uses the author's knowledge of world history to illustrate his views of human 'mass malignity.' It is almost undocumented and contains some generalizations which are notable matters of opinion, and it attempts to present a new synthesis of world history. It may do so in print, but its theme is not new. In fact, it is a little hard to see what object is to be gained by publishing it."
— Hist Outlook 20:307 O '29 60w

"Mr. Cowan writes interestingly, but he supposes his readers to have a good deal of knowledge about the course of history and the evolution of society. . . It is a brilliantly written argument that fairly bristles with challenges for the pacifists."
N Y Times p17 Ag 4 '29 400w

"This irritatingly self-confident little book advances a new theory of the nature of man's activities. This thesis is fortified by a gloomy review of the rise and fall of civilization, in which Mr. Cowan finds little good to say of mankind."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p543 Jl 4 '29 120w

COWARD, NOEL PIERCE. Bitter sweet, and 2 other plays; with a few comments on the younger dramatists by W. Somerset Maugham. 314p $3 Doubleday, Doran

822

Three plays by Noel Coward: Easy Virtue, a sophisticated comedy of social life among the conventional, wealthy, upper-middle-class English; Hayfever, which presents the backstage life of an actress and her family; and Bitter-sweet, a musical comedy in the traditional manner.

---

"Charming as 'Bitter Sweet' is on the stage—as literature it remains good musical comedy, which is to say clap-trap made palatable by the presence of a lovely actress, beguiling melodies and colorful sets." Edwin Seaver
N Y Evening Post p10m D 28 '29 200w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y World p11 D 21 '29 1200w

"Bitter Sweet holds together well enough. Its pictures of ballrooms and schottisches and early Victorian gowns and young ladies are colorful and interesting. It is magnificently put on by its producers. But its characters are not well drawn, its story is the ordinary romantic one most young men of thirty would write; and the variety a musical play needs is lacking. We call it mediocrity all dressed up; and no place to go." F. R. Bellamy
— + Outlook 154:32 Ja 1 '30 500w

COWARD, NOEL PIERCE. Plays; first series. 266p $3 Doubleday, Doran

822 29-26036

The people of Noel Coward's plays are usually of the smart set; their dialogue is always witty. In the three plays of his collection, "Sirocco" describes a bored wife's extra-marital romance and disillusionment in Italy; in "Home chat" a young wife suspected of infidelity establishes her innocence and turns the tables on her husband; while "The queen was in the parlour" concerns the conflict of a princess in love who is called home to be queen.

---

Booklist 25:201 F '29

"Certain of the situations have dramatic pungency, but, as in most of Coward's plays, the characters have not sufficient dignity to meet these situations. You remain unmoved and unconvinced." W. P. Eaton
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 F 10 '29 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p27 F '29

COWLEY, HENRY RICHARD CHARLES WELLESLEY, 1st earl. Secrets of the second empire; private letters from the Paris embassy; sel. and ed. by his son, F. A. Wellesley (Eng title Paris embassy during the second empire). 336p il $5 Harper [25s T. Butterworth]

944.07 France—History—Second empire, 1852-1870. Great Britain—History—Victoria, 1837-1901 29-12428

"These are for the most part private letters which passed between the first Earl Cowley, the British Ambassador, and the British Secretaries for Foreign Affairs at home, in particular, between Cowley and Lord Clarendon, who knew each other intimately and wrote their opinions with a frankness that even today, after seventy years, seems at times startling. Paris at this time was the centre of European diplomacy, now European history."—N Y Times

---

Boston Transcript p3 Je 1 '29 250w

"A shrewd observer, a trained diplomat of the old school, Lord Cowley's vivid epistles (and others by Napoleon III, Eugenie, Lord Russell, Lord Clarendon, etc.) give us delightfully authentic glimpses of the crowded, gorgeous court of the Second Empire. . . Perhaps one of the most entertaining features of these 'Letters' is the frankness with which the English diplomat describes foreign royalties." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p7m Ag 17 '29 200w

"It would be hard to say just what secrets are referred to in the title. Such secrets as there are, however, are of less interest than the general effect of throwing into light a whole court full of characters nearly all of them a little strange, some of them sinister and none of them simple. The story is all the better for coming from the pen of a 'career diplomat' who looked at French life through the eyes of a Victorian gentleman rather than

COWLEY, H: R: C: W.—Continued
from the hand of the historian as artist who skillfully covers his narrative." L. V. Updegraff

+ N Y Times p14 Je 9 '29 1500w

"A highly illuminating criticism of the Second Empire and, indeed, of the general field of European politics in those years. It lends a further interest to the work that the editing has been done by the Ambassador's son."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p979 D 13 '28 2250w

COWLEY, MALCOLM. Blue Juniata. 115p $2 J. Cape & H. Smith

811 29-17942

"Mr. Cowley has arranged his poems in two ways, and the grouping is of two kinds. There are poems belonging to a certain year, or to a period of two or three years; there are poems belonging to a sentiment or an idea which come under distinct headings. The value of 'Blue Juniata' as poetry is high; as a document of the first post-war generation it is unique. Cowley's generation appeared after the war had given the 'genteel tradition' and the provincial ways of life in America a staggering blow. This volume is the record kept by a member of this generation who broke with his past, witnessed the moral collapse of Europe, and returned to make the best of the confused intellectual life of post-war New York."—New Repub

Booklist 26:62 N '29

"Today usually it is the color and striping of a young poet's temperament that first win him an audience, but with Malcolm Cowley it is the glass-like colorlessness of his temperament that captivates. A cool transparency of mood and vision, a mind agile in making varied and exact and surprising patterns, and a simple pure lyric energy that makes a direct appeal, combine to establish Cowley in the front rank of the younger generation's versifiers."

+ Bookm 70:x S '29 150w

Reviewed by Kenneth Burke

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Ag 18 '29 1100w

"As the product of a chilly intellectualism, the verse in this book will prompt extravagant laudations on one hand and caustic dismissal on the other. The book will not sustain the first, and might credibly challenge the disdain of the second. Between the two is a region in which Mr. Cowley is both admirable and futile: admirable in technique, futile in the emotional effort to move us. . . Mr. Cowley pretends to irony, but it has not the temper; to disillusionment, but it does not brood; to doubt, but it has no passion."

— Boston Transcript p2 O 23 '29 210w

" 'Blue Juniata' is important not only because it gives us the assembled verse of a new and definitely interesting poet, but because it sets itself up as a self-confessed logbook of literary youth in America during the ten years which followed the war and which came just after the first fruits of our modern literary revival had been harvested. Mr Cowley's stature as a poet—observant, alive, and sharply sensitive—is already revealed. He will undoubtedly make use of his equipment by writing somewhat more independently of his generation's peculiar ordeal (not, we hope, by losing his enthusiasm and engaging candor)." M. D. Zabel

+ Nation 129:200 Ag 21 '29 600w

"This collection of fifty-five poems covers the history of Mr. Cowley's mind in the last ten years. Like all of his writing, it is beautifully finished, and as poetry it is of an order very rare in the American scene: Mr. Cowley not only has a specific talent for poetry, he is a highly trained man of letters, and his verse is a fine example of the discipline of craftsmanship that few Americans achieve." Allen Tate

+ New Repub 60:51 Ag 28 '29 1000w

"The first thing that strikes one about the poetry of Malcolm Cowley is a genuine and refreshing lyrical gift, and a corresponding precision and limpidity of language. One notes with pleasure the absence of sloppy emotions, thoughts without edge, self-expression, cliches—and all the other paraphernalia of poetics. One is pleased to find, on the other hand, emotions not deep but clear, a good soil quality, the flowing line and exact word, a flight not remarkable for its sweep but nicely sustained in its brief, bright arc." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p7m Ag 17 '29 550w

"If his poetry lacks something of traditional beauty and lyricism, it is because his mind has been formed under conditions only partly amenable to change through his own efforts. The poems of 'Blue Juniata' are of an intellectual order, wholly disciplined, but the indigenous flavor has not been intellectualized, so to speak, out of them." J: Chamberlain

+ N Y Times p2 S 8 '29 1000w

"Although it is possible to appreciate the motive, and, in rare instances, the effectiveness of the created impression, there is little in Blue Juniata to recommend it to one who is not strenuously sympathetic with the ultra-modern conception of art." J. D. Tasker

Outlook 152:671 Ag 21 '29 110w

"This volume has a continuity and growth one seldom finds in a book of poems, a round development more characteristic of the novel. The changes of scene, moreover, are reflected in the changes of tone, attack, attitude." L: Untermeyer

+ Sat R of Lit 6:178 S 28 '29 800w

COWLEY, RAMSEY. Gift supreme. 367p $2 Putnam [7s 6d A. Rivers]

29-6353

A story of love and villainy among the farm workers on the Isle of Man. David Kermode, son of a land-owner, is in love with Nell who works in the fields and whose mother, old Peggy Corlett, has the gift of second sight. Caesar Costain, a villainous land-owner, works evil on them all. There is a good deal of old-fashioned rhetoric in the dialogue of the story.

"Although the book leaves several things to be desired, it has both atmosphere and sustained interest and is probably a faithful representation of life as it is still lived in one of the few yet to be exploited corners of the world."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p35 Ap 14 '29 300w

"The author's style is somewhat crude and labored, but the life of the people of the island, the customs and conditions in this secluded place are so different from those in other parts of England that they have the charm of novelty." G. B.

— + Boston Transcript p5 My 18 '28 320w

"There is good material in this tale of peasant life in the Isle of Man; but it is used for the most part in an insipid and, at the best, melodramatic manner."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p836 N 8 '28 180w

COX, ANTHONY BERKELEY (ANTHONY BERKELEY, pseud.). Layton court mystery. 306p $2 Doubleday, Doran

29-6186

Victor Stanworth was apparently a suicide. But Roger Sheringham, one of the dead man's guests at Layton court, finds discrepancies in that theory and, proceeding on his own idea of murder, turns up some shocking facts about Stanworth and identifies his avenger.

"A continuously readable and exciting guessing game. The author specializes in honest clews and a natural atmosphere." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 10 '29 80w

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 27 '29 200w

"Brace Roger up, Mr. Berkeley, we had reason to expect better stuff from him."

— N Y World p10m Mr 10 '29 130w

COX, SIDNEY. Robert Frost, original "ordinary man." 43p $1.50 Holt

B or 92 Frost, Robert 29-5428

A sketch of the poet by an intimate friend, who attributes the poet's humanism to his "never having bargained away any of the endowments of the genus man."

"Mr. Cox's monograph on Frost makes a good companion volume to Gorham B. Munson's more extensive study of the man and his work." Edwin Seaver
+ N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 23 '29 90w

"Mr. Cox's essay is a valuable supplement to Munson's study; it is also an interesting revelation of the personality of one of the most attractive and perhaps the most important of modern poets." Granville Hicks
+ N Y World p11m Ap 7 '29 100w

COXE, HOWARD. Passage to the sky. 282p $2.50 Boni

29-29100

"A slightly cynical scorn is mixed with a compassionate understanding in this study of expatriates killing time in the cafés of Florence. Estelle Norton, an American widow and forty-five, is the central figure around whom are grouped Paolo Donati, a handsome young Florentine noble; Felix Pye, an English youth, and his mother, who has been acquitted of the charge of having murdered her husband; Percy Applegate, an artist with a smutty mind and an unsavory reputation, and Sara Leverton, an English girl, who is the only sound apple in the heap."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"Mr. Coxe has observed carefully the types he depicts and writes about them with insight and charity. His style fits the changing moods neatly, so that the opening in a rhythm of smart persiflage is no indication of the sober minor into which the final pages fall."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 S 8 '29 250w

"The story starts by being a gay social comedy. It becomes far more complicated and less respectable as the chapters follow one another. If the tragic denouement at the end were described with power, this might be a remarkable but hideous drama of emotional instability and abnormality. Mr. Coxe makes important things too trivial, and stresses events that do not matter in too commonplace a style."
— Boston Transcript p10 N 9 '29 300w

New Repub 60:133 S 18 '29 250w

"The author obviously is trying to impress his readers with the unhappiness, the worldliness and the fascination of his characters. But unfortunately they never come to life and he succeeds only in making them uninteresting and unreal. . . In spite of sensational events, the book never touches real drama; there is little skill in the telling of the story; it fails even to reach the heights of melodrama."
— N Y Times p30 S 8 '29 480w

"Mr. Coxe does not rebel against the meaninglessness of his characters nor the pointlessness of their days; surely he was not so ingenuous as to hope that a novel faithful to that way of life could be either moving or significant. He writes well enough, but he has nothing to say—except 'They did this and then that.' By definition, a true futilitarian cannot write a good novel. The really puzzling thing is this: why should he bother to write at all?"
— Sat R of Lit 6:486 N 30 '29 250w

COXON, MURIEL (HINE) (MRS SIDNEY COXON). Ladder of folly. 348p $2 Appleton [7s 6d Lane]

29-7956

A sweet young English girl of the upper social circles and an American professor have fallen a little in love, when the professor goes home. He should have stayed by. For on the death of her mother the girl comes under the wrong kind of influences and by the time the American returns is considerably changed from the shy and innocent creature he knew. It speedily develops, however, that the change is more apparent than real.

"A novel that Miss Hine's public will approvingly enjoy."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ap 23 '29 120w

"Ann's wishy-washy personality leaves one with the feeling that she was, primarily, the author's forced creation, sadly lacking in spontaneity and individuality." H. F. M.
— Boston Transcript p3 My 18 '29 400w

Reviewed by V. Sackville-West
Nation and Ath 44:418 D 15 '28 40w

"The novel exhibits promise, if not power."
+ — N Y Times p30 O 6 '29 150w

"Miss Hine's narrative, though it seems to lack direction, opens up a great deal of country and atones for formlessness by variety." L. P. Hartley
+ — Sat R 146:856 D 22 '28 90w

"A seriously conceived, admirably executed, and restrained novel, it is one which should prove particularly attractive to feminine readers."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:960 Ap 27 '29 180w

"The pace of this novel is sometimes slow, and the plot is a little obvious. But Miss Hine's admirers will enjoy once again her natural descriptions of characters and scenes. This is not Miss Hine's best novel. But it has, nevertheless, much simple charm."
+ — Spec 141:933 D 15 '28 110w

COYLE, KATHLEEN. Liv. 200p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d J. Cape]

29-8541

Liv Evensen has never been away from Norway in her twenty-three years. She longs passionately to escape to Paris for a season of freedom and adventure—of life—before her inevitable marriage to Harald. Aunt Sonja, remembering her own youth, understands Liv's desire and helps her to achieve it. And like Aunt Sonja before her, Liv finds in Paris her great love and makes her great renunciation, returning to Norway with her ardent nature fully awakened yet under control, poised and ready to meet what life may bring.

Booklist 25:359 Je '29

"Rebecca West in a cleverly worded preface has, it seems to me, rather overestimated the value of this book, in which faults and virtues are incongruously mingled. The poetic sensitivity of which she speaks is apparent. Yet the quality struggles through word vehicles inadequate for full expression. The girl Liv appears a pale and anemic descendant of those Ibsen women who solved their problem in a manner calculated to shock the civilized world." E. R. Richardson
+ — Bookm 69:314 My '29 320w

Reviewed by James Thurlow
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 My 19 '29 580w

"There are passages of extreme beauty, especially in the first half of the story. In places one could wish that the novelist would not let her desire for originality of simile and metaphor lure her into grotesque expressions. . . In general the style is strong, restrained and sparkling." P. M. L.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 17 '29 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p110 Jl '29

"A bright and delicate mind is here at work; an adventurous mind. The book has evidently been a whole voyage in the spirit to Miss Coyle. . . Decidedly, Miss Coyle is at her best in Norway; it is only when she takes her heroine to Paris that she begins to waver between the worlds of reality and illusion." V. Sackville-West
+ — Nation and Ath 44:755 Mr 2 '29 400w

"Liv is not a great novel, but it is a lovely one, and in many scenes—but notably in that critical last meeting of Per Malom and Liv—Miss Coyle shows sensitiveness and tact."
+ New Statesman 33:24 Ap 13 '29 150w

COYLE, KATHLEEN—Continued
Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 227:adv My '29 160w

"The first half of the book held out great promises. But in the second half Kathleen Coyle falls short of them. The author, from that point, was caught in a net of her own weaving."
+ — Outlook 151:549 Ap 3 '29 200w

Pratt p37 autumn '29

"Slender though this story and brief though this book may be, it is written with such perception and restraint that it must be recognized as a valid piece of artistry." J: Carter
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:1024 My 18 '29 650w

"Miss Kathleen Coyle understands her sex; and, whether she write of the twilight or the clarified day, her work is of rare quality." R. A. Taylor
+ Spec 142:345 Mr 2 '29 300w

"Miss Coyle has a delicately elusive style, but her impressions are none the less sure. There is something cool and rare about this story; the reader finds himself turning back to reread pages that must not be forgotten."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p204 Mr 14 '29 280w

COZZENS, JAMES GOULD. Son of perdition. 304p $2.50 Morrow
29-17388

" 'The Son of Perdition' is a dramatic novel of human relations, set in a small seaside town of Cuba. Dosfuegos, sea terminal of the United Sugar Company's railroads, is the locale of the story, the culmination of the dream of Joel Stellow, administrator general of the company, who rules with an iron hand; ruthless, at times, but dispensing justice, and even kindness when expediency demands, with the coldness of the machine that dominates him. The climax of the tale finds him momentarily human, when he offers to subject the interests of his company to personal loyalty."—Boston Transcript

---

Booklist 26:70 N '29

"A novel of atmosphere and character rather than plot. The characters are drawn with firmness and the word-coloring is rich."
+ Bookm 70:xxvi D '29 140w

" 'The Son of Perdition' conforms to very few accepted canons of the art of fiction. It is unconventional. It is, on occasion, realistic, impressionist and modern, with a dash of mordant mysticism. It defeats the searcher after descriptive epithets in the end. But it inspires him with a profound admiration for the author's peculiar gift. It is a desperately interesting novel. It may easily turn out to be a novel of first rate caliber." W: McFee
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 S 1 '29 930w

"A strange, gripping story is this—one that stays in the mind long after the book is laid away." J. C. G.
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 4 '29 550w

"Sometimes Mr. Cozzens pulls [his] people up by the roots in his effort to show precisely how those roots grow. But he never swerves far from the spectacular central situation. And several of the scenes he shows them in are of the sort that are unforgettable." C. G. Poore
+ N Y Times p7 O 6 '29 750w

"It is a good novel, well constructed and rich in human character. You will like it for its evenness of tone, its picturesqueness, but most of all for its deep understanding of human nature." H. L. Cail
+ Portland Evening News p8 O 22 '29 230w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 24 '29 100w

"It is a pity that the author has not been able to weave a more coherent story out of the material of this book. . . The reader's interest throughout is that of observing the separate movements of a number of isolated groups, instead of the manner in which their lives are interrelated."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p929 N 14 '29 230w

CRAIG, WILLIAM N. Lilies and their culture in North America. 144p il $3 Florists' pub. co., 508 S. Dearborn st., Chicago

716.2 Lilies 28-7984

The care, cultivation, propagation, diseases and geographical distribution of lilies. "Notes on varieties," which forms about half the book, gives the origin, description of bulb and flower, method of propagation, and habitat of each lily.

---

Booklist 25:56 N '28

"Mr. Craig, having spent a lifetime in growing lilies as superintendent of a large private estate near Boston, and more recently as a commercial specialist in perennials at Weymouth, is well qualified to give advice." F. P. H.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 18 '28 80w

Cleveland Open Shelf p89 Je '29

CRAMER, FLOYD. Our neighbor Nicaragua. 243p il $2 Stokes

972.85 Nicaragua—History. United States—Foreign relations—Nicaragua. Nicaragua—Foreign relations—United States 29-4680

"There are chapters on the Spanish background, the British activities along the Mosquito Coast during the early part of the last century, the American filibuster, William Walker, and his adventures, and on more recent history, including a word about Sandino." —Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"This little book is a well-meant and fairly informative, if somewhat colorless and routine statement of the main facts, historical, geographical, and political, about Nicaragua. There are occasional minor errors of fact."
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Mr 31 '29 230w

"Mr. Cramer makes an amiable attempt to write an impartial history of Nicaragua, but something which he would probably call his 'patriotism' gets the better of him. He cites the facts of the record, but fails to give the color of the tropical land. Sandino is just a bandit to him, and the Marine Corps is educating the Nicaraguans in self-government!"
— Nation 128:772 Je 26 '29 50w

"A hurried outline of events in Nicaragua from Columbus to Sandino. The book shows evidence of having been hastily written. Although it is a blanket defense of our government's attitude, it will reassure no one who has honest doubts of the wisdom or justice of American policy towards Nicaragua." H. W. Dodds
— New Repub 59:185 Jl 3 '29 130w

St Louis 27:207 Je '29

CRAMPTON, CHARLES WARD. Daily health builder. 161p il $1.50 (7s 6d) Putnam

613.7 Exercise. Physical education and training 28-23299

"Prescriptions of exercise by a physician to be used under your physician's instructions. Entirely free from technical words and medical phrases."—Survey

---

"While the book, entertainingly written, fully illustrated, may be easily followed by any individual, that individual should look upon any exercise askance which is not prescribed by his physician to meet his needs. Providing the ones set forth by Dr. Crampton do meet these needs he will find the reasons why clearly and simply stated." L. L. Meanes

Am J Pub Health 19:460 Ap '29 160w

Survey 61:247 N 15 '28 20w

CRANE, LEO. Desert drums; the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico, 1540-1928. 393p il $5 Little

970.4 Pueblo Indians. Indians of North America—New Mexico 28-23643

Mr Crane has been agent for the government on four Indian reservations. He is the author of an earlier book on the "Indians of the enchanted desert" (Book Review Digest, 1925). The present volume, which is a history of the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico from 1540 to 1928, contains many interesting and amusing reminiscences from his own experiences. It is illustrated with photographs and a map.

---

Booklist 25:156 Ja '29

Reviewed by F. G. Applegate

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Mr 10 '29 750w

" 'Desert Drums' is a splendid picture of the New Mexican Pueblos, a picture painted skilfully upon the background of almost four centuries of history. . . Mr. Crane's style is vivid and forceful. His narrative is frequently flavored with episodes drawn from his rich store of personal experience. I know of no better introduction to the Pueblos of New Mexico (ethnology omitted), from 1540 to the present, than 'Desert Drums.' " L. A. White

+ Nation 128:138 Ja 30 '29 730w

"In the dreary desert of white and Indian relationships, one comes upon an occasional oasis. Leo Crane, who spent more than twenty years in the Indian service, is one of those rare individuals with a harmonious insight into the traditions and problems of an alien race." Elsie Weil

+ New Repub 57:sup122 D 12 '28 170w

" 'Desert Drums' has something more than vividness. It is enlightening to persons who know the country and the Indians, and it makes capital reading because of the personal note that runs through it. . . The reader's interest in 'Desert Drums' is divided between the incredible pettiness and stupidity of officials of the Indian Bureau on the one hand, and the mixed reactions and attempted evasions of the Indians beset alike by reformer 'friends' and by politician enemies. To those who wish to know more about the strange—very strange—ways of the Indian Bureau in the days that were Fall's, 'Desert Drums' cannot but be enlightening."

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 14 '29 700w

"We have never encountered a more sympathetic and understanding study of [the Indians] than Mr. Crane offers in his latest volume, 'Desert Drums.' " M. B.

+ Outlook 150:1332 D 12 '28 90w

Pratt p33 summer '29

St Louis 27:101 Mr '29

+ Wis Lib Bul 24:344 D '28

CRANE, NATHALIA CLARA RUTH. Alien from heaven. 300p $2.50 Coward-McCann

29-21201

Nathalia Crane's second novel, written at the age of sixteen. A baby, Janet Dark, is born with wings at the Barydon Hospital. The phenomenon is observed by several scientists, and the baby, with its parents, is secluded in a little Massachusetts town for observation. As Janet grows her wings develop. One day two half-wits, her neighbors, accidently catch sight of the wings, which were ordinarily hidden under a shawl. They spread the news over the country, and Janet is spirited away to safety. Meanwhile (in the cause of science) something is learned of Janet's French ancestry.

---

"Miss Crane has not written a fairy tale, nor the pseudo-poetic dreamings of an adolescent. She has written a powerful, objective fantasy. She has clipped the rhythm of her sentences with good, sharp words. Her writing, rather than nebulous, is almost scientific. You travel up through everyday knowledge into the region of a wild surmise. You feel about Miss Crane, as about her book, that she stands poised with her feet on the ground and her head in the clouds." V. P. Ross

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 N 17 '29 650w

"Certain angularities of phrasing occasionally intrude. It seems as if the story were written with a rush and spontaneity that prevented carefulness in expression. The book is a charming trifle, delightful in the reading, fragrant though evanescent." P. L.

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 30 '29 320w

"The story is evidently meant to be an airy, charming and significant fantasy; it is actually a stupid, leaden-footed, deadly dull affair."

— N Y Times p32 D 1 '29 200w

CRANE, VERNER WINSLOW. Southern frontier, 1670-1732. (Publications) 391p $4.50 Duke univ. [20s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

975.7 South—History. South Carolina—History. Indians of North America—Commerce 29-7214

An historical study of the land between Carolina and the Spanish settlements to the south. The period covered begins with the founding of South Carolina and ends with the founding of Georgia. Indian trade is one of the important factors with which this history deals: its organization and function, and the economic aspect of the international struggle for control over it.

---

"To call this book an important contribution to the history of the Southern frontier would be an understatement, for it is virtually a recreation of the history of that region during the period that it covers. For some fifteen years Mr. Crane has been at work in this field gathering and digesting information from a wide variety of sources. . . The Southern Frontier is notable for its fine scholarship and is indeed a model of its kind." A. P. Whitaker

+ Am Hist R 34:854 Jl '29 880w

Boston Transcript p7 My 4 '29 160w

"The volume, in fact, covers in an enjoyable detailed way the ins and outs of the Anglo-French struggle for supremacy in the South, up to the end of proprietary control in the British settlements, in 1730." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 13 '29 180w

"An admirable study, which is truly what many books of this kind are only professedly, a real addition to knowledge."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p390 My 16 '29 430w

Reviewed by F. L. Paxson

Yale R n s 19:195 autumn '29 480w

CRAWFORD, CLAUDE C. Technique of study. 353p $2 Houghton

371.3 Study, Method of 28-6561

"A textbook for use with upper, secondary and lower college students, which deals with the methods of study in a clear, practical manner. The material is derived from research and practical work in the classroom."—Pratt

---

Pratt p11 winter '29

"The book is written with forcefulness and simplicity. The convictions of the author are carried direct to the reader. For this reason the book should be very effective in telling students how to study. The book does not pose as the last word on methods of study; it does, however, cover a wide range of sound experience and should serve well that large mass of students who come through the elementary school and the junior high school with but few efficient habits of work." F. D. McClusky

+ School R 37:147 F '29 880w

CRAWFORD, LESLIE INGRAM. On the anvil. 367p $2.50 Morrow [7s 6d Benn]

29-18148

"The development of a young man from infancy through boyhood and soldiering to love, marriage and fatherhood . . . passing from the bright Chilean sunshine and freedom into the dark tunnel of war, to emerge at last into

CRAWFORD, L. I.—Continued
a still somewhat drab post-War suburbanism." —Times [London] Lit Sup

"In some ways this is an unusual novel. Valparaiso is not a hackneyed setting . . . and one gets a different and a startling description of the war in Eastern Europe." G. B.
+ Boston Transcript p2 O 2 '29 600w

"A notable book; for though it follows a familiar pattern it stands out from the general run of competent and even really good novels by virtue of the constant and consistent vitality which informs it, the abundant inventiveness, and the unfailing command of detail. Scenes and characters alike are depicted not with any effect of conscious dexterity, but complete and satisfying. The actual writing is always fresh and vigorous, and though the treatment is highly and successfully objective one is aware behind it all of the play of the author's mind, alert and vibrant. It is an intelligent as well as an extremely interesting and sometimes moving novel."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p258 Mr 28 '29 560w

CRAWLEY, ALFRED ERNEST. Studies of savages and sex; ed. by Theodore Besterman. 300p $4.50 Dutton [10s 6d Methuen]

392 Savages. Sex. Marriage. Society, Primitive [29-17411]

Papers on the problems of sexual anthropology, the nature and history of kissing, the oath, the curse and other matters viewed principally from the psychological side. Contents: Chastity and sexual morality; Sketch of the forms of love: with special reference to America; A note on obscenity and the orgy; The nature and history of the kiss; Birthdays and the day of birth; Fœticide; Life and death: with special reference to America; The practice and psychology of anointing: with special reference to the Hindus; The oath, the curse and the blessing; The oath; Index.

Reviewed by Ruth Benedict
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 O 20 '29 500w

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 31 '29 380w

"The 'Studies' in Mr. Crawley's volume range over the whole world—not neglecting Europe itself; and, in consequence of this discursiveness, they do not present a limited and clearly defined picture. Much information is included which could not easily be found elsewhere." Alan Porter
Nation and Ath 45:168 My 4 '29 180w

Reviewed by J. W. Slaughter
New Repub 60:129 S 18 '29 330w

"It is no longer the fashion to range at large over the world and compare customs and beliefs without any first-hand knowledge of the peoples to whom they belong; but if Mr. Crawley's work is in this respect somewhat old-fashioned his psychological basis cannot be neglected by the field worker of the present day; it is therefore a useful piece of work to republish these articles."
— + Sat R 147:539 Ap 20 '29 320w

" 'Studies of Savages and Sex' is more comprehensive in its range than Professor Malinowski's book, and there is a consequent lack of detail in this work. But even with this reservation, much material hitherto only to be found in widely scattered publications, some of which are no longer obtainable, finds here its natural repository. It is an excellent introductory work to more detailed treatises like those of Professor Malinowski. . . Mr. Crawley's book can hardly attract the general reader, but the student of savage life will find it invaluable."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p237 Mr 21 '29 350w

CREW, HELEN C. (COALE) (MRS HENRY CREW). Alanna. 233p il $2 Harper 29-18155

Alanna was a jolly young Irish girl whose laughter was "just such a peal as bluebells would make if they had sturdy little clappers in place of . . . stamens." With her kind heart and her gay laughter Alanna won friends everywhere: at home in the tiny Irish village of Ballycooly, on the ship going to America, and in Baltimore after she reached America. But Alanna was happiest of all when she returned to her mother and friends in Ballycooly.

Booklist 26:124 D '29
Cleveland Open Shelf p131 N '29
St Louis 27:344 D '29
Sat R of Lit 6:608 D 28 '29 220w

"It is an earthly story of real people, agreeably told."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '29 100w
Wis Lib Bul 25:326 O '29

CREW, HELEN C. (COALE) (MRS HENRY CREW). Under two eagles. 298p il $2 Little [2] 29-19781

Vasily, the son of a poor fisherman of Warsaw, was born in the shadow of one of the city's great bridges, which awakened in him the desire to build other bridges. The story tells how he was befriended by General Pilsudski, and came to America to be educated.

Booklist 26:124 D '29
Cleveland Open Shelf p131 N '29

Reviewed by O. M. Fuller
N Y World p11m D 1 '29 30w
St Louis 27:344 D '29

"A pleasant and interesting story of a real boy of today and his struggle from a somewhat vacillating and over-serious childhood through forced responsibilities into a busy and progressive life. There is excellent characterization—much more than usually appears in books of this type. Indeed, all who appear in the story enter with the breath of reality and are living figures in an entertaining and wholesome tale. Present-day Poland, with its hopes and its successes, is carried to the reader through the story, and the whole is enlivened by decorations, one or two maps, and illustrations." M. C. Dodd
+ Sat R of Lit 6:404 N 16 '29 480w

CRICHTON, MRS FRANCES ELIZABETH (SINCLAIR). Peep-in-the-world. new ed 258p il $1.75 Longmans [2] 29-15930

Peep-in-the-world was a little English girl who spent a happy year with her uncle in his castle in Germany, while her father and mother were in India. During the year Peep-in-the-world made many friends, but none whom she loved more than the dwarf shoemaker who lived in a hut in the forest, where every beast of the forest was welcome.

Booklist 26:77 N '29
Sat R of Lit 6:428 N 16 '29 170w

CRICHTON, KYLE S. Law and order ltd.; the rousing life of Elfego Baca of New Mexico. 219p il $2.50 Santa Fé, New Mex. Pub. corp.

B or 92 Baca, Elfego. Crime and criminals—New Mexico 28-22307

"The particular locale and vernacular is that of the New Mexican border country where 'gringo' and 'greaser' meet. Its hero is the Mexican-American, Elfego Baca, known, it seems, for the past half century in the El Paso region 'wherever a Colt pistol had any authority.' A sort of border Robin Hood, combining the fiery and sentimental qualities of the Mexican with the Yankee's shrewdness and hardheadness, he appears to have been a 'good hombre' of a remarkable sort. . . He knew Albert Fall and Senator Curtis, played the gringoes' game and not only held his own but beat them at it. A good Republican, finally, he was 'a trifle overanxious at times for Law and Order, but for Law and Order, nevertheless.' Hence the title to Mr. Crichton's book. The glimpses of the late Secretary Fall are not the least interesting parts of this breezy and unconventional narrative."—Sat R of Lit

"Considered simply as news and gossip, the book is well worth its price, but it is a great deal more than that. It is an item for every collection of Americana and a treat for every one who feels the fascination of the old dramatic West." Harvey Fergusson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 S 23 '28 550w

St Louis 26:389 D '28

"Elfego Baca seems to be a real person—the book is full of photographs of him at various stages of his melodramatic career—and difficult as the author's task has been made for him by all the clichés which have gathered round this type of disappearing American, he has made him genuinely entertaining, and supplied valuable firsthand material for later historians."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:376 N 17 '28 600w

CROCE, BENEDETTO. History of Italy, 1871-1915; tr. by Cecilia M. Ady. 333p $5 (15s) Oxford

945.09 Italy—History [29-26884]

Croce's sketch of Italian history covers a period of forty-five years, from the establishment of political unity in 1870 to the entry of Italy into the World war. His treatment gives dramatic interest to the thought and ideals, political life and foreign affairs of these years of peace.

---

Booklist 26:63 N '29

"The 'History' leaves the impression of having been written, one might say, at a single sitting, so spontaneously does it burst from Croce's inner spirit, so fluidly does it drip from his pen with all the marks of having been long and deeply lived." Arthur Livingston

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 N 3 '29 950w

Boston Transcript p2 S 21 '29 500w

"The book is excellent of its kind. Professor Croce, imaginative, vivid, intelligent, seems to have been admirably translated by Miss Ady. Professor Croce shows an intimate knowledge of the period of which he writes." Basil Murray

+ Nation and Ath 45:600 Ag 3 '29 440w

"The book is the product of a mind of the first order. Croce sees with eagle eyes, far and wide; he views not single occurrences, but the whole sweep of events. He relates and inter-relates the various phases of Italian life as only one who has lived during the period can interpret them. (Croce was born in 1866). There is scarcely an aspect of Italy's development which he does not analyze." Constantine Panunzio

+ New Repub 60:154 S 25 '29 1300w

"His narrative—not only when he deals with his own subjects, culture, ideals and the moral life, but when he describes economic conditions, foreign affairs, forgotten party politics—is all light and warmth. He persuades successfully that his period has not only a peculiar importance to Italians, but 'a more general importance, as being at once a part and an outcome of recent European history.' "

+ New Statesman 33:474 Jl 20 '29 700w

"Professor Croce's book is for those who believe profoundly in a human idealism, in the nobility and necessity of thought and striving. . . This fine idealistic strain runs through Croce's narrative, a noble and inspiring refrain. At times it is hard to accept fully, but then this is a polemical work written in part, at least, to answer the accusations of the Fascist interpretation." Percy Winner

+ N Y Evening Post p12m N 23 '29 1300w

Reviewed by Walter Littlefield

N Y Times p3 O 27 '29 800w

Reviewed by Mary Shirley

Outlook 153:152 S 25 '29 850w

St Louis 27:315 N '29

"This is a strange book. I know of no other possessing in so high a degree two apparently opposed characteristics: writing about contemporary events with as much complete serenity as if they belonged to Assyrian history; and giving at the same time the most useful key to understanding the present Italian crisis, in which everybody is interested because everybody tries to draw, from the Italian spectacle, arguments for his own fears or hopes." Carlo Sforza

+ Sat R of Lit 6:778 Ap 21 '29 800w

"Croce brings to his picture of the age succeeding 1870 all the resources of a mind steeped in knowledge of the politics and persons, the social and moral conditions of the time, as well as the acumen of the trained philosophic thinker. His method is rather that of the survey than the chronicle; but he does not neglect events, and while his style is usually sober, he can occasionally rise to a restrained and excellent eloquence. He is fortunate, too, in having found as his translator so accomplished a writer and Italian scholar as Miss Ady."

+ Spec 143:58 Jl 13 '29 580w

Times [London] Lit Sup p547 Jl 11 '29 1560w

World Tomorrow 12:524 D '29 40w

CROFTON, ALGERNON. Queen of Nineveh. 241p $2.50 Covici

29-6182

"There is no way of determining, at this late date, whether Nineveh fully deserved the reputation which it acquired as 'the world's wickedest city.' Mr. Crofton is the latest venturer into this domain, adorning the tale of King Sardanacus, lovely Hadassah and proud Tamar. He has fashioned the narrative on the researches of archaeologists and historians and sought to reflect something 'of that incredible magnificance and power, vice and unbelievable ferocity which made Nineveh the wonder of the ancient world.' "—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"It is a story of much pomp and glitter, but decidedly static."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 My 5 '29 180w

"Mr. Crofton uses a language both Biblical and beautiful. The royal falcon hunts, the banquets and the happenings in the great Temple of Asshur are described in majestic periods. Harem intrigues and street scenes are described with a wealth of authentic detail seasoned with just enough imagination, picturesque detail and amusing vernacular. The book presents a completely real and credible picture."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 27 '29 200w

"It is a brief novel, but nevertheless interminably dull because of the morasses of detail. The pages of prose are not hung from any skeleton of plot. Nor do they paint a convincing picture of the setting, in spite of the citations of authorities at the end. The writing is adequate, but never approaches a style that could justify the reader's labor."

— N Y Times p25 Ag 18 '29 130w

CROFTS, FREEMAN WILLS. Purple sickle murders. 284p $2 Harper

29-14148

In which Inspector Joseph French runs into a gang of petty blackmailers and sharpers and after great difficulty clears up several murders.

---

"Recommended as a good plausible yarn."

+ Bookm 69:xxvi Ag '29 70w

"Mr. Crofts woos his audience with slow but sure sleuthing of the credible brand. His Inspector French is among the best bets in the mystery sweepstakes." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Jl 14 '29 120w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 31 '29 250w

N Y Times p16 Ag 18 '29 280w

"The exploits of Inspector French of Scotland Yard are always worth reading about, and in 'The Purple Sickle Murders' Freeman Wills Crofts's smart detective is quite at his best."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '29 220w

Wis Lib Bul 25:276 Jl '29

CROISSET, FRANCIS DE. Our puppet show; from a dramatist's workshop; with a preface by W. Somerset Maugham [tr. by E. B. Osborn]. 179p $2.50 Harper

844 Characters and characteristics. French drama. Drama 29-10498

Witty philosophical speculations on love, jealousy and friendship in life and on the stage, written by a famous French playwright.

---

"The book is neat and witty, and eminently quotable; but its chief value is for dramatists, because of the hints it drops, from the author's long experience, on what is, and is not, effective on the stage." W. P. Eaton

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 Je 9 '29 170w

Boston Transcript p6 Je 15 '29 280w

"He is very wise about the stage, very foolish about life, completely non-moral and scintillantly clever about both. Brilliant, paradoxical, frivolous, entertaining."

+ Christian Century 46:839 Je 26 '29 50w

"However caustic M. de Croisset's wit may be, it never descends to gravity, nor rises to mirth. It is so even and sustained that it gives one simultaneously a consciousness of richness and a premonition of satiety." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Evening Post p6m Je 29 '29 330w

St Louis 27:310 N '29

Springfield Republican p12 Je 20 '29 630w

Times [London] Lit Sup p706 S 12 '29 150w

CROSBIE, MARY. Rekindled fires. 312p $2.50 Sears

29-17043

"In the quiet north country of England Caroline Dacre is brought up to regard herself as the product of aristocracy, who must not look twice at the son of a neighboring farmer. Then along comes an old gossip to whisper the story of Caroline's grandmother, and how she lost her heart to a roving soldier, and how the family escutcheon is marred by the bar sinister. When the immature girl is thrown into the Bohemian life of London, the tale of the roving soldier stays securely in the back of her mind. She marries a middle-aged author, only to leave him at last for the farmer's son. The whisper is the stronger influence in the end."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"The author has set down this narrative in believable terms, with adroit descriptions of various layers of London life."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 O 27 '29 170w

"Her descriptions of the English north country moors, the locale of a large part of her story, are extraordinarily fresh. . . As a storyteller, Miss Crosbie is interesting and effective, but as a creator of character she does not quite satisfy."

+ — N Y Times p24 O 20 '29 480w

"When Miss Crosbie has managed to fuse setting, story and character into a more unified whole she will write a more significant novel; for she has a seeing eye, understanding, and the ability to create."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e O 6 '29 200w

CROSBY, PERCY LEO. Dear Sooky. 124p il $2.50 Putnam

29-21211

The further adventures and ups and downs of Skippy, the small boy who is so well known from the author's cartoons. In his letters to his friend Sooky, Skippy registers his opinions, especially in the matter of stupid grown-ups.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 D 15 '29 120w

"There is a real humor in these letters and in the pictures which accompany them—not the mere slapstick humor of the average comic strip, but something deeper and more vital. They present a small boy's outlook on the world, and they sometimes make us wonder whether the boy does not see some things more nearly in their true proportions than do we who have almost forgotten what it means to be a boy."

+ N Y Times p28 N 24 '29 320w

Reviewed by O. M. Fuller

N Y World p11m D 22 '29 100w

CROSBY, PERCY LEO. Skippy. 335p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Putnam

29-9372

Percy Crosby puts into a book the engaging small boy of his cartoons, already known to a host of friends, and thru these further adventures ready to make new ones. Illustrated with new poses of a familiar favorite.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 26 '29 130w

"Percy Crosby has made Skippy live on the printed page with as much success as he has lived in pictures—a delightful American boy. The pathos is as real as the humor." J. V. Z.

+ Churchman p17 O 5 '29 80w

"Mr. Crosby seems not to have made up his mind definitely about his hero's period or his age. He implies that Skippy is between ten and eleven and yet he presents drawings of him (he illustrated the book himself) showing a child of five or six." Ruth Sapin

+ — New Repub 61:25 N 27 '29 300w

"There is always enough variety in Skippy's peculiarly owlish point of view and his way of exploding static situations with unexpectedly dynamic actions and remarks to make the book uproariously funny at times. In fact, it is the sort of book that invariably gets read aloud, whether the innocent bystanders like it or not."

+ N Y Times p9 My 12 '29 530w

"The secret of the wide appeal of Crosby's Skippy drawings is that the artist understands boys. He knows all their moods, their thoughts, their desires and ambitions, and he knows their reactions to the sometimes unreasonable demands of their elders. And knowing all these things, he draws boys as they are." I: Anderson

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 25 '29 800w

"There are eight illustrations and 335 pages of text. Just vice versa would have been the right proportion. If Mr. Crosby can draw like that, why bother to write, too?" W. R. Brooks

Outlook 152:111 My 15 '29 100w

"The artlessness of Skippy is the most difficult art, brought off with casualness that amazes. And you can pick the book up anywhere and become highly amused. . . The conversation among the boys of the gang is one of the most delicious ingredients of the book." W: R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1089 Je 8 '29 600w

"Many and varied are the adventures recorded by Mr. Crosby of the youthful hero into whose very skin he seems to have entered, and the only point one finds to criticize in an engaging book is the 'sob stuff' element introduced with Sooky's untimely end."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p404 My 16 '29 100w

CROTHERS, RACHEL. Let us be gay. 172p $2 French

812 29-13763

A sophisticated comedy of modern life in the so-called higher reaches of society, where cocktails, witty conversation and divorce rule the day and also the night. The play, however, ends with a promise of happiness.

---

Booklist 26:62 N '29

"It is good theater, but lacks considerable of the stabbing sincerity which in her younger days Miss Crothers used to infuse into her plays, as, for instance, 'A Man's World.' She writes a little now like one trying hard to keep step with a generation she neither quite understands nor approves of." W. P. Eaton

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 O 6 '29 70w
Cleveland Open Shelf p138 N '29
Cleveland Open Shelf p155 D '29

CROWNFIELD, GERTRUDE. Joscelyn of the forts. 282p il $2 Dutton
29-10746

Joscelyn Armstrong was only a girl, but a soldier's daughter, every inch. Her father, an officer in the provincial army, was transferred from his post at Albany to the frontier Fort William Henry. On the way the party was attacked by Indians and the Armstrong family were separated, not to be re-united until sometime later in Albany. Montcalm, Abercrombie and Sir William Johnson are among the characters. The story will interest older girls.

Booklist 25:399 Jl '29

"This is an absorbing book with the same dramatic qualities that make the Leatherstocking Tales still so fascinating to youth. Excellent literary style and a feeling for character make the historic Montcalm, Monro and the Schuylers real people."
+ N Y Times p26 S 22 '29 200w
St Louis 27:291 O '29

Reviewed by R. J. Davis
Sat R of Lit 6:78 Ag 24 '29 240w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '29 100w

CROWTHER, SAMUEL. Romance and rise of the American tropics. 390p il $5 Doubleday, Doran
972.8 Central America—History. Central America—Description and travel. Central America—Relations (general) with United States. United States—Relations (general) with Central America 29-9424

The romantic history of the American tropics from the days of the Spanish conquistadores is the background for Mr Crowther's approving account of the "rise" of the tropical countries under the impetus of American industry and capital.

Booklist 25:387 Jl '29

"Mr. Crowther has written a lively account of Central American history and presented an informed and comprehensive study of present industrial and agricultural problems and possibilities."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 23 '29 200w

"The book is a valuable historical document. It is fascinating reading." Bruce Barton
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 1 '29 400w

"He hits his stride only when he reaches Minor Keith, Victor Cutten, and the United Fruit. The formation of the United Fruit Company he ranks as more important than the enunciation of the Monroe Doctrine. He is quite right." L: S. Gannett
+ Nation 129:175 Ag 14 '29 360w

"In view of this clear and rapid résumé of Central-American affairs, one is willing to forgive the occasional errors of fact and the outrageously partisan account of the annexation by the United States of the Canal Zone. A long series of splendid photographs compensates the reader for the absence of an accurate map." W: McFee
+ — New Repub 59:106 Je 12 '29 400w
N Y Evening Post p6m Je 22 '29 80w

"By showing us how badly, even though how picturesquely, things have generally been done in the past in Central America, he desires to reconcile us, and more than reconcile us, to the way they are being done, largely by our own countrymen, at the present moment."
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 21 '29 780w

"There is 'romance' in the American tropics, but you will get little of it from this tritely written book. 'Rise' is a different matter. A strong-going industrial imperialist writes here of the 'reconquest and rebuilding' of the ancient Spanish empire by American capital. The background of Spanish conquest and settlement is competently given, although there are some evidences of prejudice, probably due to lack of complete knowledge. . . This book will please those who read only for information and who are not averse to propaganda."
Outlook 151:626 Ap 17 '29 110w
Pratt p32 autumn '29

"Mr. Crowther spreads the butter too thick. He has laid it on not with a trowel or even with a spade, but with a steam shovel. . . Yet the book is full of incontrovertible facts—quite as full of them as the annual report of any progressive corporation, and quite as oblivious of the depths of truth that must lie beneath all facts. Anyone who has known intimately the United Fruit Company and its work will read this voluminous publicity with disappointment and irritation. Anyone who has not so known it will read it with his tongue in his cheek." Gerald Chittenden
— Sat R of Lit 6:346 N 2 '29 370w
Springf'd Republican p6 Je 3 '29 560w

CROY, HOMER. Coney Island. 294p $2 Harper
29-19022

The sound and color of cheap amusements, the freaks, and the hot-dogs of Coney Island intermingle in this story. Chic Cotton, young inventor, has come to New York with an idea for a giant top amusement, which Zimmerman, the czar of Coney Island, contracts to construct for him. Queenie, the tight-rope walker, falls in love with Chic. He finds himself engaged to her, and at the same time betrothed to Charmian De Ford, a girl of culture and refinement. But an accident happens at the tryout of the giant top, Chic gives Queenie up to Zimmerman, and turns with a free conscience to new inventions, and to Charmian.

Booklist 26:118 D '29

"Mr. Croy has an infectious sympathy for youth establishing an acquaintanceship with life, and there is a sweetness and honesty in his handling of the lad's sex curiosities and their satisfaction that make 'Coney Island' an exceptional book. For the rest, it's a well plotted light novel, written with competence and good humor."
+ Books (N Y Herald Trbune) p19 O 27 '29 300w

"The cross-section of Coney Island with its excursions into the private lives of many of the freaks of the side-shows seems fairly accurate in its estimate, but the story itself is trivial."
— Boston Transcript p3 O 19 '29 200w

"We are never allowed to draw our own inferences; they are drawn for us and our minds are made up for us long before we have a chance to do it ourselves. But in spite of this, the book is not without its moments of suspense, and to those for whom the carnival has always a fascination (and there are many) it will be a treasure house of 'freaks.'"
— + N Y Times p7 O 6 '29 450w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 20 '29 210w

CROY, MAE BELLE (SAVELL) (MRS HOMER CROY). How women can make money. 290p $2 (8s 6d) Funk
396.5 Woman—Occupations 28-29337

"Believing that there is no money in canvassing or in making candy and baked-stuffs, Mrs. Croy suggests many up-to-date ideas, such as opportunities in radio, current events discussions, and nature walks for children. Suggestive and practical for both city and small town women. Emphasizes making use of the resources of the public library."—Cleveland Open Shelf

Boston Transcript p4 D 15 '28 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p84 Je '29
Pratt p10 spring '29
St Louis 27:12 Ja '29

CROY, M. B.—Continued

"This book is a guide, full of practical ways to earn money. For any one who has to work—or wants to work—and doesn't know what to do about it, such a volume from an experienced hand, presents real values."

+ Survey 62:381 Je 15 '29 100w

CRUM, WILLIAM LEONARD. Corporate earning power. (Stanford business ser.) 342p $5 Stanford univ. press

338.7 Corporations 29-11908

"From Statistics of Income issued annually from 1916 to 1926 by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue the author has analyzed the net profits of different lines of industry. He has made a careful time study of the variations in profit in each line and also a study of the relative earning power of different lines at the same time (1926)."—Ann Am Acad

---

"The author has been successful in accomplishing what he set out to do with the information at hand. For an investigation on this subject the exposition is unusually clear and simple. The appeal of this book is widened because of the fact that, although the author is a statistician of high repute, the reader does not have to be an expert statistician to gain much of value from it. In this book there is not a single formula, equation, correlation, logarithm, or any least squares." C: S. Tippetts

+ Am Econ R 19:685 D '29 1300w

"Professor Crum writes a statistical treatise that a layman can understand. Even the charts and graphs are easily grasped. It should be helpful to corporate executives who want to know how their businesses compare with the average in the line of industry in which they are engaged." A. S. Keister

+ Ann Am Acad 146:273 N '29 380w

Boston Transcript p4 Je 22 '29 180w

CRUMP, IRVING. Boys' book of coast guards. 258p il $2 Dodd

614.8 United States.Coast guard 28-30676

The author of a series of similar books for boys writes of the life and duties of the coast guardsmen and describes many of their exploits. Illustrated from news photos.

---

Booklist 25:325 My '29

"A fine portrayal of the job it is to watch over the sea, its wrecks, its ice-bergs, its terrors. The book covers a good amount of factual information without becoming bookishly overweight." M. G. Bonner

+ N Y Times p28 D 16 '28 50w

St Louis 27:102 Mr '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:77 F '29

CUDAHY, JOHN. Mañanaland; adventuring with camera and rifle through California in Mexico. 250p il $3 Duffield

917.22 California, Lower—Description and travel. Hunting—California, Lower 28-28399

In describing his hunting adventures in Lower California the author has pictured a little known region and the big game he found there.

---

"This narrative of roughing it in Lower California gives the reader a vivid impression of a region which has received little attention from the traveler."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 Ja 27 '29 130w

"This book is written from the heart of a sensitive sportsman. It has a shy, pleasing sense of humor."

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 22 '28 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p71 My '29

Reviewed by C: J. Finger

N Y World p11m D 9 '28 260w

CULLEN, COUNTEE. Black Christ, and other poems. 110p il $2 Harper [5s Putnam]

811 29-24220

The title poem, "The Black Christ," is a narrative which tells the story of a young Negro, Jim, who was lynched for the sin of another man and who, Christ-like, dies and re-lives after death. The volume also contains several of Mr Cullen's recent lyrics.

---

Boston Transcript p2 D 31 '29 420w

Reviewed by W: Plomer

Nation and Ath 46:sup380 D 7 '29 40w

Reviewed by Vincent McHugh

N Y Evening Post p13m D 14 '29 180w

" 'The Black Christ' could have been written by none other than a negro with the sadness and the nobility of his race deeply ingrained in him. In the simplicity of his verse there is enmeshed more of significance and beauty than will be found for many a day. The volume is rendered additionally attractive by the decoration of Charles Cullen." P. H.

+ N Y Times p7 D 1 '29 560w

"Though the lyrics in Countee Cullen's new book do not display any technical advance over his previous work, and though they do betray an uncertainty of tone and mood that has not been observable hitherto, the volume is made notable by its title poem, 'The Black Christ.' Beauty of imagery, vigor of line and intensity of mood are sustained throughout a poem of considerable length." Granville Hicks

+ — N Y World p10m N 24 '29 100w

Reviewed by L. T. Nicholl

Outlook 153:509 N 27 '29 50w

"In his latest volume the tension between the primitive and the self-conscious has ceased, in all but the narrative poem entitled 'The Black Christ,' to be creative. Possibly the fact that these poems have been written during a year spent in Europe explains the aggravated self-consciousness with its accompanying disillusionment which characterizes them. The subject of 'The Black Christ' is the lynching of a negro. And if at times Mr. Cullen fails to raise it above melodrama to a really tragic level, his whole being is sufficiently possessed by it to reduce to its proper subordinate place the self-conscious intellect that sterilizes his verse elsewhere. Here, in short, he recovers the tension and dramatizes the conflict between the primitive in him and in his race and the self-conscious white man, from which all his best poetry has derived."

Times [London] Lit Sup p948 N 21 '29 520w

CULLUM, RIDGWELL. Tiger of Cloud river. 313p $2 Lippincott [7s 6d Cassell]

29-13366

Two days before his marriage to Julie, Peter Lamport, giant lumberman, is shanghaied aboard a whaler cruising north for two years. Julie's son grows up hating the man who, as he thinks, deserted his mother, and vowing vengeance when they meet. When that happens Lamport is a millionaire lumberman called The Tiger of Cloud River. He has changed his name, and his son, unknowing, goes to work for him.

---

"Mr. Cullum enlivens his somber tale with plenty of forest scenery and subsidiary action of the vigorous sort, with a happy ending foreshadowed for the nameless child, now rich and beloved by Peggy Adair." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 26 '29 100w

"When one says the plot and characters show little originality of conception or of treatment, one has not necessarily condemned the book as commonplace. It is a good story, even if one does feel sure in advance of the sequence of events; even if the villain is uncompromisingly bad and the heroine unsurpassingly beautiful."

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Je 15 '29 250w

"The style of the writing is simple and unpretentious. There is an easy and unnoticeable flow of words something like the quiet sweep of the felled pines, down the river, past Big Bend."

+ New Statesman 33:316 Je 15 '29 180w
Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 7 '29 200w
Times [London] Lit Sup p422 My 23 '29 200w

CUNNINGHAM, JOSEPH THOMAS. Modern biology; a review of the principal phenomena of animal life in relation to modern concepts and theories. 244p $3 Dutton

570 Biology

A summary and criticism of many of the theories advanced by modern biologists and a statement of the author's disagreements with the theorists.

---

Boston Transcript p3 Je 29 '29 550w

"That the modern fashions of biochemistry and genetical study have resulted in most valuable contributions to that rather incoherent mass of knowledge which we call biology will be denied by no one; that these methods have severe limitations is not perhaps so clearly realised. Mr. Cunningham, whose marked independence of mind is known and valued, has in this book applied a keen logical intelligence to the theories and concepts arising out of these new disciplines, and has brought out some of their obvious limitations." E. S. R.

+ Nature 122:566 O 13 '28 900w

"Although the presentation of an unorthodox viewpoint is always stimulating to the specialist, it usually makes confusion worse confounded for the layman. Accordingly the present volume is not for the latter who necessarily cannot be in a position to evaluate the material Dr. Cunningham presents in opposition to the consensus of modern biological opinion."

Sat R of Lit 6:64 Ag 17 '29 150w

"It is difficult in a review to do justice to a book of this sort, which rambles into many subjects, and Mr. Cunningham's occasional confusion of thought does not make it easier. He has evidently not fully grasped the inwardness of heterogony, nor of the mutation and selection theories, and he sometimes misapprehends the work of others, notably of Weldon, Crew, and Goodrich." Eldon Moore

— Spec 141:337 S 15 '28 1100w

"Mr. Cunningham's book is wholesome reading for some contemporary writers who mistake confident assertion for proof, and the general reader will find it instructive and stimulating."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p550 Jl 26 '28 1200w

CUNNINGHAM, LOUIS ARTHUR. This thing called love. 311p $2.50 Carrier

"The work, apparently, of a Canadian author; the small city that is the background for the action is very much like Saint John, New Brunswick. Mr. Cunningham is trying to prove that love is mysterious, indefinable, and capricious. The novel tells of a good woman and a bad woman and how one man was terribly bothered about what each one meant in his life."—Sat R of Lit

---

Boston Transcript p2 Je 26 '29 550w

"The author's prose is plastic and frequently graceful. His reach for the unusual phrase sometimes overbalances him." R. C. B. B.

N Y Evening Post p7m S 28 '29 220w

"This novel is inept, confused, and often grotesquely unskilful. . . The mental and emotional disturbances suffered by this man appear to us inconclusive and very much of the 'what of it?' school."

— Sat R of Lit 6:83 Ag 24 '29 80w

CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM, ROBERT BONTINE. Thirty tales & sketches; sel. by Edward Garnett. 354p $3 Viking press [8s 6d Duckworth]

29-19240

The settings of these essays and stories, written between 1899 and 1927, vary greatly: Germany, France, the pampas of Paraguay, the coast of Africa, Mexico, Spain and many other countries contribute to the color and subject matter of the famous traveller and adventurer who writes them. Among the short stories included are The gold fish, Higginson's dream, Signalled, and Un monsieur.

---

Booklist 26:119 D '29

"The author is an individualist who has travelled in all the strange corners of the world and something of their magic permeates his writing. His style is admirable for its clarity and dignity. He writes of places and people with sympathetic insight. But it is not only for his art and his style that the book is valuable. Better than that, one meets here a rare personality. He hates civilization and its cant with a strong bitterness. He valiantly supports lost causes and the helpless. . . His vitality has passed into his book and the book lives. One more individualist has defeated time, space, and death."

+ Bookm 70:xxvi D '29 180w

"As a miscellany revealing the spirit, the life and the literary skill of an artist in life and words, this volume is of great importance."

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 11 '29 580w

New Statesman 33:790 O 5 '29 200w

"Cunninghame Graham is one of the very few romantic figures remaining in twentieth-century English letters. His sense of color is precise as it is lavish, his eye for detail is astonishing, his romantically tragic conception of life is persuasive. But, above all, his prose is magnificent." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y Evening Post p6m S 21 '29 350w

"Scattered through this volume are the observations of a fascinating and original man." Edwin Clark

N Y Times p2 O 6 '29 1600w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 153:351 O 30 '29 40w

"It is the glory of Graham that for him nothing of the real is dull or tame. Nor does he make his pages the safety valve for ill-humors, if indeed he has any, which I doubt. No man can be that way who moves in a world of live ideas. Graham, who has walked with kings and princes, with common men too, sees nothing as scornful except men who are not sincere. Gifted with great vitality, rich with infinite delicacy, endowed with a wide and clear vision and filled with intention, he sees life as a pageant in which he must take an active part." C: J. Finger

+ Sat R of Lit 6:177 S 28 '29 1250w

CUPPY, WILLIAM JACOB. How to be a hermit; or, A bachelor keeps house. 328p $2.50 Liveright

817 29-20414

Humorous sketches by a bachelor who has lived for some years in a shack on "Jones's Island," off Long Island. The author includes essays on how to have a resplendent kitchen, clam chowder, the feast of the bean, and other housewifely hints to prospective modern hermits.

---

"Mr. Cuppy's style, if such it may be called, is a weird mixture of prose-poetry, purple patches, erudite phrases, Jones's Island argot and Burke's 'Speech on Conciliation,' reminiscent in spots of some of the leading humorists of the day—but the best ones, Mr. Cuppy may retort. The truth is that the author achieves real eloquence at times, notably in his defense of the sardine; indeed, with the energy he has devoted to the sardine and condensed milk sandwiches he might have written something more serious." Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 S 29 '29 1000w

CUPPY, W: J.—Continued

"Mr. Cuppy is honest in his statements, or else it would soon happen that all available islands would be denuded of clams by hungry hermits. Despite all his verbosity, Mr. Cuppy presents some readable details."

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 9 '29 250w

"Once in a while a really funny book happens, one that pleases even those who don't like funny books. 'How to Be a Hermit,' is this year's blessing." F. B.

+ Chicago Daily Tribune p14 D 21 '29 230w

N Y Times p15 D 29 '29 300w

"Cuppy's book has humor, an engaging style in the first person singular, and no end of information about the life of a man of literary attainments on Jones's Island." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p15 N 18 '29 520w

"These papers are guaranteed to tickle any one who is at all ticklish. Mr. Cuppy claims to be the nermit of Jonezez Island where he associates exclusively with clams and coast-guards."

+ Outlook 153:189 O 2 '29 90w

"It is a clever book. It is the first time a Hay Fever addict ever laughed at his own affliction . . . and if he has found a cure, or a relief, who can blame him?"

+ Portland Evening News p10 O 15 '29 220w

— + Sat R of Lit 6:486 N 30 '29 200w

Springf'd Republican p6e D 15 '29 200w

CURLE, RICHARD. Last twelve years of Joseph Conrad. 212p il $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [10s 6d S. Low]

B or 92 Conrad, Joseph 28-25387

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:161 Ja '29

"It is frankly hero-worship. It leaves the impression that if Conrad had had a really unpleasant side Curle would not have permitted himself to see it; much less put it down in damning black and white. Yet, considered as boswelling, it is honest and careful, picturing vividly the working Conrad, illuminating and reflecting his opinions and his manner of life." A. B. Maurice

+ — Bookm 68:594 Ja '29 180w

"It is a friendly, warm, and admiring portrait, full of interest and appeal, and ending with a poignant chapter Mr. Curle alone was in a position to have written—a description of Conrad's last day."

+ Nation and Ath 44:449 D 22 '28 380w

Pratt p36 summer '29

St Louis 27:29 Ja '29

"In the letters Mr. Garnett has brought together, we have the story of Conrad's difficulties and despondencies over his first novels until he came out triumphant. The letters to Mr. Curle, some of them brief notes and all of them of less importance, show Conrad's friendship for a younger writer during the last twelve years of the novelist's life. Mr. Curle saw Conrad in his many moods and was with him on his last day, which he has described in words that will become classical." Wilbur Cross

Yale R n s 18:583 spring '29 90w

CURTIS, LEWIS PERRY. Politicks of Laurence Sterne. 139p $3 (10s) Oxford

B or 92 Sterne, Laurence. York, England—Politics and government [29-14681]

It has been discovered that Sterne's first published writings were political articles in support of the Whigs written for the York Gazetteer in 1741. The author of this monograph shows how the political career of Sterne "threw light upon his abilities as a political writer and controversialist, upon his literary taste, and lastly and chiefly upon his character."

"The discoveries of Mr. Curtis would have been most usefully presented in a pamphlet with notes; but his enthusiasm carried him past that form into a book, which duly suffers from redundancy. . . . Sometimes ornamental, conjectural writing, and sometimes over-elaborate registration of uninspiring facts, prevent Mr. Curtis's volume from being as congenial as it might be; it could scarcely have been prepared with greater zeal for a dry subject." E. B.

— + Nation and Ath 45:164 My 4 '29 620w

"Mr. Curtis's book, which is a careful piece of work, but rather confused in arrangement and not always logical in argument, is no more than a minor footnote, whether to history or to biography."

— + New Statesman 33:156 My 11 '29 650w

"Mr. Curtis has refurbished a dim chapter of Sterne's life. He has turned his new material into a lively and charming recital."

+ N Y Times p14 D 29 '29 700w

"An extraordinary book. Literary interpretation as well as biographical humanity is involved. The scholar spreads his nets for anything that may be bearing on the matter. He turns his searchlight here on the city of York in the year 1741. . . . Under the searchlight a group of long forgotten people leap out of their peaceful oblivion, and reenact their quarrels, ambitions, and heartburnings."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:140 S 14 '29 330w

"Mr. Curtis has made a really valuable addition to Sterne's biography."

+ Spec 142:623 Ap 20 '29 100w

"In spite of the small intrinsic value of Sterne's political writings, Mr. Curtis's discovery is interesting and deserves recognition, and would deserve it even more had he worked it up in a more satisfactory manner. But his literary style lacks quality, his language is awkward (and sometimes even inaccurate), his judgment often at fault."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p253 Mr 28 '29 1250w

"Mr. Curtis has restored, for the most part accurately, a lost chapter in the career of Laurence Sterne." Wilbur Cross

Yale R n s 19:181 autumn '29 460w

CURTIS, ROY EMERSON. Economics; principles and interpretation. 879p $4.50 Shaw, A.W.

330 Economics 28-21432

"Designed as an introductory text in economics, but for more mature students. The author has given a rather complete description of our economic life, in which business organization, its technical aspects and fundamental economic institutions are dealt with somewhat in detail. In addition, there is a very scholarly presentation of economic principles."—Ann Am Acad

"There is less of clear definition of terms than many teachers will wish for, and the style seems somewhat heavy and labored. Yet it may well be that it will prove a teachable text, for much of the material is excellent, and the style will not give students any false notions as to the simplicity of economic questions." J: Ise

— + Am Econ R 19:95 Mr '29 150w

"This text seems too advanced for Freshman courses, but it will fill a real need of courses in general economics for more advanced students who are beginning the study of economics in later years. There are none of the usual pedagogical devices, such as topics for discussion and lists of collateral reading." S. H. Patterson

Ann Am Acad 142:456 Mr '29 130w

"Such topics as production, consumption, marketing and prices, money and credit, finance, commerce, risk, distribution and personnel, are discussed by an expert who, while careful to present all the pertinent 'facts,' is equally careful while presenting them that economics shall not stand out once more as 'the dismal science.'" E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 3 '28 480w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 34:11 F '29

St Louis 27:9 Ja '29

CURWOOD, JAMES OLIVER. Crippled lady of Peribonka. 251p il $2 Doubleday, Doran 29-1808

The story of a great love, discovered by a tragic accident. Staged in the Maria Chapdelaine country.

Booklist 25:247 Mr '29

"Frankly, this is a bit too much. If one may hazard a guess as to the emotions of the author, they were primarily those of confidence in the 'sure-fire' nature of his plot. The behavior of his chief characters—like their adventures—is so incredible as to forfeit one's sympathy."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 24 '29 180w

N Y Times p8 Ja 13 '29 450w

"The narrative is loose-jointed and far from perfectly proportioned. Only the most ingenuous readers will be satisfied by the progress of the action and by the development of the characters; most of us will feel that we are reading the rough outline of a work in progress."

— Sat R of Lit 5:715 F 23 '29 250w

CUSANUS, NICOLAUS. See Nicolaus Cusanus.

CUSHING, HARVEY WILLIAMS. Consecratio medici, and other papers. 276p $2.50 Little

610.4 Medicine—Addresses, essays, lectures 28-29214

These papers and addresses, delivered before medical gatherings and graduating classes of medical colleges, reflect various aspects of medical work and render tribute to certain outstanding personalities in the medical world. As a whole they constitute an inspiring message both to and from the profession which Dr Cushing adorns.

+ Booklist 25:236 Mr '29

"These fourteen essays form a far more excellent orientation on what he himself calls The Greater Medicine than most systematic volumes on the subject. Especially valuable are the chapter on 'Re-alignments in Greater Medicine'; the three historical reviews on Jefferson Medical College, McGill and The Western Reserve; and the memorials to Sir William Osler and to Lister."

+ Bookm 68:xi Ja '29 120w

Reviewed by Logan Clendening

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 F 24 '29 430w

Reviewed by F. P. Hill

Boston Transcript p2 N 17 '28 1550w

"As a writer, Dr. Harvey Cushing is distinguished first for his authoritative biography of Sir William Osler, the English physician. In that book, Dr. Cushing proved himself an exceptionally able biographer, and he now supplements it with a volume of papers to which he gives the appropriate Latin title of 'Consecratio Medici.' It is a book about matters pertaining to medicine and surgery, but it is by no means technical, and it is addressed to the general reader who desires to broaden his understanding and knowledge of those subjects." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 1 '28 300w

St Louis 27:128 Ap '29

"The fourteen papers cover a period of twenty years' literary effort snatched from the busy days and nights of a surgeon's life. Dr. Cushing stands at the head of his profession, not only in America, but in the world, as a neurological surgeon. . . The present book deals largely with his avocations, medical history, and medical education." H: R. Viets, M.D.

+ Sat R of Lit 5:876 Ap 13 '29 400w

"Truly this is a collection inspiring and informative of one who is to be grouped with the greatest of his peers and predecessors. A rare treat from the golden bowl of a rich and warm nature." S. E. Jelliffe, M.D.

+ Survey 61:813 Mr 15 '29 380w

CUST, NINA (MRS HENRY CUST). Wanderers; episodes from the travels of Lady Emmeline Stuart Wortley and her daughter Victoria, 1849-1855; with a preface by Sir Ronald Storrs. 364p $4 Coward-McCann [12s 6d J. Cape]

910 Voyages and travels [29-4700]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"The main interest of the American reader probably will be in the keen observations made on our means of travel, our thriving cities and our ways of life in those spacious days of national youth. . . And there are, of course, the equally entertaining narratives of journeys in Spain and Syria for those who wish to follow a genuine traveler back to the old world. It is a book worth reading for pleasure or for information." Avery Craven

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 3 '29 850w

"It is skillfully done, and as both Lady Emmeline and her daughter were well endowed with intellectual curiosity and so were constantly poking into every inviting opportunity that came their way . . . the story she has made out of all this material forms an unusual and very entertaining travel book. It has special value and interest, too, for its vivid pictures of conditions, manners and customs in the lands visited."

+ N Y Times p10 F 24 '29 440w

St Louis 27:58 F '29

Sat R of Lit 5:819 Mr 23 '29 250w

CUTHBERT, FATHER (LAWRENCE CUTHBERT HESS). The Capuchins; a contribution to the history of the counter-reformation. 2v 475p il $6 Longmans [15s Sheed &W.]

271.36 Capuchins

"Father Cuthbert has devoted two scholarly and well-documented volumes to the history of the Capuchins. Starting with the 'call' to the Franciscan Observant Fra Matteo in the year 1525, he shows how the Order came into being as an integral element in that internal reformation by which the Church of Rome strove to reinstate itself in Italy and Europe. In his second volume he describes the evangelical work of the Order in France, Savoy, and Germany, and his concluding chapters depict the missionary and literary enterprises of the Capuchins." —Times [London] Lit Sup

"A clear and comprehensive account of the growth and principal activities of the order during the first two centuries of its existence, an account based largely on original sources, yet showing a thorough knowledge of the secondary material, and written with the accuracy demanded by modern scholarship. It is an illuminating book. In recounting the services of the Capuchins to church and people, it tells us much that is not generally known, and more that is not generally realized. It is unfortunate that there is no bibliography, which would have been useful in bringing together in one list the numerous monographs on the history of the order cited throughout the book." W. K. Ferguson

+ Am Hist R 34:818 Jl '29 850w

"This history of the order by the eminent English Capuchin, Father Cuthbert, is beautifully done, solidly based upon an unobtrusive scholarship and marked by a simplicity which shows that it is by no external accident that Father Cuthbert wears the habit of the saint of Assisi." W: L. Sullivan

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 Ap 28 '29 450w

"Father Cuthbert has given an accurate, scholarly and most interesting account of the place of his Order in the history of the development of the church and of the civilization of which it is so component a part. The volumes are well documented and there is also an appendix containing interesting extracts from the earliest accounts of the history and of the doctrines of the Order." G. R. B. R.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 23 '29 750w

CUTHBERT, FATHER—Continued

"Of the way in which the author has done his work we cannot speak too highly, nor of his knowledge of the widely scattered literature of his subject, which includes not only the publications of members of his Order but those bearing on it as part of the general history of the sixteenth and seventeenth century. The work is amply documented and full references are given."

+ Sat R 147:546 Ap 20 '29 180w

"Learned and most delightful book." Evelyn Underhill

+ Spec 142:90 Ja 19 '29 730w

"Scholarly and well-documented volumes. On controversial topics Father Cuthbert observes an attitude of moderation."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p4 Ja 3 '29 470w

CUTHRELL, MRS FAITH (BALDWIN). Garden oats. 282p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Low]

29-5411

Peter and Dolores have advanced theories of marriage but their theories do not stand the test, and when Dolores insists on getting a job the couple separate. After a few vicissitudes and experiments with others, the story brings the two together again, converts to the old fashion in marriage.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p36 Ap 14 '29 230w

" 'Garden Oats' not only is a case history from Judge Ben Lindsey's experience, but it sounds like one. It is told with all the sympathy of Lindsey's own recitals, and with more than his quota of sentiment, if such is possible. The peculiar part is, if the characters had not been reading so much of this same judge they would not have started off on the adventure of love as they did."

N Y Times p28 Mr 17 '29 500w

N Y World p11m Ap 21 '29 120w

Wis Lib Bul 25:161 My '29

CUTHRELL, MRS FAITH (BALDWIN). Incredible year. 298p $2 Dodd

29-18412

Julie Montgomery, brought up by her father in the North Woods, is suddenly transported at twenty to a year in New York society among the younger generation. She tries to re-make herself to conform to the flapper type that she meets, thereby thinking to win Bruce Stepney, the man with whom she has fallen in love. But Bruce prefers her original, North Woods self.

---

Booklist 26:118 D '29

Bookm 70:xxx N '29 80w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 S 15 '29 250w

N Y Times p6 S 22 '29 480w

"The book is exceedingly well written." G. A. Wing

+ Portland Evening News p13 S 17 '29 280w

D

D., H., pseud. See Aldington, H.

D'ABERNON, EDGAR VINCENT, 1st viscount. Diary of an ambassador; with historical notes by Maurice Alfred Gerothwohl; v 1, Versailles to Rapallo, 1920-1922 (Eng title Ambassador of peace). 335p $5 Doubleday, Doran [21s Hodder & S.]

B or 92 Germany—Foreign relations. Europe—Politics. Germany—Economic Conditions

29-9279

Lord D'Abernon was the first British ambassador to Germany after the war. He had much to do with creating the conciliatory attitude that made Locarno possible. This section of his diary from 1920-1922 is a running commentary on events and personalities, and contains by way of introduction an analysis of the German national character, and sketches of political leaders of England, France and Germany.

---

"D'Abernon's story is told with clarity and fairness; it is frequently enlivened with a rare humor; he has not forgotten the remark of the foreign critic, apparently inspired by Landseer, who likened Curzon and Lloyd George to Dignity and Impudence." L. B. Packard

+ Am Hist R 35:361 Ja '30 500w

Booklist 26:28 O '29

"While the random notes will be of value to the historian, the most important and brilliant part of the book is the essay on German character." R. L. Buell

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Je 2 '29 380w

"The Diary is apparently not doctored for purposes of publication. It appears genuine in all respects. It is well written and of obvious import. Viscount D'Abernon has performed a service to history, and, indeed, to mankind, for the generous and truthful manner in which he has revealed the essence of his knowledge." A. S. R.

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 18 '29 680w

"Viscount d'Abernon's diary, of which this is the first of three instalments, promises to be a work of considerable importance for the history of post-war Europe."

+ Nation 128:623 My 22 '29 180w

Nation and Ath 44:655 F 9 '29 880w

"His book is not very exciting, for it is so full of dry details about the various negotiations concerning Reparations; but it is a good book. It gives a picture of Berlin and of the desperate efforts of successive German governments to find reasonable terms of agreement with the Allies, such as no other man could have drawn. . . It is a historical document of great importance. Lord d'Abernon was one of those who really influenced events during the worst excesses of the post-war attack upon Germany."

+ New Statesman 32:499 Ja 26 '29 1700w

"An unusual keenness and clarity of analysis, a brilliance of intuition in appraisal of human beings—a brilliance leavened with the British aristocrat's inherent distrust of 'abnormal' brilliance, and a superb bred-in-the-bone dignity lift the book above the level of the usual diplomatist's diary and give it the attributes of permanent history." Percy Winner

+ N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 30 '29 900w

"Lord D'Abernon has given us a book of highly unusual quality—shrewd, detached, full of humor and vivid detail and brilliantly written. Its distinction reflects that of its author." Allan Nevins

+ N Y World p10m Ap 14 '29 1500w

"Not only has he set down the facts and his conclusions in a manner that for detachment and humour could hardly be surpassed, but he has put us still more in his debt by some brilliant character-sketches of the chief players and an introductory survey which is a masterly analysis both of the German character and of the whole European economic situation. . . This is not merely a good book—it is a great book."

+ Spec 142:128 Ja 26 '29 1050w

Spec 142:1015 Je 29 '29 80w

"Not a formal history, it is invaluable as giving a human touch and personal insight into the motives and actions by which behind the scenes the chief participants were influenced. Instead of the dead record we have the living drama."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p71 Ja 31 '29 1100w

DAGGETT, STUART. Principles of inland transportation. 705p il $4 Harper

380 Transportation—United States. Railroads—United States. Inland navigation. Railroad law

28-17256

"The several phases of transportation other than ocean shipping are discussed in this volume by Professor Daggett. The book includes a wide range of subjects. . . The strongest feature of the book is the discussion of the railway policies of Great Britain, France and Germany. These chapters on foreign countries are the best that have been written upon their respective subjects. . . In general the subject matter of Dr. Daggett's book is like that of previous books upon transportation, 40 per cent of the space being devoted to legislation and government policies."—Ann Am Acad

"Professor Daggett makes a distinctive contribution to the general literature on transportation. He has broken away from the pattern of older books, in a book that is original and refreshing. . . Notwithstanding [some] omissions this text will become a standard work in its field." D. P. Locklin

+ Am Econ R 19:116 Mr '29 900w

"A strong feature of the book is that it is clearly and interestingly written. The pleasing style of the author, however, is somewhat impaired by a tendency at times to set forth the elementary and obvious. . . The best part of the volume is that dealing with legislation and government policies. . . The volume is strengthened by numerous line maps and diagrams, and by excellent chapter bibliographies. It is a book that will be carefully read and appreciated by all students of transportation." E. R. Johnson

+ — Ann Am Acad 141:271 Ja '29 530w

"Where the author discusses controversial subjects he never fails to set forth fully both sides to the controversy. One of the many features which appeals to the teacher of transportation subjects is the free use made of maps and diagrams. The author has succeeded in drawing attention 'both to the facilities which traffic uses and to the flow of traffic which carriers are organized to promote, as well as to the more traditional and publicly contentious questions with which legislators have been concerned.' An eminently satisfactory book for an introductory course in transportation." H: R. Trumbower

+ J Pol Econ 37:370 Je '29 500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:617 D '28

Wis Lib Bul 25:273 Jl '29

DAGLISH, ERIC FITCH. Animals in black and white. 2v v 1, The larger beasts; v 2, The smaller beasts. 47;47p il ea $1.25 Morrow [ea 2s 6d Dent]

590 Zoology—Juvenile literature. Animal pictures 28-26858

"Each book contains over twenty full-page woodcut illustrations facing a page of simple descriptive and informative text. The pictures are at once naturalistic and decorative. Excellent paper and print; board binding, light in color."—Booklist

Booklist 25:127 D '28

"Children will, I think, enjoy them and librarians will find effective representation of many a beast for which they have searched other books in vain." A. C. Moore

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 S 23 '28 480w

"The writing in these books is meticulous in its natural history accuracy and is presented with a nice economy for the essentials. The beasts are treated with dignified, intelligent comment—something beasts do not always receive, and the pictures are really quite thrilling." M. G. Bonner

+ N Y Times p40 D 2 '28 140w

"The child brought up on a book like this has a head start in esthetics; the eye cannot continually come to rest upon such line and mass without taking in a sense of rightness." M. L. Becker

+ Outlook 150:1334 D 12 '28 80w

St Louis 27:33 Ja '29

"It is doubtful if his many sided abilities have ever showed to better advantage. The text is admirably simple and accurate and Mr. Daglish deserves special credit for striking the right note without slipping into the easy vice of 'writing down' to his audience."

+ Sat R 146:776 D 8 '28 560w

"It is striking, but is it art for children? It seems to me that even crude colors would be preferable for children's books." W: Beebe

Sat R of Lit 5:482 D 8 '28 130w

DAHL, JOSEPH OLIVER. Selling public hospitality; a handbook of advertising and publicity for hotels, restaurants and apartment houses. 357p il $6 Harper

647.94 Hotels, restaurants, etc.—Management. Advertising—Hotels, restaurants, etc. 29-5236

This handbook of advertising and publicity for hotels, restaurants and apartment houses is in reality a notebook filled with ideas, advertising copy and layout, quotations from hotel magazines, etc.

"Sensible, up-to-date discussions and practical suggestions based on the successful experience of establishments all over the country, here brought together by one of the best-known and highly-esteemed editors and writers in the restaurant and hotel world."

+ J Home Econ 21:370 My '29 50w

Wis Lib Bul 25:273 Jl '29

DAINGERFIELD, FOXHALL. Linden walk tragedy. 250p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

29-3973

When he came back from the war Dick Warrington found little to do in his home town, so he joined the police force. That accounted for the fact that a potential lawyer was on the spot when the first Linden walk murder was committed, and that he helped to solve the mystery.

"Mr. Daingerfield has the faculty of making his stories human. The plots are logical, nothing is left to coincidence, and the reader from first to last is borne along on the course of a quickly flowing narrative."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 30 '29 350w

"There is the making of a very pretty problem here, and that is the first requisite of a good detective story. The second is a reasonable solution, and it is there that Mr. Daingerfield falls down, as so many writers of detective fiction have done before him."

— + N Y Times p20 Ap 7 '29 200w

"Mr Daingerfield has done better in preceding books, but his latest is by no means feeble entertainment."

+ — N Y World p11m Mr 10 '29 120w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 151:274 F 13 '29 90w

Sat R of Lit 5:961 Ap 27 '29 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p262 Mr 28 '29 100w

DAKIN, EDWIN FRANDEN. Mrs Eddy; the biography of a virginal mind. 553p $5 (21s) Scribner

B or 92 Eddy, Mrs Mary (Baker). Christian science 29-18309

A very complete and detailed account of Mrs Eddy's amazing career and of the development of Christian science. To her biographer Mrs Eddy is neither saint nor humbug but a woman whose human significance comes from her "impassioned urge for life and self-expression." A ten-page bibliography is included.

Booklist 26:66 N '29

"The subject is irresistible and the decency of the author's attitude, his fine judgment, his poise and his common sense make his work entirely praiseworthy. And not with the suggestion of faint praise which that word carries." Gilbert Seldes

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ag 25 '29 1450w

DAKIN, E. F.—Continued

"The author is quite just to his subject, rather inclined to explain and excuse than to criticize. He is convinced of the sincerity and intensity of Mrs. Eddy's beliefs, the genesis and growth of which he traces with a masterhand. . . This biography of Mrs. Eddy, undoubtedly the fullest and perhaps the fairest of all, is probably destined to become the standard work on this subject for all but the members of her cult." A. M. B.

+ Cath World 130:367 D '29 900w

"Mr. Dakin's book as biography is realistic. There is in it no fantasy and no romancing. He does not speculate, . . Partisanship cannot be charged to Mr. Dakin. His is a book written wholly without the intrusion of his personality into the question. If he errs at all it is only on the side of Mrs. Eddy, in those closing pages, in which he describes the visit of the commission to Pleasant View to decide whether her mind was failing. It is a touching account of a gallant old lady, tired to death, captured by the thing she herself had created. Whether you are a Christian Scientist or the blackest infidel you will, I think, find this a book far more fascinating than any book of fiction published this year or even perhaps in a good many past years." L: Bromfield

+ Chicago Daily Tribune p18 D 14 '29 700w

"Mr. Dakin's biography is a monumental work, exhaustively documented and equipped with all possible scholarly apparatus by which the diligent student may confirm or correct his conclusions. The reader who wishes to challenge his judgments or to form an independent estimate of the character of the Leader, will find here a complete guide to the available source materials." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 46:1119 S 11 '29 1200w

"Whatever we may think of Christian Science, Mrs. Eddy was one of the great powers of her generation, and her personality deserves more disinterested attention than it has received. Mr. Dakin has done a service in writing of Mrs. Eddy from a factual rather than from a controversial standpoint."

Nation 129:265 S 11 '29 850w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf

Nation and Ath 46:141 O 26 '29 120w

"Mr. Dakin has given an exhaustive documentation to every phase of Mrs. Eddy's career; and in view of the suppression of an earlier documentary biography, that of Georgine Milmine, he is, I think, justified in the space he has given to the documents, repetitious and fatiguing though they sometimes are. He has avoided Mark Twain's temptation to make a butt of Mrs. Eddy's magnificent fatuousness; and one regrets, so fair are his intentions, that he has even occasionally underlined his statements with irony; for the total effect of his work is sympathetic: it is the facts that alienate us, and her own absurd pretensions that are deflated, by the mere act of exposure. In short, Mr. Dakin has committed an unforgivable offense against Mrs. Eddy: he has done her justice. Only one thing is lacking in this biography; and that is a sense of the period." L: Mumford

+ New Repub 61:21 N 27 '29 1550w

"Mr. Dakin's book is to be warmly welcomed. It is full and impartial. The author has resisted the temptation, which is even stronger in America than in England, to produce an essay in dramatic psychology, and has been content with a straightforward narrative. . . There is no end to the interest of this amazing story, and none to the contradictions of Mary Baker Eddy. Mr. Dakin has brought together a mass of evidence relating to the physical basis of her life and philosophy, her continuous ill-health and lifelong hysteria and, above all, the atmosphere of terror in which she spent the whole of her ninety years."

+ New Statesman 34:sup viii N 9 '29 1400w

"If Mr. Dakin has been able to turn up no important new data, so that his contribution is the dispassionate assaying of the old, it is invaluable to have the scattered and often obscure sources all reported in a volume well annotated and indexed and supplied with an exhaustive bibliography. In view of the partisan nature of all the easily available discussion of the subject (including Mark Twain's) and of the suppression of the Milmine biography and the Riley critique, Mr. Dakin's book is a most heartening phenomenon—almost as surprising as the phenomena it examines." Clarence Britten

+ N Y Evening Post p4m S 14 '29 1000w

"Mr. Dakin's book about her lacks the gusto and the irony of Mark Twain's. It is not, like his, an attack upon Christian Science or its founder, though it will assuredly be received as such by members of the faith. It is a persistent, documented, remorseless dissection of a personality—of a personality always ailing and struggling. As Mr. Dakin views it Mrs. Eddy produced Christian Science, in so far as she did actually produce it, in a heroic effort to overcome her own lifelong complex of inferiority." R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p5 Ag 25 '29 1300w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 80:26 O '29 230w

"It presents an incredible picture of the life and character of one of the most remarkable women in history, and one which no unbiased and fair-minded person could accept. . . The unbiased reader must lay down the book with a feeling of disgust, and, if he is wise, he will look round the civilized world upon the fruits of her work for suffering humanity and draw his own conclusions."

— Sat R 148:394 O 5 '29 400w

"Mr. Dakin is entirely free, in the first place, from any tendency to belittle his subject. The obvious opportunities for cheap ridicule are quietly disdained, and the obvious opportunities for moralizing are ignored. The shadow of greatness lies across his pages. He understands that he is dealing with one of the most remarkable women of modern times, and that his task is to make her credible, not to criticize her. Likewise he understands that if she was unique it was only by virtue of the damonic power behind qualities that are almost universal." E. S. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 6:103 S 7 '29 980w

Reviewed by O. B. Towne and E. F. Dakin

Sat R of Lit 6:370 N 9 '29 1550w

Spec 143:532 O 19 '29 290w

"One of the ablest of recent exploits in popular biography. . . There is an occasional straining for stylistic effect, in the manner of Strachey, and there are a few points where one might ask for authentication of material compiled from the files of certain newspapers; but these are minor blemishes in a work which follows a sound biographical method and attains a graphic result."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 18 '29 1250w

"Mr. Dakin's more than 500 large pages seem rather too much for the not momentous career of one to whom he can give only a qualified admiration; and, though his documentation is careful and his handling of the material excellent in general, he does not escape the pitfalls of his prolixity."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p759 O 3 '29 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 25:322 O '29

DALMAN, GUSTAF HERMANN. Jesus-Jeshua; studies in the Gospels; auth. tr. by Paul P. Levertoff. 256p $4.50 Macmillan [15s S.P.C.K.]

226 Bible. New Testament—Gospels. Jesus Christ—Words 29-30425

A series of studies of the Gospels based on the author's interest in Aramaic and its influence upon early Christian writings. He shows how the three languages of Palestine in the time of Christ—Aramaic, Hebrew and Greek—were employed; he deals with the synagogue services in the time of Christ; he interprets certain passages from the Sermon on the Mount in the light of their Aramaic origin; and he also discusses the Last Supper from the Aramaic version.

"Many interesting suggestions are offered in the discussion. Those who are familiar with the author's work, the 'Words of Jesus,' to say nothing of his Aramaic Grammar, will appreciate the wealth of scholarship which he brings to the present discussion."
+ Christian Century 46:1474 N 27 '29 150w

"The erudition of these studies is obvious, and its careful handling of Talmudic, Midrashic and Targumic literature makes the book important. There is something more than learning in this work, which manifests a deep reverence for Christ and finds in the Gospels nothing short of a divine revelation."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p988 N 28 '29 700w

DALSEME, RENE. Beaumarchais, 1732-1799; tr. by Hannaford Bennett. 432p il $5 (21s) Putnam

B or 92 Beaumarchais, Pierre Augustin Caron de 29-20537

M. Dalsème follows with evident relish the endless adventures and misadventures of this volatile Frenchman, author of "Figaro" and "The Barber of Seville" and friend of the United States during the War of independence.

Reviewed by J. T. Geroud
Current Hist 31:829 Ja '29 30w

"Dalseme, dividing his book into three parts—'Dawn,' 'Zenith,' 'Twilight'—writes with a zest and a verve that carry the reader with them." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p10m O 12 '29 320w

"The biography is well written and will provide entertainment for the reader who enjoys memoirs of French court life; but for both literary style and scholarly treatment the seventy-year-old 'Beaumarchais and His Times' of M. Lomenie still surpasses anything else that has been done on this subject." M. E. Lombard
+ N Y Times p10 N 17 '29 900w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:24 N '29 140w

"M. Dalsème, in his elaborate study, writes neither a novel nor a strict biography, and may be said to hover between the two; and though occasionally diffuse he is rarely dull, frequently dramatic, much at his complacent ease in a narrative as eventful as a picaresque tale, and here and there as instructive as a political thesis."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p809 O 17 '29 1400w

" 'Beaumarchais' is readable from the first page to the last, and it never conflicts with recorded history. Beaumarchais emerges from its pages as a magnetic personality and significant figure in the reigns of Louis XV and Louis XVI." H: T. E. Perry
+ Yale R n s 19:427 winter '30 850w

DALTON, MORAY. One by one they disappeared. 279p $2 Harper [7s 6d Jarrolds]

29-5956

An elderly American philanthropist who for years has given an annual dinner to his eight fellow-survivors of a shipwreck, announces that he will leave his fortune evenly divided among the group. And one by one they disappear. Inspector Collier traces the separate crimes to the murderer, thereby clearing Corinna's lover of suspicion.

"Rather jumpy but baffling." Will Cuppy
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Mr 17 '29 100w

"The mystery is well sustained, but when the solution comes there is one incident that imposes rather a severe strain on the reader's credulity."
+ — N Y Times p26 Mr 17 '29 220w
Times [London] Lit Sup p421 My 23 '29 130w

DALY, CARROLL JOHN. Hidden hand. 319p $2 Clode

29-12057

Private Detective Race Williams sails to Florida on the trail of an organized gang headed by the mysterious Hidden hand. Backing the detective in his work of tracking down and exterminating such criminals as McCleary, Stinnes, Olaf Sankin and Beekman, is an equally mysterious and benevolent philanthropist, Howard Quincy Travers. A pretty girl also complicates matters, but Williams discovers the identity of the Hidden hand.

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 13 '29 400w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 6 '29 80w

DAMON, SAMUEL FOSTER. Tilted moons. 90p [2] $2 Harper

811 29-21803

Lyrics conventional in form and subject matter, with individual rhyme patterns and rather full emotional content. Most of them appeared originally in Harper's magazine, Century, Atlantic monthly, and other magazines.

"He has a rich humor, a gorgeous palette for descriptive coloring, a trenchant hand at the satiric portrait; he has infinite tenderness, and a lovely humanity. 'Second Spring' is one of the very finest longer lyrics that have appeared since 'Renascence'; the extended group of love-lyrics is complete, without finical intellectual reserve—Damon is not afraid of sentiment in its place."
+ Bookm 70:xii Ja '30 100w

Reviewed by Vincent McHugh
N Y Evening Post p12m N 16 '29 360w

"If many of the pieces in 'Tilted Moons,' by S. Foster Damon, are somewhat in the nature of apprentice work, they give no little poetic promise. The author ranges fairly wide, he evinces an ear for prosody, and he has discernment. He appears somewhat timorous in attacking a subject. He could be more colorful. There is one feature of 'Tilted Moons' we especially liked. Mr. Damon is willing to essay poems of more length than many of the younger lyrists."
+ — N Y Times p45 D 1 '29 150w

DANE, CLEMENCE, pseud. (WINIFRED ASHTON). Adam's opera; the text of a play; set to music by Richard Addinsell. 135p $2 Doubleday, Doran

822 29-11043

Miss Dane uses the very light framework of the Sleeping Beauty fairy-tale, with trellis work Mother Goose jingles, to carry a serious theme. Adam, the Prince who wakes the Princess, personifies Woodrow Wilson, calling Beauty back into a world which mocks him and his ideals, and having done him to death goes back to sleep again.

"Miss Dane asked a frosty friend who read the text if he didn't like even the funny bits. 'What funny bits?' he asked austerely. That is about the way we feel." W. P. Eaton
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 My 5 '29 150w

St Louis 27:311 N '29

"The result might have been better if she had written in haste and refused to rewrite at leisure. A fantasy is not best suited by the anxious look of year-long ponderings, and a poetic satire needs speed and strength above all things; especially, if it is designed for the stage, does it need lucidity. . . 'Adam's Opera' was spoilt for me on the stage by a general atmosphere of muddle and messiness. There were too many people too often on the move. The episodes were not given a chance to develop individuality. The choruses broke into the crises. No sooner was the dialogue under way than melody would break it with a snatch of song." Ivor Brown
— + Sat R 146:814 D 15 '28 850w

DANE, CLEMENCE, pseud.—Continued

"With music by Richard Addinsell of Charlot's Revue fame 'Adam's Opera' has recently been performed in London. But by no means is this 'text' mere libretto. The nonsense is super-sense, strangely disturbing and provocative of thought." Jane Dransfield

+ Sat R of Lit 6:75 Ag 24 '29 130w

"The analogy, followed through, is decidedly clever in its aptness, but the theme is so weighty for the slender framework of fairy story and revamped nursery rhymes to carry, that it defeats its own ends." Vera Kelsey

— + Theatre Arts Mo 13:631 Ag '29 220w

DANE, CLEMENCE, pseud. (WINIFRED ASHTON). Tradition and Hugh Walpole. 263p $2 Doubleday, Doran

823 Walpole, Hugh. English fiction—History and criticism 29-19321

A literary biography of the English novelist, Hugh Walpole, and a guide to his works, giving as background a résumé of the English novel from the days of Bunyan.

---

Booklist 26:109 D '29

Reviewed by R. B. Sanborn

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p30 S 29 '29 700w

"Miss Dane's slight book is thoroughly feminine, marked by a feminine eagerness which arrives at no satisfactory conclusions, and it is devoid of the detachment necessary to any full-length appreciation of man living or dead. But it undoubtedly will appeal to the feminine, and therefore perhaps typical, Walpole enthusiast, for, with a few notable exceptions, Mr. Walpole's novels would not safely undergo a too dogmatic treatment." K. S.

Boston Transcript p4 O 5 '29 310w

"The important element of Clemence Dane's book is conveyed in the first word of her title; for with all her enthusiasm for Hugh Walpole, her swift, clear survey of his writings, her advancing of the novelist as the true bearer of the traditive torch, combining the qualities of the realist, moralist, and romantic while renewing the element of symbol, she pricks his faults too keenly for us to set him high." J. T. Shipley

Nation 130:19 Ja 1 '30 700w

"Miss Dane's is an eager and impetuous book. In it, with the best will in the world, and more facility and wit, perhaps, than soundness of judgment, she claims for Hugh Walpole, with propagandist enthusiasm, strength at the very point where his weakness lies, and passes over almost casually his most exceptional virtue." Florence Haxton

N Y Evening Post p6m S 21 '29 730w

N Y World p11m O 6 '29 400w

Reviewed by Johan Smertenko

Outlook 154:31 Ja 1 '30 100w

St Louis 27:338 D '29

DANE, CLEMENCE, pseud. (WINIFRED ASHTON), and SIMPSON, HELEN. Enter Sir John. 315p $2 Cosmopolitan bk. [7s 6d Hodder] 28-29961

"A young actress has been convicted of the murder of another actress in the same provincial company. The evidence against her is overwhelming, but Sir John, who attends the trial, takes note of one point which has been overlooked by everybody else and takes it upon himself to prove the girl innocent. His methods are theatrical, but since the principals in the case are all of the theatre, any other procedure would, perhaps, have been less effective. The scene of the murder is a small town in Wales." —N Y Times

---

Bookm 69:xxvi Mr '29 50w

"Pleasing shocker with an abundance of restrained humor and other literary graces." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 20 '29 130w

"Besides being a good detective story, this is an excellent novel of stage life, and the characters in it are real human beings in spite of the artificial lives they lead."

+ N Y Times p30 D 9 '28 230w

"It's as good a detective story as we've read in some time." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 150:1418 D 26 '28 220w

"Though the story has a tendency to slip over from mellowness into sentimentality, and is very soggy in spots, it is agreeably told, and has an interestingly devised crime."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:630 Ja 26 '29 130w

"The flame of pure excitement which burns so high in such recent achievements as The Prisoner in the Opal, or the Cluny Problem, or even The White Crow, is scarcely kindled in this experiment in sleuthdom. Yet it is a skillful story, neatly concluded, and thronged with sharply observed figures." R. A. Taylor

+ — Spec 142:292 F 23 '29 300w

"There is not a dull moment in the book, nor an extra word. Characters are cleverly hit off and scenes are visualized with unusual clearness; especially to be commended is the description of the jury arriving at its decision."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 23 '28 150w

"This is but incidentally a detective story, because those who read it primarily as such will have no time to savour the admirable quality of the comedy. For this is not a book to take at the gallop. It has characterization and wit—in that vein of high spirits in which good-natured satire only just avoids the improbabilities of farce."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p182 Mr 7 '29 300w

DANIEL, HAWTHORNE. Bare hands; being the story of the extraordinary steamboat that was built on Devil's Island off the coast of Alaska by four shipwrecked men. 244p il $2 Coward-McCann 29-4209

Four men and a boy are marooned on a rocky island off the regular shipping routes to Alaska. With high courage and intelligence they manage to get a living and make a boat in which to escape. Written for older boys.

---

Booklist 25:399 Jl '29

Boston Transcript p5 My 18 '29 150w

"Very ably written. The book is rich in vivid descriptions, and mechanically inclined boys will be thrilled by the detail." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 152:390 Jl 3 '29 50w

DANIEL, HAWTHORNE. Seal of the White Buddha. 271p il $2 Coward-McCann 28-21377

"Describes a voyage to China in 1847; a voyage undertaken in a clipper ship by Hope Winchester, a pretty young girl of about fifteen. Her adventures are thrilling; and the reader of imagination is transported on the good ship Aurora to the far quarters of the globe."—Sat R of Lit

---

Booklist 25:216 F '29

"There is a wealth of information about ships brought in with natural ease. The author has made a special study of clipper ships, as was evidenced by an earlier book of his this year dealing with their history. Upon the little jade pendant worn by the heroine depends the solution to a great deal, and the author has turned the moment of lucky discovery with a neatly accidental happening. Girls of high-school age would especially like this story." M. G. Bonner

+ N Y Times p6 D 2 '28 220w

"The style is clear and vivid; the pictures Mr. Daniel draws, whether of a Vermont village, a Japanese port, or a Chinese city, are firm in outline and striking in color. A book which must give any child a feeling of actuality in regard to countries which have possibly been to him but names! And the illustrations are unusually charming, the decorations most apt." Florence Ayscough

+ Sat R of Lit 5:635 Ja 26 '29 130w

DANIELS, HAROLD GRIFFITH. Rise of the German Republic. 292p il $4 Scribner [15s Nisbet]

943.085 Germany—History—Revolution. Germany—Politics and government [28-12179]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"Despite a few weak points the book is really indispensable for an understanding of the Germany of 1929." W. C. Langsam

+ Hist Outlook 20:96 F '29 650w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:498 O '28

"The book has defects, perhaps the results of too hasty composition. But in spite of these defects, the book is graphic and interesting, and forms a valuable introduction to the study of the German republic." E. N. Anderson

+ — Pol Sci Q 44:132 Mr '29 1150w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey 61:611 F '29 160w

DA PONTE, LORENZO. Memoirs; tr. by Elisabeth Abbott from the Italian; ed. and annotated by Arthur Livingston. 512p il $5 Lippincott

B or 92 [29-28525]

The memoirs of Lorenzo da Ponte, the friend and librettist of Mozart and founder of Italian opera in the United States, who, after many adventurous years in England and on the continent, spent the last thirty years of his life in America.

"Professor Livingston has shown an indefatigable ardor in tracing the records of Da Ponte and his numerous connections in America. The items, more than a thousand, that he has unearthed call for a volume of their own for adequate presentation, and this is happily promised. But too much praise can scarcely be given him for the incisiveness that marks his condensation of this material into the introduction and notes of the present volume. If Da Ponte becomes an intelligible figure to the twentieth century, which is more than he was to himself, it is because Professor Livingston's penetrating and informed judgments have made him so." H. M. Ayres

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 D 15 '29 1100w

"Da Ponte is interesting when he gossips; interesting when he brags; but when he talks of his bad luck, of his financial reverses, he is a most ungodly bore. The memoirs make good reading after one accepts the fact that Da Ponte is writing for entertainment—his own and his readers—rather than to record the truth." G. R. B. R.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 D 18 '29 850w

"It is a marvelous piece of work. Dr. Livingston's researches have resulted in the discovery of over a thousand Dapontean items, including a complete history of Da Ponte's wife's family, the Grahis, in America and Europe, and of Da Ponte's descendants here. . . Da Ponte's memoirs are a distinctly valuable addition to Americana." Walter Littlefield

+ N Y Times p50 D 1 '29 700w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

N Y World p13 D 4 '29 1000w

DA PONTE, LORENZO. Memoirs; tr. with an introd. and notes by L. A. Sheppard. (Broadway diaries, memoirs and letters) 387p pl $4 Houghton [15s Routledge]

B or 92 [29-28525]

"Da Ponte is chiefly remembered as the librettist of Mozart's 'Don Giovanni,' 'Figaro,' and 'Cosi fan tutte.' His early life was lived in Venice, and he was one of those eighteenth-century adventurers, of whom the greatest was his friend Casanova. But he was neither as great a scoundrel nor as great a character as Casanova. A wanderer, like all adventurers, from Venice to Gorizia, from Gorizia to Dresden, from Dresden to Vienna, from Vienna to Trieste, from Trieste to London, and from London to the United States, he was always meeting with misfortunes which he ascribed to the jealousy and malice of enemies, but which were really due to his own cantankerous follies and vices."—Nation and Ath

"Da Ponte's memoirs were well worth translating into English. . . The merit of his memoirs is that they show us this ego creeping about the strange eighteenth-century world of Venice, Vienna, and London, and then again creeping on into the still stranger nineteenth-century world of New York and Philadelphia." Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 45:566 Jl 27 '29 450w

"Da Ponte's memoirs are at first disappointing, for in spite of their title they contain no more than a handful of references to Mozart. It might have been expected that the man who wrote librettos for three of Mozart's chief operas, and was at one time on intimate terms with him, would have left some significant record of their partnership. He does not recall either the appearance or the conversation of his friend."

— New Statesman 33:688 S 14 '29 950w

"Like Casanova's own, Da Ponte's reminiscences are those of a justly shady character who invariably tries to explain away everything which may present him in a less favorable light. Fortunately for the reader, Mr. Sheppard's excellent introduction and his notes will prevent him from taking everything the chatty old poet-aster says too seriously. Besides, this willingness to put his own best foot continuously foremost does not in the least interfere with the enjoyment of his delightfully frank and human narrative." F: H. Martens

+ N Y Evening Post p5m S 14 '29 350w

Reviewed by Walter Littlefield

N Y Times p10 D 1 '29 1250w

"For the perfection of manner and matter, if you are looking for an affair of pure diversion, you must turn to the Memoirs of Lorenzo da Ponte. Da Ponte's memoirs are prefaced by an excellent biographical introduction which, although it does take the wind out of some of da Ponte's sails by telling the bald truth about some of the little affairs which it was convenient for him to interpret and paraphrase, adds considerably to the reader's interest in the Memoirs." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 153:152 S 25 '29 480w

"The translator has done his work well and has had the advantage—for his introduction and notes—of the exhaustive researches made by Signor Fausto Nicolini."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p587 Jl 25 '29 1700w

DARBY, WILLIAM DERMOT. Rayon, and other synthetic fibers. 65p $1.50 Textile pub. co.

677.46 Silk, Artificial 29-8455

The origin of rayon, what it is, how it is made, the history of its increase in popularity, the merchandising of rayon, and the education of the consumer as to its use, washability, ironing, etc.

Booklist 26:16 O '29

"A clear, concise, well-informed treatment of the subject by the textile editor of the Dry Goods Economist. Likely to prove a convenient reference book for teachers and college students of textiles as well as for the general reader in search of reliable information regarding this increasingly important addition to our textile fibers."

+ J Home Econ 21:521 Jl '29 70w

DARK, SIDNEY. Archbishop Davidson and the English church. 258p $3 Morrow [8s 6d P. Allan; Soc. of SS. Peter & Paul]

B or 92 Davidson, Randall Thomas, abp. Church of England [29-12701]

"This does not pretend to be a biography in the comprehensive sense, but the story of Dr. Davidson and his service to the English Church. In a certain sense it had to be the story of the Anglican Church for half a century. But Mr. Dark has not forgotten the personal element."—Boston Transcript

DARK, SIDNEY—Continued

"It is a serious effort at discriminate historical judgment. It gives temperate praise; it does not shrink from censure; it sees the man not merely in the eminence of his office but in the whole set of circumstances that reveal his character, foresight and wisdom under severe test." W: L. Sullivan

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 14 '29 450w

Boston Transcript p2 My 8 '29 700w

Nation and Ath 44:794 Mr 9 '29 500w

"Mr. Sidney Dark stands too near the events which he describes to view them in their proper perspective. He makes an honest effort to be fair to his subject, but he can never forget that he is an Anglo-Catholic and that the Archbishop is not."

— + Sat R 147:150 F 2 '29 400w

"Mr. Sidney Dark has put together a book that is chiefly valuable for the numerous quotations from the Primate's utterances. Mr. Dark is aware that he is presenting the public with the picture of a figure more than usually impressive. The picture he draws is even more impressive than he realizes; for, all through, Mr. Dark's vision is obscured by the narrower conception of the English Church that he himself holds. But this difference of view hardly accounts for a failure to recognize the profound significance of the Archbishop's action at the time of the General Strike, nor for glaring errors of fact."

— Spec 142:318 Mr 2 '29 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p131 F 21 '29 850w

DARK, SIDNEY. Twelve bad men. 351p il $3 Crowell [12s 6d Hodder & S.]

920 Biography. Europe—Biography 28-23806

Mr Dark writes a sober, impartial and unexciting account of his twelve bad men. Contents: Louis XI; Cesare Borgia; Cellini; Thomas Cromwell; Mazarin; Judge Jeffreys; Marlborough; Frederick the Great; Casanova; Talleyrand; Fouché; Robespierre. With portraits resembling wood-cuts by Mabel Pugh.

---

Booklist 25:357 Je '29

"Often you suspect that some one is written down bad merely because he is not an Englishman. Just as often you find that Mr. Dark is writing in pleasant irony. At the end you cannot discover Mr. Dark's own notions of good and bad. One wishes that Mr. Dark had used his clear and able mind to get inside the hearts of his subjects. You feel a little too much that he is interring the good with the bones of his bad men; and yet you read him with fine pleasure." Donald Douglas

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Mr 24 '29 580w

"There is no danger that Mr. Dark will be accused of being a whitewash biographer. As a matter of fact, his specialty is blackwash, and he bestows it with a liberal hand. For that reason, if for nothing else, his account of these 'Twelve Bad Men' is entertaining if not authoritative reading." E. F. Edgett

+ — Boston Transcript p8 My 18 '29 1300w

"If it is good to recreate the memory of twelve bad men, the task could not have fallen into better hands." E. C. Chorley

Churchman 139:30 Ap 20 '29 130w

Hist Outlook 20:306 O '29 80w

"Mr. Dark writes with graceful distinction: he is concise and pithy, and yet he omits nothing of importance."

+ Nation 129:23 Jl 3 '29 60w

"For the most part he has been fairly just in the painting of these portraits, each one of whom has been already the subject of so many artists in words, and he has made each of his sketches always interesting not only in itself but also rather frequently in the dissent and the question he will arouse in the reader's mind."

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 28 '29 380w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 227:adv My '29 50w

"His sketches of such men as Caesar Borgia, Judge Jeffreys, Cromwell (Wolsey's Cromwell), Casanova, Robespierre and others are not important or new, but they are marked by that background of learning which is one of the blessed gifts of English education."

— + Outlook 151:468 Mr 20 '29 100w

St Louis 27:28 Ja '29

Reviewed by Arthur Colton

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:1019 My 18 '29 1450w

"The book is historically interesting but humanly dull."

Spec 140:742 My 12 '28 70w

"They are an unlovable gathering; but it would need a longer and closer examination of times, conditions, and motives than is possible in such brief sketches, and a sounder knowledge of psychology than is shown here, to pronounce judgment on all the twelve."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p381 My 17 '28 200w

DARK, SIDNEY. Twelve royal ladies (Eng title Twelve great ladies). 339p $3 Crowell [12s 6d Hodder & S.]

920.7 Woman—Biography. Queens 29-18109

Character studies of twelve women, each of whom was known to fame either because of the position to which she was born, or because of her own achievements. They are: Catherine de Medici; Mary of England; Mary queen of Scots; Henrietta Maria; Queen Christina of Sweden; Sophia, electress of Hanover; Louise de la Vallière; Maria Theresa; Catherine the Great; Marie Antoinette; Josephine de Beauharnais; Caroline of Brunswick.

---

Booklist 26:66 N '29

"All through his intolerably stuffy sketches and his equally intolerable moral condescension to great figures in the past Mr. Dark might as well add to the end of every chapter, 'Tis only noble to be good."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 O 20 '29 230w

Boston Transcript p4 O 11 '29 580w

"To claim more for this book than the interest inherent in any series of portraits of famous women is to talk nonsense, and as portraits their defect is that they are in no sense originals. Mr. Dark seems to be cutting his cloth according to someone else's coat, and it is the more confusing that he does not often tell us whose."

— Nation and Ath 45:687 Ag 24 '29 450w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 80:24 O '29 170w

Spec 143:284 Ag 31 '29 150w

"Mr. Dark modestly disclaims all 'profundity of scholarship,' but he is more than the casual essayist content with accepted opinion. He takes a fresh and genuine interest in each of the characters that he examines, and gives old stories a new and informative turn."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p636 Ag 15 '29 700w

DARROW, CLARENCE SEWARD, and RICE, WALLACE DE GROOT CECIL, comps. Infidels and heretics; an agnostic's anthology. 293p $3 Stratford

211 Agnosticism. Free thought 29-15054

An anthology containing excerpts, in poetry and prose, from the works of famous agnostics, skeptics, and atheists throughout the ages. The volume includes also selections from the writings of its compilers, Clarence Darrow and Wallace Rice.

---

"Mr. Darrow and Mr. Rice have made an anthology that is representative of the best unfettered thinking in all ages and is replete with beautiful and inspiring selections. It contains some of the frankest and most unafraid of contemporary thought of permanent value. Indexes of authors, titles and first lines and a table of contents make the anthology of easy use as a work of reference."

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 4 '29 430w

"The book contains selections in both prose and verse—nearly all of which are worth knowing and are, in fact, widely known. But the arrangement of the contents is deplorable, as may be inferred from the sandwiching of Mr Darrow's plea in defense of Loeb and Leopold between an extract from Emerson and a poem by Matthew Arnold. And some of the extracts from contemporary writers—C. E. M. Joad, for instance—are trivial."

— + Springf'd Republican p12 Jl 19 '29 230w

DARROW, FLOYD LAVERN. St Nicholas book of science. 324p il $2.50 Century

608 Science—Juvenile literature 28-23983

An illustrated review of events of scientific interest all over the world, reprinted from the pages of St Nicholas.

"To a pedagogic, cataloguing mind it has one bad fault—there seems to be neither rhyme nor reason to the sequence of subject matter; however, that makes it all the more interesting as it is a veritable surprise bag of fascinating revelations. From reindeer raising in Alaska we are shunted to the Andes of Colombia, there to go botanizing, and thence to deep-sea sounding. And all in three pages! No field of science has been left unsearched for new and interesting finds. A wholly enjoyable book for all of us."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:737 Mr 2 '29 150w

Wis Lib Bul 24:347 D '28

DARTON, FREDERICK JOSEPH HARVEY. J. M. Barrie. (Writers of the day) 127p $1.35 Holt [2s Nisbet]

B or 92 Barrie, Sir James Matthew [29-4990]

The monograph includes a delightful essay on Barrie and his writings and a bibliography of his principal novels and plays.

Booklist 25:391 Jl '29

"The admirers of Sir James Barrie's work will find many reflections of their own feelings in the little book Mr. Darton has written about it, but those who have not been touched to his enthusiasm must still look elsewhere for an explanation of its hold over adult and apparently sophisticated minds."

Nation and Ath 44:658 F 9 '29 430w

"This book, despite its faults, is very readable, and if it contains few ideas with which the reader of Barrie's books is not already familiar, it is at least a lively variation of them."

+ — New Statesman 32:450 Ja 12 '29 150w

"An ably written and delightful book, especially welcome as an antidote to the current fashion of sneering at Barrie as a hopeless sentimentalist. There is a good bibliography."

+ Outlook 152:149 My 22 '29 100w

DARWIN, BERNARD RICHARD MEIRION. English public school; [with an introd. by Stanley Baldwin]. (English heritage ser.) 175p $1.40 (3s 6d) Longmans

373.42 Public schools—England [29-20877]

A short history of the rise of the English public school system, containing chapters on the public school spirit and the public school type, and sketches of some great head masters: Dr Butler of Shrewsbury; Arnold and Thring; Sanderson of Oundle; and Almond of Loretto.

"The book is written with the skill and humour that we expect from its author; it contains many delightful stories, and some first-rate description of school life present and past; and it is full of the spirit of the public schools. If it cannot be regarded as a very important contribution to English educational literature, that, after all, is probably the last thing that its author would want for it."

+ Nation and Ath 46:206 N 9 '29 820w

New Statesman 34:161 N 9 '29 180w

"It must be said that the public school is far too much with us. No doubt it deserves to flourish, but in dead silence. Nothing is gained by talking in maturity about an institution which, when not put out of thought after departure from it, keeps the typical Englishman tiresomely puerile." T. E. Welby

Sat R 148:513 N 2 '29 300w

Spec 143:549 O 19 '29 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p806 O 17 '29 1000w

DASHWOOD, JANE, pseud. Three daughters. 299p $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d Murray, J.]

29-19247

The three daughters of Lady Pomfret at the beginning of the present century were all charming girls who tried to revolt from a tyrannical mother in the days when revolting was not such an easy matter. Each of the three married and saw their children revolting in like manner, but with much greater success. But what the sisters did not see was how much they themselves had become like Lady Pomfret.

Bookm 70:322 N '29 50w

"These defects—slowness in getting under way, uneconomical handling of incident, and the failure to realize completely another age even while recording its mental and physical furnishings—may be merely faults of inexperience and need not damn a first novel if somewhere it sparkles or brings to life a character or communicates an emotion so directly that the reader forgets for a moment the medium of its expression. There are portions of Miss Dashwood's book which show vitality." Garreta Busey

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p29 N 10 '29 400w

"A keen intuition on the author's part makes possible a depth of appreciation of the individuals whom she portrays, which in turn awakens the perceptive power of the reader. A drawing in pastels, the book has a certain delicate charm about it which reminds one of the dainty detail of a cameo. This first novel of a young English writer augurs well for its successors."

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 6 '29 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p142 N '29

"It is a good story, gently told, which will be read with interest alike by those who remember their own Victorian girlhood and those who have heard about the restraints forced upon grandmother. That one cannot imagine men enjoying the novel is nothing against it. It is essentially a women's story and should appeal to women of every age."

+ N Y Times p7 O 6 '29 550w

D'AUVERGNE, EDMUND BASIL FRANCIS. Napoleon the Third; a biography. 255p il $5 Dodd [21s Nash & G.]

B or 92 Napoléon III, emperor of the French. France—History—Second empire, 1852-1870 [29-17289]

This biography follows closely the extraordinary career of the man who as emperor of the French from 1852-1870 held the center of the world's stage.

"It is brief and extremely readable. The style, while not coruscating, is never dull; and its fundamental seriousness is relieved by pleasant touches of irony. The personal story of the man Louis Napoleon is well told. General politics are introduced only in so far as they are indispensable to the understanding of his character." Albert Guerard

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 O 27 '29 600w

Boston Transcript p2 S 18 '29 980w

"It is the greatest merit of Mr. d'Auvergne's trenchant sketch of his career that, setting aside the encumbering mass of detail, he enables us to see clearly the immanent logic that led from the coup d'Etat to Sedan. We may not interpret the story at all points as he does, and we may dissent from some of his verdicts, but he has set out the facts in clear arrangement for us to judge. The book would make a sound introduction to more elaborate studies of the period."

D'AUVERGNE, E. B. F.—Continued
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p463 Je 13 '29 1050w

DAVIDSON, T. L. Murder in the laboratory. 247p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Methuen]
29-18544

Walter Sheppery, university researcher, is poisoned by one of several crooks. Dr Martin Blythe, toxicologist, shows up the police inspector, delves into the past of Sheppery and clears up the matter.

Bookm 70:xxvi S '29 60w

"The authentic medical background is quite a treat and the riddle is more than satisfactorily posed and resolved." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ag 25 '29 150w

"The story is well told and has humor and good character drawing in addition to the mystery element."
+ N Y Times p40 N 17 '29 170w

"The author enjoys presenting the reader with one suggestion after another which fails to solve anything. A busy man is this detective, but one suspects that the story would have been equally interesting if some possibilities had been overlooked."
Springf'd Republican p7e S 15 '29 100w

"The author has eschewed the love complication and other irrelevant horrors, and has kept to the narrow path of the problem. He allows his readers a clue overlooked by the detective, and with it a pattern to which details may be adjusted, and at the same time sees to it that the clue whets rather than satisfies their curiosity. And he gratifies them by providing a detective who, without being a figure of fun, makes just the sort of blunders that they would make themselves."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p317 Ap 18 '29 200w

DAVIES, HERBERT ABRAHAM. Outline history of the world. 560p il $2.50; also in 2 pts pt 1 $1.25; pt 2 $1.50 Oxford
909 History, Universal 28-26853

"In simple form and with few digressions the author tells the story of the world's progress from prehistoric times to the present. The different branches of ancient, medieval, and modern history in Africa, Europe, Asia, and America are followed side by side, but in spite of this method the chronology is kept clear. An excellent chronological table is appended. The author is considerably interested in international relations, and makes several points in favor of world federation. The many illustrations are well chosen and unusual."—Booklist

Booklist 25:114 D '28

"A well-written and interesting high school text. Necessarily superficial in treatment, it yet touches upon the high spots, and is remarkably well organized. There would seem to be little question as to the 'teachability' of the book, and it should prove to be of great interest to teachers and students alike." W. C. L.
+ Hist Outlook 20:307 O '29 220w
Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 226:adv N '28 60w

"His work is compact and yet inclusive, solid but not heavy. Although it will make good reading for anyone interested in new interpretations of history from the point of view of world unity, it will be found particularly valuable as a text-book. The fact that it does not look like one is a strong point in its favor. There are no marginal headings, no 'questions' and 'topics for study' at the end of chapters, no lists of dates to detract from the reader's attention. It is a book no history teacher should overlook." E: Pulling
+ Sat R of Lit 5:307 O 27 '28 450w

DAVIES, WILLIAM HENRY. Collected poems, 1928. 399p $3 (7s 6d) J. Cape & H. Smith 821 [29-11512]

"There are poems in this volume that have never been collected before, some of which have appeared recently in American periodicals. This book includes both the former collections of 1916 and 1923 as well as the recent poetry."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 26:62 N '29

"Davies has frequently been compared to Herrick, the Elizabethan lyricists, and to the Blake of 'The Songs of Innocence and Experience'; and the resemblance is obvious at a glance. The forms are of this tradition as are his subjects. His attitude is timeworn, yet as active and living as woods and gardens and simple human intercourse always will be. There is a lilt to these lyrics, a singing quality which is rare in contemporary work." F. A. Doggett
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ag 18 '29 550w

"A poet who in spite of many outmoded mannerisms of speech has achieved a rare perfection in expressing the charm and beauties of nature." W: S. Braithwaite
+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 27 '29 1800w

"To criticize Mr. Davies' craftsmanship is no more profitable at this time of day than it would have been when he published his earliest volume. He is a natural singer; we might as usefully criticize all the other natural singers—the bird and the bee, the wind and the brook 'that all night has been strengthened by Heaven's purer flood.' He has had countless imitators, but he alone is lasting the course." T: Moult
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 28 '28 700w

"The lyrical quality of these collected poems is astonishing. No poet has ever played hide-and-seek with his own fancy so happily and so often." Austin Clarke
+ Nation and Ath 44:sup236 N 10 '28 150w
Reviewed by W. M. Spackman
New Repub 60:25 Ag 21 '29 580w

"Mr. Davies's thought, as distinct from his poetry, keeps the highroad of platitude, and much of his matter is queerly traditional, so many outworn properties. . . On the technical side it will be urged against him that his sentiment, even when charming and sincere, is often diffuse and squandered. Nevertheless, the impression remains that his place is likely to be secure; and secure, especially, as what common opinion takes him to be, a poet of quiet moods and perceptions of country loveliness." E: Thompson
+ — New Statesman 32:194 N 17 '28 680w

"Few authors, and few poets in particular, could stand so well as Mr. Davies does the test of a collected edition. Certain qualities one looks for in poetry are curiously absent here—there is little in Mr. Davies's work of the stirring or intense or impassioned. His are the tenderer moods, wistfulness, or green, retrospective melancholy, pleasant contemplation, or calm delight." Margaret Wallace
+ — N Y Evening Post p7m Jl 13 '29 850w

"There is a maintenance of level in the 400 poems which form the contents of this volume that some might for a moment stigmatize as a lack of growth. There is similar maintenance of level in the poetry of Robert Herrick. Rather than say that this argues mental sterility it should be held an indication of a mental poise early attained and never lost. . . That Davies is among the minor poets is, of course, obvious. That he has a high place among the English minor poets is equally clear."
+ N Y Times p2 Ag 4 '29 880w
Reviewed by E: Shanks
Sat R 146:610 N 10 '28 600w

"The volume shows a considerable advance in power. The early poems are weak in technic; rhythms are often faulty and bad rhymes are admitted. Mr Davies has never completely outgrown these failings but the later poems are much more certain in their art. There was also at first a considerable wavering in subject matter. But such criticism means nothing more than that Mr Davies had to learn his craft and discover the particular subjects which suited him; and that, like most lyrical poets, he sometimes fails." H. K.

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 5 '30 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p180 Mr 7 '29 500w

DAVIOT, GORDON. Kif; an unvarnished history. 353p $2.50 Appleton [7s 6d Benn] 29-7074

With four years of the war to his credit, and a hundred pounds' gratuity—"the tip a soldier receives for dodging death"—Archibald Vicar (otherwise Kif) comes back to London, eager for a life where things happen and a job no two days the same. London has nothing in the way of an honest job to offer this healthy, likable, singularly unattached youth of nineteen. He drifts about aimlessly till discouragement and poverty draw him into the underworld and a job of safe-cracking and burglary, for which his courage and nerve and the recklessness born of his life in the trenches admirably fit him. Kif goes about his burglaries with zest, till one luckless night he kills a man in self-defence. There is nothing but the gallows left for him. The country that had taught him to kill in its service now calls him a murderer and hangs him.

---

Bookm 70:xxii S '29 80w

"For two-thirds of the way the book is slow reading. . . This lethargy ceases when the crook part begins. . . Miss Daviot might well achieve a reputation with the last hundred pages. Her economy of story-telling is extraordinary." W. D. Lane

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ap 14 '29 500w

"'Unvarnished' in that the tale is told with no excuses or explanations as to why the 'hero' should have followed the course he did, but not unfinished in the telling, is the story of Kif. The final chapters show a very expert hand in dramatic story-telling." M. M.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 15 '29 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p94 Je '29

"'Kif' is a distinctly remarkable book. The dispassionate recital of Kif's career, unemotionally recorded in the most faithful and amazingly vivid detail, holds the reader from beginning to end of his laconically told story." Esther Hyman

+ N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 20 '29 450w

"The book rests on its delineation of Kif's character, and this is trenchantly drawn. . . The author has steered a straight middle course between the romantic tale of adventure and detailed realistic reporting."

N Y Times p16 Ap 21 '29 300w

"A poignant, beautifully told story, we commend it as a distinctive contribution to the imaginative literature of the war."

+ N Y World p11m My 19 '29 200w

"'Kif' is an uncommon book. It has a good story, and a story whose end it is impossible to predict. . . Its atmosphere is ruthless, unexpected, careless, even gay. The army it describes is full of agreeable non-commissioned officers; the burglars are beautiful, self-sacrificing and well-read. For once in a modern book we meet a hero who quarrels neither with the social order, the facts of sex, nor the views of his elders; enjoys the war and confronts execution itself with sorrow indeed, but not with depression. Yet the book does not give an effect of unreality, for it is always alive. All the same, it is not completely successful. The characters are not equal to the situations in which they find themselves." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 147:256 F 23 '29 360w

Sat R of Lit 5:960 Ap 27 '29 360w

"Kif arrests, grips, and disturbs. The core of this book is a throbbing human pity. . . It is a most moving and remarkable novel." R. A. Taylor

+ Spec 142:292 F 23 '29 150w

Wis Lib Bul 25:160 My '29

DAVIOT, GORDON. Man in the queue. 246p $2 Dutton [3s 6d Methuen] 29-16556

"A man is stabbed to death in a theatre ticket line and Inspector Grant of the C. I. D. is assigned to bring to justice the owner of a small stiletto. There are few clues and many wild-goose chases before the criminal is discovered."—Bookm

---

"A well told tale."

+ Bookm 69:xxvi Ag '29 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Jl 14 '29 100w

"Such excellent detective stories as this by Gordon Daviot are not frequently published, and one so thoroughly well-written goes beyond the demands usually made of this particular type of fiction." P. E. R.

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 21 '29 280w

"The story might have been rather better than the average detective yarn if the author had only refrained from revealing to us at great length the mental processes of the detective. Judicious pruning would have made the story much more readable."

— + N Y Times p13 Jl 28 '29 200w

"A good yarn, smothered under an excess of description and incident." W. R. Brooks

+ — Outlook 152:470 Jl 17 '29 90w

"Exceptionally good detective story. The rather original result is that the mystery isn't solved at all. The murderer confesses his crime for good and sufficient reasons at the end. The book is an interesting commentary on the value of circumstantial evidence. It is recommended to all detective story addicts."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:258 O 12 '29 180w

"Considering the fact that the suspects are less than half a dozen, and that some of these are eliminated as the story goes on, it is to the author's credit as a workman in the mystery story line that he is able to jolt the reader with surprise when the slayer is finally unmasked."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '29 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p561 Jl 11 '29 240w

DAVIS, BRITTON. Truth about Geronimo; ed. with an introd. by M. M. Quaife. 253p il $4 Yale univ. press [18s Oxford]

970.3 Geronimo, Apache chief. Apache Indians 29-21699

The story of the campaign against the famous Apache chief, Geronimo, in the '80s. One year after his graduation from West Point, the author was detailed for service in the region where Geronimo was on the warpath, and for the next three years he remained in the district; part of the time on duty at the San Carlos reservation, and part of the time in the field, helping to round up the Apache warrior.

---

"It is a well-knit, carefully executed narrative, thickly sown with humorous or thrilling incidents, and all of it is engagingly told." W. J. Ghent

+ Nation 129:684 D 4 '29 480w

"Hereafter Lieutenant Davis's work will have to be among those consulted by any one wishing to write accurately of the trouble with Geronimo. In addition to its value as a historical source book, the volume affords many entertaining pages of adventures with the army, of roughing it on the frontier, of interesting incidents in the contact with the Indians."

+ N Y Times p12 O 20 '29 370w

"An exciting story of adventure, as well as an interesting chapter in the history of the Southwest." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 153:388 N 6 '29 100w

DAVIS, BRITTON—Continued

"The title of his book is badly chosen, for the 'truth about Geronimo' has been well known, even to the general reader, since the publication in 1891 of John G. Bourke's 'On the Border with Crook,' and Mr. Davis's contribution to the subject is mainly corroborative; it effects no change in the general outline of the story and but very little in its details. He has told more 'truth about Geronimo,' and that is all." L. C. Wroth

Yale R n s 19:431 N '29 120w

DAVIS, MRS CLARE OGDEN. Woman of it. 312p $2.50 Sears

29-16171

"Mrs. Davis, who has been personal secretary to a woman governor, as well as a newspaper writer in Texas, attempts to show us the struggle between the woman and the governor which takes place in the life of Della Lawrence, when the latter takes her seat in the high places of the political world."—Boston Transcript

Bookm 70:xxx N '29 120w

"A fairly correct if rather naive picture is painted of an immensely dramatic situation . . . The book moves rapidly, is colloquial, earnest and characterizes its people sufficiently to help its rather jumbled point to appear." A. B. Parsons

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 S 1 '29 580w

"The book is cleverly and entertainingly written. The characterizations are witty and neat. As a revelation of woman's possibilities in the world of affairs, the book is a great success." R. R. M.

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 7 '29 420w

"Mrs. Davis's book, written in the concise and lively style of contemporary journalism may be an accurate picture of the motivation underlying one woman's political career, but it certainly cannot be accepted as the final verdict of all women in public life."

+ — N Y Times p22 D 1 '29 550w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 27 '29 320w

DAVIS, H. P. Black democracy; the story of Haiti. 370p il $5 Dial press [20s Allen, G.]

972.94 Haiti—History 28-13117

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"His volume gives the best account, in book form, of the American occupation that has appeared. One wishes, however, that he had probed more deeply into Haitian finance before the war, and into the alleged activities of the National Bank in creating conditions that provoked revolution. Had he dwelt upon Haitian culture, such as the work of Haitian poets and scholars before the war, he would have given a more accurate picture of Haiti as an independent nation." R. L. Buell

+ — Am Pol Sci R 23:1036 N '29 150w

"The volume is interestingly written, and there is a good index, but little accuracy is shown in spelling Spanish words. Some valuable notes on the different chapters, and a good bibliography are added at the end of the volume, which show that the author has been painstaking and conscientious in his efforts to produce a scholarly, and, at the same time, a popular work." A. C. Wilgus

+ Hist Outlook 20:303 O '29 300w

"Mr. Davis has written a very good book, surprisingly impartial, and many of his facts are not easily obtainable elsewhere."

+ Nation and Ath 45:802 S 21 '29 110w

"This is the most instructive and intelligent book on Haiti yet published in this country."

+ New Statesman 33:52 Ap 20 '29 560w

Spec 142:580 Ap 13 '29 150w

"To the average reader in this country the most interesting part of Mr. Davis's book will probably be the earlier chapters in which he chronicles the picturesque but sanguinary history of the Haitians during the period when they were masters of their own affairs."

Times [London] Lit Sup p304 Ap 18 '29 1250w

DAVIS, HENRY WILLIAM CARLESS. Age of Grey and Peel; with an introd. by G. M. Trevelyan. (Ford lectures, 1926) 347p $4.50 (15s) Oxford

942.07 Great Britain—Politics and government

29-21169

The late regius professor of modern history in Oxford university delivered these lectures in 1926. The lectures "are concerned with the parties and the ideas of English politics in the first half of the Nineteenth Century; also with certain movements, intellectual, social, political, which originated outside party politics, but which in different fashions influenced party programmes. The general object of the studies is to show how general principles, often of very broad and vague description, were applied in practice." (Introd)

"The late Professor of Modern History at Oxford, in this volume of Ford lectures, tried to find out what he really thought about the statesmen who, roughly from 1750-1850, ruled England and brought into being the modern State. After finishing this well-balanced, learned, sober, and intelligent book, the reader will very likely come to the conclusion that the author had never made up his mind about the subject. But he will not be inclined to blame the distinguished historian overmuch. For, unless he is an unusually opinionated person, he will share suspense of judgment with the author. . . Sufficient to say that he makes us go over all our beliefs again, and this is the highest tribute which can be paid to a course of lectures." Francis Birrell

+ Nation and Ath 45:435 Je 29 '29 1000w

"Professor Davis had a great gift for putting himself into the place of the statesman whose conduct he was considering, and he makes in these pages a fresh and judicial study of men and events at a time when men and events were unusually interesting. Some of his character sketches are excellent, and he catches the atmosphere of the memoirs of the time very happily."

+ New Statesman 33:346 Je 22 '29 500w

"Professor Davis surveys the theories of writers and thinkers with a tolerant patience, like a sympathetic tutor who wants to draw his pupil out and to see exactly what he has to say for himself. At the same time, he follows the movement of politics and the sequence of events; and here he excels in describing and summing up. He is always ready to give a man credit when he thinks credit is due, and he never forgets that men are rarely all of one piece. In his pages nobody is quite a hero, and nobody is quite a villain."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p461 Je 13 '29 4500w

DAVIS, JEROME DWIGHT, ed. Labor speaks for itself on religion; a symposium of labor leaders throughout the world; with an introd. by [the editor]. 265p $2 (8s 6d) Macmillan

261 Church and labor 29-13318

"Here for the first time we have a compilation from labor leaders all over the world stating frankly their opinion about religion. In many cases we have left the manuscripts just as they came to us, even including ungrammatical phrases. No matter what one's own attitude toward religion may be, he is likely to be shocked by some of the unconventional attitudes herein expressed." (Preface) There are contributions from the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Russia, Germany, Czechoslovakia, Mexico, China, Austria, Australia, Belgium and Japan.

Booklist 26:55 N '29

"The various view points are well presented and full of material for thought and for discussion." G. R. B. R.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 3 '29 550w

"The book presents an exceedingly valuable body of material, not because these opinions of the labor leaders are correct but because they are actual opinions of millions of laboring men."
+ Christian Century 46:1123 S 11 '29 300w

Reviewed by J: Brophy
New Repub 59:346 Ag 14 '29 600w

"Ministers and church leaders of all sects will do well to read what the book has to say, for it is very likely that few of them have any idea of what has been going on in the minds of labor leaders and their followers in this matter. Here they can find out both the what and the why of that thinking."
+ N Y Times p11 Jl 21 '29 650w

"Some of these statements [of spokesmen for labor] are extremely biased, but they are a most valuable source book for men and women who want to do more than touch the surface of this whole question." E. B. Chaffee
+ Outlook 152:108 My 15 '29 90w
St Louis 27:304 N '29
Wis Lib Bul 25:317 O '29

"The balance of the book is not so good as might be wished. It is unfortunate that the United States with one of the weakest labor movements in the world should furnish nearly half of the essays while British labor, perhaps better qualified to discuss this particular theme than any other national group, should supply only three. But on the whole, Professor Davis has performed his task of compilation extraordinarily well." H: P. Van Dusen
+ — World Tomorrow 12:474 N '29 1100w

DAVIS, MARY MONTAGUE. Dr Pete of the Sierras. 211p $1.75 Macmillan
28-11316

Fifteen-year-old Peter Martin spends a year in the California mountains as the protégé of Dr Prince. From this good friend Peter learns to ride and shoot. At first he cherishes a secret ambition to be a bandit, but following the doctor on his emergency calls up and down the mountain trails, to the Indians and to the lumber camps, Peter decides to become a doctor too.

---

"A clever tale for boys that succeeds in pointing out a moral without becoming pedantic. The author has shown a keen knowledge of boy psychology in her sympathetic pen portrait of Peter Martin."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 11 '28 160w

"A boy's book that is good enough for a second reading."
+ Springf'd Republican p7f S 2 '28 80w
Wis Lib Bul 24:309 N '28

DAVIS, OZORA STEARNS. Credentials of the church. 115p $1.25 (5s 6d) Macmillan
261 Church 28-22582

"These are the Earle Lectures delivered at the Pacific School of Religion in September, 1928. An attempt has been made to answer two questions. First, why should one give money and service to the church? And what valid claims has the church to such a devotion as is necessary to provide it leadership? Dr. Davis points out the error of those who are content with critical censure of the church, who altogether ignore its claims, or who are militantly opposed to it. The only fair attitude seems to him to be one of alliance and cooperation in recognition of the various needs of differing individuals and groups."—J Religion

---

"Without dogmatism or special pleading Dr. Davis replies helpfully and reassuringly to such practical questions as these: What is the church good for? What has it done? What can it do? Why should a man support it or work with and through it?"
+ Christian Century 45:1081 S 6 '28 80w

"It is written with sympathetic understanding and positive conviction, in answer to the widely spread questioning, 'Why should I give money, or service, or life to the church?'" W: R. McNutt
+ Crozer Q 6:125 Ja '29 240w
J Religion 9:165 Ja '29 100w
Pratt p8 spring '29
St Louis 26:375 D '28

DAVIS, ROBERT HOBART. Bob Davis abroad! 330p $2 Appleton
910 Voyages and travels 29-16173

Brief, human-interest sketches of personal experiences, anecdotes, legends and interviews gleaned from travel in foreign countries.

---

"The book sparkles with curious bits of relatively unwritten history. Bob Davis Abroad is good reading and sound humanity. It conforms to the Golden Rule." A. B. Maurice
+ Bookm 70:xxix O '29 150w

"That swift and unerring sense of what constitutes a good story, which made Bob Davis a good editor, inevitably makes him a good traveler. He can unearth the dramatic in the commonplace and extract the human values out of an incident which to a less trained eye and a less imaginative mind would be without significance. With these attainments he has the easy, racy style of the journalist who can express himself vigorously and amusingly. In a word, he has the punch."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p34 D 1 '29 170w

"Mr. Davis has repeatedly in previous volumes shown himself to be both a good newspaper man and a versatile and entertaining raconteur. He has the nose for a good story, the sense of drama, the interest in human beings, the instinct for climax and the gift for narration demanded for success in either category. All these qualities, as well as some others, are in evidence in this new collection of little tales gathered up here and there during his days of travel, work, or pleasure."
+ N Y Times p16 Ag 11 '29 230w
Times [London] Lit Sup p797 O 10 '29 90w

DAVIS, WILLIAM STEARNS. Whirlwind. 527p $2.50 Macmillan
29-23882

The French revolution is the background of this love story. "Like Mirabeau, de Massac, thrown into prison by a lettre de cachet to prevent his making a marriage considered undesirable by his relatives, absorbs political ideas there, and emerges a philosophical revolutionary, friend of St. Just, Danton, and Robespierre. Like Mirabeau, he is trusted by both parties. But where Mirabeau died when he might have been most useful, de Massac lives to see the bloodless revolution, which was to have ushered in the brotherhood of man, go mad. Nevertheless, he remains faithful to his ideals, and though he and his wife undergo many trials, they survive to greet the new day." (Outlook)

---

"The book fills one niche. It provides an easy background for young people engaged in learning revolutionary history."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 D 15 '29 250w

"The reader of Professor Davis's novel, who has little knowledge of all the complexities of the French Revolution at its beginning, will soon discover that as the story progresses, he is making excellent progress in his understanding of them. If after turning its last pages he does not pursue the matter further, if he does not seek to discover something more about these men and their time, he must have no curiosity and no desire to follow the pathways of history." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p10 N 2 '29 1500w

Reviewed by F: F. Van de Water
N Y Evening Post p11m N 2 '29 50w
N Y Evening Post p12m N 16 '29 180w

DAVIS, W: S.—Continued

"The novel is a very long one, but it is unceasingly interesting. The construction and style are excellent, and the complicated plot has been admirably managed. Mr. Davis has written one of the best, most vivid and most dramatic among recent historical novels."

+ N Y Times p24 N 10 '29 800w

"In The Whirlwind William Stearns Davis takes an aristocrat gone revolutionary and makes as good and a far more credible romantic figure of him than the Baroness Orczy ever made of her Scarlet Pimpernel. The Whirlwind is exciting and satisfactory and should please boys as well as their parents."

+ Outlook 153:311 O 23 '29 320w

DAWSON, CHRISTOPHER HENRY. Progress and religion; an historical enquiry. 254p $4 Longmans [10s 6d Sheed]

201 Progress. Religion. Civilization

[29-20053]

A study of the relation between religion and culture. Progress, interpreted sociologically and historically, is discussed, followed by an analysis of the light anthropology throws upon the theory of progress. The greater portion of the book includes a detailed study of the rise of world religions, Christianity and western civilization, western culture and the religion of progress, and the effect of the age of science and industrialism upon the religion of progress.

Reviewed by Bradford Young

Churchman p16 O 5 '29 120w

"The book is not very happily named, as the relations between progress and religion are still left obscure at the end. It is not clear if progress and religion are compatible; all depends on the definitions."

— Sat R 147:840 Je 22 '29 220w

"Mr. Dawson has written a profound, stimulating, and sometimes provocative book, which must be studied by all who desire to see in their wider context the problems of the modern world." Evelyn Underhill

+ Spec 142:786 My 18 '29 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p435 My 30 '29 1260w

DAWSON, CONINGSBY WILLIAM. Unknown soldier. 60p $1 Doubleday, Doran

29-12485

Reprinted from the Delineator where it first appeared, this short story of the war suggests that in the person of the Unknown Soldier of each nation, Jesus Christ lived and died anew.

"Who was The Unknown Soldier? . . . It has remained for Mr. Dawson to transform the common wonder into a parable full of that beauty of conception and execution such as he alone could create."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 22 '29 330w

"Perhaps 'we Americans, French, British, Italians buried replicas of a master man who fought and died in all armies—as a doughboy, a poilu, a tommy.' We wonder." H. A. Prichard

Churchman 140:5 Ag 17 '29 180w

DAWSON, CONINGSBY WILLIAM. When [2] Father Christmas was late. 250p il $3 Doubleday, Doran

Christmas stories

Six short stories on the Christmas theme, some for grownups and others for children. All have been previously published in magazines. Contents: A Christmas legend of Hamelin town; When Father Christmas was late; The little house; Mother of God; To love is to laugh; The seventh Christmas.

+ — Boston Transcript p10 N 23 '29 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p144 N '29

"Half a dozen pleasant little spun sugar Christmas stories."

N Y Times p22 D 15 '29 320w

DAY, MRS LILLIAN (ABRAMS). Paganini of [2] Genoa. 318p $3.50 Macaulay

B or 92 Paganini, Niccolò 29-24163

The life of the world's greatest violin virtuoso —Niccolo Paganini—who, because of his magical technique and strange, Satanic appearance, was accused of being in league with the devil. Much that is legend has hitherto surrounded the actual life of this son of a poor Genoese peddler, whose weak physique was exhausted not only by his playing but by gambling and love affairs. Miss Day has endeavored to explain the Paganini myth, and to throw more light upon Paganini the man than has hitherto been done.

"The story of this unique creature Lillian Day has written in aggressive and often vivid journalese. Short chapters and short paragraphs are doubtless adjusted to the rhythm of a hurrrying age. Still, Paganini was, primarily a musician, and the musical side of this book is its weakest." P: Bowdoin

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 N 24 '29 900w

"The author of 'Paganini of Genoa' has written a biography in the most commendable modern manner. Miss Day has given us few explanations of his conduct at any time. We are thankful for a conspicuous absence of soliloquy, of imagined and imaginary conversations; and only a few 'Freudianisms' mar an otherwise sane exposé of Niccolo Paganini." M. E. Walker

+ — N Y Times p10 N 24 '29 1400w

DEAN, HARRY. Pedro Gorino; the adventures of a negro sea-captain in Africa and on the seven seas in his attempts to found an Ethiopian empire; an autobiographical narrative by Captain Harry Dean; written with the assistance of Sterling North (Eng title Umbala). 262p $3.50 Houghton [7s 6d Harrap]

B or 92 Voyages and travels. Seafaring life. South Africa 29-6322

Harry Dean is a Negro sea captain, the son of makers and masters of ships. Proud of his free African blood, he expresses himself strongly concerning Africa under the imperialism with which he came into contact during his sometimes unlawful trade on the African coast in his schooner the Pedro Gorino.

Booklist 25:316 My '29

"These adventures of a Negro sea captain who sailed the Seven Seas and roamed Africa in his attempts to found an Ethiopian Empire are, for their apparent authenticity, as absorbing and thrilling as any one man has any right to expect as his portion for a solitary life. The story, as it has been taken down by Sterling North from the lips of Captain Dean, is the more convincing for its simplicity of style."

+ Bookm 69:viii Mr '29 80w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 27 '29 930w

"The tale is slow in gathering momentum, and only upon reaching the middle of the volume does it seriously take hold of one, but from then on the account of Captain Dean's life in the heart of native Africa is fascinating. This part of the action took place during the Boer War. Captain Dean presents a black, bitter record of imperialistic intrigue and exploitation of the natives, in which he himself was finally ruined and driven out of Africa under threat of further persecution."

+ Nation 128:594 My 15 '29 200w

"A substantial and significant book, though its early pages lack a certain vitality. Once the captain has assumed command of the 'Pedro Gorino,' and has become a part of the complex life of South Africa during the Boer War, his narrative comes alive and makes rich reading." L. S. Spear

+ New Repub 58:366 My 15 '29 300w

"Obviously an account of such a life should make interesting reading. It does." E. S.

+ N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 9 '29 130w

"The tale of his adventures is a glamourous yarn, well told, and held strictly within the bounds of probability. The publishers vouch for the truth of the narrative."
+ N Y Times p5 Mr 3 '29 760w

Reviewed by C: J. Finger
N Y World p11m Ap 21 '29 800w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 227:adv Ap '29 50w

"An unusual book. . . There is a ring of sincerity in his story which we listened for in vain in the tale of that other African adventurer, Trader Horn." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 151:520 Mr 27 '29 100w

St Louis 27:288 O '29

" 'Umbala' means in English 'It is true,' otherwise we should have found considerable difficulty in believing a word of it. It is worth while making an effort to believe it, if only to get the full effect of such an extraordinary record of fantastic adventure."
Sat R 147:747 Je 1 '29 80w

Reviewed by D: W. Bone
Sat R of Lit 5:1175 Jl 13 '29 850w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '29 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p387 My 9 '29 200w

Wis Lib Bul 25:126 Ap '29

"Altogether a thoroughly interesting chronicle with fascinating descriptions of native life remote from 'civilization.' "
+ World Tomorrow 12:284 Je '29 70w

DEANE, ELIZABETH. Easily persuaded. 312p $2 Liveright

29-6450

Despite an early repugnance for the facts of life, little Doris cherishes a romantic ideal of love. Ever hopeful and obliging she pursues her ideal thru a variety of episodes related in a style that aspires to a blend of the naïve and the sophisticated.

Bookm 69:xxii Je '29 90w

"Her extensive flyer in males is amusing enough, with as many morals neatly tucked in as the reader is willing to supply for himself."
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 S 15 '29 270w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 24 '29 300w

"It does no injustice to the individual qualities of this quite brilliant novel, to say of it first of all that it raises lively memories of 'The Hardboiled Virgin' and 'Dead Lovers Are Faithful Lovers.' 'Easily Persuaded' must be ranked among those novels that are literature." Shaemas O'Sheel
+ N Y World p11m Ap 21 '29 430w

Outlook 151:554 Ap 3 '29 20w

DEARBORN, WALTER FENNO. Intelligence tests, their significance for school and society. 336p il $2.50 Houghton

151.2 Mental tests 28-11993

"The author confines himself for the most part to the evaluation of the methods and results of intelligence-testing with only such description of tests themselves as is necessary for that purpose."—El School J

"The chief purpose of this well-written treatise is to emphasize that the thing measured by intelligence tests does not owe its nature altogether to heredity, but very largely to educational or environmental influences. Instead of analyzing in a thorough-going way the relative importance of nature and nurture in determining existing individual differences, the author marshals a mass of data which he uniformly interprets as pointing toward the importance of environment." Herbert Woodrow
Am J Psychol 41:669 O '29 300w

Booklist 25:7 O '28

Cleveland Open Shelf p74 My '29

"Professor Dearborn has long been identified with the testing movement and is qualified to speak authoritatively on the subject. For this reason it should be ground for considerable satisfaction to all who are interested in education that he has not allowed his enthusiasm for the indubitable accomplishments of this movement to blind himself to its just as indubitable limitations." E. H. Cameron
+ El School J 29:628 Ap '29 760w

Pratt p11 winter '29

"Is an excellent treatise." R. H. Ojemann
+ School R 37:317 Ap '29 450w

DE CASTRO, ADOLPHE DANZIGER. Portrait of Ambrose Bierce. 351p il $3.50 Century

B or 92 Bierce, Ambrose 29-6713

A friend and one-time collaborator of Ambrose Bierce has written this eulogistic and uncritical biography which acclaims Bierce, among other superlatives, as the greatest critic of his time.

"Though Dr. de Castro undoubtedly knew Bierce for a few years, when he was in his twenties and Bierce was in his forties one cannot accept any of his statements without scrutiny; for his portrait is beslobbered with irrelevant emotions and confessions, is full of pretentious judgments and in general has an authentic air of unreliability." L: Mumford
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Mr 24 '29 1600w

"Dr. De Castro's judgments of Bierce do not inspire confidence in his accuracy as a critic, whatever may be said of his accuracy as a biographer. There is much silliness in his extravagant and wordy book."
— Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 17 '29 200w

"As a memoir it contains flashes of shrewd insight." Carey McWilliams
Nation 128:768 Je 26 '29 270w

"Bierce undoubtedly did not receive from his contemporaries the recognition his work merited. He undoubtedly suffered much from this world, and often unjustly. But it is equally true that he is not one of the greatest American writers, and that in his many troubles he was not always in the right nor his opponents always in the wrong. Such a naïvely uncritical picture of Bierce as Mr. de Castro's can hardly be called a biography." Napier Wilt
— New Repub 58:338 My 8 '29 470w

"Dr. Danziger's book remains an interesting memoir, particularly to those who are able to sift out the passages colored with bias and the further passages where the doctor errs. He succeeds best when he merely records remarks that Bierce made at various times. Some of these have about them the unmistakable imprint of Bierce's thought." Carey McWilliams
+ — N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 30 '29 850w

"Like most friends Mr. de Castro is incapable of disentangling Bierce's work from his personality and the result is a tremendous overvaluation and excessive praise. . . But there is much that is instructive in Mr. de Castro's work, in spite of the high coloring and overpraise." Herbert Gorman
— + N Y Times p4 Mr 24 '29 1000w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 227:adv My '29 60w

"Warm-hearted eulogy, verging on the sentimental." W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:18 My '29 80w

DEEPING, WARWICK (GEORGE WARWICK, pseud.). Roper's Row. 365p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Cassell]

29-17320

Christopher's mother has sacrificed greatly to put him thru medical college. And for her sake Chris has suffered, without retaliation, the sneers of his fellow students at his lameness and his difference. Ruth Avery, who rooms in the same house in shabby Roper's Row loves the earnest, pale young student, and like his mother wants nothing better than to serve him. After they are married his success is largely due to her faith and courage. How much he owes her, Chris one day comes to realize completely.

DEEPING, WARWICK—Continued

---

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:562 Ap '29

Booklist 26:32 O '29

" 'Roper's Row' would profit greatly by curtailment. There is too much description of minor detail and a too frequent use of metaphorical language which hamper the action and retard the interest. Stripped of this unnecessary verbiage it would still have the elements of a good story and would be more readable and absorbing."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ag 11 '29 250w

"As in his other novels, Mr. Deeping chronicles a human triumph. In 'Roper's Row' it is the triumph of a young man, handicapped by lameness and lack of means, over the many stumbling blocks that lie in his path towards his profession. . . In 'Roper's Row,' both as a story and as a commentary upon certain phases of modern English life, Mr. Deeping has certainly excelled all its predecessors." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 3 '29 1300w

"In 'Roper's Row' he writes with knowledge and keen insight into the difficulties that face a poor student in his efforts to gain an education." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ag 31 '29 520w

Reviewed by L. L. Irvine

Nation and Ath 45:767 S 14 '29 360w

"The only legitimate quarrel one may have with 'Roper's Row' is that, for no definable reason, many of the scenes are slightly lacking in the final emotional strength one expects of the big scenes in this type of novel. Not that Mr. Deeping has failed to use any but the most banal of situations. His devices, death-bed scenes, the heroine attempting suicide upon learning she has been an unwitting obstacle in the hero's career, a struggle for the heroine's life in childbirth—these are certainly the most accredited devices, and Mr. Deeping has brilliantly introduced no changes in them. But still they seem a little flat. Perhaps because the novelist has spun them out to an even more than ordinary length." Kenneth Fearing

+ — N Y Evening Post p6m Ag 10 '29 500w

"In spite of all its failings, 'Roper's Row' is far better than several other of Mr. Deeping's novels, less tedious, less preachy and not quite so sloppily sentimental."

+ — N Y Times p8 S 15 '29 600w

" 'Roper's Row' is a triumph of the obvious. We have been able to discover in it no original idea or situation, no new turn of phrase, even. Mechanically perfect in plot, as Deeping's books always are, and well supplied with types, it lacks both the humor and the warm humanity which enriched 'Sorrell and Son.' "

— + Outlook 152:591 Ag 7 '29 300w

Pratt p37 autumn '29

"No one will find in 'Roper's Row' a document that tallies in any way with their experience of what is normal and natural, but they will find in those pages, by far the most interesting, which deal with Christopher's work in Roper's Row, a humanity and a sympathy which lift the novel out of the class to which its lack of sane intellectual control seems at times to condemn it."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p700 S 12 '29 370w

DEERFORTH, DANIEL. Knock wood! superstition through the ages. 200p $3 Brentano's

291.2 Superstition. Religion and science

28-23319

After some pages devoted to the survivals of primitive magic and superstitions that have persisted through the ages the author goes on to study the works of Christianity and the struggle between science and religion.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 D 30 '28 110w

Boston Transcript p6 N 24 '28 120w

"It is merely a rather dull account, neither erudite nor entertaining, of the struggle between science and priestcraft."

— Outlook 150:1175 N 14 '28 70w

"His material is not new; much of it is candidly quoted from Andrew D. White's 'Warfare,' and practically all of it deals with material which the church, whether Catholic or Protestant, has already explained away to the satisfaction of the devout, if not of the scientist or the historian. Dr. Deerforth's most valuable personal contribution to this familiar debate is his occasional editorial comment which reveals a dry humor, and a civilized kindliness."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:331 N 3 '28 250w

"The facts, fetiches, delusions and illusions of ancient, medieval and modern days are all listed. It seems that Dr Deerforth has left no stone unturned to reach them all. He gives a disproportionate amount of attention to religions of the past few centuries and their effect upon the people of the time."

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 N 26 '28 580w

DE HAAS, JACOB. Louis D. Brandeis, a biographical sketch; with special reference to his contributions to Jewish and Zionist history; with full text of his addresses delivered from 1912 to 1914. 296p il $3 Bloch

B or 92 Brandeis, Louis Dembitz. Zionism

29-17817

"It is Brandeis, convert to Zionism, who in 1914 became chairman of the Zionist Provisional Emergency Committee and who for ten years thereafter was the leader of the Jewish Nationalist Movement, in whom DeHaas is primarily interested and to whom he devotes the greater part of his book. His first chapter reviews contemporary Jewish history; his last chapters give a critical analysis of the facts which led Brandeis to withdraw from the Zionist leadership. . . His addresses on Zionism, which DeHaas reprints at length, reveal the genius at once of 'the people's attorney' and of this modern prophet of the Priest People. They make DeHaas' book more than a biographical sketch, as he modestly calls it; through them it becomes a vivid interpretation of the ideas and aspirations which in our day have stirred nations to a new birth throughout the world."—Survey

---

"The account is somewhat marred by uncritical esteem for Brandeis and intense vituperation of Weizmann and his other adversaries. . . The book contains much authoritative and intimate knowledge, however, and it provides a really needed interpretation of recent Jewish, especially Zionist, history. The concise preliminary historical survey is excellent."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 O 27 '29 270w

Boston Transcript p10 O 26 '29 350w

Nation 129:782 D 25 '29 40w

"To the non-Jewish reader [the] Zionist emphasis may at first be repellent as setting a great American in a too parochial framework; but if he will read the book through he will find that DeHaas has not only enriched his knowledge of the man Brandeis, but has also enlarged his conception of the spiritual implications of democracy in our modern civilization." R. W. Bruère

+ Survey 63:175 N 1 '29 450w

DEKOBRA, MAURICE. Clown prince; tr. by Neal Wainwright. 216p $1.50 Payson & Clarke

28-25636

A humorous extravaganza concerning a crown prince of Phrygia who did not choose to be king.

---

"Critical souls may, if they choose, regard Phrygia as a burlesque of Zenda and M. Dekobra's prank as a parody, satire or what not; as such or otherwise it is swift, amusing and harmless."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ja 20 '29 90w

"We are asked to accept this book as a sort of 'rollicking extravaganza . . . in a burlesque vein . . . shot through with satire and a sort of rushing whimsicality.' After such a prophecy it would seem not unreasonable to expect either amusement or clever satire. What the reader gets is such fun as may be extracted from the use of 'grip the fin' for 'shake the hand of'; 'tummy' for stomach, and witticisms of similar kind."

— Boston Transcript p3 D 29 '28 100w

"A mildly amusing bit of buffoonery." Edwin Seaver

N Y Evening Post p11m D 8 '28 70w

"While this is at base the same kind of humor that has made Donald Ogden Stewart the king of zanies in American letters, and while it has the utter abandon of our monkey-shines, the actual cleverness of phrase and thought sequence is often missing."

— N Y Times p16 Je 16 '29 350w

DEKOBRA, MAURICE. Love clinic; tr. from Flammes de velours by F. M. Atkinson. 268p $2.50 Payson & Clarke

29-6346

"This pompous and gaudy concoction has for villain an Austrian physician, Dr. Schomberg, wizard mesmerist, who conducts a sanatarium for rich, broken-hearted ladies in a secluded Bohemian chateau. From a fashionable Vienna cabaret he abducts a beautiful young girl, confines her in his retreat, subjects her to the black arts of hypnotic suggestion, and completely ob literates her will and personality. Philippe, budding French diplomat, rescues the girl from the toils, fleeing with her to Algiers and Spain, the fiendish Schomberg in hot pursuit."—N Y World

---

"Maurice Dekobra tosses off frothy, sophisticated and swift-moving tales with rare facility. . . In a deft manner he gives a pseudo-intellectual tone to the novel, which, blended with his unusual subject and a slightly ironic humor, succeeds in placing the story above the general run of popular fiction."

+ Bookm 69:xxv My '29 130w

"The author makes clever use of hypnotism and occult lore by way of manufacturing quite genuine shudders."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ap 28 '29 150w

"With its interesting plot, and the gay, sophisticated, swift, and intensely droll style, there is ample reason why this novel should delight its American readers as it has its Continental admirers."

+ Boston Transcript p10 Mr 30 '29 200w

"What conceivable appeal such pretentious trash may have for an intelligent reader is not apparent, but there are probably many people who will think the book is great stuff."

— N Y World p11m Ap 28 '29 120w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 151:435 Mr 13 '29 110w

DEKOBRA, MAURICE. Serenade to the hangman; tr. from Serenade au bourreau, by Neal Wainwright. 272p $2.50 Payson & Clarke [7s 6d Laurie]

29-22799

Ibrahim Bey, Egyptian, was saved from execution by Dr Schomberg, husband of his beloved mistress, on condition that he commit suicide one year from the day of his release from prison. It was Schomberg's conception of ideal revenge upon the man who had stolen his wife. But Mareva, by a ruse of supreme treachery, manages to save her lover on the fatal day.

---

Boston Transcript p10 N 30 '29 220w

"The book is happier in its beginning, when the author has a free hand to exercise his extravagant fancy, than when he is forced to cut his cloth to the exigencies of the plot. An amusing book."

+ — N Y Times p33 N 24 '29 180w

"A very gay and roguish tale, it is scarcely suitable fare for the serious-minded."

Sat R of Lit 6:490 N 30 '29 180w

DE KOVEN, ANNA (FARWELL) (MRS REGINALD DE KOVEN). Horace Walpole and Madame du Deffand; an eighteenth century friendship. 199p il $3 (10s 6d) Appleton

B or 92 Walpole, Horace, 4th earl of Orford. Du Deffand de La Lande, Marie Anne (de Vichy Chamrond) marquise 29-20135

When Horace Walpole and Madame du Deffand first met, she was seventy, and blind. Walpole was twenty years younger. A warm intellectual friendship sprang up between the English letter writer and the brilliant Frenchwoman, whose salon had kept its supremacy thru three reigns. The first part of the book narrates the earlier history of the two friends and the second half is given to extracts from their letters.

---

"Mrs. de Koven has been able to grasp the essential beauty and meaning of a relation in which the superficial observer can see only a species of infatuation on the part of the woman, or unnecessary cruelty on the part of the man. She has said beautifully what needs to be said on a subject which has never been adequately treated." H. F. Whicher

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 D 15 '29 1200w

"This is a delightful picture, with charming illustrations, of a day which has vanished."

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 23 '29 380w

"Mrs. de Koven has devoted the first half of her volume to a study of the eighteenth-century background, both English and French. Thus her book gives not only the most complete idea of the curious friendship that is to be found apart from the letters themselves, but it also offers a thorough and just approach to it. In scholarly fashion the author presents her material first, reserving her judgment until the end, so that the account is unprejudiced and her interpretation, right or wrong, in no way interferes with the evidence." Florence Codman

+ Nation 129:682 D 4 '29 300w

"It might be remarked that in those charming seventh and ninth chapters of his 'Horace Walpole,' Austin Dobson has already said—and said inimitably—whatever need be concerning this 'Eighteenth Century Friendship' whose embers Mrs. de Koven has rewarmed in her attractive study. She has, however, rounded out with sympathy and skill this sadly sentimental tale." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p8m N 30 '29 100w

Reviewed by Edwin Clark

N Y Times p12 D 29 '29 1350w

"Mrs. De Koven has told in a quiet, graceful prose suitable to her theme the stories of the two correspondents, has described the scenes in which they moved and had their being, has etched in their contemporaries and has devoted the bulk of her book to the two-sided correspondence and to the manner in which each affected the other." Harry Salpeter

+ N Y World p10m N 24 '29 420w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 17 '29 120w

Sat R of Lit 6:348 N 2 '29 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p1062 D 12 '29 300w

DE KRUIF PAUL HENRY. Seven iron men. 241p il $3 Harcourt

926.2 Merritt family. Merritt, Leonidas. Iron mines and mining. Mesabe range, Minnesota 29-20416

The "Seven Iron Men" are the Merritt brothers—and this is the story chiefly of Leonidas, Bert, and John E., and their uncovering of the basins of iron at the foot of the Missa-be Hills near Duluth.

---

DE KRUIF, PAUL HENRY—Continued

Booklist 26:105 D '29

"Certainly it is no small contribution to the history of the American people to unfold the tale of the discovery and development of those huge iron deposits of the Mesabe Range flanking Lake Superior. To these perhaps quite as much as to any other one factor the country owes its industrial supremacy in the age of steel. At least Dr. De Kruif would make this plain with a clever but too constant harping on the theme for maximum effectiveness. His book, indeed, suffers from one very serious defect which stems from his evident belief that he must impress the reader with the epic nature of his material. Nevertheless, he eventually reduces to very human terms the giant forces that grip his imagination as well as the action of his story." W: M. Houghton

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 S 29 '29 850w

Boston Transcript p4 N 9 '29 400w

"His story is a gorgeous piece of narrative writing. With unfailing skill he unwinds its tortuous links and lays them out straight and clear. The Merritts leap from the chronicle in all the colors of life—especially Lon, the king of them all, with his maudlin poetizing, his childlike faith in mankind, and his incredible tropical hat. It is a tale full of thrills, shot through with sardonic humors. All the virtues that made 'Microbe Hunters' and 'Hunger Fighters' so exhilarating are in it." H. L. Mencken

+ Nation 129:495 O 30 '29 750w

Reviewed by G. W. Harris

N Y Times p46 D 1 '29 1100w

"The story of the great-souled Merritts is heartening and picturesque, and the story of their negotiations with the Frick, Carnegie and Rockefeller interests which deprived them of their decent reward, picturesque and disheartening, and the book is worth reading. As usual, in Paul de Kruif's books, there is sound information under the easy manner, and honest enthusiasm under the slap-dash." F. L. Robbins

+ — Outlook 153:151 S 25 '29 230w

"Mr De Kruif has a knack of making a human narrative that is at once substantial and readable, and his subjects lie outside the fields of stereotyped popular biography."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 12 '29 500w

DELABARRE, EDMUND BURKE. Dighton rock; a study of the written rocks of New England. 369p il $6 Neale

974.4 Dighton rock. New England—Antiquities. Petroglyphs 28-22706

Dighton Rock, at Berkley, Massachusetts, is covered with inscriptions of various dates and significance, the earliest carved by aboriginal Indians, the latest by white men within the last century. Professor Burke of Brown University tells the story of the inscriptions and their various readings, and also describes other inscribed rocks of New England. The many illustrations and diagrams add further light and interest to the story.

---

"This book is a valuable contribution to New England archaeology, whether or not the reader is able to accept all the author's conclusions, which are presented in a clear and interesting manner." C: C. Willoughby

+ Am Anthropol 31:518 Jl '29 1500w

"The exhaustive bibliographies at the end are a most welcome tool. Reproductions of the author's own photographs of Dighton Rock, by flash-light and otherwise, are valuable. But when we come to Dr. Delabarre's own interpretation of and conclusions regarding the Dighton Rock inscription and other inscribed rocks of New England, it is another story. Truth compels me to state that a very few characters may have values assigned by Dr. Delabarre, but the rest can not be accepted." Truman Michelson

— + Am Hist R 35:414 Ja '30 500w

Boston Transcript p3 D 22 '28 580w

"The distinguished Professor of Psychology in Brown University has written a work which certainly deserves to be called monumental. The patience and painstakingness and the encyclopedic completeness which we used to associate with 'German' scholarship are all here." M. H. Gates

+ Churchman 139:17 My 4 '29 500w

"There is a large bibliography concerning the inscriptions on Dighton Rock, but the average reader needs to go no further than the monumental work by Edmund Burke Delabarre."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 S 17 '29 300w

DELAFIELD, E. M., pseud. See De La Pasture, E. E. M.

DE LA MARE, WALTER JOHN. Stories from the Bible. 393p il $3.50 Cosmopolitan bk. [7s 6d Faber]

221 Bible. Old Testament—Stories 29-16963

Thirty or more stories taken from the first nine books of the Bible, retold in narrative form for children.

---

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 S 15 '29 300w

"We doubt whether the older boys and girls for whom this book is intended will be led from it to reading the stories for themselves. The whole system of retelling standard books for children is a snare and a delusion . . . Mr. De la Mare's stories, moreover, are so insipid. Most healthy children—ignorant of pain—can suffer descriptions of bloodshed very gladly indeed. The stories of the Fall and the Flood, of Joseph and David, are not the beautiful fairy stories that Mr. De la Mare would have us believe; and in erasing the letter, he has killed the spirit too. He has omitted all unpleasantness, and put only poetic embellishment in its place."

— Nation and Ath 45:248 My 18 '29 550w

"Mr. de la Mare has taken rather more than thirty narratives from the first nine books of the Old Testament, and not so much retold as amplified them. The general effect is to deepen realisation, to bring out the latent significance of every phase in the briefer biblical version. Mr. de la Mare successfully preserves the dignity and beauty of the original, adding at the same time a not incommensurate dignity and beauty essentially his own. The familiar stories are regarded and narrated in a spirit of easy and simple belief, and have no more theological significance than fairy tales. The book is addressed primarily to children, but it deserves, for its revitalisation of sometimes too familiar tales, a wider public."

+ New Statesman 33:162 My 11 '29 100w

"He has kept to the text in many places, and when deviating from it has retained the graphic, tersely dramatic quality of the Bible. There is richness to the book, and it will, we are confident, 'persuade young readers to return to the inexhaustible well-spring from which it came,' which is Mr. de la Mare's wish. And it is partly because of that wish that he has made so fine a piece of work." M. G. Bonner

+ N Y Times p34 O 6 '29 120w

"Walter de la Mare has written a charming introduction; charming in its modesty, in its reverence, in its appreciation. . . The style is so simple, so beautiful, and so appealing that it will reach not only the children, but all discerning readers. I do not care for the illustrations—no, not at all." W: L. Phelps

+ Sat R of Lit 6:395 N 16 '29 420w

"It is marked by a delicacy of style and a fresh simplicity which enhances the familiar narratives of the Old Testament without materially changing them."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '29 160w

"Mr. De la Mare's variation certainly ought to please. Of course it sacrifices something. His art is one of tenderness and delicacy, the Old Testament is largely a book of bare crags and thunder. Sometimes we are conscious that Mr.

De la Mare is mollifying his text . . . One might almost say that Mr. De la Mare has taken Samson's riddle for his motto in this book: 'out of the strong the sweet.' "
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p333 Ap 25 '29 1100w

DE LA PASTURE, EDMEE ELIZABETH MONICA (MRS A. P. DASHWOOD) (E. M. DELAFIELD, pseud.). First love (Eng title What is Love?). 340p $2.50 Harper
29-1964

This story of the young post-war generation in England has for its heroine a lovely, shy and sensitive girl whose ideals derive from an earlier tradition. Ellie Carey gives her first love whole-heartedly to an attractive philanderer who has not the fine perception to see the beautiful things about her and is annoyed by her social incompetence. Simon leaves Ellie for her brilliant and ruthless, tho not deliberately treacherous cousin Vicky, truer product of her generation.

Booklist 25:247 Mr '29

"There is a lack of poignancy in First Love which prevents it from rising above the level of a readable and civilized tale." E. H. Walton
+ — Bookm 69:94 Mr '29 430w

" 'First Love' is sincere and intelligent, and when it shows young people as they happen to be (which is during a good share of the book) and ceases to bother about categories and causes (such as the late war) it is convincing." Mary Ross
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ja 27 '29 560w

"Again and again Mrs. Delafield places her characters in situations which a greater novelist would make heart rending, without the salve of sentiment. Instead she has chosen to make them slightly amusing, and in recollection a little bitter. . . The novel does not therefore give us Mrs. Delafield's best work. But it does show us the scope and power of her talent." D. F. Gilman
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ja 19 '29 1200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p46 Mr '29

"A very clever, very readable novel, perfectly designed to pass three hours easily," Francis Birrell
+ Nation and Ath 44:260 N 17 '28 180w

"Has all the charm of its predecessors and even more of that workmanlike competence of execution which is almost a distinction in itself." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 26 '29 500w

"The book is pretty repetitious, and it lacks something of Mrs. Delafield's usual brightness. Of all the minor characters, for example, only George Carey, Ellie's father, is up to Mrs. Delafield's best. And somehow the central tragedy of the book, the thing meant to lift it above a novel of manners, fails really to stir us."
— + N Y Times p8 Ja 27 '29 550w

"The theme of the book is vastly superior to its setting. Those bright, romantic, dancing creatures that comprise the characters do not exist with such gossamer grace in reality—and life even in the high places is not one continuous social affair. But the unequal battle of the simple and the sincere against the prismatic world, the world of many faces and calculating wit, goes on every day in the week. It is this battle that gives the book flesh, blood and breath."
+ — N Y World p11m F 17 '29 260w

"One of her less successful novels, though worth reading, like most things she writes." L. P. Hartley
+ — Sat R 146:694 N 24 '28 330w

Reviewed by Alice Fales
+ Sat R of Lit 5:834 Mr 30 '29 280w

Reviewed by R. A. Taylor
Spec 141:711 N 10 '28 130w

"There is not a character in the group which is not seen from the outside by the author, and the result, as in so much fiction, is that they all have little reality for the reader. Mrs Delafield's intelligent and disillusioned talk is hardly compensation for the failure in essentials."
— + Springf'd Republican p7e F 3 '29 300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p854 N 15 '28 620w
Wis Lib Bul 25:75 F '29

DE LA ROCHE, MAZO. Low life, and other plays. 109p $1.50 Little 812 29-26327

Three one-act plays with from three to six characters. In Low Life a charwoman is persuaded to accept a parasitic lodger because of his "refined" influence on the home. Come True presents a scene in an old people's home. In The Return of the Emigrant the homecoming of her aunt from America fires young Kirsteen to be leaving Ireland for the land of promise.

Booklist 25:313 My '29

" 'Low Life' and two other short plays by Mazo de la Roche, author of 'Jalna,' show a keen sense for reality and for character. As one-act plays they are a trifle deficient in the swift sharpness of incident the form requires, but they show that this young woman has the potential ability to transfer to the theater her peculiar qualities of observation." W. P. Eaton
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 24 '29 100w

"In all the plays there is a fine differentiation of character and an artistry of setting that stamp the productions as quite equal to Miss De La Roche's other and more ambitious achievements."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 16 '29 350w

Reviewed by Percy Hutchison
N Y Times p8 Jl 28 '29 120w
Wis Lib Bul 25:125 Ap '29

DE LA ROCHE, MAZO. Whiteoaks of Jalna. 423p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Macmillan]
29-17388

A continuation of "Jalna," the novel about the Whiteoaks family. In this story young Finch, the awkward, misunderstood, but musical genius of the family, is the center of interest. A climax is reached when the eccentric old grandmother, at her death, leaves all her fortune to Finch.

Booklist 26:70 N '29

"This new novel is as absorbing and forceful as the first."
+ Bookm 70:xxii N '29 120w

"The household at Jalna demands no more skillful handling on Renny's part than on that of its author. With one or two exceptions each of its members is an individual strongly differentiated from all the others. Some of them will be hard to forget. They are an unruly lot, each clamoring for the center of the reader's attention, but Miss de la Roche has them well in hand. Adroitly she juggles them and their changing relationships until they fit into the pattern of her book." Garreta Busey
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 S 8 '29 1000w

"The author's great skill makes a fairly good story out of a disordered wealth of material which she has not had the inclination to arrange. However, again and again we feel renewed eagerness to have another novel from her. For unquestionably Mazo de la Roche is a writer of imaginative genius, rare power, and with a remarkable ability (when she exercises it freely) of making her characters into fascinating realities." D. F. G.
+ Boston Transcript p1 S 7 '29 680w

"After reading 'Whiteoaks of Jalna' there will be probably some fault-finders who wonder why Miss de la Roche did not leave well enough alone. Perhaps 'Jalna' did not absolutely demand a sequel. But there were in it the definite possibilities of a sequel. Miss de la Roche has the skill and the imagination to tell us something important concerning the later lives of her characters, and I feel sure that everyone who met them in the pages of 'Jalna' will enjoy meeting them again during their reincarnation." E. F. Edgett

DE LA ROCHE, MAZO—Continued
+ Boston Transcript p7 O 19 '29 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p142 N '29

"Miss De La Roche writes well, in the straightforward, dramatic manner, avoiding the pretentious heaviness to which this kind of novel easily lends itself. Her tragi-comedy is better than pure tragedy. The scenes preceding Finch's flight are excellent, but his attempted suicide is disappointing, and Miss De La Roche scarcely follows up its psychological consequences."
+ — Nation and Ath 46:356 D 7 '29 130w

Reviewed by J: Crawford
N Y Evening Post p5m S 14 '29 550w

"Occasionally the author's knowingness about everything and every one—particularly, perhaps, in the New York interlude, where slight slips from complete verisimilitude may annoy the captious—lets down the drama. But on the whole one must admire the adroitness with which the points of view of every one taking part in an episode are brought out."
+ — N Y Times p6 S 8 '29 600w

Reviewed by Mary Shirley
Outlook 153:67 S 11 '29 320w

Reviewed by Johan Smertenko
Outlook 153:388 N 6 '29 120w

"Miss de la Roche has produced a book which every admirer of 'Jalna' will enjoy and wish to keep, and which should make new friends for her talent; but naturally enough, she has fallen a shade short of the fine, fresh inspiration of the first tale. Nevertheless, it is once more a rich and finely readable story that Miss de la Roche has given us." Allan Nevins
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:153 S 21 '29 500w

"Seen mainly through the eyes of Finch, a furtive and sensitive adolescent who is bluntly derided for his physical weakness, the story has in its opening pages an almost humid oppressiveness which weakens as the claims of a complicated plot and a heavy load of characters overwhelm the writer. The book is one of those in which one believes in the characters less at the conclusion than at the beginning." V. S. Pritchett
+ — Spec 143:691 N 9 '29 200w

"It is a memorable piece of creative and constructive writing, though simmer it down to bare facts and it is only a collection of daily trivialities. But at Jalna the smallest events had something of the vital spirit of its masters who even when we have closed the book still go on quarrelling, arguing, dominating long after the tale is done."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p1000 N 28 '29 550w

DELARUE-MARDRUS, MME LUCIE. Sainte Thérèse of Lisieux; a biography; tr. by Helen Younger Chase; with an introd. by Michael Williams. 134p il $2 (7s 6d) Longmans
B or 92 Thérèse de l'enfant Jesus, Saint
29-10485

The Little Flower, as this young Carmelite nun of Lisieux is known to millions of Catholic admirers, died in 1897 at the age of twenty-four, leaving behind her the manuscript of the story of a soul, written at the command of her Superior—a simple childlike autobiography, the story of her own spiritual life. In 1923 she was canonized as St Thérèse of the Child Jesus.

---

"By no means the ordinary type of biography. In the first place the author is not a Catholic. In the next place, she has an exquisite sense of art and seems to regard the brief career of St. Thérèse as a manifestation of the most unearthly of arts, the art of holiness. And, finally, she is a Norman, as Thérèse was, and so writes of this pure product of her beloved province with a feeling of patriotic as well as personal devotion. Her book is in consequence a thing of beauty for all those who have an eye for the splendor of innocence and for the radiance that glows in the deathless experience called mysticism." W: L. Sullivan
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ap 21 '29 300w
Wis Lib Bul 25:275 Jl '29

DELAYEN, GASTON. Misadventures of Martin Guerre; tr. from the French by Farrell Symons. 165p $3.50 Dutton
29-29430

A translated tale of old France, concerning the love of Martin Guerre and his young wife Bertrande, Martin's subsequent adventures for seven years away from his home, and the coming to Bertrande of a man who claimed to be the returned Martin Guerre. Some time after this the real Martin Guerre, supposedly, came back, and the story resolves into an effort to ascertain which was the true husband and which the impostor.

---

"Monsieur Gaston Delayen's tale is very pleasant and very sixteenth century, but its lengthy imbroglio and frequent litigations often get on one's nerves. Delayen is a successful Parisian lawyer who loves his Brantôme and his Rabelais, and his book, naturally, reflects the gossipy quality of these masters." Angel Flores
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 D 15 '29 450w

"It is pleasant reading and very charmingly put forth and printed." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p10m N 2 '29 80w

"The author of this incredible story borrows, as is fitting, the manner of a writer of fairy tales. That clear authentic language carries the reader through all improbabilities and leaves him unperturbed."
N Y Times p6 D 29 '29 500w

"The translation preserves the charm of the original, which is something almost unheard of." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 153:388 N 6 '29 60w

DELL, ETHEL MAY (MRS G. T. SAVAGE). Gate marked "private." 421p $2 Putnam [7s 6d Cassell]
28-24953

Roberta (Bobby) Wendholme lives in the tenant house at Little Staple farm and looks after an invalid sister and a vivacious young niece. Their landlord, worthy Silas Hickory, is in love with Bobby but cannot get beyond her friendly reserve to the gate marked "private." In this latest Dell confection the love stories of aunt and niece parallel each other in a setting of rural England.

---

"She offers a staple tale of love, suffering, sacrifice and other Dellishness in a charming country setting, with a group of likable if not utterly novel characters for the clinches. You might go much farther for a grander hero than honest Silas Hickory, a caveman."
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Ja 27 '29 120w
+ Boston Transcript p7 N 14 '28 250w

"Miss Dell has told this story so often before that her readers must feel by this time a pleasurable glow of familiarity as each new book comes to them. However repetitious she may be, though, Miss Dell is nothing if not fluent. The same easy facility of language, together with the same complete absence of anything worth while saying, that have characterized her previous works, distinguish 'The Gate Marked Private.' "
— N Y Times p24 Ja 13 '29 300w

"Miss Dell displays less vigor in dealing with characters and situations in this story than heretofore, but perhaps her readers will find some interest in following the sugary fortunes of her puppets."
— Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 10 '29 340w
Times [London] Lit Sup p968 D 6 '28 240w

DELL, FLOYD. Souvenir. 278p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Jarrolds]

29-4993

Felix Fay, the adolescent protagonist of "Moon-calf," is now a successful playwright, married for the second time and living in a suburban home with his sensible, charming wife and two small children. The son of his first marriage comes to spend a summer with his father, and in the boy's experiments with life and love in Greenwich village Felix Fay lives again the torment and ecstasy of his own youthful experiences. The characters are all real and attractive people, and their rather difficult relations are described with penetration and humor.

---

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:662 Je '29

---

Booklist 25:285 Ap '29

"The most satisfactory sections of the book deal with the Village, on which Mr. Dell is an authority."

+ — Bookm 69:xxiv Ap '29 90w

"The book is written in a confidential easy style. As usual its pages are full of Mr. Dell's shrewd insight into human motives. As usual it bears witness to the great facility that has possibly misled a real novelist. His people have all the up-to-the-minute and unimportant verisimilitude of the popular magazine stories; but there is no depth of emotion, no particularity of description. None of the scenes is actually realized." A. B. Parsons

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 F 10 '29 580w

Boston Transcript p4 F 16 '29 720w

"Where there isn't talk Mr. Dell presents himself as the essayist, disguised as the novelist. He muses on the problems of marriage in the modern world, on the relation of marriage to artistic production, of the enigmas posed by the simultaneous urge to the creative life and the harsh compulsion to make a living. It is often interesting talk and musing that we have in 'Souvenir,' but the dramatic possibilities are almost uniformly skimped."

— + N Y Times p7 F 17 '29 550w

"It is the wit and lightness of the writing, the amusing types of femininity that stalk through its pages, and the author's views on social questions that cling to the mind of the reader. The book is never boring, but still it is not exactly a complete and unified performance."

— + N Y World p11m Mr 17 '29 180w

"It is a very beautiful story embodying a careful analysis of the father-and-son relationship; tragic and pathetic without being sentimental. The characters are better developed than in the two preceding volumes; the story more important and better written." Milton Byron

+ Outlook 151:269 F 13 '29 100w

"Mr. Dell has handled his theme effectively. What he has to say is not over-profound, but it is perfectly true, and the whole is savored with that precious salt of radical inquiry which turns what would have been a tragedy to Mr. Harold Bell Wright, into a calmly ironic study of the aging radical, face to face with his youth." J: Carter

+ Sat R of Lit 5:799 Mr 23 '29 500w

DELMAR, MRS VINA. Kept woman. 303p $2.50 Harcourt

29-20433

Hubert Scott sold his business, considered himself, with fifteen thousand dollars, a gentleman of leisure, and found a shop-girl, Lillian Cory, to help him spend it. Lillian soon adapts herself to the position of "kept woman," and Hubert, having furnished an apartment for her, goes less frequently to the home of his wife and son. Careless living and spending rapidly exhaust Hubert's capital. Hubert prefers borrowing to getting a job, but Lillian hopes for better times. Finally, deserted by all her friends and penniless, Lillian goes back to work in a department store.

---

"Mrs. Delmar can claim a deadly accuracy. She bares the blind spots in her characters. She holds up their stupidity to the light. She writes a relentless chronicle of their days and nights, ferreting out the dusty corners and the hidden tarnishes. . . 'Kept Woman' efficiently epitomizes mediocrity. The author has used her skill to set down another record of lives which have but a stale and profitless place beneath the sun." V. P. Ross

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 O 13 '29 850w

"There are pathos and pain and some fine writing in 'Kept Woman.' There is also a gift for reporting the activities of shabby flat-dwellers that transcends the best of Fannie Hurst's studies in the same field. Unfortunately, far better novels than Mrs. Delmar's latest have been written with less equipment. We find it a dreary and inexcusably long-winded tale, in which implausibility and verisimilitude are mingled to the reader's dismay." F: F. Van de Water

— + N Y Evening Post p11m O 12 '29 350w

"Miss Delmar has written everything but the real story, and given us everything but the real drama."

— N Y Times p6 O 20 '29 500w

"A simple, well-told story full of realistic characterization."

+ N Y World p10m D 29 '29 140w

"We were enthusiastic about Vina Delmar when Bad Girl was published. There was honesty and force behind its crudity. But Miss Delmar has been too successful with her too ready pen, and all she can do now is play Hollywood variations on her original theme. . . Written almost entirely in dialogue, Kept Woman is a lurid example of the mutations and mutilations to which the English language is subject." F. L. Robbins

— Outlook 153:230 O 9 '29 170w

"There is nothing in the book, no character, no incident, no emotion, that 'has a certain magnitude.' . . This triviality is more annoying in 'Kept Woman' than it would be in a worse book, for this is good enough to give one a sense of power wasted. Mrs. Delmar shows admirable accuracy and irony, but her people are not worth the powder of her accuracy or the shot of her irony." Basil Davenport

— + Sat R of Lit 6:510 D 7 '29 430w

"Some readers will doubtless be turned away through a natural misinterpretation of the title. The only valid reason for avoiding 'Kept Woman' would be frankly acknowledged snobbishness, a narrow fastidiousness as to the class or type of persons one cares to meet in his reading. Most of those in 'Kept Woman' are non-intellectual, petty minded, restless, indolent, improvident, poverty-stricken in interests and standards. If one does not care to understand such people, even at second or third hand in a novel, he is entitled to avoid them in fiction as he would in life."

Springf'd Republican p7e O 13 '29 380w

DELMAR, MRS VINA. Loose ladies. 299p $2.50 Harcourt

29-11657

Short stories, reprinted from the magazines, of young girls in love in uptown New York.

---

"Miss Delmar's prose is fresh—except when it is too fresh—and airy, and swift, admirably suited to the sort of thing that interests her."

+ Bookm 69:xxv Jl '29 40w

"Mrs. Delmar has modified the manner of 'Bad Girl' somewhat—and to my notion improved upon it. There is an economy in these stories that was noticeably absent in the novel. The method is workmanlike; events move along easily and you are in the midst of things within the first hundred words, and most of the action seems inevitable." Florence Haxton

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 My 26 '29 1000w

DELMAR, VINA—Continued

"It is very doubtful in ten years' time whether any of Miss Delmar's present collection of short stories will be classed even by her fondest admirers as fine literature. Yet no one may say of them even today that they are not an excellent example of clever and facile writing." W. E. H.

Boston Transcript p3 Je 15 '29 850w

"When Miss Delmar views her drab little lower middle-class types with ordinary ethical sanity, some readers receive the impression of extraordinary depth. It is this illusion of perspective which has caused her work to be somewhat overrated."

+ — Nation 129:231 Ag 28 '29 180w

"The solid qualities of Vina Delmar have gone down to drowning in a flood of cheap phrasing, easy solutions and stereotyped patterns. There is one tale among the eleven that has its points. It is 'Carlo: She Has a Little Girl.' "

— + N Y Times p8 My 26 '29 660w

"Vina Delmar doesn't know that a short story can be a work of art. Her idea of the short story is something in prose running anywhere from one to ten thousand words, peppered with 'Hot mamma' dialogue of the Bronx variety and interlarded with several layers of tawdry humor. . . She merely itemizes the sensual prodigalities of male and female Jukes in an English that insults the ear, the eye, the nose, and the dictionary." E. M. Benson

— Outlook 152:147 My 22 '29 180w

"Miss Delmar gives her characters a certain plausibility. The only question is whether they are all worth the trouble."

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 16 '29 280w

DELMONT, JOSEPH. Chains (Eng title In chains); tr. by Huntley Paterson. 354p $2.50 Dial press [7s 6d Hutchinson]

29-20023

"Translated from the Russian, this story deals with the community in a Southern village during a reign of terror before the War. The aspirations and quarrels of a Jewish family, and the sufferings inflicted upon it during anti-Semitic uprisings, form the main themes."—Spec

"The author evidently has something to say, but he does not succeed in saying it. The whole is melodramatic, superficial, and unsuccessful." H. G. K.

— Boston Transcript p5 N 9 '29 500w

"A sensational and meretricious novel written in the worst manner of Wassermann and Feuchtwanger." Edwin Seaver

— N Y Evening Post p10m O 19 '29 100w

"As a picture of Russian political tyranny under the old régime 'Chains' is well worth reading, if only to gain a clearer idea of much that made the downfall of the Little Father inevitable. The author is so concerned here with picturing the hardship Haschel is forced to experience that all the natural human worries about his family, which must have tortured him, are left out. It is with Gittel that the author has done his finest work. She stands out as a portrait of Hebrew womanhood higher than Scott's Rebekah—because she faced greater trials—and far higher than the opportunist queen of Ahasuerus."

+ — N Y Times p22 D 15 '29 470w

"The novel, with its grim scenes and beautiful interludes, is a real 'slice of life,' presented with passion and tenderness."

+ Spec 142:173 F 2 '29 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p100 F 7 '29 320w

DEMAREST, PHYLLIS GORDON. Children of Hollywood. 319p $2 Macaulay

29-1196

The light, sentimental story of Boy Kent and Toni Martin of Hollywood who love each other but marry elsewhere, and after several years of unhappiness are brought together by the melodramatic sacrifice of Kent's young wife. The movies have very little to do with the story.

"Its pervading air of unreality and its determination to satisfy the conventions at all costs need not spoil this unimportant California yarn, for those who would peep at the movies."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ja 27 '29 100w

"This novel manages to include, with the aid of a certain amount of inexpert literary carpentry, most of the elements calculated to insure its popularity. Yet, in spite of the author's lavish hand and the evident soundness of her intentions, these elements fail to fuse into a convincing whole. 'Children of Hollywood' has, at best, only a spurious and imperfect kind of life."

— N Y Times p9 Ja 20 '29 480w

DENISON, JOHN HOPKINS. Emotion as the basis of civilization; with a prefatory note by George Foot Moore. 555p $5 Scribner

901 Civilization—History. Emotions. Religions 28-29565

Mr Denison surveys the civilizations of the world "to discover the methods that have been used in the past to cultivate the emotions that are of value in social construction, and to stimulate the reader to consider what emotions are essential to the success of our modern democracies." (Author's preface) In the three sections of the book he furnishes evidence of the unifying force of "emotionalized ideas" in the patriarchal system (autocracy), the fratriarchal system (democracy), and in modern democracy.

"Mr. Denison is stimulating and instructive. He makes a better professor than a prophet. His analysis of the past is better than his synthesis for the future, but that does not, necessarily, detract from the value of his performance. He is the exponent of a new thesis." N. M. Corcoran

+ Bookm 68:718 F '29 800w

Reviewed by Bertrand Russell

Nation 128:108 Ja 23 '29 730w

"Many of Mr. Denison's 'facts' are questionable and most of his cumulative conclusions are debatable. He uses the word 'probably' very often but probably not often enough. His guidance through the mazes of primitive and distant cultures is discredited by his recklessness in dealing with those of which we have slight but painful first-hand knowledge. We need new doctrines for the solving of our confusion, but new names for old insolence can only make confusion worse." Lyman Bryson

— New Repub 58:50 F 27 '29 500w

"It is an important book, because it contains the discovery of a new way of thinking which will be of great service to that indigent but beautiful science, sociology. Mr. Denison is extremely cautious and afraid of deduction—that is, the emotional basis of the present-day scientific attitude. If he had been a little greater he would have shown us more pictorially the prodigious spectacle he only hints at—the sluggish, utterly honest mind of the crowd at work to make society, in hate and love. He has contented himself with recalling, with urgent meaning, to all concerned passively or actively with state building, that the strength of their structure depends deepest of all on emotional, not mechanical, realities." W: Bolitho

+ — N Y World p10m D 30 '28 250w

"There is no more fascinating type of book than the interpretation of history from a new point of view. Such a book is Mr. J. H. Denison's 'Emotion as the Basis of Civilization.' " Van Wyck Brooks

+ Outlook 150:1413 D 26 '28 580w

"In carrying out his thesis, Dr. Denison becomes absorbed in historic ramifications, so that at times the main thesis recedes, or follows side trails more engaging to the specialist's interests. To readers with a dominant interest in social problems the introduction of this new concept of the emotional factor in civilization will prove stimulating." Joseph Jastrow

+ — Survey 62:455 Jl 15 '29 250w

"The historical part of the book is to our mind a good deal too long. But much of the story is interesting in itself and well told."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p411 My 23 '29 850w

+ World Tomorrow 12:184 Ap '29 300w

DENNY, HAROLD NORMAN. Dollars for bullets; the story of American rule in Nicaragua. 411p il $4 Dial press

327.728 United States—Foreign relations—Nicaragua. Nicaragua—Foreign relations—United States 29-13404

Dollars for bullets is a vivid summing up of the Nicaraguan situation by one who has made an intensive survey of the matter. Mr Denny spent six months studying conditions in Nicaragua for the New York Times, in addition to which he did considerable research work in Washington, in Wall Street, among state department documents and bankers' records. Quite comprehensively he states the motives which on different occasions have governed the United States in her relations with Nicaragua. He has written impartially, giving both sides of the question as they present themselves to him.

"Mr. Denny has written perhaps the best chronological account of the last American 'war' in Nicaragua, including the ill-fated attempt to capture Sandino. While critical of many State Department actions, the book does not contain any searching analysis of our Nicaraguan policies, or of the possibility of safeguarding our interests by other means." R. L. Buell

Am Pol Sci R 23:1036 N '29 190w

Bookm 69:xxi Ag '29 180w

Reviewed by R. L. Buell
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ag 4 '29 750w

"Well written and well illustrated, well-indexed and well referenced."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 29 '29 180w

"Before undertaking his book Mr Denny had the good sense to spend six months in Nicaragua. As correspondent of The New York Times during the stormy days of the 1926-27 revolution, he came to know personally many of the political personages of that small republic, and to possess an unusual insight into the conflicting forces which disturb its tranquillity and progress. . . Mr. Denny supplemented his observations on the ground by a study of State Department records and interviews with leaders and bankers in the United States. His conclusions are not dogmatic; most of them, indeed, are in the form of questions. To the reviewer this indicates that he understood the situation as well as anyone can." H. W. Dodds
+ New Repub 59:185 Jl 3 '29 720w

Reviewed by Anita Brenner
N Y Evening Post p4s Je 8 '29 230w

"The thoroughness of Mr. Denny's book and its evidences of painstaking accuracy are its best recommendations. The author has supplied in readable form the materials from which any American can reach a well-based conclusion as to the merits or demerits of the Washington Government's policy in Nicaragua." A. S. Will
+ N Y Times p3 Je 9 '29 1600w

DENT, JOSEPH MALLABY. Memoirs, 1849-1926; with some additions by Hugh R. Dent. 258p il $3 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]

B or 92 [29-3321]

"The Memoirs were written some years ago without any idea of publication. They were meant to be treated as a personal letter from the author to his intimate circle, and a very small number of copies in book form were privately printed in 1921. My task has been to rearrange and fill up the few gaps in his narrative with some amplifications and elucidations, but in no wise to convert his autobiography into a biography."—Preface

Booklist 25:282 Ap '29
Reviewed by Ernestine Evans
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 My 12 '29 1100w

"Mr. Dent's book is something more than the story of the origin and development of a great publishing enterprise. It is of great value for that, but it is of no less value because it reveals the inner life and the artistic motives, ambitions, and accomplishments, of a man whose heart was in his work, and whose business reached a professional status because of the intellectual interest in it." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p5 F 9 '29 700w

"His work and aspirations being centred exclusively in book production, J. M. Dent tells the story of his publishing career with the single-minded simplicity of a man who is earnest, generous, ambitious, and unencumbered by too keen a sense of humor. The whole narrative is written in low tones, yet a continuous smouldering intensity drives out all hint of the monotonous."
+ Nation and Ath 44:sup230 N 10 '28 300w

New Statesman 32:supxvi D 1 '28 320w

"That which distinguishes his life story above most narratives of the lives of successful men is the unconscious revelation of how he was drawn always toward the fine, the beautiful, the good, whatever makes life of finer, better texture, and happier, more useful outcome. Toward such ends he tried to use his publishing house and his own life."
+ N Y Times p10 F 3 '28 430w

"These personal memoirs of a great English publisher will interest any lover of books."
+ Outlook 151:269 F 13 '29 280w

Reviewed by W. B. Shaw
R of Rs 79:30 Mr '29 150w

"Mr. Dent's description of the way in which he worked himself up from the position of a journeyman bookbinder to become one of the leading publishers in London is written with sincerity and modesty."
+ Sat R 146:480 O 13 '28 200w

Reviewed by G: H. Putnam
Sat R of Lit 5:658 F 9 '29 900w

"Mr. Dent's memoirs have a fastidious discursiveness of their own. The narrative form is maintained throughout, but the writer never hesitates to drop it as the fancy moves him in order to introduce a philosophical reflection or a lyrical descriptive passage. The whole tone is that of a poet, with but little hint of the educational enthusiast and the successful business man."
Times [London] Lit Sup p721 O 11 '28 1200w

DER LING, princess (MRS THADDEUS C. WHITE). Kowtow. 322p $3.50 Dodd

B or 92 China—Social life and customs 29-20233

The Manchurian Princess Der Ling tells her childhood recollections of her father's home in China. Her great affection for her father, who believed in educating his daughters in the European fashion, her experiences in Japan and France while her father was ambassador to those countries respectively, and her career as lady-in-waiting to the Chinese empress are interesting high lights in the book.

Booklist 26:113 D '29
Reviewed by T: Steep
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 D 29 '29 360w

"It is a delightful book, an important, and valuable addition to the steadily growing literature about China. The illustrations by S. Pinkus are interesting, attractive and truly illustrative." J. W. M.
+ Boston Transcript p1 N 9 '29 900w

"She has an extraordinary viewpoint and writes with a captivating style."
+ Christian Century 46:1441 N 20 '29 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p147 D '29

DER LING, princess—Continued
Reviewed by R. C. B. Brown
N Y Evening Post p12m O 12 '29 320w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:28 N '29 80w

"A delightful book! In her volumes 'Two Years in the Forbidden City' and 'Old Buddha,' Princess Der Ling has already made notable contributions to the history of China under the Empire. The present work is equally valuable." Florence Ayscough
+ Sat R of Lit 6:288 O 19 '29 650w

DER LING, princess (MRS THADDEUS C. WHITE). Old Buddha. 347p il $3.50 Dodd

B or 92 Tzŭ-hsi, empress dowager of China. China—Court and courtiers 28-24740

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

For biographical sketch of the author see Boston Transcript p1 My 4 '29

---

Booklist 25:161 Ja '29

"The writer's vision of those important years has the short focus of one who sees only from within the Forbidden City and her data, notably as to the details of the Boxer Uprising, differ from those of accepted European sources. But her first hand descriptions of court life, of royal journeys, of the education of a young emperor, the peculations of eunuchs or the traditional wedding ceremony, are absorbing."
+ — Bookm 69:vi Mr '29 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p72 My '29

"Whatever its value as an historical document this book, full of the quaint colour of the old Manchu Court, is uncommonly charming."
+ Nation and Ath 45:sup138 Ap 27 '29 240w

"The author has written an account of this baleful Jezebel's life which poetizes and romanticizes on it to a degree that will astonish as many as it will entertain. . . The book is fervently written, and undoubtedly a profound and genuine attachment inspired it." Gardner Harding
N Y Times p5 F 24 '29 880w

St Louis 27:29 Ja '29

"Few readers of this thrilling story will ask themselves how much of it is fiction and how much fact. There is no reason to question Princess Der Ling's veracity as reporter, but the severe historian may think that the Old Buddha or the Lovely Orchid (for that was her highly respectable maiden name) occasionally embroidered the truth. In its main lines, however, there is no reason to doubt that this portrait of the Dowager Empress is substantially accurate."
+ Sat R 147:511 Ap 13 '29 450w

"Any who read the book may, perhaps, feel a pleasant sense of being brought into intimate touch with the inner life of an Oriental court, and we can honestly say that much of the volume would furnish an admirable scenario for a certain sort of film-picture."
Spec 142:481 Mr 23 '29 150w

"The narrative itself may be briefly dismissed as the work of a constructive memory, embellished by a vivid imagination."
Times [London] Lit Sup p365 My 2 '29 350w

DESTI, MARY. Untold story; the life of Isadora Duncan, 1921-1927. 281p il $3.50 Liveright

B or 92 Duncan, Isadora 29-5073

A close friend of Isadora Duncan and the devoted companion of her last years, Mary Desti takes up the story of the famous dancer's life from the close of her own book to the end. The vicissitudes of her life, and especially the mad scenes of her marriage with the young Russian poet, are made painfully real.

---

Bookm 69:vi Ag '29 70w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 F 10 '29 550w

Reviewed by H. I. Brock
N Y Times p5 F 17 '29 1000w

Reviewed by Shaemas O'Sheel
N Y World p11m Mr 3 '29 900w

"No one who knew Isadora Duncan was immune to the fire of her infectious personality, and the surge of her resourceful genius. Least of all, Mary Desti who, with a beautiful unselfishness, dedicated her life to the adoration of this mortal ikon. . . But this love for the person does not deter Mary Desti from maintaining the obligatory honesties of a fine biographer. Nothing is hidden and nothing vindicated. This is one story, certainly, that was worth the telling." E. M. Benson
+ Outlook 151:268 F 13 '29 200w

St Louis 27:205 Je '29

Sat R of Lit 5:780 Mr 16 '29 600w

"Badly written as this book is, it is a human document which reports the tragedy of Isadora's life as fiction could not have created it."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e My 19 '29 720w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey 62:315 Je 1 '29 250w

DEVANNY, JEAN. Dawn beloved. 371p $2 Macaulay [7s 6d Duckworth] 28-25461

The lush and melodramatic tale of how love came to a girl of the backwoods of New Zealand, how she married a handsome miner and repented of it, and how murder and suicide finally cleared the way to the older staider man who had always loved her.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Ja 20 '29 50w

"We are not sure whether Miss Devanny lacks a sense of moral values, or merely a sense of humor. But we are forced to admit that her noble heroine strikes us as odd. . . The story is full of contradictions. It has some interesting ideas on the subject of matrimony, but pages and pages of some sort of quite unintelligible Socialism."
— Boston Transcript p2 F 27 '29 280w

"The story is somewhat prolix and moves slowly towards its melodramatic climax. Nevertheless, it is a sincere piece of work, packed with character, and has some convincing descriptions of life on the borderline of poverty in new countries. Incidentally we learn how Socialism came to New Zealand, and why."
+ — New Statesman 31:434 Jl 7 '28 130w

"The book, though gloomy and squalid enough, is more palatable than its predecessor, impressive in its realistic depiction of the mining community's life, and very gravely preoccupied with the phenomena of sex."
N Y World p11m Mr 17 '29 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p452 Je 14 '28 200w

DEWEY, JOHN. Characters and events; popular essays in social and political philosophy; ed. by Joseph Ratner. 2v 861p $5 Holt [21s Allen, G.]

304 Social sciences—Addresses, essays, lectures. Political science—Addresses, essays, lectures 29-11299

These two volumes contain lectures delivered by John Dewey and prepared for publication by Joseph Ratner. In the lectures Dr Dewey applies his philosophic principles to an analysis and interpretation of characters and events of world wide social and political import. The volumes unfold to the reader the trend of Dr Dewey's philosophy.

---

Booklist 26:8 O '29

Bookm 70:iv S '29 160w

"Each chapter of the book is reproduced as it was contributed to some periodical or magazine during the past few years, and each comes forth again recommended for new perusal by its author's philosophical outlook, as well as by his mastery of the material and by the literary skill with which his theses and conclusions are presented." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 15 '29 570w

"They show penetrating analysis, a humane outlook and a wisdom which we like to think of as marking the philosophical mind." J. H. Tufts

+ Chicago Daily Tribune p14 D 14 '29 70w

"To read these pages is to gain a clear perspective upon the meaning of the war and its aftermath, and an inspiration to work for a social intelligence that will make the future different. They constitute a philosopher's commentary upon our age, a spiritual autobiography of liberal American thought. Here is one man at least who was never disillusioned, because he was never duped. There are few writers who could afford to print unchanged their judgments on passing events written over the last fifteen years." J: H. Randall, Jr.

+ N Y Evening Post p9m My 18 '29 750w

"Within the limits of Dr. Dewey's audience his influence has been large. In times of stress and anger he has been courageous, in the excitement of controversy he has remained calm, and always he has been persuasive. . . He has helped many to keep an open mind and walk more hopefully in the way." W: MacDonald

N Y Times p5 Jl 14 '29 2200w

"Prof. Dewey has always been close to American life and has always been a great liberal. His philosophy has not taken him into an ivory tower or upon a mountain top. He has made thinking and reasoning practical by its application to the problems of democracy and of the democratic education. . . His courage has alaways been basically fine—there has been no advertising about it, no desire to flaunt opinions or fight in public for a principle merely for personal aggrandizement. John Dewey has been the mild, quiet scholar, but when he spoke his mind about social abuses his words carried and helped bolster up the faith of liberals who felt not quite sure of themselves." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p10m O 20 '29 700w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan

N Y World p10m O 27 '29 200w

"The flame of his thought burns slowly and smokes heavily. There is no dance of the mind here. The heavy abstract words weigh the page down, and no aid comes from poetic feelings and a sense for the concrete image. . . I do not wish to make the present volumes seem forbidding. They are not immensely difficult to comprehend, but they lack positive charm, and that is why the general reader must summon up his good will and meet them halfway." G. B. Munson

+ — Outlook 152:187 My 29 '29 700w

"The reader will find in 'Characters and Events' illuminating critical discussions of a wide variety of men and things, in short an applied philosophy of our times. The philosophical student will find in these volumes still further concrete evidence of the relevance of Dewey's philosophy to the problems of modern life." R. B. Levinson

+ Portland Evening Post p5 Ag 6 '29 1200w

St Louis 27:280 O '29

"The author is revealed as the friend of mankind, and as one who has the courage to commit himself from day to day on each day's issues. When others take refuge in formulas and abstract generalizations, he undertakes the kind of thinking that is most difficult, the solution, namely, of a problem of action and constructive policy." R. B. Perry

+ Sat R of Lit 6:310 O 26 '29 980w

Times [London] Lit Sup p804 O 17 '29 1900w

World Tomorrow 12:472 N '29 250w

DEWEY, JOHN. Impressions of soviet Russia and the revolutionary world, Mexico—China—Turkey. 270p il pa $1 New republic

914.7 Bolshevism—Russia. Education—Russia. Mexico—Social conditions. Angora, Turkey—Description. China—Economic conditions 29-3252

"Collected here are John Dewey's letters from Russia, Mexico, China and Turkey which have appeared [in the New Republic] at various times during the last ten years. Most recent, and therefore most important and most interesting of them all, are the six papers dealing with Russia, which fill half the book. They were written during Dr. Dewey's visit to Russia last year for the special purpose of making a first-hand study of the Soviet school system, methods and purposes."—N Y Times

Booklist 25:280 Ap '29

Bookm 69:xiii Ag '29 80w

"In these brief impressionistic reports of his wanderings in revolutionary lands one discovers, not a cautious professor of philosophy but an eager experimenter, fascinated to discover that at moments in history human beings can escape the deadening effect of a machine society upon the individual. . . Perhaps the book is more significant as a revelation of John Dewey than as a picture of Russia."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 31 '29 280w

"Some of the comments are already out of date, but the observations of so independent a thinker as Professor Dewey are interesting if not conclusive."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ap 3 '29 180w

"When he leaves theoretical realms and writes of what he saw, Professor Dewey himself seems to have imbibed some of that 'vitality and courage and confidence in life' which he everywhere found, so delightedly and heartily does he express himself." Jessica Smith

+ Nation 128:744 Je 19 '29 350w

N Y Times p12 Ap 21 '29 440w

"Although Prof. Dewey devotes several chapters to discussions of general tendencies in contemporary Russian life and thought, by far the most scholarly portion of this book deals with Soviet education. One expects that from the foremost philosopher of education in America." Bernard Smith

N Y World p10m Mr 3 '29 620w

Pratt p30 summer '29

Reviewed by Norah Meade

Sat R of Lit 5:971 My 4 '29 1050w

"This is not a technical analysis but a diverting collection of keen observations, giving wide latitude for interpretation."

World Tomorrow 12:236 My '29 30w

DEWEY, JOHN. Philosophy of John Dewey; sel. and ed. by Joseph Ratner. 560p $4; students ed $3.25 Holt [16s Allen, G.]

191 Philosophy 28-14147

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"Mr. Ratner refrains from comment; his work is merely to arrange material, and his selection and arrangement have been unquestionably judicious and representative. Such a work needed to be done and all students of the philosophy of Professor Dewey will be deeply grateful to Mr. Ratner." F. J. S.

+ Cath World 128:624 F '29 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p136 N '29

"It presents nothing new, since it is a compilation of extracts from all of Mr. Dewey's more important writings, but the selections have been carefully made so that the philosophy of instrumentalism stands out as a unit to challenge understanding and criticism. Instrumentalism has been a means of emancipation to many and a source of irritation to more. . . In spite of the excellence of the selections, it is difficult to believe that the book will reach the audience to whom it is addressed unless we assume an extreme optimism as to the existence of lay readers who can assimilate Mr. Dewey's theories of logic and metaphysics." M. S. Kuypers

DEWEY, JOHN—*Continued
+ — J Philos 26:407 Jl 18 '29 1000w

"In his vigorous pursuit of his main tenet into all spheres of life, no less than in his solid, difficult but honest style, Dewey is to American what Bosanquet was to British philosophy."
+ New Statesman 32:612 F 16 '29 170w

"Dr. Ratner has performed a real service, both to the philosophical world and to laymen interested in philosophical matters, by giving us this comprehensive organization of selected materials. Through eighteen fascinating chapters the argument runs." J. K. Hart
+ Survey 61:454 Ja 1 '29 430w

DEWEY, JOHN. Quest for certainty: a study of the relation of knowledge and action. (Gifford lectures, 1929) 318p $4 Minton

191 Knowledge, Theory of. Philosophy. Science—Philosophy 29-23500

The general theme of Professor Dewey's Gifford lectures given at the University of Edinburgh in the spring of 1929 is the relation of knowledge and action. In his first chapter he discusses some of the historic grounds for the elevation of intellect above practical affairs. He goes on to show how philosophy in the past has been the quest for certainty and security, resulting in the separation of practice and theory. Philosophy, in his belief, must turn in a new direction, accept a changing world and apply the experimental methods of science to our judgments concerning the values which control conduct, especially in its social phases.

"The universal acceptance of John Dewey's theory of knowledge and his theory of value would certainly assure a kind of living in which much would happen and happen fast. The moral and social worlds would certainly change almost as rapidly as the scientific world does, but, to me at least, it seems evident that his philosophy proves acceptable only when supported by a fundamental optimism which assumes that if things are only given the opportunity to work themselves out completely they must inevitably work themselves out well." J. W. Krutch
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 O 20 '29 1700w

"The new book, written in its author's lucid style, and showing his grasp of all the pertinent facts, is a philosophy in itself, rich in conclusions that will have to be counted with." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p3 N 16 '29 1150w

Reviewed by E. E. Turner
Christian Century 47:48 Ja 8 '30 1100w

"Dewey, though a veritable product of American development and a reflection of the machine age, does not make his philosophy an apologia for the prevailing materialism. On the contrary, he urges that our material wealth and scientific achievements provide the resources and methods for a new stage of social evolution. He thus takes his place in the history of American thought as the philosopher who, looking out on the life of his time and generation, has extracted from its confusion and uncertainty a new wisdom for the enlightenment and encouragement of the leaders of the coming age." S. B.
Current Hist 31:821 Ja '30 1100w

"This is a completer and better-rounded statement of the author's point of view than any which has preceded it, and on some points it is a clearer one. It is also a contribution to literature. It begins, one feels, where the author himself begins; the directing intent is laid down in the opening pages; and it moves forward with uninterrupted sweep to that which, one is persuaded, constitutes the personal goal of his thinking. The concluding chapter especially is impressive; it contains passages which will always be quoted." C. J. Lewis
+ J Philos 27:14 Ja 2 '30 5600w

"On the eve of his seventieth birthday, there appears a volume by John Dewey, which confirms the impression long current that he has initiated, more truly even than Kant, a Copernican revolution in philosophy. . . Nowhere has Dewey better stated his faith in his living and responsible philosophy than in these clear and earnest pages. He has made us and himself a handsome birthday present." Irwin Edman
+ N Y Evening Post p10m O 19 '29 1450w

"John Dewey has long been seen as America's outstanding philosophic thinker. 'The Quest for Certainty' is his crowning work. Obviously, it is not a book to be attempted unless one will devote time to its perusal and be prepared to spend upon its pages a maximum of intellectual effort. Those willing to make the necessary sacrifice will find these Gifford lectures a clarion call, and a spur to nobler action." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p5 O 20 '29 2200w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan
N Y World p10m O 27 '29 800w

"The present book possesses all of its distinguished author's most engaging qualities. It is shrewd and genial and gives an aspect of freshness to homely truths. It is contemporaneous without being banal, humane without sentimentality, and prophetic without arrogance. It surpasses Professor Dewey's previous books in lucidity and persuasiveness. But it is inevitable that a restatement of his creed should evoke a restatement of objections, the old objections, which do not seem to have been met. . . To say that the author's theoretical ethics is unsatisfactory, and that a philosophy which appeals to consequences is under a peculiar obligation to provide a theoretical ethics, is not to deny that his practical ethics is admirable. There is a working standard of democracy, individualism, and liberty which is as palpable as the author's voluntaristic and evolutionary metaphysics, but which is equally unproved and unacknowledged by his explicit theory of knowledge." R. B. Perry
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:585 D 21 '29 2100w

DEWEY, JOHN. Sources of a science of education. (Kappa delta pi lecture ser.) 77p $1.50 Liveright

370.1 Education

The first volume of a lecture series instituted by Kappa Delta Pi, international honor society in education. Professor Dewey says that education rightly belongs among the sciences.

Boston Transcript p5 N 30 '29 400w

"An interesting and compressed statement of just what it means to apply the scientific method to social problems." C. H. Grattan
+ N Y World p10m O 27 '29 600w

DEWING, ELIZABETH BARTOL (MRS CARL BENDER). Eagles fly high. 316p $2 Stokes

29-14906

Selina Martin's creative ability in designing dresses is soon recognized by the dress-making firm of Julies Frères. Then comes her marriage to Bill Jones, a chemistry instructor she had met while on a summer vacation, and her removal to the western town where her husband is teaching. Selina soon discovers that she is not the type suited to this marriage, and, following the death of her husband in a laboratory accident, she eventually goes back to the New York dressmaking establishment. A year or two later, as Mme Julie, she goes abroad with Raphael, designer of the firm. Raphael sincerely loves Selina for her beauty and talent—his one wish is that she were physically strong enough to bear him a child. Selina determines to take the risk, in spite of a famous physician's warning, and, tho she dies in giving birth to the baby, feels that she has recompensed her husband for his goodness to her.

" 'Eagles Fly High' is a novel of character rather than incident. The delineation is skillful; individuals as well as types emerge from its pages. The whole story is glamorous and one reads the last page breathlessly awaiting the outcome." Douglas Tyacke
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 4 '29 400w

"Though the life portrayed is only that of everyday, sometimes mean and sordid, sometimes on a higher plane, there is sufficient diversity of scene and character to give it more interest than one usually finds in novels dealing with ordinary people living ordinary and humdrum lives." G. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 25 '29 400w

N Y Times p34 O 27 '29 200w

"There is a type of personality so tenuous, so fragile, that it seems a breath of influence must destroy it which yet in the face of bitterest opposition maintains itself in its integrity. Such a personality is Selina Martin of 'Eagles Fly High.' In spite of an annoyingly personal, from author-to-reader style, this strange, aloof Selina grows in her convincing personality until, by the end of the book, no one of her inexplicable moods or moves can be repudiated. Selina is, she may not be explained, but she cannot be denied. However improbable her end from her beginning, it is the improbability of life rather than of fiction. But Selina is surrounded by lay figures whose inadequacy is doubly apparent in contrast with her simpler reality."

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:166 S 21 '29 280w

Wis Lib Bul 25:323 O '29

DE WITT, MARGARET E. Our oral word as social and economic factor; with a comprehensive group of Old world euphonetigraphs. 329p $2.25 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]

420 English language—Phonetics [29-16525]

"Part 1 of this book consists of a plea for closer economic and social unity among English, Canadians, and Americans, particularly in their common speech. The writing is rather rhetorical, and is frequently involved. . . Part II consists of forty-seven 'Euphonetigraphs,'—transcriptions from British speakers representing English 'that sounds world-well,' with notes."—Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by E: Sapir

Am J Soc 34:926 Mr '29 360w

Reviewed by G: P. Krapp

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 D 16 '28 430w

"It is to be regretted that the author has not used her linguistic skill and her familiarity with English life and ideals to contribute to mutual understanding in speech between England and America in a more effective way than by urging the simple device of having all Americans adopt British speech." J: S.Kenyon

Sat R of Lit 5:884 Ap 13 '29 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p937 N 29 '28 730w

DIAMANT, GERTRUDE (MRS ALTER BRODY). Labyrinth. 307p $2.50 Coward-McCann

29-7717

This psychological novel is an exposition of the inner struggle of two men, an artist and a musician, who have been thru the war, to adjust themselves to their post-war lives in the city. It is a story of disillusionment and defeat given in disconnected fragments.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson bulletin 3:569 Ap '29

"Miss Diamant has more to say and she says it more intensely and sincerely than most novelists who have attempted within the last ten years to picture for us that civilization which is left over from the war. But hers is not a satiric picture and it is not a true one because never has Miss Diamant viewed that civilization from outside herself, never for a moment left it by itself. It is the post-war civilization in the mind of Miss Diamant." Lillian Hellman

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 2 '29 680w

"Brought together these stories do, in a sense, make up a novel—a novel about thwarted, disappointed people. But these people are not separately alive and artistically differentiated; they are, instead, shadowy figures involved in realistic situations and propelled through them with a good deal of understanding and perception. Miss Diamant's style is a fit instrument for her material."

+ — N Y Times p9 Ap 21 '29 630w

" 'Labyrinth' almost stammers in its self-consciousness. The author made an attempt to do something new and significant, but was handicapped by a lack of anything important to convey. There is no story, and, after reading to the bitter end, one realizes that no character is any more important than the others."

— Sat R of Lit 6:166 S 21 '29 300w

DIAPEA, WILLIAM. Cannibal Jack; the true autobiography of a white man in the South Seas; printed from the manuscript in the possession of James Hadfield; with a foreword by H. De Vere Stacpoole. 236p $2.50 Putnam [7s 6d Faber & G.]

B or 92 28-23296

Pages from the journal of a South Sea trader describing in vivid detail his life and adventures among the Fiji islanders.

"He tells a tale to fire the imagination and leave the home-dweller envious."

+ Bookm 69:vi Ag '29 80w

"Cannibal Jack is often vague and is deficient in concrete facts. It is frequently long-winded. But it has compensatory features and, though as autobiography it is only a fragment, the personality of the author makes it interesting. It reveals a genial scoundrel who, if half of what he tells us is true, is more agreeably met with in these pages than he would have been in real life."

+ — New Statesman 31:490 Jl 21 '28 220w

"As simply told a narrative of adventurous days under primitive environment—days filled with wild and savage scenes and constant perils —as one is likely to find outside of the Odyssey or one of Aloysius Horn's books."

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 3 '29 620w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 227:adv Ap '29 80w

"It is an interesting, if a not very important addition to the literature of adventure." W. R. Brooks

Outlook 151:232 F 6 '29 100w

"Vivid and dramatic as are Diapea's accounts of cannibal cruelties and kindnesses, royal profusion, waylayings in bush, canoe voyages and so forth, there is nothing in them that would be beyond a hoaxer who was capable of inventing a style of writing which never fails to suggest a man such as has the adventures described."

Times [London] Lit Sup p588 Ag 16 '28 520w

DICKENS, SIR HENRY FIELDING. Memories of my father. 32p il $2 Duffield [6s Gollancz]

B or 92 Dickens, Charles [29-26267]

A slight book of boyhood memories recalling simple incidents of the home life at Gad's Hill and Dickens's relations with his children.

Booklist 25:283 Ap '29

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Mr 10 '29 250w

"The price of this book is six shillings. It contains twelve illustrations, and twenty-one pages of text, comprising anecdotes like this: 'It was at the Zoo, and my father and I were walking down the broad walk when we saw, a little distance away from us, a lady and gentleman coming towards us with a bright and pretty child of about fourteen or fifteen running ahead of them. Suddenly the little girl, catching sight of my father, ran back to her mother crying out delightedly, "Oh, mummy! mummy! it is Charles Dickens." ' The rest of the pamphlet is no more significant than this and often not as pointed."

— New Statesman 32:supxviii N 3 '28 80w

DICKENS, H: F.—Continued

"He has attempted to make no more than a general and rather vague sketch, but it bears the impress of intimate association and therefore lovers of Dickens will be glad to have it and will value it because of the fresh bit of color it adds to the portrait."
+ N Y Times p20 F 10 '29 320w

"Sir Henry's book is a pious tribute, but it is a little disappointing. He adds nothing significant to our knowledge of Dickens."
— Sat R 147:18 Ja 26 '29 100w

"This is a small book, but very human and interesting, and all of us who love Dickens will rejoice in it."
+ Spec 141:702 N 10 '28 80w

DICKEY, HERBERT SPENCER, and DANIEL, HAWTHORNE. Misadventures of a tropical medico. 304p il $3.50 Dodd

918 South America—Description and travel. Indians of South America 29-18690

The experiences of a New York doctor who for nearly thirty years has spent quite a bit of his time among the savages of South America. He has battled with yellow fever and smallpox, has had narrow escapes from bloodthirsty unfriendly Indians, and has attempted to penetrate the Caqueta River country, where all the trails are uncharted and boiled monkey meat is the chief article of diet.

Booklist 26:113 D '29

Bookm 70:xxxiii D '29 160w

Boston Transcript p4 S 28 '29 170w

"Dr. Dickey and his collaborator have turned out a highly readable, often luridly exciting account of some of the results of a protracted search for tropical disease, Inca silver deposits and primitive tribal customs."
+ N Y Times p11 O 20 '29 480w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:16 O '29 300w

St Louis 27:341 D '29

Times [London] Lit Sup p94 N 14 '29 800w

DICKINSON, EDWIN DE WITT. Selection of cases and other readings on the law of nations, chiefly as it is interpreted and applied by British and American courts. 1133p $6 (30s) McGraw

341 International law and relations—Cases. Maritime law—Cases 29-17774

"A volume intended primarily for classroom use. The selections, chosen mainly with regard to the interpretation and application of international law by British and American courts, include extracts from constitutions, statutes, codes, and treaties as well as from judicial decisions, and are extensively annotated."—Nation

"An examination of the subjects dealt with impresses one with the realization of the unsparing efforts, patient industry, and good judgment which have gone into the making of this book. Separate lists of cases, codes, constitutions and statutes, and of treaties as well as an excellent author and subject index facilitate the search for any document or item desired." Johannes Mattern
+ Ann Am Acad 146:269 N '29 1100w

"As a work of reference this work is invaluable; whether it will make a good textbook will depend to a large extent upon the teacher. The difficulty with any case-book in international law is that it omits the political and diplomatic background which, in reality, controls the jurisprudence of many international courts."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p29 N 17 '29 200w

Nation 129:502 O 30 '29 60w

"Mr. Dickinson, who is Professor of Law in the University of Michigan, in this able and careful work, which is essentially pedagogic, and in fact represents a decade of lecturing in the law school of his university on the subject of the legal inter-relations of nations, gives prominence to the scientific view that law, like any other science, is best learnt by the experimental method."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p869 O 31 '29 1000w

DICKINSON, EMILY NORCROSS. Further poems; ed. by her niece Martha Dickinson Bianchi and Alfred Leete Hampson. 208p $2.50 Little [10s 6d Secker]

811 29-6708

These poems, some of which have been appearing in the Atlantic Monthly, were withheld from publication by the author's sister Lavinia. After many years they were found among other papers and have been edited by Miss Dickinson's niece, Martha Dickinson Bianchi, and Alfred Leete Hampson.

Booklist 25:313 My '29

"Her instrument was peculiarly fitted to her music. She had apparently no concern for craftsmanship. What mattered was the thing said, not the manner of saying it. She had no time: the day was too deep a mine. And yet what she dashed off so hurriedly on any convenient scrap of paper, with such cavalier treatment of form, and even of syntax, has nearly always the effect of inevitability which is the hall-mark of well-wrought verse." Babette Deutsch
+ Bookm 69:303 My '29 1450w

"The publication of these new poems by Emily Dickinson adds to our heritage; for every scrap of her mind is important to us; and if this collection does not show any new aspect of her life it nevertheless engraves certain moments, particularly her response to her lover, a little deeper." L: Mumford
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Mr 17 '29 2900w

Reviewed by W: S. Braithwaite
Boston Transcript p7 Mr 30 '29 2000w

Cath World 130:115 O '29 750w.

"Wit is everywhere in her best work (a proper share of which is in the present volume), glowing there as promise that what she felt as pain you shall not feel as pain, that what she was able to say you shall be forced to admit. She has been called a personal poet. She is anything else than that. What we know of her belongs to the universe of poetry; what she was is perfectly hidden away." Mark Van Doren
+ Nation 128:348 Mr 20 '29 880w

Reviewed by V. Sackville-West
Nation and Ath 46:178 N 2 '29 280w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
New Repub 59:38 My 22 '29 2450w

"These poems are among Emily Dickinson's best: of that there can be no question. There are at least twenty which are equal to her finest, which is equivalent to saying, of course, that they are among the finest poems written by any American poet. And to one's horror one finds that they have been edited with a clumsiness and unperceptiveness which one is tempted simply to term unintelligence. In at least one instance one suspects that the meaning of the poem has been completely altered by mistaken punctuation." Conrad Aiken
+ — N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 16 '29 1100w

"Not a poet to be judged as other poets are, perhaps not to be judged at all, but marveled at, as one marvels at the singing birds. Emily Dickinson, in her poems of religious mysticism, at least, is unique in American letters." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p3 Mr 17 '29 1900w

"Any reader whose enthusiasm is less than mine I would advise to read more than a few poems, and to read them slowly, understanding each phrase before going on to the next. Superficial difficulties will disappear, making possible appreciation of the grandeur of Emily Dickinson. She is not one of the poets who have given voice to social aspirations, or summed up whole cultures, or sounded the high note of prophecy;

but she has revealed with unsurpassed beauty the world of individual experience." Granville Hicks

+ N Y World p10m Mr 24 '29 1200w

"Some of Miss Dickinson's finest work is to be found in the collection, although the editing is not of the best." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv My '29 200w

Reviewed by C. B. Green

Outlook 151:504 Mr 27 '29 450w

Pratt p25 summer '29

"She has remarkable ideas, startlingly apt images, leaves us with a conviction that she was a woman of most unusual personality; but what was she after? If poetry, she seldom took two consecutive steps in its direction. . . There will always, in the modern world, be writers with something in them, yet devoid of the strictly artistic instinct, who make a virtue of incapacity." T. E. Welby

— Sat R 148:352 S 28 '29 370w

"These hitherto unprinted treasures compose Emily Dickinson's most beautiful and, from every standpoint, most important book. . . Had Emily Dickinson been unknown until the publication of 'Further Poems' and had she written nothing but this one book, she would have to be reckoned among the indisputably major poets. Frail in build, fine in texture, hers is the colossal substance of immortality." L: Untermeyer

+ Sat R of Lit 5:769 Mr 16 '29 3500w

"In those characteristics so highly developed in Emily Dickinson—poignancy of emotion, mastery of concise and vivid imagery, rightness of word selection, ability to condense in a short poem a large theme—many of these poems equal the best of those contained in 'Complete Poems,' published by the same firm five years ago."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 24 '29 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p869 O 31 '29 700w

Wis Lib Bul 25:125 Ap '29

"This book is inevitably the most significant contribution to American letters which will be published this year. There is no aspect of Emily Dickinson's genius which is not further and brilliantly illuminated for us by these poems. . . It is no exaggeration to say that the book should be re-edited at once, and by someone competent to do so. At least a half of these new poems are incorrectly printed. The editors have shown no awareness whatever of Emily Dickinson's intentions: again and again they have ruined the structure of a poem by faulty division of lines; and in a good many instances they have actually, by unintelligent punctuation, altered the meaning. We must hope that the publishers will rectify this at the earliest possible moment." Conrad Aiken

+ — Yale R n s 18:796 summer '29 530w

DICTIONARY of American biography, under the auspices of the American council of learned societies; ed. by Allen Johnson. 20v subs v 1-2 $12.50; set $250 (45 gns) Scribner

920 United States—Biography (28-28500)

The first volumes of an authoritative, scholarly dictionary of biography, comparable to the English "Dictionary of national biography," which aim to include biographical notices of all persons who have made some distinct contribution to American life and history. No living persons are included.

---

"A monumental and memorable work." A. M. Schlesinger

+ Am Hist R 35:119 O '29 3200w

Booklist 25:209 F '29 (Review of v 1)

"It is not only more learned and reliable than any of its predecessors; it is more lively, too, as good scholarship always is." Mark Van Doren

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 D 9 '28 1300w (Review of v 1)

"Unfailing in their liveliness, impeccable in their form, these many sketches of curious, solitary, or detached Americans help more than materially to make the 'Dictionary' an indispensable book." Mark Van Doren

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Je 2 '29 580w (Review of v 2)

"The new Dictionary of American Biography, as can be seen from the first volume, is not only a monumental work in form and content, and a scholarly and disinterested contribution to American learning, but also a thrilling and colorful epic in prose of the men and women who have made the United States." R. B. Porter

+ N Y Times p1 N 25 '28 1400w (Review of v 1)

"With the appearance of the initial volume it was at once apparent that we were to have a reference work of the first rank, and one of more catholic standards than such compilations are likely to be. That impression is measurably strengthened by the present addition."

+ N Y Times p3 My 19 '29 320w (Review of v 2)

Pratt p31 winter '29 (Review of v 1)

R of Rs 128:672 D '28 880w (Review of v 1)

R of Rs 80:10 Jl '29 420w (Review of v 2)

St Louis 27:60 F '29 (Review of v 1)

"No such Dictionary can be perfect, and this one has its defects; but it attains a level of excellence that will delight its users and make it of comprehensive and permanent value. It is bound to prove a fertilizing agency in historical and biographical work of every kind. This first volume promises also a wealth of curious and important lore which will inevitably be utilized as a starting point, broadened, and applied in a hundred different fields." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 5:581 Ja 12 '29 2850w (Review of v 1)

"Not less thorough, scholarly, or valuable than the first volume. . . The student cannot do without these volumes. The general reader should make their acquaintance. Even an idle perusal of these pages will teach anyone something of the variety of American character and the strange contrasts of the American scene." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 6:3 Jl 27 '29 1350w (Review of v 2)

Sat R of Lit 6:304 O 19 '29 700w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 18 '28 2100w (Review of v 1)

Springf'd Republican p7e My 12 '29 1600w (Review of v 2)

Times [London] Lit Sup p661 Ag 29 '29 1750w

"The selection of names is made with justice and discrimination. In each case, the information presented is adequate and pertinent. Defects in the book are extremely rare, evidence alike of the conscientiousness with which the authors have attacked their problems and of thorough and painstaking editorial work." R. H. Gabriel

+ Yale R n s 18:590 spring '29 850w (Review of v 1)

DIES, EDWARD JEROME. The plunger; a tale of the wheat pit. 249p il $3 Covici

B or 92 Hutchinson, Benjamin P. Grain trade—Chicago 29-6835

"In 'The Plunger' a man who is intensely interested in the Wheat Pit has written the biography of Benjamin P. Hutchinson, the famous wheat king of 1888. He is inspired by the romance of a man with a consuming love of power, whose whole career was spent in the accomplishment of his desire to dictate the price of wheat to the world. This quixotic figure of the nineteenth century began life as a farmer boy in Massachusetts."—Boston Transcript

---

"The colorful pages of speculative finance contain few chapters as breathless as those which deal with the operations of the wheat pit. This story of some of its major climaxes—of the careers of Benjamin P. Hutchinson,

DIES, E. J.—Continued
Leiter and Patten—is presented here in a vivid and authentic narrative. Mr. Dies is less concerned with the intricacies of speculation than with the outward drama of events."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 My 5 '29 130w

"A fine old speculator of rough spicy days is depicted as a romantic shadowy hero of fiction. Mr. Dies has missed his opportunity with a rare picturesque figure." P. L.
— Boston Transcript p2 Mr 27 '29 430w
Nation 129:49 Jl 10 '29 20w

"Mr. Dies's book does not assume the proportions of the period it describes. It is readable, but not much more. It smacks too much of that literary curiosity of our age, who sometimes goes under the sinister title of the ghost writer, sometimes as the director of public relations and sometimes merely as the publicity man." Edwin Seaver
— N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 23 '29 120w

"Dies has not made fiction of his tale and had he attempted fiction he probably could not have surpassed Frank Norris's memorable books. 'The Plunger' is more in the nature of biography, but it is written with such dash, such élan, with so keen a savor of the drama enacted within the walls of the old Board of Trade Building on La Salle Street, with such unfeigned joy in the speed at which the epic unfolds, that the reader is left more breathless than by any cinema, and would not exchange the volume for any half dozen of introvert novels. 'The Plunger' is not a distinguished work; but it is great reporting."
+ N Y Times p7 Je 9 '29 1000w

"The book presents a vivid picture of a past age animated by many striking personalities."
+ Outlook 152:351 Je 26 '29 50w

DILNOT, GEORGE. Black Ace. 293p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Bles]
29-4532

A combination of Scotland Yard, the underworld, and love, forms this mystery story.

---

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 17 '29 100w

"This is a good enough story of its sort, but it is not a particularly good sort."
— N Y Times p22 Mr 3 '29 120w
Times [London] Lit Sup p562 Jl 11 '29 200w
Wis Lib Bul 25:324 O '29

DILNOT, GEORGE. Triumphs of detection. 277p il $5 Houghton [16s G. Bles]
364 Detectives. Crime and criminals
[29-14732]

"Mr. Dilnot is an English journalist who has written the 'History of Scotland Yard' and other books dealing with detectives and criminals. He sets out in this new book with a description and comparison of the detective systems that have been developed in England, France, Germany, Austria and the United States. . . After several chapters dealing with detective methods in a rather general way, and having many illustrative anecdotes, Mr. Dilnot takes up, successively, in sixteen chapters as many crimes of various sorts notable for the skill, the patience, the detective instinct and the perseverance with which detectives solved their problems and brought those who committed them to justice."—N Y Times

---

Bookm 69:xxx Je '29 60w
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 My 19 '29 120w
Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p10 My 25 '29 120w

"Mr. Dilnot tells the stories interestingly and with unusual skill in their narration."
+ N Y Times p21 My 19 '29 280w

"The amateur detective will get a lot of information out of this volume." G: Joel
+ N Y World p11m My 5 '29 80w
Times [London] Lit Sup p123 F 14 '29 250w

DIMNET, ERNEST. Art of thinking. 216p $2.50 Simon & Schuster [6s Cape, J.]
153 Thought and thinking
28-25828

"A distinguished book written by a distinguished author for the encouragement of people without distinction. Its purpose is to convince men and women who are neither morons nor geniuses that they can nevertheless have a vigorous and interesting mental life of their own, a life that is more than the mere parroting of current shibboleths, which has become the popular substitute for thought. He convinces us that we can ourselves become the masters of the art of thinking by pointing out to us those rare intervals in our own mental experience when our insight has been the clearest and our expression the freest, and gives practical, common-sense suggestions as to how we can increase their frequency, their depth and their range."—Christian Century

---

Ann Am Acad 144:161 Jl '29 90w

"This is a delightful book; the very reading of it sharpens the wits and challenges the mind."
+ Booklist 25:230 Mr '29

"This charming and informal book by a wise Frenchman is packed with such practical advice that it might well have been entitled 'A Manual for Making Your Own Thoughts.'" L. S. Morris
+ Bookm 69:332 My '29 230w

"Mr. Dimnet is particularly well qualified to act as an exporter of intelligence. Besides possessing an incisive mind, he has the distinction, perhaps unique since John Gower, of having written books in Latin, French and English, while his long acquaintance with the United States enables him to address American readers in their own idiom. . . The substance of the book is not new or startling, but the author's range of illustration is exceptionally wide and his presentation is witty and persuasive." G: F. Whicher
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Ja 13 '29 650w
Boston Transcript p5 Ja 26 '29 150w

"It is rare that he who teaches should also charm. But this last is precisely what the Abbé Dimnet contrives to do through the two hundred pages of this rare little book, in so many ways a marvel of efficiency, helpfulness and general sympathy. . . The Abbé is amiable, he is witty, he is immensely good company—but he can be pitiless in matters of intellectual integrity." K. B.
+ Cath World 128:501 Ja '29 420w

"A work of art. Its virtue consists in that rare freshness of treatment and distinction of style that awaken the enthusiasm of the reader for the arduous labor necessary to the mastery of the technique it describes." H. E. Jensen
+ Christian Century 46:583 My 1 '29 380w

"Nowhere is he very precise in the matter of definitions and he does not draw any uncomfortable distinctions between thought and revery. His book is, to tell the truth, just a little too much like an 'inspirational' talk of the sort that clubwomen and rotary members are said to like, and it rouses certain grave doubts as to its usefulness."
— Nation 128:623 My 22 '29 200w

"The book's main faults are superficiality and —if one may say so as politely as possible—a certain recurrent silliness." Leonard Woolf
— Nation and Ath 45:682 Ag 24 '29 1200w

"Whether it be a translation or from his own pen (which is the more likely, for he writes English like an Englishman), it is a book without the mark of a foreign origin; and perhaps he chose English for his medium on the consideration that thinking had often been condemned during the last century and even lately in the English tongue as a solvent of judgment and instinctive power." H. Belloc

New Statesman 33:625 Ag 31 '29 1200w

Reviewed by J: Chamberlain
N Y Times p2 Ja 27 '29 1150w

"Not the least interesting passages of his book are those in which, with shrewd though amiable tolerance, he records his impressions of contemporary America, whose prevalent standards of education, art, literature, business, progress, &c., he graphically contrasts with those of Europe. His work is remarkably free from all trace of second-hand ideas, reflects the personality of a first-rate thinking man and is written with a purity of style astonishing in one using a language other than his native tongue." E. C. Beckwith
+ N Y World p11m Ja 20 '29 300w

Pratt p7 spring '29

"It speaks well for the taste of the American reading public that this book should have been a best-seller in America for five months. The book has met and survived the author's own admirable test of a new work which is implicit in his sage advice to neglect what does not last more than twelve weeks. . . But no one should pass by so sweetly reasonable a plea for order, sense, and a taste for intelligent reading, and so superb an example of the art of being a really universal uncle."
+ Sat R 148:133 Ag 3 '29 1800w

"About this genial and witty book I would say to the reader 'Taste it, try it for yourself. Keep it close at hand, read a page or two, a paragraph, opening at random. Browse about in it; read it consecutively. Keep it on a bedside table and read it to compose your mind at night and to arouse it in the morning.' For the book is compact with the wisdom gathered in years of observation of himself and others." J: Dewey
+ Sat R of Lit 5:423 D 1 '28 480w

Spec 143:225 Ag 17 '29 900w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 24 '29 120w

"As an assistance to the art of thinking, M. Dimnet gives much advice which would be extremely useful to anyone on the point of practising this art. If M. Dimnet does not seem to go to the root of the problem why everybody does not practice this art, he is more likely to be useful to those who are about to practise it."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p633 Ag 15 '29 1000w

DIMOCK, MARSHALL EDWARD. Congressional investigating committees. (Johns Hopkins univ. studies in hist. and political science) 182p pa $1.75 Johns Hopkins

328.34 United States.Congress—History. United States.Congress—Powers and duties 29-906

"Dr. Dimock classifies his material and organizes his study according to the three functions which he believes investigations perform: (1) to determine the qualifications, conduct, and privileges of members of Congress; (2) to aid in law-making by finding facts on public problems and in public emergencies; and (3) to control the executive departments by investigations pertaining to public finances, impeachments, official conduct or policy, and presidential elections."—Harvard Law R

"It seems regrettable that he should confine himself to selected cases, when a history of all the investigations would have been as interesting, and perhaps more instructive." E: W. Carter
+ — Ann Am Acad 144:161 Jl '29 80w

Boston Transcript p8 Mr 23 '29 900w

"It is the reviewer's opinion that so far as contributions to the sum of recorded knowledge are concerned, both these studies [Eberling's and Dimock's] are, in a sense, supererogatory in that they cover ground which had already been adequately covered in published articles. Nevertheless, they represent much diligent research and include some good comment and criticism. . . Dr. Dimock's book is the more succinct, better balanced, and more systematically organized of the two." G: B. Galloway
+ — Harvard Law R 42:845 Ap '29 400w

DIVER, MAUD. Wild bird. 484p $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d Murray] 29-11283

In her childhood, Eve lived in India, adoring her father and adored by him. After his death mother and child moved to England, but Eve mourned constantly for her father and the lost happy life. Some time later, on her way at last to live with a friend in India, the young girl becomes engaged to marry a considerably older man who reminds her of her father. The engagement is not a happy one, and when in India it is broken Eve finds a younger, more suitable lover.

Booklist 25:394 Jl '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 S 8 '29 370w

"Some people have a rare gift for shooting the Sentimental Rapids without getting wet. Maud Diver is one of them. No placid waters will do for her jaunting. Her craft must adventure cataracts. But if you observe an occasional mist about it, a driven spray of emotions through which the strong sun beyond makes rainbows, in another moment a clean wind blows them away, and you are conscious again of fresh ozone and swift rivers running deep." I. W. Lawrence
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 1 '29 1000w

"Mrs. Diver is facile and abundant (the novel is at least two hundred pages too long), but the situations are skilfully developed and the fairly neat writing occasionally achieves a happy effect."
— + Nation and Ath 45:250 My 18 '29 170w

"While the story is of a rather old-fashioned type, it is pleasantly told and not uninteresting, the author herself being evidently very much attached to her characters, especially to her very young, impulsive and quite charming heroine."
+ — N Y Times p9 Je 2 '29 430w

"So far as the literary values of 'Wild Bird' go, they are nil. The story is obvious, the characterizations, lifeless. The scene which shifts from Switzerland to India is highly colored after the fashion of the Morris Gest pageants."
— Outlook 152:230 Je 5 '29 150w

"Mrs Diver builds bridges and causeways of words for her characters with as lavish a hand as certain city fathers voted public improvements in the unregenerate days of the city 'boss.' The result is a story of approximately 500 pages of small print that would bear pruning."
— + Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 18 '29 280w

"Mrs. Diver's love of India and ability as a novelist make this story one which can be recommended to all who, as the phrase goes, 'know' India."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p385 My 9 '29 220w

Wis Lib Bul 25:276 Jl '29

DIX, MARK H. American business adventure; the story of Henry A. Dix. 181p il $3 Harper

B or 92 Dix, Henry A. 28-30272

"It is the narrative of how a man came to this country in middle age, without knowledge of the language or the customs of the land, built up a highly successful business—the 'Dix-Make' in women's wear—became an important factor in community life, and finally, when he had got well past the three-score-and-ten milestone, decided to turn his million-dollar concern over to his employes. The author's full account of this venture and all its details is interesting, and so also is his comment on the reasons which led his father to take this step." —N Y Times

Booklist 25:283 Ap '29

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Mr 3 '29 110w

DIX, M. H.—Continued

"This record, made by his son, is well written and is almost an unconscious sermon on Christian dealing with fellow men."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 26 '29 200w

Reviewed by R. A. Gibson

Nation 129:174 Ag 14 '29 70w

"Mark H. Dix, the son of the man that the book is about, tells the story capably and interestingly and with full knowledge, for he has himself been a part of its development."

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 27 '29 450w

"This book sets forth a remarkable record of earnestness and of kindness. . . It is neither fulsome nor obscurely sentimental, as such narrative may be; the actual achievement exceeds and does honor to the sentiment expressed." Herbert Feis

+ Survey 61:814 Mr 15 '29 480w

Wis Lib Bul 25:74 F '29

DIXON, THOMAS. Sun virgin. 306p $2 Liveright [7s 6d Paul, S.]

29-7202

A Spanish cavalier under the leadership of Pizarro enters the kingdom of the Incas in Peru. He saves the life of the Sun virgin, an Inca girl doomed to die for having spoken to a man—himself. The girl falls madly in love with him but Malino is betrothed to Teresa, a Spanish beauty, who follows him to Peru and shares the highly melodramatic events which follow, entangling Pizarro, De Soto and the Incas.

"The author, who takes his history seriously, is easy guide to the period. In surveying the ancient field and pointing out the probable developments of succeeding years he may be said to have concerned himself with the birth of a couple of nations. 'The Sun Virgin' is no end picturesque."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Je 9 '29 120w

"Mr. Dixon has not shown himself a master of historical setting by any manner of means; his forte is decidedly that of the creator of sentimental fiction and here he has failed quite definitely to unite the two aspects of his endeavor."

— Boston Transcript p5 My 11 '29 250w

"The book presents an array of historical facts, a knowledge of the topography of the country, and a picture of the manners and customs of the charming and urbane Incas which is impressive."

+ N Y Times p27 O 13 '29 150w

"Thomas Dixon seems not to have lost the knack of rapid and interesting narrative in the years since 'The Leopard's Spots' and 'The Clansman' appeared."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '29 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p900 N 7 '29 180w

DIXON, WILLIAM MACNEILE. Cinderella's garden. 136p il $2 Oxford

"As might be supposed from the fact that the author, W. Macneile Dixon, is a literary critic, a philosopher, and a professor of English literature at the University of Oxford, 'Cinderella's Garden,' although nominally a children's book, indulges in considerable good-natured criticism of contemporary oddities in both literature and science. The book has a well-marked dual personality. For children it will appear a wonder tale of what happened to three little boys who passed through a crabhole in the sand into the garden of Cinderella, where all sorts of known and unknown animals disport themselves, and where live many well-known characters of history and fiction. For the adult the book will be an amusing commentary on modernity."—Sat R of Lit

"Into this little volume Mr. Dixon has put the whimsical humor, the gentle irony, the kindly satire of a mellowed life. He knows what to pass by with a smile, what to dismiss with a jest. The narrative sparkles. The story is compact and alive." W. H. Dunn

+ N Y Times p2 Je 10 '28 1200w

"There is no escaping the unpleasant comparison between 'Cinderella's Garden' and 'Alice in Wonderland.' Indeed, the resemblance is too close to be other than intentional. One may perhaps admire Professor Dixon's courage in selecting such a model, but can scarcely endorse his wisdom."

Sat R of Lit 5:630 Ja 26 '29 150w

DOBB, MAURICE HERBERT. Wages; with an introd. by J. M. Keynes. (Cambridge economic handbooks) 169p $1.25 Harcourt [5s Nisbet; Cambridge univ. press]

331.2 Wages [L29-8]

An outline of the wage-system and its characteristics, the methods of paying wages, various theories of wages, wage differences, including the question of equal pay for men and women, the effect of trade unions on wages, and of legislation on the wages contract.

"Mr. Dobb, more than most economists, is a questioner, an improver, and a reviser. In both his previous books he has shown new angles of approach to old problems. . . Intelligent readers will, I think, lay down Mr. Dobb's book, stimulated but still puzzled. He has handled ideas with skill, but he has not yet woven them into a perfect pattern." Hugh Dalton

+ — Nation and Ath 44:530 Ja 12 '29 800w

"It is not surprising that Mr. Dobb, having set out to write an elementary manual on the wages question, should have failed to make a satisfactory book. For elementary manuals need, above all, assured foundations; and in this case there are no secure foundations on which a lucid exposition can be based."

— New Statesman 32:328 D 15 '28 560w

"Thoughtful little book on wages by one of the younger Cambridge economists. Mr. Dobb's unconventional treatment of a difficult theme is interesting."

+ Spec 142:sup387 Mr 9 '29 90w

DOBIAS, FRANK. Picture book of flying. (Macmillan picture bks.) 64p il $2 Macmillan

629.13 Aeronautics—Juvenile literature

28-30681

A book of pictures in color, with brief explanatory text, describing the evolution of man's experiments at flight from balloons to aeroplanes.

Booklist 25:216 F '29

"The illustrations are a joy and delight. But the textual matter is a disappointment." D. R.

— + Boston Transcript p3 Ja 16 '29 400w

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner

N Y Times p6 D 2 '28 130w

St Louis 27:102 Mr '29

— Sat R of Lit 5:672 F 9 '29 150w

Wis Lib Bul 25:32 Ja '29

DOBREE, BONAMY. Lamp and the lute; studies in six modern authors. 133p $2 (6s) Oxford

820.4 English literature—History and criticism. Ibsen, Henrik 29-27833

"The lectures on Ibsen, Hardy, Kipling, Forster, Lawrence and Eliot, which form this volume, are Mr. Dobrée's first attempts at contemporary criticism. . . 'The point of interest for me,' Mr. Dobrée writes, 'has been to determine what the work of various writers is about, namely, what it is that has troubled their minds enough to impel them insistently to write it.' "—New Repub

Nation and Ath 45:770 S 14 '29 600w

"Readers familiar with his earlier work on seventeenth century drama will be disappointed by the comparatively loose and disorderly style, and by the gingerly fashion in which he handles his principal idea. Mr. Dobrée himself apologizes in his preface; explaining that the lectures were addressed to a popular and ill-informed audience. . . But it would be a mistake to dismiss the book from serious consideration." R. P. Blackmur

— + New Repub 61:74 D 11 '29 800w

"The value of Mr. Bonamy Dobree's criticism rests in its honesty; in his steady attempt to say what he means, and feels, without swerving. In each of the studies we have the delight of finding a real response to the author, an attempt to grasp his 'intuition,' and a definite thinking-out of the artistic—and moral—problems his outlook involves. There is an equivalent disadvantage: Mr. Dobree himself is in love with doubt; and perhaps at times confuses doubt with honesty."

+ — Spec 143:308 S 7 '29 160w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 20 '29 500w

"The choice of the six writers is excellent, achieving in two cases at least an effect of novelty which, taken together with the able analysis which justifies their inclusion, indicates at once that here we have an original, not an imitative, critical talent. . . His especial merit lies most perhaps in the precision with which he isolates his subjects' unique sensibilities, the limpidity of his account of them, and his ability to select quotations which do perfectly embody the quality he is illustrating."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p635 Ag 15 '29 1400w

DOBSON, ALBAN. Austin Dobson; with chapters by Sir Edmund Gosse and George Saintsbury. 340p $5 (12s 6d) Oxford

B or 92 Dobson, Austin 29-11511

"Austin Dobson requested that there should be no biography of him after his death. This volume is not a memoir, but a memorial volume: a few facts, a few anecdotes and appreciations, many letters, a number of portraits and facsimiles, biographies, and miscellanies. His life was outwardly very uneventful. For forty-five years he spent his days at the Board of Trade, his evenings in the library of his suburban home. He retired in 1901 and died in 1921 at over eighty."—Sat R of Lit

Booklist 26:28 O '29

Nation and Ath 45:122 Ap 27 '29 170w

"Alban Dobson's compilation is both charming and readable. No matter how sedentary Dobson's life was, he was constantly in contact with a large number of interesting personalities. It is entertaining to read their letters. It is amusing to read the squibs in the presentation volumes of their own works that they sent Dobson. It is instructive to read the memories of Sir Edmund Gosse and George Saintsbury. The bibliographical matter holds the interest. The book, in short, is one of those delectable library pieces." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p4 S 1 '29 1500w

Sat R of Lit 6:114 S 7 '29 200w

Spec 142:202 F 9 '29 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p73 Ja 31 '29 1000w

DODD, CHARLES HAROLD. Authority of the Bible. (Lib. of constructive theology) 310p $3 Harper [10s 6d Nisbet]

220.1 Bible. Whole—Evidences, authority, etc. 29-7230

Assuming that "the measure of any authority which the Bible may possess must lie in its direct religious value," the author sets out to study the specific religious value of the Bible in various aspects, dividing his study in four parts; the authority of individual inspiration, the authority of corporate experience, authority of the incarnation, authority of history. Dr Dodd is Yates professor of New Testament Greek and exegesis at Mansfield college, Oxford.

Boston Transcript p8 My 18 '29 300w

"Unless we are content to have the Bible reduced to the level of a formal report, which is approved without being read, or rejected out of hand by a sophisticated generation, such a valuable monograph as this must render far more than 'first aid.'" W. P. Lemon

+ Christian Century 46:1063 Ag 28 '29 1200w

"Students seeking a trustworthy basis for such reconstruction of the Doctrine of Sacred Scripture as modern criticism demands will find this volume of Professor Dodd both sound and serviceable. It leads to a rational interpretation of the doctrine of progressive divine revelation."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1030 My 18 '29 160w

"Apart from the questionable wisdom of expanding material for a fair-sized booklet into a volume of over 300 pages, the volume is an interesting and effective presentation of the modern liberal position toward the Bible." A. E. L.

+ — Springf'd Republican p12 Je 18 '29 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p348 My 2 '29 1000w

DODD, LEE WILSON. Great enlightenment; a satire in verse; with other selected verses. 250p $2 Harper

811 28-25967

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Booklist 25:240 Mr '29

"Mr. Dodd's other verses were scarcely worth collecting, but 'The Great Enlightenment' amply justifies this volume. It is very passable Pope." Mark Van Doren

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ja 6 '29 170w

"'The Great Enlightenment,' considering what it might have been, is a strangely ineffectual piece of writing. Mr. Dodd spends so much time making sure that we know just why he wrote this and that, and so much time making sure he has left no loophole and missed no merry quip, that again and again the reader is swamped in endless and meandering thought."

— Boston Transcript p2 Jl 3 '29 300w

"Within their field, these poems have clarity and ease; they speak to the mind as well as the emotions."

+ Dial 86:526 Je '29 80w

"This 'didactic essay in verse' canvasses the whole of contemporary wisdom. It pokes into the very ribs of behaviorism, and makes the reader wriggle with delight. It gives a picture, accurate and hilarious, of the whole metaphysics of mechanico-disillusion, of Bertrand Russell, of Santayana, of the new physics." Irwin Edman

+ Nation 128:139 Ja 30 '29 500w

"This is the chief criticism to be made against Mr. Dodd; that he has let his matter impose its own disorder upon his work; otherwise his book is very entertaining, and has a distinctive quality to its wit, which reveals an attractive personality and a sense of values that is sound and discriminating." Theodore Spencer

+ — New Repub 58:103 Mr 13 '29 200w

New Statesman 33:306 Je 15 '29 80w

St Louis 27:165 My '29

"It is of remarkable and devastating insight." H: S. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 5:637 F 2 '29 1350w

"Mr. Dodd's appellation of himself as 'Poet of the blown but constant flame' is, in the main, happy. Fundamentally lyrical, the collection is of an almost alarming versatility in range and emotion, yet maintains, at the same time, a fairly uniform high-water mark of quality."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 11 '29 320w

Wis Lib Bul 24:342 D '28

DODGE, MARY RAYMOND. Fifty little businesses for women. 319p $2.50 Stokes

396.5 Woman—Employment. Occupations 28-17403

Miss Dodge outlines the careers of fifty women each of whom had a good idea and, beginning in a small way, built it up into a successful and sometimes very large business.

DODGE, M. R.—Continued

Booklist 25:310 My '29

"For anyone who is merely looking for an occupation, this book might offer suggestions, but as for being a practical help in carrying out a project, it bears about the same relation to business problems that the fairy tale bears to modern marriage." P. L.

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 6 '29 320w

"The author presents her counsel and advice in a readable, dramatic way, making of each of her fifty chapters the interesting personal story of how one woman did that particular thing. In almost every one of them is an unusual idea developed with originality."

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 6 '29 170w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '29 80w

DODGSON, CHARLES LUTWIDGE. See Carroll, L:, pseud.

DOLMAN, JOHN. Art of play production. 466p il $4 (10s 6d) Harper

792 Theater. Acting. Amateur theatricals
28-25878

The amateur theater group will find here helpful suggestions concerning every step in play production from the points of view of director, cast and stage crew. There are a few illustrations, chiefly of stage settings, a bibliography and an index. The author is professor of English in the University of Pennsylvania.

Booklist 25:199 F '29

Bookm 69:xii Jl '29 150w

" 'The Art of Play Production' is based quite evidently on long experience, and never forgets its practical aim. But it has one great merit over nearly all similar books. It analyzes as well as gives practical instruction. When it talks of rhythm it explains what rhythm is, and how it is essential to drama. When it talks of expressionism, it tells what that is—no small feat in itself. It gives no student the idea that play production is an easy thing, but distinctly the idea that it can be done only by long and patient study and practice." W. P. Eaton

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ja 20 '29 120w

"Interesting in all practical details; the author's mediating position between extreme theories is a plausible one, but so expressed that it seems fair to no theory whatever. A section on the traditional rules of stage movement is very good."

+ — Dial 86:266 Mr '29 50w

"There may be better manuals, but I have not run across one. Written for the amateur, 'for the beginner but not for the dabbler,' this outline really clears the ground for intelligent amateur effort. . . Nevertheless the book contains so much sound elucidation for the amateur director, actor, and designer (including a well-annotated bibliography of special publications on all phases of theater art) that every group of amateurs able to profit by it could set up shop immediately." Lee Simonson

+ Nation 127:sup630 D 5 '28 1000w

St Louis 27:132 Ap '29

"Mr. Dolman's book is more than just another book on play production. This large volume, with copious diagrams, illustrations, and bibliographies, is addressed to the amateur, to the student with a professional aim, and to the teacher. The book is stimulating, for the author has a point of view."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:609 Ja 19 '29 130w

"What is new in Professor Dolman's solid counsel, and extremely valuable to the theatre as an art, is his application of abstract aesthetic principles to the intense reality of directing a play."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 13:466 Je '29 500w

"The present book is of a rather intimidating thoroughness, it is true, but it is intelligently planned, it is reasonably analytical in tone, and it avoids the more solemn pretensions of the majority of such handbooks. Better still, it approaches the subject of the production of plays from a psychological and æsthetic point of view."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p1021 D 27 '28 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 25:98 Mr '29

DOLPH, EDWARD ARTHUR, ed. Sound off! soldier songs from Yankee Doodle to Parley voo; music arr. by Philip Egner; foreword by Peter B. Kyne. 621p il $7.50 Cosmopolitan bk.

784.7 War-songs, American. Ballads, American. Songs, English
29-10643

"Unquestionably the most inclusive and useful collection of American soldier songs. There are well-filled sections on the songs of and before the Revolution, the interim through 1812, the Mexican, Spanish and World Wars. The illustrations by Lawrence Schick are good."—Bookm

Booklist 25:383 Jl '29

"The songs are well and simply set by Philip Egner, the editor has been to great pains to search out the original tunes, there are good notes, indices, and a bibliography."

+ Bookm 69:xiv Je '29 120w

Boston Transcript p6 Je 29 '29 230w

N Y Times p3 Ap 28 '29 320w

" 'Sound Off' covers the singing American soldier man from the days of the Revolution to the cootie infested dug-outs in the Argonne Forest. Mr. Dolph has wisely included the songs of the West Pointers. There are also endless parodies on the Broadway tunes." J: J. Niles

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1046 My 25 '29 680w

DONALDSON, JOHN. International economic relations; a treatise on world economy and world politics. 674p $3.20 (16s) Longmans

330 Economic policy. World politics. International law and relations. Commercial policy. Economic conditions
28-24588

Part I treats of the political economy of the world and the factors which determine its structure; Part II describes the economic position of the separate nations, and the general economic interrelation of all nations.

"The book is frankly descriptive, designed to sketch the setting and structure of world economy rather than to outline problems and suggest solutions. It represents a diligent compilation and organization of factual material, which will undoubtedly make it useful for reference and text purposes. . . Unfortunately the author has a tortuous style and uses an extensive vocabulary loosely, so that words frequently obscure his meaning." H. M. Cassidy

+ — Am Econ R 19:100 Mr '29 480w

Am Pol Sci R 23:233 F '29 200w

"The author set himself a large task in a field which has received too little attention, and on the whole has completed it very well. He has covered a wide field, bringing together the salient facts and pointing to their significance. That his attitude toward leading tendencies in world-economy is less critical than that of the reviewer will no doubt contribute to the success of the book." B: B. Wallace

+ — J Pol Econ 37:357 Je '29 1120w

"Dr. Donaldson has given us a valuable reference book for data in his field which have thus far been difficult of access. His interpretation of these materials is of a more limited value, primarily because of his lack of appreciation of the new tendencies toward institutional treatment of the problems with which he has dealt." H. D. Gideonse

— + Pol Sci Q 44:444 S '29 850w

"Gratitude is added to respect as one reads through the orderly conspectus of world economic relations which Mr. Donaldson has provided. The treatment is objective and comprehensive. Selection and summary are, of course, inevitable; but only extreme partisans will quarrel with the selection made, and the treatment of controversial topics is eminently judicial and fair."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p4 Ja 3 '29 1250w

DONNE, JOHN. Complete poetry and selected prose; ed. by John Hayward. 793p $3.50 Random house [8s 6d Nonesuch press]

821 [29-11198]

"This companion volume of the complete William Blake put forth by the same publishers is an especially choice example of printing and make-up, and includes all of Donne's poetry and a selection of his prose which could not be bettered."—N Y Evening Post

Boston Transcript p7 Ap 20 '29 120w

"Nothing could be more welcome. It is a small stout book; it is not on India paper, and runs to nearly eight hundred pages, yet it is of a size which makes it a convenient travelling companion; it is inexpensive; and finally, the second half of it is devoted to selections from Donne's prose. Mr. Hayward, in the present edition, offers a choice which is ample enough to entice, though not overwhelming enough to alarm." V. Sackville-West

+ Nation and Ath 44:846 Mr 16 '29 680w

"This is an ideal edition." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 13 '29 100w

"The edition puts the seal upon Donne's reputation. In the best sense it is a 'popular edition.' There are few notes; the text has been carefully prepared by Mr. John Hayward; there is an admirably large amount of Donne in an admirably small compass. The proof-reading is not quite impeccable, but we cannot complain of so generous a production." Alan Porter

+ — Spec 142:289 F 23 '29 700w

"The work of selection, where there has had to be selection, has been admirably done; and while Mr. Hayward consults the taste of the general reader, he also, in the unobtrusive manner which is the privilege of the thoughtful selector, assists in forming it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p510 Je 27 '29 1100w

DONNE, THOMAS EDWARD. Maori, past and present; an account of a highly attractive, intelligent people, their doubtful origin, their customs & ways of living, art, methods of warfare, hunting & other characteristics mental & physical. 287p il $6 Lippincott

572.993 Maoris [28-8421]

The author's official positions have brought him into intimate contact with the Maoris of New Zealand for more than fifty years. Out of this intimate knowledge of the various tribes he writes for the general reader what he describes as a light and sketchy account of Maori civilization at the coming of the white man, the changes induced by contact with the whites, and past and present customs and beliefs of the various tribes. Numerous illustrations, a map and an index.

"Mr. Donne makes no claim to the craft of the professional journalist, but his natural gusto and love of his subject have enabled him to strike a fair balance between the readable and the informative." Rex Hunter

+ N Y Evening Post p13 Ap 21 '28 300w

"This account of the aboriginal inhabitants of New Zealand adds very little to the literature about them. Somewhat overloaded with native words and involved description, it will be heavy going for the casual reader. The book will probably prove of most interest to those searching for records of contact between complex and simpler civilizations and the administrative and social difficulties which result."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:498 D 8 '28 320w

DONOVAN, MRS FRANCES R. Saleslady. (Univ. of Chicago sociological ser.) 267p $3 Univ. of Chicago press [13s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

331.4 Saleswomen. Department stores. Woman—Employment 29-1188

"Mrs. Donovan is a teacher in a large public high school in Chicago, and because every year she talks with and advises some 200 girls about what work they can take up after graduation she decided to spend a summer working in a big department store, so that she would know better what to say to them about this particular kind of occupation. She spent more than one summer, and in several stores, and her book recounts her daily experiences, describes her training, work and friendships with her fellow-employes, and the environment and customs of the different shops."—N Y Times

Booklist 26:101 D '29

"Not remarkable, but at least unusual, this sociological study of the sales 'girls' in two New York department stores reads like a novel. . . . She has visited her friends in their homes and at their vacation resorts; she has met their beaux, their husbands, their dependent children. Out of her experiences, she has threaded a bright tapestry of their lives."

+ Bookm 70:x O '29 170w

"Macy's, or one of its peers, has been examined as a world in itself from the vantage point of a job behind the counter. No plan has been followed, but impressions have been jotted down pell-mell—psychological tests, customers, buyers, bachelor-girl apartments, model tenements. Naturally the reader gathers impressions, much as the writer herself did, but it cannot be said that generalizations concerning society at large or department store employees in particular emerge."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 10 '29 400w

Boston Transcript p4 N 13 '29 380w

"Beyond the sociological service Mrs. Donovan offers us a book of real people, good talk, and the salty detail of the day's work." Beulah Amidon

+ Nation 129:470 O 23 '29 380w

"It is written in a lively, vigorous way and is as full of human interest and human personality, her own and that of many other women, as a piece of fiction. Mrs. Donovan's full-length picture of the life, character and work of the saleslady has color and action and vitality and is a notable contribution, done in the new way, to the new sociology that this series of sociological studies is developing."

+ N Y Times p3 N 3 '29 250w

St Louis 27:330 D '29

"Our author seems to have been thoroughly attracted and interested by the business of selling, and there are many of us who are as interested as she is in the way others live."

+ Spec 143:603 O 26 '29 800w

"She ought to be encouraged to make a similar study of stenographers and perhaps of that other very interesting female profession, the scrubwomen." Nels Anderson

Survey 63:230 N 15 '29 280w

"The book is important because it is one of the few serious attempts we have to see how the submerged tenth salesgirl lives, and it contains much valuable material. Unfortunately it has two grave weaknesses: the author's predilection for sweeping generalizations based on a single summer's experience in metropolitan stores; and her too, too rosy picture of department store life." G. E. M.

+ — World Tomorrow 13:38 Ja '30 750w

DORAU, HERBERT BENJAMIN, and HINMAN, ALBERT G. Urban land economics. (Land economics ser.) 570p $4 (17s) Macmillan

333 Cities and towns—United States. Land 28-7283

"The facts and problems of city growth in relation to land form the theme of this book. Particular phases of city development have been treated in earlier works, but this, so far as we are aware, is the first attempt to deal with the subject as a whole. It is an outcome of the systematic and well-conceived studies directed by Prof. Richard T. Ely through the Institute for Research in Land Economics at Northwestern University."—R of Rs

DORAU, H. B:, and HINMAN, A. G.—Continued

Booklist 25:9 O '28
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ag 26 '28 70w

"This is a pioneer work, covering the many complex land problems that have arisen out of urbanization. An interesting concluding chapter deals with the future of American cities."
+ Nation 127:69 Jl 18 '28 80w
R of Rs 77:adv14 My '28 80w
Wis Lib Bul 24:187 Je '28

DOREY, JACQUES. Three and the moon; legendary stories of old Brittany, Normandy and Provence. 103p il $3.50 Knopf
398 Legends—France 29-25021

Stories taken from the old legends of Brittany, Normandy and Provence, transcribed by a young French poet, and illustrated in vivid colors by Boris Artzybasheff.

"If there is anything wanting in the stories of this book (which are good and even colorful stories) it is more than supplied by the drawings of charging knights, blazing heraldry, monstrous devils and genii, lavender towers and unicorns, and winged dwarfs." F. E. Hill
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 N 17 '29 750w

"These legends of old Brittany are lovely and poetic additions to the stock of folk-tales. Reminiscent of Laurence Housman and Max Beerbohm in their imagery and humor, they are invested by Jacques Dorey with an original and powerful touch which has been superbly understood and interpreted by Artzybasheff."
+ Nation 129:598 N 20 '29 70w

"On every page is the evidence of an imagination that can take an old wife's tale and deftly mould from it a thing of quivering beauty. Boris Artzybasheff, who illustrates the book, has done some of his best work here. The whole book has been planned by one who has a feeling for the highest standards in children's literature." O. M. Fuller
+ N Y World p11m N 10 '29 350w
Reviewed by F. J. Olcott
Sat R of Lit 6:401 N 16 '29 200w

DORGELES, ROLAND. Departure; tr. by Pauline E. Rush. 381p $2.50 Simon & Schuster [7s 6d Gollancz]
28-25462

A cruise to the Far East with the scene shifting from one colorful port of call to the next, is the setting for a dramatic situation involving most of the passengers on board. The central figures of the drama are two lovers, the soprano and tenor of an opera company. The tenor is a Frenchman fleeing from a recent tragedy to a new land and a new life with his love. The selfish interference with the lovers on the part of the other passengers ends in catastrophe.

"The story is exciting and the characters are deftly handled, but the vivid descriptions and the reproduction of the atmosphere on a liner are the book's best points."
+ Bookm 68:xxv F '29 100w

" 'Departure' skilfully combines humor and tragedy and satire into a story that is easy and enjoyable to read. You travel in amusing company, the skeins of the tale are well knit together, and you have had a trip to the Orient." L. G. Marshall
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 N 25 '28 650w

"It is a book lacking in literary quality, lacking in grace and distinction and making up in some parts for these essentials by a liveliness which occasionally rings true." Eugene Lohrke
— + N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 12 '29 450w

"Roland Dorgèles is a traveler and a reporter as well as a novelist. The exotic detail of the Orient suffuses the book and links the story inseparably to its setting. Existence is, indeed, for a time bounded by departure and arrival at port. But the rich play of character, the incisive wit and the keenly satirical insight of the author make the novel far more than colorful travel writing."
+ N Y Times p50 D 2 '28 630w

"As a novel, 'Departure' is a poor performance; as a travel book, excellent." Stoyan Christowe
— + N Y World p11m Ja 20 '29 120w

"In its somewhat shallow and unreal way it is frequently interesting and always thoroughly easy to read, but not much more can be said for it." Theodore Purdy, Jr.
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:564 D 29 '28 400w

DORRIS, ANNA VERONA. Visual instruction in the public schools. 481p il $2.64 Ginn
371.335 Visual instruction 28-29006

"The book not only gives general information regarding visual instruction but gives teachers and supervisors concrete guidance in the daily use of visual materials of all types."—El School J

Booklist 25:233 Mr '29

"The point of view presented by the book is sound. It does not overemphasize any one type of visual aid. All visual instruction is discussed as a means to an end, as an aid and supplement to established classroom practice. . . If criticism may be made, it is with respect to that which is not a part of the content of the book. For example, there are no bibliographical references to source materials, no suggestions for further reading, and no references to the extensive classroom experiments with visual materials, such as have been made by Freeman. The book is a timely, pioneering work and is to be commended for its solid, professional point of view. It deserves a good reception among teachers." F. D. McClusky
+ — El School J 29:467 F '29 380w
St Louis 27:90 Mr '29

DORSEY, GEORGE AMOS. Hows and whys of human behavior. 298p $3.50 (12s 6d) Harper
158 Behaviorism (psychology) 29-1261

In a sensible, conversational, question-and-answer way Dr Dorsey deals with the endless enigma of human behavior—Why do we do this? How do we get this way? Why do we fall for, or out with, each other? How can we be happy tho married? Why do we sleep so much? Why should we control our emotions?

"This volume is as fascinating as any detective story. You are carried on from chapter to chapter, because from the outset your curiosity about yourself as an ordinary human has been aroused. Through the pages stalk everyday intimates, colleagues, who you know are the result of the so-called 'early conditioning' or of not having subjected themselves to a critical self analysis. If you are in a rut, the book is an antidote. It is recommended not for one reading, but as an addition to your library to which you can turn for frequent mental stimulation and enjoyment." A. B. Towse
+ Am J Pub Health 19:456 Ap '29 550w
Booklist 25:230 Mr '29

"Individual happiness is the only conceivable aim of sane existence, and Dorsey, I believe, has in this book made a substantial contribution to our not too certain knowledge of how to get at it. So I raise a cheer, and put off prejudice, much as it hurts. . . His winged words are grouped in chapters headed by general questions of a banality equalled only by their importance." H. M. Parshley

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ja 13 '29 1350w

"Some of the conclusions reached by this student of human nature are likely to be disputed, but his main positions are too well founded not to give many of those who assimilate them the needed 'jolt' in the right direction. The whole book is pervaded with a spirit of optimism sure of itself to work wonders." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 26 '29 570w

"The one big idea is the relative unimportance of hereditary bents. Dr. Dorsey gives much valuable and entertaining discourse on this theme and related topics, but little expert advice as to how to conduct the educational process upon which behavior ultimately depends. But he does give some useful and accurate descriptions of the influences which make things go wrong with our lives and of some of the ways in which disasters may be avoided."
+ Christian Century 46:588 My 1 '29 150w
Cleveland Open Shelf p136 N '29

"Articles like these are written because they fit the notion in the minds of some editors of popular magazines of what the public wants. It is essentially a jazz style, a punctuated series of syncopated emphases with never a let-up and no perspective, always insistent upon scoring a point in every paragraph —all of which is a pity, for there is interesting material in this volume and it is interestingly handled." Dr Joseph Jastrow
— + N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 19 '29 820w

"His book is neither a scientific nor a moral treatise; it is an absorbingly interesting explanation of why certain human matters are as they are, and how they can be, if desired, improved upon. . . The author of 'Why We Behave Like Human Beings' has 'done it again' —he has given vitally useful knowledge in applied human science to the laymen who need it." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p8 F 17 '29 930w
Outlook 151:158 Ja 23 '29 60w
Pratt p7 summer '29

"A few fragments of common sense swamped in oceans of triviality."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p247 Mr 21 '29 160w
Wis Lib Bul 25:98 Mr '29

DOSTOEVSKAÏA, ANNA GRIGOREVNA (SNITKINA) (MME FEDOR MIKHAILOVICH DOSTOEVSKII). Diary of Dostoyevsky's wife; ed. by René Fülöp-Miller and Fr. Eckstein; tr. from the German ed. by Madge Pemberton. 421p $7 Macmillan [21s Gollancz]

B or 92 Dostoevskii, Feodor Mikhailovich
29-26166

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Booklist 25:245 Mr '29
Reviewed by Norah Meade
Bookm 69:200 Ap '29 470w

"One may conclude that Dostoevsky was in many ways a dreadful person and that to be his wife would have been an appalling experience; but one has to admit that it wasn't such for Anna, and that Dostoevsky was for once lucky when in the gamble of life he won her love." Dorothy Brewster
Nation 129:18 Jl 3 '29 450w

"Anna Grigoryevna is simple and touching; Dostoyevsky's own complicated character here appears to its worst advantage: he is selfish, disagreeable and silly." Edmund Wilson
New Repub 57:302 Ja 30 '29 1650w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y World p10m D 30 '29 1100w

"Originally written in shorthand, as a record for her mother, Madame Dostoevsky's notes of the honeymoon were transcribed almost thirty years later. Enough of their freshness remains to make fascinating reading."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:959 Ap 27 '29 400w

Reviewed by Rose Strunsky
Survey 62:575 S 1 '29 1000w

DOTTIN, PAUL. Life and strange and surprising adventures of Daniel De Foe; tr. from the French by Louise Ragan. 322p $3.50 Macaulay

B or 92 Defoe, Daniel

M. Dottin traces De Foe's life as politician, merchant, journalist, spy, non-conformist and novelist. A critical evaluation of Robinson Crusoe is given, together with bibliographies of De Foe's work.

---

"A painstaking and scholarly biography of Daniel De Foe which competes favorably, in point of interest, with many biographic works more popular in intention. M. Dottin's work has a duplicate virtue which is rare in modern biography, or, for that matter, in any biography— it combines with the fascination of a swift and entertaining narrative the comfortable savor of authenticity."
+ Bookm 70:453 D '29 670w

"That a French scholar should give us a life of De Foe that in its freshness and briskness of style, its easy readability and its entire understanding of that age of which De Foe was in every sense the child, is not strange. . . What lends Paul Dottin's biography a special flavor is his enjoyable picture of his hero's modern-mindedness." F: H. Martens
+ N Y Evening Post p11m N 2 '29 550w

"Of De Foe's novels, M. Dottin has written with fine discernment. He has studied the sources of De Foe's material, recalling De Foe's interview with Alexander Selkirk, the rescued Englishman who had lived alone for years and whose adventure was the source of 'Robinson Crusoe.' He appreciates the naturalism of 'Moll Flanders.' And contributions of De Foe to the growth of journalism are all recognized. To all this is added a comprehensive bibliography." Edwin Clarke
+ N Y Times p36 D 1 '29 1150w

"M. Dottin's book is what we may justly term scholarly, authoritative, complete, analytical and clear, but it can hardly be interesting but to those who are already hopelessly interested in literary history, in the origin of books [and] in the men who wrote them. This work gives us a series of glimpses into the social and political history of the time such as few others could give us." Harry Salpeter
+ N Y World p10m N 24 '29 700w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 29 '29 2000w

DOUGLAS, DONALD. Falcon's flight. 319p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

29-18946

With the love story of Aude and Guiraut the central theme, "Falcon's flight" in a larger sense treats of the romantic affairs of knights and ladies. Humor, satire, and a modern slant on the psychology of sex mark the style of the book.

---

"Mr. Douglas has given the tale life, he has told it in quiet and agreeable humor and more than a dash of satire, and he has made it altogether pleasant reading. It is a sprightly and entertaining novel, set in a period that is as remote from our own machine made days as if it belonged to another world." Herschel Brickell
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 S 22 '29 650w

"The book is more than a mere tale; there is strong meat in the love of Guiralt and Aude; plenty of thoughts and difficulties which might very well be reflected into present day conditions."
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 25 '29 270w

"The satirical part of the book is the better, and is often amusing. When he tries to be romantic and serious and medieval, the author's pen frequently runs away with him."

DOUGLAS, DONALD—Continued
— + N Y Times p26 S 22 '29 380w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 22 '29 220w

DOUGLAS, NORMAN. Birds and beasts of the Greek anthology. 233p il $3 J. Cape & H. Smith [7s 6d Chapman]

881.08 Anthologia graeca. Greek poetry—Collections. Birds in literature. Animals in literature [28-17430]

"Mr. Norman Douglas has found in the famous collection of poems known as the Greek Anthology about six hundred references to wild animals, and to about a hundred and fifty different kinds. He discusses many examples in his scholarly way and with a pleasant wit; and his book is of interest in its disclosure of the mood in which many different minds looked at familiar animals through the long stretch of time which the Anthology covers."—Nature

Booklist 26:62 N '29

"It is a dilettante's book—the kind of thing which one would be more likely to expect from an English rectory than from the pen of the author of 'South Wind'—but it is a delightful example of what happens when a foible is treated with the seriousness of a passion."
+ Nation 129:560 N 13 '29 100w

"Mr. Norman Douglas has given much time to his labour of love, and we do not know how it could have been done better. Yet there is no blinking the fact that, good poets as many of the Greeks of the Anthology were, they are not seen at their best in their natural history references, which are too often trivial and prosaic. As regards both the natural history and the poetry, Mr. Douglas could have done much better himself; but of course that was not what he set out to do."
+ — Nature 122:987 D 29 '28 450w

"For some three years Mr. Douglas has given the time in which he might have typed another royalty-producing 'South Wind,' to the study of one aspect of the delightful collection of minor verse that spans and links the centuries of Greek civilization for 1,500 years or more. Mr Douglas' translations are readable and adequate for the illustration of his points. They have not always received the polish of the file, and his ear for meter is liable to occasional strange lapses." Paul Shorey
+ — New Repub 60:78 S 4 '29 900w

"Here is a mine of curious information for the curious." L: Sherwin
+ N Y Evening Post p6m Ag 3 '29 600w

"The actual investigation may interest but few, yet Mr. Douglas's style is so easy and his remarks so frequently entertaining, that the main outline can be overlooked in the mere pleasure of perusal. . . Mr. Douglas is both a scholar and a man of the world. He has made those old singers live again and has added to our store of knowledge." R: Curle
+ Sat R of Lit 6:155 S 21 '29 280w

DOUGLAS, NORMAN. Nerinda. 79p $2.50 Day [30-804]

Based upon the idea that love is the desire of union with one's "other half," this sketch is a romantic fantasy in which the personality of a man undergoes disintegration in its seeking to love Nerinda—a girl whose ashes, excavated in the ruins of Pompeii, lie in the museum there.

"The descriptions of the Bay from various points, the comments on the natives, the slight symbolism hinted at in the effort to recreate through the power of intense love, are exceedingly fine, and give a charm to the book which on the whole outranks the gruesome picture of a mind hovering on the borderland between reason and unreason."
+ Boston Transcript p7 N 2 '29 350w

"The story, both in manner and subject, seems now very much out-of-date; but it was written, Mr. Douglas tells us in a supplementary note, not only to please himself but to lay the ghost of an actual experience. Altogether it is a slight though well managed production, and will not be of much interest to any but Mr. Douglas's devoted admirers." T. S. Matthews
— New Repub 60:183 O 2 '29 210w

"The polished elegance of style and the rich fluid descriptive writing familiar to readers of Old Calabria and South Wind are to be found in Nerinda, but the irony and sardonic mockery which one expects in a book by Norman Douglas are lacking. The action rises rapidly through suspense to ghastly climax, and the setting is an original and highly satisfactory one."
+ — Outlook 153:111 S 18 '29 120w

DOUGLASS, HARLAN PAUL. Church comity; a study of coöperative church extension in American cities. (Inst. of social and religious research. Publications) 181p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

260 United States—Religion. Church 29-19710

Dr Douglass tells in this book what church denominations and church leaders in many large American cities have done about the problem of coöperative church extension.

Boston Transcript p2 D 18 '29 280w

"As with everything Douglass writes, this book is a mine of facts with regard to the situation under investigation. Tables and charts help to an understanding and appreciation of these facts. The theoretical portions of the book are based upon a careful analysis of the facts presented and are kept within very modest bounds. 'Church Comity' deserves careful study, especially by those who bear responsibilities in connection with city church extension." C: T. Holman
+ Christian Century 46:1440 N 20 '29 1400w

"This book of Mr. Douglass' is a record of the successes and failures of cooperation [among the churches]. The results, as in most of his works, have been sorted into tables and charts, drawn into graphs and maps, and analyzed into principles. An amazing amount of research lies back of it." C. S. Brown
+ Survey 63:229 N 15 '29 350w

"His survey throws much valuable light upon existing religious conditions in the United States, and his record of American experiments and experiences will doubtless be of service to those who are confronted with a similar problem in this country."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p879 O 31 '29 200w

DOUGLASS, HARLAN PAUL. City's church. 244p $1.50; pa 75c Missionary educ. movement

260 Church 29-11731

The author is well known for his statistical and other studies of the church in the metropolitan field. The chapters in the present book summarize his reflections on the challenge and the opportunities of the church in the city.

"Out of this great store of knowledge the church in the city is pictured in a great variety of aspects through representative examples. Definite conclusions and recommendations are presented. Above everything else, the author believes, the hope of the city church lies in greatly increased cooperation between churches, denominations and every other kind of interested organization." C: T. Holman
+ Christian Century 46:989 Ag 7 '29 620w

"The author not only knows the city church inside and out; he also knows the city, this monstrous creation of the industrial age. His own extensive studies are supplemented by a thorough knowledge of the literature on the subject and of the results of investigations by other sociologists. . . One who is familiar with Dr. Douglass' work will find very little here that is new, but he will find an admirable and very readable summary of facts and conclusions recorded in previous volumes. The book ought to be of great service in aiding secretaries of church federations and city mission societies, pastors, officers, and members of city churches to an understanding of the difficult and complex problems which must be solved if the city church is to survive, prosper, and carry on an effective ministry." C: T. Holman

+ J Religion 9:487 Jl '29 430w
St Louis 27:304 N '29

DOUGLASS, HARLAN PAUL. How to study the city church. 215p pa $2 Inst. of social & religious research; Doubleday, Doran
260 Churches. Social surveys 28-15518

"Suppose a city church wakes up to the fact that its buildings and methods and plans are somehow failing to meet the needs of the racial and social group that surround it. What should that church do? Or suppose a group of city churches, or some extra-ecclesiastical agency, has a rush of Christianity to the heart, and wants to increase the effective interaction of all the religious bodies in a given area. What ought to be its first step? In either case, a wise first move would be the purchase of a copy of this latest product of the Institute of Social and Religious Research. Succeeding moves will then have the benefit of a wide experience."—Survey

---

Boston Transcript p4 Jl 25 '28 130w
Reviewed by S. G. Cole
Crozer Q 6:127 Ja '29 420w

"Dr. Douglass gives here in detail the methodological procedure followed in the great series of studies of city churches made under his direction by the Institute of Social and Religious Research and published under the titles The Church in the Changing City, 1,000 City Churches, The Springfield Church Survey, and The St. Louis Church Survey. It is invaluable to those who desire explicit directions as to how to proceed in making such a survey. . . The book will be useful, not only to the city pastors and denominational executives for whom it is primarily intended, but also to seminary instructors and students as a practical manual of survey." C: T. Holman
+ J Religion 9:151 Ja '29 680w

"This book, with its hundreds of charts, scales, graphs, and maps, is the first boiled-down essence of more than ten years of intensive and extensive work in helping city churches to get acquainted with themselves." C: S. Brown
+ Survey 61:385 D 15 '28 130w

DOUTHWAITE, LOUIS CHARLES. Mass murder; with a foreword by George Dilnot. 313p $2.50 Holt [18s J. Long]
343 Murder. Crime and criminals 29-3161

The book deals with the methods and motives of some criminals who followed careers of murder. One of these murderers had twenty-two victims. Contents: Marie Madeline de Brinvilliers: Burke and Hare; William Palmer; Jean Baptiste Troppmann; Thomas Neill Cream; Frederick Bailey Deeming; George Joseph Smith; Henri Desiré Landru; Fritz Haarmann; Earle Nelson.

---

Bookm 69:xxx My '29 30w
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 Mr 10 130w
Reviewed by Herbert Gaston
N Y Evening Post p11m F 16 '29 480w
Reviewed by F: F. Van de Water
N Y Evening Post p11m F 23 '29 700w

"The book is excellent and any reader interested in this field who does not procure it will definitely regret the omission." E: H. Bierstadt
+ Outlook 151:388 Mr 6 '29 130w
Reviewed by Edmund Pearson
Sat R of Lit 5:948 Ap 27 '29 550w

"Mr. Douthwaite is careful to avoid any tendency to make heroes of his villains, and indeed, is occasionally florid in his anxiety to do full justice to the dirtiness of most of their iniquities and to make it clear that they mostly owed their horrible successes to blind luck, or the stupidity or inertia of the police, and not to any remarkable astuteness of their own."
Times [London] Lit Sup p763 O 18 '28 200w

DOW, GROVE SAMUEL. Society and its problems; an introduction to the principles of sociology. 3d rev ed 707p $3 Crowell
301 Sociology. Social problems 29-8475

New edition of a well-known elementary text, revised, enlarged, and brought up to date.

---

Am Econ R 19:516 S '29 100w
Am J Soc 35:525 N '29 70w
Reviewed by W. W. Weaver
Ann Am Acad 144:160 Jl '29 60w
Bookm 69:xiv Ag '29 150w

"A skilful presentation of the science of sociology, dealing with the evolution of human society, the development of social and political institutions, population movements, race issues, family life, ethics and religion, along with the various maladjustments that still retard the coming of anything like a social millennium."
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 18 '29 400w

"A book which is a revised third edition with perhaps the most important simple feature of the revision the improvement of the theoretical portions, done without weakening the treatment of practical social problems."
+ Survey 63:111 O 15 '29 40w

DOWDALL, HARRY G., and GLEASON, JOSEPH H. Sham-battle; how to play with toy soldiers. 135p il $2 Knopf
355 War games 29-13293

A book for boys on military tactics, played with toy soldiers. Directions for a lieutenant's game, a captain's game, and a general's game are given. Illustrated with maps and diagrams.

---

"This is not a bid for 'militarism', nor is it to encourage a boy to be a soldier; it is showing an active child how to get more enjoyment and sport out of his toys than he ever dreamed possible. Men of any age should find it entertaining. It might lead them to study historic campaigns and engagements. It ought to make the lead soldier popular. It ought to make many restless boys contented and interested." J. S. B.
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ag 31 '29 380w

"It would be ungenerous and unjust, at the outset, not to pay tribute to the industry and meticulous exactitude which the book discloses and, in addition, the ingenuity in detail, which deserves praise. By the aid of the volume, by painstaking and faithful performance according to the rules of the game, any boy could hope to go presently to Plattsburg tolerably prepared to take the course. . . I admit to a sense of anger in seeing this attempt to cultivate cannon fodder by indirection, to teach killing in the kindergarten, to make international murder popular among minors." F. H. Simonds
— + Sat R of Lit 6:52 Ag 17 '29 1100w

DOWNEY, FAIRFAX DAVIS. Grande Turke; Suleyman the Magnificent, sultan of the Ottomans. 333p il $4 Minton [15s S. Paul]
B or 92 Sulaimān I, the Magnificent, sultan of the Turks 29-9213

A colorful biography of Suleyman the Magnificent, sultan of Turkey in the sixteenth century. Interestingly illustrated from portraits and engravings, and equipped with a map of the Ottoman empire under Suleyman.

---

"The book is unquestionably impressive, a historically accurate treatise made absorbing by the author's absorption in his subject. One can justly object to the taint of sensationalism in Mr. Downey's style. Still, as has been said before, it is both his strength and his weakness."

DOWNEY, F. D.—Continued
+ — Bookm 69:vi Ag '29 180w

"Mr Fairfax has wisely left him in the no man's land between romantic legend and realistic biography, using him to advantage as a peg for set prose pieces against backgrounds sufficiently rich and picturesque, pieces celebrating the ruler's campaigns, battles and loves."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 6 '29 130w

"From such a figure in such glamorous days, a biography could make another Napoleon as Mr. Ludwig did. Mr. Downey does not seem to have accomplished this. But he has produced a worthy biography." W. H. C.
+ — Boston Transcript p6 Ap 6 '29 450w

"Mr. Downey has gone to sources abundantly available on the subject in the spirit not only of a scholar, but of one commanding the insight and the imagination of a belles-lettres writer. The reader leaves the spell of the book with the impression that he has been reading a brilliantly fictionized historical biography. Yet there is no trace of fiction in it. The whole is made alluringly absorbing by the picturesque and subtle treatment of the subject." L: Rich
+ N Y Times p6 My 19 '29 1200w

"As a series of gorgeous pictures we have read nothing in a long time that equals it." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 151:593 Ap 10 '29 90w

"It is unfortunate that Mr. Downey should have undertaken a work for which he is obviously not equipped. It would be too much, perhaps, to expect him to consult original sources in the language of the people about whom he is writing. He does not even read German." Garrett Mattingly
— Sat R of Lit 6:289 O 19 '29 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p888 N 7 '29 700w

DOWNEY, JUNE ETTA. Creative imagination; studies in the psychology of literature. (Int. lib. of psychology, philosophy, and scientific method) 230p $3.75 Harcourt

801 Imagination. Psychology. Literature—Esthetics. Poetry 29-12717

Dr Downey calls upon psychology to explain the "creative imagination" at work in the writing and in the reading of books. On the part of the author, she discusses the sources of inspiration, illustrative imagery, words, style, etc.; on the part of the reader, the psychology of his responses to literature, particularly to poetry.

---

Booklist 26:22 O '29

"At once instructive and fascinating." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 8 '29 560w

"It seems doubtful whether a person who pays so much attention to hypnosis and manipulators of the Ouija board, and so little to organization, equilibrium, and awareness is going the right way to work." Sherard Vines
— Nation and Ath 45:344 Je 8 '29 770w

"This book throws some light on the mentality of readers, but the quotations from individual experience are meagre, and have too much of the sham serious mood of the American questionnaire. They only scratch the surface of some fascinating problems."
— New Statesman 33:158 My 11 '29 480w

"Miss Downey's book is so loosely constructed, written in such a tone of artificial persuasiveness, so irritatingly purposeless as to make all her readers, to whatever school of thought they may belong, wish that they had not to undergo the burden of reading it."
— Sat R 148:301 S 14 '29 430w

"Miss Downey's comprehension of her task arises from an equal adeptship in psychology and in literature. She labels one of her chapters: 'The Poet Psychologizes'; part of the charm of her presentation and the allure of her style arises from the skill with which the psychologist poetizes, or enriches her material by following expertly the clue of esthetic values." Joseph Jastrow
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1066 Je 1 '29 900w

"Of the book as a whole, regarded as a contribution to theory of art-production, we can only say that while it contains a number of interesting observations, which often help one to identify consciously the elements in a particular passage which one has enjoyed without quite knowing what they were, it never makes us feel that we are even beginning to understand how the artist's mind really works."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p910 N 14 '29 1300w

DOWNS, BRIAN WESTERDALE. Richardson. (Republic of letters) 248p $2 Dutton [6s Routledge]

B or 92 Richardson, Samuel 29-26328

In economical compass, but thoroughly, Mr Downs treats the life and character of Samuel Richardson—the purpose of his novels, his art, his sentiment and age, and his influence. "It is hardly an exaggeration to declare," says the author, "that no novel written after the appearance of Pamela was not in some way, directly or indirectly affected by it and its successors from the same hand."

---

Booklist 25:318 My '29

Reviewed by S. T. Warner
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 F 10 '29 2550w

New Statesman 32:194 N 17 '28 630w

" 'This Richardson is a strange fellow,' Lady Mary Wortley Montagu wrote to her daughter; 'I heartily despise him and eagerly read him, nay, sob over his work in a most scandalous manner.' Scarcely any one after her, writing on Richardson, has been able to avoid a similar division in his opinion of the man. Mr. Downs, has not been able to avoid the anomaly, nor would he desire to, for, even in a book so excellent and discerning as this, it must be the chiefest interest. He refrains from any attempt to 'explain' and reconcile the anomaly. He contents himself with gravely, almost pedestrianly, recounting Richardson's life and describing his books." Lionel Trilling
+ N Y Evening Post p11m F 16 '29 650w

Reviewed by L. V. Updegraff
N Y Times p4 Ap 7 '29 1000w

Pratt p28 summer '29

"Although Mr. Downs is more successful in evaluating Richardson's relation to his age and his consequences than the earlier biographers, he is less happy than they in evoking Richardson's personality and in realizing him and his friends in the round. Perhaps he fails here because of his supercilious contempt for Richardson and his ideals. In his impatience with the novelist's shoddy-muddled ethics and hypertrophied sentimentalism, he is witheringly cynical. On the whole, Mr. Downs's book supplements but does not supersede Austin Dobson's sympathetic but keenly critical work." Katherine Hornbeck
+ Sat R of Lit 5:832 Mr 30 '29 720w

"Mr. Brian Downs's study of Richardson is intelligent and full. Perhaps, at times, there is a strain after the appearance of saying the last word; but in spite of this effort at brilliance he displays a well co-ordinated and sound critical insight. . . His biography is a sober and mainly honest piece of craftsmanship; the best single study of Richardson that has appeared." Allan Porter
+ Spec 141:742 N 17 '28 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p77 Ja 31 '29 1300w

"Mr. Downs writes with unusual understanding of the course of English fiction and Richardson's relation to it, with preliminary chapters on all that a reader needs to know about the novelist's life and his friends and associates." Wilbur Cross
+ Yale R n s 19:182 autumn '29 400w

DOYLE, SIR ARTHUR CONAN. Maracot Deep, and other stories. 307p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Murray]

29-20790

Dr Maracot has constructed a steel and glass diving box the suspension cable of which is broken by a deep sea monster. Having thus fallen to the floor of the ocean, Dr Maracot and his companions find themselves at a sunken city of the lost Atlantis, still peopled by an ancient race. Rescued by these strange people by means of protective oxygen-suits, the earth-dwellers encounter many amazing adventures at the bottom of the sea, before they are shot back to the surface of the water to reveal their discoveries to the world. The book also contains three short stories: The disintegration machine; The story of Spedegue's dropper; and When the world screamed.

Bookm 70:xx N '29 60w

"Things would be at a pretty pass if Sir Arthur Conan Doyle could not wangle a swift and thrilling fantasy out of the doings of three hardy adventurers in the Lost Continent of Atlantis." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 N 3 '29 160w

Cleveland Open Shelf p144 N '29

"The Maracot Deep is an ingenious and amusing tale. 'The Disintegration Machine' is neither very ingenious nor very amusing, but the fourth tale, 'Spedegue's Dropper' is both."

+ — New Statesman 33:532 Ag 3 '29 300w

"The creator of Sherlock Holmes has lost none of the inventive gift, the resourcefulness of imagination and the faculty for turning scientific facts and possibilities to the uses of romance which he has shown in delectable measure in many a tale during his long life as a man of letters. 'The Maracot Deep,' a story of novelette length which fills two-thirds of this volume, must rank high among his fiction of mingled romance and science and does not suffer, at least in most of its phases, by comparison with Jules Verne's imaginary trip beneath the sea."

+ N Y Times p7 O 20 '29 430w

Times [London] Lit Sup p876 O 31 '29 170w

DRAFFIN, JASPER OWEN. Strength of materials. 275p il $3 Wiley [15s Chapman & H.]

620.1 Strength of materials 28-27889

"The underlying principles of the calculus are stated and briefly applied. Tells how to compute the stresses and loads for the various constructional elements and offers numerous practical problems for solution. There are some interesting references to the men who were prominent in the development of the subject. Mr. Draffin is Assistant Professor of Theoretical and Applied Mechanics in the University of Illinois."—N Y New Tech Bks

"The chapter on reinforced-concrete beams is refreshing in its presentation of the fundamentals with clearness, simplicity and avoidance of the alphabetical jungle with which most writers surround this subject. The author has done so well with the rest that it is too bad that he sidestepped the stirrup theory. . . The treatment of the subjects throughout is clear and simple." L: E. Moore

+ Eng N 102:113 Ja 17 '29 400w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:10 Ja '29

Pratt p17 autumn '29

DRAKE, DURANT. New morality. (Philosophy for the layman ser.) 359p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

177 Ethics. Social ethics. Social conditions. Social problems 28-21354

"At last a scientific, experimental attitude toward morals is becoming diffused among the more educated classes, and we seem to be at the dawn of an age which will judge conduct by its observable results." (Preface) Thus measured by the standard of observable results, Professor Drake of Vassar college condemns certain forms of contemporary conduct, social, individual, and political, and discusses in his closing chapters the more desirable attitude inherent in the new morality.

"The discussion is liberal, full of concrete cases, and clearly written. It does not smack of the schoolroom but could be used with great advantage as a text in social ethics. It abounds in the use of terms like 'ought,' 'should,' and 'must,' but that, presumably, is the official vocabulary for a teacher of ethics. The author handles most of his problems realistically, and nowhere is he more sensible than in his discussion of the family (except in calling Judge Lindsey 'that profound observer')." A. J. Todd

+ Am J Soc 35:157 Jl '29 160w

"The morality he advocates turns out to be nothing very new, but merely an up-to-date utilitarianism which corrects but does not repudiate our inherited codes." W. R. Crawford

Ann Am Acad 141:277 Ja '29 200w

Booklist 25:147 Ja '29

"Crisp, concrete and, for the most part, convincing. . . The special merit of the book is the fact that it puts morality into the category of things that can be scientifically studied, and supplies the method which it proposes." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 45:1263 O 18 '28 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p75 My '29

"The New Morality contains little that will be new to readers of his Problems of Conduct. Explicitly written for the layman, the more recent work subordinates discussion of theoretical problems, states in a more journalistic fashion the point of view of the Problems of Conduct, and applies this point of view to a still more varied assortment of contemporary problems." C. M. Perry

Int J Ethics 39:252 Ja '29 380w

"The book is written in a clear and vigorous style. The ethical theory upon which it is based is a strong one, and if the arguments for it are not comprehensive and conclusive, due apologies are made by the author whose purpose is to write for the layman. Many criticisms of our current morality are telling; numerous proposals are suggestive; and a sympathetic interest pervades the book. But the entire discussion is marred by a solemn worship of the great god Science." W. B. Mahan

+ — J Philos 26:137 F 28 '29 730w

Nation 128:235 F 20 '29 120w

"Among all the many current books that are discussing the moral standards of the time this is one of the most arresting. For it is the most broadly based of them all, and it proceeds through its argument in a reasonable spirit and by methods that appeal to the intelligence."

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 13 '29 420w

St Louis 27:44 F '29

Reviewed by H. W. Kallen

Sat R of Lit 5:902 Ap 20 '29 220w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 24 '29 1580w

"The major part of the book discusses ably a program which the social-minded will endorse heartily. Lawlessness, marital failure, corrupt politics, selfish business, privilege, suppression of opinion, poisoned journalism, the evils of nationalism, race prejudice, are all treated with a refreshing frankness and presented as challenges to the creative spirit of youth." H: Neumann

+ Survey 61:453 Ja 1 '29 500w

Wis Lib Bul 24:340 D '28 100w

"A far visioned, stimulating application of high ideals to concrete personal and social problems including crime, war, and conservatism."

+ World Tomorrow 12:284 Je '29 40w

DRAKE, HENRY BURGESS. The children reap. 270p $2 Vanguard press [7s 6d Lane]

29-7962

"Most adventure fans should relish this somber narrative of nightmarish doings in darkest

DRAKE, H. B.—Continued
Formosa by the author of 'Cursed Be the Treasure.' The central figures of the story's manifest content are Stephen Spender and Laura Cartwright, playmates and sweethearts, though Laura's father, a mental case with morbid obsessions about the past emerges as Mr. Drake's weightiest creation. There's gold, a skeleton, abundance of danger and a savage chorus of Formosans."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"The author's indirect method adds to the tale's effectiveness, once the reader has picked his way through a slight fog at the start." Will Cuppy
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Mr 31 '29 100w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 8 '29 150w

N Y Times p7 Je 16 '29 220w

"Mr. H. B. Drake is already familiar to the public as a romantic writer of exceptionally high quality, and this story gives us another thoughtful, well-written, and enthralling study of the heroic and the uncanny."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p208 Mr 14 '29 180w

DRAKE, LAWRENCE. Don't call me clever. 351p $2.50 Simon & Schuster
29-19777

" 'Don't Call Me Clever' defines Jewish character through the delineation of two brothers in the typical conflict of whose temperaments one may infer most of the major significances of the history, in its misery and its success, of the race without a country. In Albert, the older brother, we are allowed to realize the quality of a prideless, tasteless and stupid devotion. Nathan, whose intellect has refined him, is the Jew superficially divorced from ancestry."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"There is very little description in 'Don't Call Me Clever', and one is thankful for the fact, owing to the author's skill in handling Jewish idiom. It is a good book, but we might easily have been spared much of the bickering between the brothers without loss to the general dramatic effect."
+ — Bookm 70:xxx N '29 180w

"Jewish and gentile self-consciousness will doubtless make of this a 'problem' novel. It is something far better, a consistent work of art, in a lucid, unornamented style, a book written, we may suppose, out of factual and personal knowledge, but in the aristocratic spirit of the artist, with a pride which disdains a false defense." Evelyn Scott
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 S 29 '29 1000w

"As a study of Jewish life in America this novel has undoubted merit. A good many pages are tedious, because the character drawing is unsteady, and Nathan and Albert repeat themselves and their ideas not once but at least fifty times."
— + Boston Transcript p2 O 16 '29 380w

Nation 129:782 D 25 '29 120w

New Repub 60:182 O 2 '29 210w

"It is a novel that Gentiles are going to find 'interestingly Jewish' and that Jews will resent, not because it is unsympathetic so much, as because it is an almost brutally clear picture of one side of Jewish family life—the side people would like to minimize who are conscious of their kinship."
+ — N Y Times p7 O 27 '29 600w

"In a tersely written, brief book, which moves with the heat of an intense quarrel and where every page says something to effect, we have an arraignment of first-generation Jews in America, mainly through their conversation and actions. It is arraignment because there is not an alleviating spark of good humor in the novel." F. L. Kellogg
Survey 63:436 Ja 1 '30 350w

DRAPER, MRS MURIEL GURDON (SANDERS). Music at midnight. 237p il $4 Harper [15s Heinemann]

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. London—Intellectual life
29-3436

Muriel Draper and her husband, "two mad young Americans" in the golden era just before the war, had a home in London to which such musicians as Harold Bauer, Arthur Rubinstein, Jacques Thibaud and Pablo Casals loved to come and play well into the morning hours. Others came too—Henry James, Norman Douglas, May Sinclair, John Sargent, Chaliapin, Gertrude Stein. Of these friends and these nights of music Mrs Draper makes a most charming book of character sketches and reminiscence.

---

Booklist 25:283 Ap '29

"She has the evocative touch. Like Meredith, she can sometimes 'spring imagination with a word or phrase.' She writes with her eye on the object, and she kindles it at times into incandescence." Lawrence Gilman
+ Bookm 69:324 My '29 630w

"Mrs. Draper is no sister to the traditional English records of their own exclusive pleasures. She appreciates all the turns and flairs of life, with just that beguiling sense that since the war overtook her halcyon days neither was she safe on a high rock. She communicates generously, and not to impress but to share; or, rather, merely for the joy of remembering. Quite the most delectable savor to this sort of writing." Ernestine Evans
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ag 4 '29 420w

Boston Transcript p3 F 2 '29 980w

+ Cleveland Open Shelf p42 Mr '29

Cleveland Open Shelf p153 D '29

"In her actual writing, Mrs Draper is still uncertain. She squanders adjectives with the recklessness of the amateur, and she is not above trying to impose upon us fraudulently with such words as 'timespace.' The first time she met Norman Douglas, he told her to learn a column of the dictionary every day by heart. . . After this, one is not surprised by the stunning phrases that ride across her prose like waves. She has the vocabulary of a lexicographer, and the life of a poet." Raymond Mortimer
+ Dial 86:430 My '29 720w

"Like all good recollections, these are charmingly trivial."
+ Nation 128:sup491 Ap 17 '29 100w

"After all, to recapture the gaiety of gay occasions is an achievement, on its own small scale. There are innumerable chuckles in this book; and if its basis appears to be hero worship, the author's naïve relish and delight excuse the fact."
+ Nation and Ath 45:484 Jl 6 '29 150w

" 'Music at Midnight' is a very personal book, and if its author's personality were less vigorous, we—her non-musical readers, especially—might resent being forced to listen to so many rapturous descriptions of the programs of so many particular evenings. But in the midst of the most devoted outbursts, something human always happens. So, too, with her portraits of the people she knew—they are often decked out with over-elaborate phrasing until they are top-heavy. But these are faults of exuberance, and heaven knows exuberance is a quality rare enough today to be worth almost anything. 'Music at Midnight' is an exciting book to read, for it has zest; and we feel in it the keen edge of an appetite for life which can neither be satiated nor destroyed." T. S. Matthews
+ New Repub 58:50 F 27 '29 400w

"An entertaining book. Its pictures of American bohemian life in Florence are delightfully vivid and the later accounts of the Drapers' musical parties in London, at which Casals Arthur Rubinstein and other musical celebrities constantly figured, are no less well done."
+ New Statesman 33:374 Je 29 '29 220w

"Muriel Draper, in the course of her book, 'Music at Midnight,' quotes Robert Edmond Jones as saying to her: 'Everything about you is more so.' That would seem to be true talk about Muriel Draper. It is indubitably her intangible, indefinable 'more so' which makes her book an absorbing and constant delight. It can be put down before it is finished by using great strength of character, but it cannot be put out of mind." J: W. Crawford

+ N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 19 '29 900w

Reviewed by H: J. Forman

N Y Times p6 F 10 '29 1050w

"Mrs. Draper writes with understanding, wit and a sureness of touch that gives an amazingly clear picture." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 151:192 Ja 30 '29 80w

Pratt p34 autumn '29

St Louis 27:271 S '29

"There is hardly a sentence in all the pages of dialogue which Mrs. Draper ascribes to her various acquaintances which sounds as if it were ever uttered by anyone."

— + Sat R 148:166 Ag 10 '29 180w

"Embedded in Mrs. Draper's informal record of a pre-war residence in London, there are aspects of people, gestures, conversations accurately recorded; tones of voice in speaking and laughs so put into words that I am convinced neither time nor meetings with the people described could rob them of an essential verity. I have not found, for instance, in anything I have read, a description of Henry James that seemed to me so accurate as hers. . . It is no slow-moving narrative. Indeed, one wishes at times that it were a little less rapid. With a casualness that seems profligate, situations that ordinarily would be spun out into an exceedingly amusing novel are here condensed into a few pages: observations that might be recorded in paragraphs are here embedded in the dependent clause of a sentence." R. E. Larsson

+ Sat R of Lit 5:678 F 16 '29 700w

Spec 142:973 Je 22 '29 130w

Springf'd Republican p8 S 16 '29 400w

"She is tremendously buoyant and enthusiastic, and has an excellent descriptive gift."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p552 Jl 11 '29 500w

Wis Lib Bul 25:124 Ap '29

DREISER, THEODORE. Dreiser looks at Russia. 264p il $3 Liveright

914.7 Russia—Social conditions. Russia—Economic conditions. Russia—Politics and government. Communism 28-27605

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

Booklist 25:207 F '29

Dial 86:265 Mr '29 120w

"Dreiser's is a rambling book of impressions, reported in his prosaic style, rarely lighted by imagination. Certain passages which he has been accused of plagiarizing from Dorothy Thompson are strikingly similar to parts of her previously published work, 'The New Russia.'"

Nation 128:317 Mr 13 '29 250w

"Dreiser is thoroughly in the Whitman tradition. He has the same wide sympathies, much the same enthusiasms, and even a 'barbaric yawp,' which takes the form of using words like 'mentation' when 'thought' would do. His book is the result of an invitation from the Soviet Government, and although the writer is quite shrewd enough to take care of himself it is natural that his enthusiasms were encouraged by his hosts." W. Plomer

+ — Nation and Ath 45:372 Je 15 '29 520w

"Though his book does not add greatly to our knowledge of the country and the people and the regime, the impressions and judgments it contains are in general neither superficial nor uninteresting."

+ New Statesman 33:316 Je 15 '29 280w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 34:14 F '29

Pratt p27 spring '29

St Louis 27:99 Mr '29

"He shows but the smallest capacity for carrying out the work which in this book he has undertaken. Most of his observations are the merest commonplace delivered with a ludicrous air of importance. . . As for his style, it is far more of a stumbling-block here than ever in his novels." E: Shanks

— Sat R 147:644 My 11 '29 750w

"In his short tour of Russia he only skimmed the surface; and although Dreiser Looks at Russia is full of generalizations which may or may not be true, they are not of very great value."

— Spec 143:255 Ag 24 '29 80w

"Mr. Dreiser is most sympathetic to the spirit of the Soviet experiment; but he is least affected by its logic and zeal, and is therefore the most doubtful of its outcome."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p501 Je 27 '29 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 25:28 Ja '29

Reviewed by G. Vernadsky

Yale R n s 18:600 spring '29 300w

DREISER, THEODORE. Gallery of women. 2v 823p $5 Liveright

Portraits of fifteen women who have either come across the author's path, or whose stories have been related to him by friends. "What seems to agitate most of the fifteen women is their approach to the male and their attitude toward what Dreiser calls physical love." (N Y World)

---

"His is not a highly intellectual analysis, not a deeply lyrical compassion, but a healthy, burgher-like sympathy given to those who, for some reason, he believes have been made to bear the burdens of frustration and misunderstanding. A Gallery of Women is not Dreiser's most important book; that was published in 1925. It is, however, a further revelation of his groping instinct to know all and forgive all, to apprehend if not to unriddle personality." G. C. Knight

+ Bookm 70:320 N '29 480w

"In addition to being more honest than most authors, Mr. Dreiser is wiser than most men. To read 'A Gallery of Women' is to share the experience of a man who at one moment can involve himself passionately with life and the next instant stand aside, aloof, observing coldly, analyzing dispassionately; to share in the reflections of one who has thought deeply of what he has seen and known." Thayer Hobson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 D 1 '29 1000w

Reviewed by J. W. Maury

Boston Transcript p2 D 28 '29 2050w

"It is a daring book, only such a book as one lacking in a sense of humor would write. To those for whom manners still count in the social scheme, the volume is likely to be less pleasing. For those who ruthlessly place frank investigation of life, buttressed on the somewhat shaky Freudian formulae, foremost, they will seem valuable."

+ — N Y Times p2 D 1 '29 1300w

"This search for depth and solidity has distinguished Dreiser through the years and makes it possible for readers to overlook the fact that he has no ear for prose. In the present work they must also overlook a wordiness that seems to cry aloud for the blue pencil of the high school English teacher. Surely this book is a monument to the fact that editors do not attempt to change the style of their authors." Harry Hansen

N Y World p13 N 30 '29 950w

"A Gallery of Women is in every way a momentous creation; and the most suggestive thing about it is that it should be created just now; for it is written out of American life. If it can now be read into American life with the same sympathetic intelligence that prompted

DREISER, THEODORE—*Continued
its inditement, the fifty-two per cent of our population that Mr. Dreiser has never been able to leave alone will know more about itself." A. W. Porterfield
+ Outlook 153:628 D 18 '29 900w

DRESSER, HORATIO WILLIS. Outlines of the psychology of religion. 451p $3 Crowell
201 Religion—Psychology 29-8011

Dr Dresser's discussion of the psychology of religion and of the various forms of religious experience—faith, worship, prayer, mysticism, etc.—is addressed to the student of religion and to the reader "interested in religion in the light of the changing conceptions of the present time."

---

Christian Century 46:991 Ag 7 '29 60w

"This volume presents a mixture of theology, metaphysics, ethics, psychology, and religion under the wholly questionable title of a Psychology of Religion. One can hardly refrain from offering the cruel criticism of saying that here is a book frankly too ponderous for the layman, too superficial for the specialist, and too confusing for the untrained student of religion." Vergilius Ferm
— Int J Ethics 40:142 O '29 270w
J Religion 9:662 O '29 70w

"This well written and interesting book represents a reaction against works in which religion is judged by its less promising origins, such as its being a survival from primitive times, or a substitute mechanism, or mode of relief from repressions. As one inclined towards Quakerism and a moderate mysticism the writer has a special aversion to those who explain the mystic experiences in terms of sex." Woodbridge Riley
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:56 Ag 17 '29 840w

"There is wisdom, maturity and reflection in this volume, and nothing smart and sophisticated. One encounters more than occasional passages of insight. The author is himself religious, and the book glows with the warmth and depth of one who takes his religion seriously." J. M.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 23 '29 1200w
Wis Lib Bul 25:317 O '29

DRINKWATER, JOHN. Bird in hand. 88p $1.50 Houghton [3s 6d Sidgwick & J.]
822 29-26479

A comedy in three acts produced during the last season in New York. The proprietor of an old country inn is outraged by his daughter's friendship with the squire's son. The guests side with the young people, and after a night of harried chasings in and out of one of the bedrooms the old man is brought to reason. The diversified characters and amusing situations furnish the chief entertainment.

---

Booklist 25:351 Je '29

"A sentimental and obvious play. It has none of the quality of Drinkwater's historical dramas, nor of his poetry. It ought to make a good 'movie.' " W. P. Eaton
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 19 '29 80w
Cleveland Open Shelf p138 N '29

" 'Bird in Hand' is no very highly original contribution to dramatic art. Its fable is far from novel and its machinery is perfectly conventional. Yet for all the conventionality of its situation and the banality of its thesis, it is pretty consistently lively and amusing. The characters are sharply drawn, the dialogue is intelligent if not brilliant, and the humor genuine if not particularly incisive." J. W. Krutch
— + Nation 128:514 Ap 24 '29 550w
Reviewed by Ivor Brown
Sat R 145:521 Ap 28 '28 550w
Wis Lib Bul 25:192 Je '29

DRURY, JOHN. Chicago in seven days. 225p il $1.50 McBride
917.731 Chicago—Description 28-26449

"The author divides [his] task into day-long periods and conducts a young woman through all the sections of the city, the famous showplaces such as the Field Museum, the Art Institute, the University of Chicago, and others; the beautiful park and boulevard system, the equally famous manufacturing plants, the stockyards, the Ravinia opera and enough other interesting things to keep them fully occupied for the entire week. Mr. Drury is steeped in information concerning all these things and tells all he knows in interesting style."—N Y Times

---

Booklist 24:397 Jl '28
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 20 '29 120w
Cleveland Open Shelf p70 My '29

"Mr. Drury is a native Chicagoan who loves and admires his city and has given proof of his feeling by studying all parts of it with meticulous care and reading everything that has been written about it. A tourist could not wish for a more informing or capably written guide."
+ N Y Times p14 Jl 1 '28 320w
Pratt p28 winter '29

DUDENEY, ALICE (MRS HENRY ERNEST DUDENEY). Peep show (Eng title Brighton beach). 346p $2.50 Putnam
29-26492

Penelope lived from childhood in fear of her Aunts Mabel and Grace. She is forty when they die and freedom begins; but even now their menacing influence returns to poison her love and, with the discovery of her lover's relation to the secret past, to drive her mad.

---

Booklist 25:359 Je '29

"As a story with plot, vivid characters, strong suspense, 'The Peep Show' is entirely successful. Essentially it is a mystery 'thriller' treated from the point of view of its buried roots—the strange, forgotten motives of its actors." M. C. Dawson
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 F 17 '29 550w
Boston Transcript p7 Mr 30 '29 200w

"The extraordinary piece of technique which the author introduces is the picturing of the years of her heroine's childhood and youth as reviewed by her in the delirium which preceded her death. This novel and difficult formula is applied with a degree of skill and restraint which does not permit the effect to become too macabre."
+ Christian Century 46:364 Mr 14 '29 160w
Cleveland Open Shelf p78 My '29
+ New Repub 58:80 Mr 6 '29 160w
Reviewed by Lillian Rogers
+ — N Y Evening Post p10m Mr 23 '29 720w

"Strange, fantastic, with a curious haunting quality which makes it linger in your mind, Alice Dudeney's novel 'The Peep Show' is an arresting book."
+ N Y Times p14 F 10 '29 700w

" 'The Peep Show' is a remarkable book for two reasons: first, because it attempts something entirely new and different; and second, because it is extremely well done. . . It is a dramatic story, the dénouement is a genuine surprise and the whole story is refreshingly new and original as well as beautifully and delicately told." Milton Byron
+ Outlook 151:230 F 6 '29 200w

"An extremely interesting, if somewhat uneven, novel."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:1165 Jl 6 '29 280w
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '29 150w

DUFF, BELDON. Central park murder. 285p $2 Doubleday, Doran
29-8651

It started as a practical joke; it ended in kidnapping, theft and murder. And then William Petty, ex-bookkeeper and ex-English lord, came into his own.

---

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Mr 31 '29 70w
Boston Transcript p2 Je 22 '29 200w

"There is always the suspicion, and in most cases it is well founded, that each of the characters is holding back something which might possibly prove to be the key to the riddle. The reader does not get anything approaching an even break. The chapters in which the mystery is unraveled are somewhat hurried and leave some things unexplained."
— N Y Times p13 Jl 28 '29 180w

DUFF, CHARLES. Handbook on hanging. 129p $1.50 Hale [2s 6d Cayne]
343.2 Hanging 29-15947

An effective indictment of capital punishment is contained in this satire on hanging as a fine art. Herein are set forth, along with the argument for the English method of neck-breaking as esthetically superior to other fashions in execution, the personality and qualifications of the hangman, the popularity of murder trials, newspaper publicity, records of bungled hangings, etc.

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 4 '29 90w

"As a delectable compound of jest and earnest, Mr. Duff's book has few rivals. It contains much in little that has been gathered from wide open shelves of books, and from the most obscure and dusty corners of ancient libraries. We may gain from it almost any lesson we please, or if we prefer we may obtain no lesson at all. If we happen to believe in capital punishment we shall remain even firmer in the faith; if we are opposed to capital punishment we shall doubtless strengthen our belief. In any case, if we read the book, we shall widely enlarge our knowledge of a recondite subject." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p5 Jl 27 '29 220w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
Nation and Ath 44:326 D 1 '28 40w

"Altogether it is an amusing pamphlet in traditional form; it contains, too, an assortment of knowledge on most things connected with the hangman."
+ New Statesman 31:supxiv O 6 '28 180w

"In its literary aspect it is deftly done. Smoothly, earnestly, unctuously the author carries on his defense of hanging as a fine art and his plea for bigger and better and more frequent hangings, never for a moment forgetting his pose or dropping his disguise, and never giving the reader the least ground for suspecting his good faith. . . He has made for the crusade against capital punishment a very effective stroke."
+ N Y Times p40 D 1 '29 430w

"Altogether a very clever satire on capital punishment which we should like to have all supporters of that institution read carefully." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 152:469 Jl 17 '29 110w

"Even a reader entirely in sympathy with the author's moral and esthetic attitude finds himself disappointed and irritated by the constant lapses on nearly every page from that ironic detachment and much approval the sustained assumption of which is absolutely essential to the effectiveness of this style of writing."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p757 O 18 '28 450w

"Charles Duff presents with admirable sarcasm, the abominations of capital punishment." W: Floyd
+ World Tomorrow 12:424 O '29 450w

DUFFUS, ROBERT LUTHER. American renaissance. 321p $2.75 (18s) Knopf
707 Art—United States. Art—Study and teaching. Art—United States—Galleries and museums. Theater—United States. American drama 28-20255

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"Because a group of serious thinkers in Gopher Prairie has seen fit to produce a play by Pirandello Mr. Duffus is convinced that we Americans are at last seeing dawn the 'morning of our communal existence.'"
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ja 27 '29 270w
Dial 86:348 Ap '29 70w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:632 D '28
Pratt p39 autumn '29

Reviewed by Arthur Colton
Sat R of Lit 5:776 Mr 16 '29 750w
School Arts M 28:380 F '29 220w

DUFFUS, ROBERT LUTHER. Tomorrow never comes. 334p $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d Harrap]
29-9724

In the imaginary Latin American town of Santa Eulalia this tale of hot-blooded youth, love and revolution is laid. Rafael and Vitoria are the youthful Spanish lovers. The president and his adversary, the general, both look with desirous eyes on Vitoria and block Rafael's way to his love. But after one wild week of excitement peace comes to Santa Eulalia and the lovers.

---

"Mr. Duffus has written a book which might have set a style, were it not for C. E. Montague's Right Off the Map, which, it must be admitted, has anticipated him. As it is, Tomorrow Never Comes will probably end up in the movies; and there are worse fates." T. S. Matthews
+ — Bookm 69:308 My '29 360w

"There is hardly an item in the standard list of romantic devices that Mr. Duffus has not brazenly used. But these events, however obvious, are arranged not only to display intrinsic glamour to its best advantage, but to reflect sometimes the smooth sheen and sometimes the sharp glint of a near-hovering wit. . . As for his treatment of the mob, there is something at once sarcastic and patient which reminds one of passages in the history of another imaginary land—'L'Ile des Penguins.' His book makes no pretense to the intellectual weight of France's work, but it shows something of the Frenchman's easy mastery." M. C. Dawson
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ap 21 '29 650w

"The book has certain weaknesses inherent in the fact that adventure and philosophy can only be made to jog in double harness by checking back the one or whipping up the other. But it makes up for that by presenting futility in most attractive guise." Mildred Adams
+ — Nation 128:565 My 8 '29 400w

"This affords excellent opportunity for satire. And satire there is, very deft and good-humored and unobtrusive. It never clogs the movement of the story." D. L.
+ New Repub 59:108 Je 12 '29 260w

"If one looks at it merely as a story of adventure, it is extremely well told. The satire on statesmen, generals and armies has a distinct edge, and Mr. Duffus contrives to extract a certain freshness from the well-worn topic of the ironic contrast between the Southern and the Northern temperaments." E. S.
+ New Statesman 33:603 Ag 24 '29 580w

"At times tender, more often quite mad, the book is altogether charming. As a story it is too melodramatic to be really dramatic, and too much in fun to be really melodramatic."
N Y Times p8 Ap 21 '29 480w

DUFFUS, R. L.—Continued

"Here is a novel that can be recommended unqualifiedly. The characterization is little short of perfect, the dialogue is scintillating, the plot original and well worked out, and there is an unusually well balanced ratio of humor and pathos." Milton Byron

+ Outlook 152:30 My 1 '29 120w

"All that you want on a summer day is here—a laughing tale of revelry and revolution, of fandangoes and funerals, of love in cafés and in the lush meadow under the oak—a tale that keeps up its merriment to the end, never heavy, and never ill-humored."

+ Sat R of Lit 6:116 S 7 '29 170w

"The picture is deliberately overdrawn, and the idyllic conclusion is somewhat out of keeping with it. But irony and humor are, on the whole, well sustained, and the story is excellent fun."

+ — Spec 143:470 O 5 '29 160w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 30 '29 360w

"Mr. Duffus has a descriptive gift, which comes out in the scenes of mob-passion, as well as in the bar-side idylls where he is poking fun at English and American characteristics, but he is apt to spoil his effects by overemphasis."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p639 Ag 15 '29 300w

Wis Lib Bul 25:161 My '29

DU HAUSSET, MME. Memoirs of Madame de Pompadour, by her waiting-woman; tr. with an introd. by F. S. Flint. (Broadway lib. of 18th century French lit.) 253p il $4 Brentano's [10s 6d Routledge]

B or 92 Pompadour, Jeanne Antoinette (Poisson) marquise de. France—Court and courtiers 29-10244

"Madame du Hausset, about whom very little is known save that she is said to have been the widow of an indigent nobleman, took the position of first waiting-woman to Madame de Pompadour. In keeping with the fashion of the times, she devoted her leisure moments to her memoirs, setting down events of the court in general and of Madame, her mistress, in particular. . . Madame du Hausset's memoirs present a splendid likeness of the versatile femme savant."—N Y Evening Post

Reviewed by Esther Murphy

Bookm 68:716 F '29 400w

Boston Transcript p2 D 22 '28 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p107 Jl '29

"'Madame . . . would say,' she records with pathetic satisfaction, 'The King and I rely so much on you, that we look on you like a cat or a dog, and go on with our talk.' The foregoing sentence implies both the interest and the peculiar disadvantage of her book; she was a privileged spectator, just as a cat or a dog is privileged, and, as with the cat or dog, her vision of events and personalities was much curtailed. Madame Du Hausset's Memoirs consist of irregular jottings, some of them significant and some trivial. Her chance effects are occasionally vivid."

— + New Statesman 32:supxvi D 1 '28 300w

"These memoirs, at all times entertaining, are of considerable value in reflecting the esprit of court life of eighteenth century France. The footnotes, including those by Mr. Craufurd, are especially helpful, as are several historical notes on the period and other of its dominant personalities." Thurston Macauley

+ N Y Evening Post p9m Ja 12 '29 450w

DULLES, ELEANOR LANSING. French franc, 1914-1928; the facts and their interpretation. (Bur. of int. research, Harvard univ., and Radcliffe college. Publications) 570p $6.50 (27s) Macmillan

332.4 Currency question. Finance—France. Foreign exchange. European war, 1914-1918—Economic aspects 29-7380

"The book aims, first, to present historically the facts concerning the fluctuation of the French franc between 1914 and 1928 and attendant economic and psychological conditions, and second, to test prevailing monetary theories in the light of what actually occurred in France. The research was begun in 1924 and continued through the four years of crises till after legal stabilization in 1928."—Preface

"Miss Dulles' book is one of the best that has been published on the subject. The historical section, while quite complete and rich in detail, offers but little that has not been known up to the present time. Its merit lies in its precise presentation of the subject and the logical arrangement of the facts. The second part of the book, which one may call the theoretical part, is far more interesting and offers a great deal of thought and of documentary evidence concerning the various monetary theories." M. Nadler

+ Am Econ R 19:501 S '29 480w

Reviewed by E. C. Hughes

Am J Soc 35:330 S '29 500w

Reviewed by F. D. Graham

J Pol Econ 37:737 D '29 600w

"The most complete story (in the English language, at least) of the ups and downs, or rather, downs and ups, of the French franc from 1914 to 1928 has been written by a woman—Dr. Eleanor Lansing Dulles of Bryn Mawr College. Her book would be important if it did no more than present the facts concerning the extraordinary fluctuations of the franc in those years, but it also gives an interpretation of the facts which amounts to a test of monetary theories under a régime of inconvertible paper money." W: B. Shaw

+ R of Rs 79:14 My '29 180w

"Nowhere else will one find the history of the franc since 1914 so comprehensively treated. The value of the book as a reference work is much enhanced by a statistical appendix of over 80 pages and an unusually detailed index."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 4 '29 300w

DUMAS, ALEXANDRE. On board the Emma; adventures with Garibaldi's "Thousand" in Sicily; tr. and with an introd. by R. S. Garnett. 568p il $5 Appleton [21s Benn]

B or 92 Garibaldi, Giuseppe 29-23710

The record of an unfinished yachting trip embarked on in May, 1860, combined with historical memoirs, due to the termination of the tour because of Dumas' encounter with his friend Garibaldi. The first part of the book describes the author's preparation for the voyage; the remainder shows how Dumas put his yacht, his fortune and himself at the service of Garibaldi in his rebellion against the Bourbon.

"To say that all the material in these hitherto unknown chapters is new would be untrue, for Dumas was a notorious repeater. Yet there is enough that is true to make 'On Board the Emma' an exceedingly entertaining addition to one's shelf (or rather shelves) of Dumasiana." Herbert Gorman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 O 27 '29 1000w

"While not wholly novel, for the master was in the habit of repeating himself, it is almost invariably up to Dumas standard." S: Putnam

+ N Y Evening Post p13m N 16 '29 1000w

Reviewed by Uffington Valentine

N Y Times p38 N 24 '29 1000w

"This book is a notable literary event, for twenty-eight of its fifty-five chapters have never before been translated or published. They are the more intimate part of the diary kept by Dumas during the eventful summer of 1860, when in response to a romantic telegram from Garibaldi, which read, 'rally when you hear my guns,' he placed himself and his yacht the 'Emma' at the service of the hero. . . Mr. Garnett's able translation loses nothing of the humour and gaiety of the original, and he is to be congratulated on the work which he has so patently enjoyed." R: Church

+ Spec 143:819 N 30 '29 1200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p959 N 21 '29 450w

DUNBAR, ALDIS. Once there was a prince. 302p il $2 Little

28-22142

"Tells how Aymar, boy prince of Montaroya, throws off the domination of the despot, his Lord Treasurer. There is a thrilling flight from the palace, across the frontier. An eventful period of exile, and then a triumphant return to end the oppression of his people. Should be a welcome addition to the eleven or twelve-year-old's bookshelf."—Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 25:216 F '29

"The style has the advantage of simplicity, and suitability to the period. We cannot feel, however, that Lillo will be added unto that immortal band of royalty who have fairly leaped from the pages into flesh and blood among the children who knew them. Lillo is a nice little boy, but his incentive for daring is just a bit far fetched."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:546 D 22 '28 260w

Wis Lib Bul 24:309 N '28

DUNCAN, IRMA, and MACDOUGALL, ALLAN ROSS. Isadora Duncan's Russian days & her last years in France. 371p il $3.50 Covici

B or 92 Duncan, Isadora 29-6321

"In her autobiography Isadora Duncan presents bizarre adventures and artistic ideals with such unaffected straightforwardness that her brilliant, erratic career becomes a strange pageant from which her figure emerges transcending ordinary experience or endowments. This story of her life broke off abruptly before recording her Russian experiences under the Soviet regime. This loss is now supplied by 'Isadora Duncan's Russian Days' and her 'Last Years in France,' by her pupil and protegee, Irma Duncan, with Allan Ross MacDougall."—N Y Evening Post

Booklist 25:283 Ap '29

Bookm 69:vii Ap '29 60w

"The last half of 'Isadora's Russian Days' with its simple presentation of harassed letter after harassed letter, never quite coherent, is the best of this added knowledge about Isadora." Ernestine Evans

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 F 10 '29 550w

"They make quite a sorrowful little story, these last years of a famous artist, and no one will read it without pity and a vast sympathy."

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 23 '29 280w

Reviewed by Ruth Pickering

Nation 128:203 F 13 '29 580w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer

Nation and Ath 45:sup135 Ap 27 '29 170w

"Readers who were enthralled by Isadora's own record of her life need not hesitate to take it up again in this form, for the authors have relied in a large measure on letters and notes by Isadora and other personal documents. The continuity of feeling is not broken. It is a veritable continuation of the strange Odyssey of Isadora's rovings and emotional experiences. Fascinating as it proves, it is also sad reading, this account of all these tragic years with their disappointments, disillusionment, poverty and, sometimes, despair." Margaret Bruening

+ N Y Evening Post p10m F 16 '29 920w

Reviewed by H. I. Brock

N Y Times p5 F 17 '29 1000w

"We find in the sequel the same outspokenness which was so attractive in the autobiography, and the same kind of humbug which was so irritating. . . With all its faults, and its pallid imitation of the heroine's grand manner, it does succeed in telling us—and not without a certain dignity—the deplorable story of the last sad years of the great dancer's life."

— + Sat R 147:772 Je 8 '29 420w

"Written circumspectly and with tact. The difference between the artist and the woman—the high aim that Isadora Duncan held until the last and the body that, as she approached middle-age, constantly dragged her down, is better kept in mind in this than in Miss Desti's book. The authors incline to ignore or slur over the latter and keep their accent on the first, and as a result their picture of these last years of the dancer's life can be read without any sharp sense of disillusion."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:780 Mr 16 '29 200w

Spec 142:626 Ap 20 '29 1000w

Theatre Arts Mo 14:89 Ja '30 120w

"Some fine portraits adorn the volume 'Isadora Duncan's Russian Days,' and in a sense they are truly the best thing in it. . . The book is not by any means uninteresting. Its picture of the sordid and depressing conditions in which she tried to carry out her idealistic enterprise is as vivid as can be, and there are striking sketches of leading personalities of the regime—Podvowsky, the organizer of the Red Army, for example. It is in a way a historical document upon Russia. But oustide this interest, we are again presented with just the same extravagant, undisciplined and, it must be owned, rather vulgar personality, with whom we were surfeited in the long autobiography."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p334 Ap 25 '29 300w

DUNCAN, ISADORA. Art of the dance; ed. with an introd. by Sheldon Cheney. ltd ed 147p il $7.50 Theatre arts; for sale by Day

793.3 Dancing 28-28374

"Isadora Duncan's book is her own written record and analysis of the dance as an art, of her approach and her methods, as far as methods can be detailed in words, of her aesthetic experience. This is supplemented by a series of appreciations by friends who knew her both as a woman and dancer and by thirty-three illustrations of Isadora as seen by some of the world's greatest artists, giving the perfection of her movement, the finality of her gesture, the eternal beauty of form which she sought and achieved."—Theatre Arts Mo

"Isadora Duncan's dancing was technically and morally a protest against the technique and the morals of the world she knew. She had genius and, almost incidentally, she knew a great deal about dancing—the technical suggestions casually noted in these pages are clairvoyant; through her genius she imposed herself on a hostile world; and still failed to prove that the world was wrong." Gilbert Seldes

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 F 24 '29 600w

"Many of the essays are sheer poetry, uplifted in tone and beautiful in expression; but they offer little clarification of the art of the dance. They allow you, as Isadora's dancing did, to share her aspirations toward a world set free. In these essays we glimpse a finer personality than in 'My Life,' but it is the woman herself we see, even here. In every conscious effort that she made—living, writing, teaching, or dancing—she was the inspired apostle of freedom. Her dancing was accidental and unimportant." Ruth Pickering

Nation 128:202 F 13 '29 680w

"This book, put out by her admirers, is crowded with notes of admiration very little restrained by sound judgment and sadly disordered by lack of perspective. In spite of that, it conveys something—especially through the drawings of the dancer's figure by men as different in their expression as Rodin, Bourdelle, Granjouan, von Kaulbach, Bakst, Maurice Denis, Van Deering, Perrine and Dunoyer de Segonzac." H. I. Brock

N Y Times p4 D 16 '28 1300w

"In this book we have the soberest thoughts, the loftiest ideals, the deepest realizations of America's greatest woman. These writings could easily be used as a textbook in any of the arts for the philosophy of aesthetics throughout is broad and deep. The special essays on the arts of drama, music, architecture, opera and dance are clear and beautiful gems of inspired thought.

DUNCAN, ISADORA—Continued
I can recommend this book without reservation to artist, philosopher, educator and layman alike." Lucile Marsh
+ N Y World p10m Ja 27 '29 580w

" 'The Art of the Dance' is all that we have which Isadora Duncan put down with words upon paper concerning her art, and is composed of essays, programs, notes and letters. There is a spirit flaming within these pages that is tall as any mountain. There is an urge behind her written words not unlike the ebb of the ocean. It is almost impossible to escape superlatives when writing of either this woman or the art of this woman, as will be witnessed by a reading of a number of essays written by various people in regard to Isadora Duncan's dancing, and included in this volume."
Outlook 150:1336 D 12 '28 180w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 27 '29 1000w
Theatre Arts Mo 13:155 F '29 330w

DUNCAN, MARGARET M., and CUNDIFF, VELDA P. Play days for girls and women. 87p il $1.60 Barnes, A.S. & co.
796 Athletics. Physical education and training 29-10603

"A play day is defined as 'a day when girls from several schools meet and play with rather than against each other.' The book is suited to other than school play days, however, and may be adapted to the uses of industrial and community groups."—Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 26:19 O '29
Wis Lib Bul 25:191 Je '29

DUNN, FREDERICK SHERWOOD. Practice and procedure of international conferences. (Johns Hopkins univ. studies in hist. and political science. Extra volumes. New ser.) 229p $2.50 Johns Hopkins [11s 6d Milford]
341.1 Congresses and conventions. International cooperation—Congresses 29-16591

Because of the great increase in recent years of the number of international conferences, Professor Dunn has felt that the subject of conference procedure should call for some attention in the field of history and political science study. The present work is designed, not so much as a handbook of conference procedure, but "as an introduction to the study of the conference as an instrument of international collective action."

"Dr. Dunn's task was worth while, even if he does little more than show the present lack of organization. It is too bad that so clear a book should be written in so pedestrian a style and end so abruptly, with the last paragraph leaving the subject dangling in mid-air. It is also especially to be regretted that procedure is so constantly emphasized per se rather than in relation to the substance content of the conferences." J. P. Clark
+ — Nation 129:692 D 4 '29 300w

"It detracts somewhat from the merit of his book that although his list of contents comes to an end with the London Naval Conference of 1908-1909 he nevertheless continually refers to post-War practices, and thus exhibits a certain want of logic and method. His book falls between the two stools of a popular exposition and a scientific treatise. It is not quite up-to-date enough for the former and it is not thorough or complete enough for the latter. It is nevertheless a useful introduction to the subject of diplomacy by conference."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p711 S 19 '29 500w

DUNN, ROBERT WILLIAMS. Labor and automobiles. (Labor and industry ser.) 224p il $2 Int. pub.
331.818 Automobile industry and trade. Labor and laboring classes—United States 29-8859

This volume, one of a series being prepared by the Labor research association, is an inquiry into the conditions of labor in the automobile industry from the workman's point of view.

Reviewed by Carter Goodrich
Am Econ R 19:484 S '29 500w
Reviewed by J. A. Flexner
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Je 16 '29 280w

" 'Labor and Automobiles' is a really masterful study. Every important aspect of the industry is thoroughly covered, the argument is carefully documented at every point, and the story carries the reader along convincingly and with human interest. . . Several pages in the book are devoted to exploding Henry Ford's widely touted 'humanitarianism.' It is clearly shown that each of Ford's welfare schemes was introduced to increase his profits and that when they ceased to do this they were scrapped." R. A. Gibson
+ New Repub 59:239 Jl 17 '29 360w
Reviewed by M. P. Levy
N Y Evening Post p7m Jl 20 '29 500w

DUNSANY, EDWARD JOHN MORETON DRAX PLUNKETT, 18th baron. Seven modern comedies. 204p $2 Putnam
822 [29-1219]

Humor and fantasy, with one exception in modern English setting. Contents: Atalanta in Wimbledon; The raffle; The journey of the soul; In holy Russia; His sainted grandmother; The hopeless passion of Mr Bunyon; The jest of Hahalaba.

Booklist 25:313 My '29
Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 24 '29 130w

"They will do very well acted by amateur one-acters, but to read they are disappointing and even foreboding."
— + Boston Transcript p4 My 11 '29 220w

"Had Dunsany never written 'The laughter of the Gods,' nor 'The Queen's Enemies,' or the many exquisite stories, his 'Seven Modern Comedies' might not seem, perhaps, so dull, so dreary, so destitute of beauty and charm. The very title is false. These comedies have nothing specifically modern. . . Dunsany has lived too long—and prospered too well—among strange beings who live beyond geography and untouched by the calender to understand the stranger beings who are rooted to the earth and whose lives are measured by the ticks of the clock." Paul Eldridge
— N Y Evening Post p9m F 9 '29 400w

"Lord Dunsany, to compare him with Miss de la Roche, is less content with a mere dramatic moment as the idea for a short play, and more insistent, at least in some of his pieces, on a skeletonized full-length fabrication." Percy Hutchison
N Y Times p8 Jl 28 '29 120w

"Seven times in this volume Lord Dunsany draws the magic circle and lights the mysterious powder and mutters the magic words, but only twice does the incantation work. . . These two plays are the old Dunsany; the rest just don't seem somehow to come off." W. R. Brooks
— + Outlook 151:232 F 6 '29 120w

DUPRE, HENRI. Purcell; tr. from the French by Catherine Alison Phillips and Agnes Bedford. 223p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Knopf
B or 92 Purcell, Henry 28-28521

A critical biography by a Frenchman of an English musical composer, organist of the Chapel Royal, whose work is one of the chief treasures of English music. The opening chapter is an interesting account of the music of the Restoration age, as background for the study of Purcell's works.

"We are glad that a Frenchman wrote this book, for he has brought to his difficult and complex task the incomparable Gallic faculty for clarity, concision and sensibility combined with logic. The volume is short—as all works of this type should be, when their purpose is to present an introduction and a perspective rather than to be the accumulation of facts—and its contents may be easily appreciated and absorbed." Elbert Leuron

+ Bookm 68:695 F '29 150w

"A concise, distinguished volume which will scarcely be superseded." P: Bowdoin

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 My 5 '29 150w

"M. Dupré's book is more a description of the 'golden age of English music' than a criticism of Purcell. The general musical public, which is as ignorant of Purcell in England as it is in France, should find it a useful introduction."

New Statesman 32:672 Mr 2 '29 500w

N Y World p10m Ja 13 '29

"Although the whole affair makes pretty dull reading, a good index and an adequate bibliography give it some value as a reference work."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:607 Ja 19 '29 100w

"M. Dupré has a thorough knowledge not only of Henry Purcell's music but of the English traditions from which it springs. But the value of his book to English readers is that he sees his subject more in line with contemporary Continental music than English writers are generally inclined to do. . . Best of all, M. Dupré is an enthusiast with a power of discrimination, and to us who think of Purcell as closely bound up with the English life and language it is interesting to find out what are the qualities which arouse a Frenchman's enthusiasm."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p183 Mr 7 '29 360w

DUPREE, MORRISON, pseud. Tap on the shoulder. 291p $2 Doubleday, Doran 29-14763

A tap on the shoulder summoned Dr Stoughton to investigate a murder and to find love. Arthur Townley was discovered murdered, with a long silver knife in his chest. There were Melville Carnaday, Egyptologist, and his daughter Helen, Anne their servant, and Brandon Staire, an author, for suspects. Dr Stoughton led the investigation, aided by Staire, and the result was not what you would expect.

---

"This is a clever book, subordinating the murder to a study in psychology and offering a treat to those interested in emotional reactions."

+ Bookm 69:xxvi Ag '29 40w

"Here's an A No. 1 item for fans who cannot cope with the gaucheries of the average detective tale of commerce. . . Containing human characters, fairly adequate motives, interesting plot and, above all, good writing." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 7 '29 180w

"It is an exceedingly interesting story, well devised, well developed and coming to a surprising conclusion." G. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 7 '29 480w

N Y Times p16 Ag 18 '29 180w

DURANT, WILLIAM JAMES. Mansions of philosophy; a survey of human life and destiny. 704p $5 Simon & Schuster [25s Benn]

191 Philosophy 29-12414

"In physical content 'Mansions of Philosophy' covers 700 pages; in intellectual range it aims to be 'a survey of human life and destiny.' Mr Durant's conception of philosophy is elastic. He starts with philosophy in the stricter sense —metaphysics, logic and theology—passes to morality, with 150 pages about love, marriage and children, and then in turn treats esthetics, the philosophy of history, political philosophy, religion and the worth of life."—Springf'd Republican

---

Booklist 26:8 O '29

Bookm 70:iv S '29 220w

"The title of Will Durant's new book is a misnomer. It is hardly to the mansions of philosophy that he here takes his readers. It is to the cabins. For the mansions of philosophy where one may get long vistas and royal splendor, one must still go, as in the old days before Will Durant began to write, to the great minds of the ages. But many readers want to be entertained by wit and flattered into supposing that they are penetrating profundities. And for such readers Will Durant has much to offer. The chief virtue of Will Durant's new book, as of his 'Story of Philosophy,' is perhaps the adroit and happy turn of his phrases." S. P. Lamprecht

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Je 16 '29 1700w

Boston Transcript p4 Je 8 '29 1100w

"He has a chummy attitude of intimacy with all philosophers from Aristotle to Bertrand Russell, knows them by their first names, so to speak. . . But for any who move into the Mansion, expecting to dwell with the spirit of philosophy, it is simply 'too bad.' For the Mansions are merely Unfurnished Rooms, with a strong draught of air pouring through." J. P. C.

— Cath World 130:114 O '29 660w

Cleveland Open Shelf p135 N '29

"He writes with such evident sincerity and zeal that one hesitates before the unkind but easy task of exposing his graceful sciolism. If he could be more modest in his pretensions one could accept and admire his work as an example of exceedingly witty and skilful journalism. But his naive and arrogant criticism of modern philosophy provokes closer reading which reveals his book largely as clever gesture and bombast." W: Gruen

— + Nation 129:71 Jl 17 '29 570w

"The modest scope of Mr. Durant's 700 pages is the whole of life. He would take you gently by the hand and initiate you into the practical application of philosophy to your daily conduct, the regulation of your affairs and the control of your character. . . His philosophy, in a word, is the philosophy of Arthur Brisbane. It is the pontification of every successful mediocrity. Marry, take exercise, life is good, have children, cultivate your garden. . . I predict an enormous sale for this book. It is superficial, trivial, pretentious, worthless." L: Sherwin

— N Y Evening Post p4s Je 8 '29 980w

"A Will Durant who is read is of more use in the world than an Immanuel Kant who is left neglected, and it is Dr. Durant's contribution to his generation that he stirs up thought in circles where either intellectual acceptance or intellectual desuetude has ruled. One who reads 'The Mansions of Philosophy' is certain to gain in mental alertness from the exercise. And this, we take it, was the author's primary purpose." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p6 Je 2 '29 1650w

" 'The Mansions of Philosophy' remains none the less a mansion of a book in which these chapters are as so many palatial halls. Not only the winds of doctrine blow through these pages; there is the sweet breath of fields and streams and (cries of 'Bourgeois!') the laughter of children. Here is wisdom, if at times not too palatable for the impatient and the Utopian, on sex and socialism, on religion, destiny, morals, happiness. The opening chapters of the book, in particular, provide an excellent encyclopedia of the ologies and the isms. A mellow book, a heartening one—a book that will win for the life of reflection and contemplation thousands of the eager minds that have been alienated from philosophy by the forbidding jargon of the profession." I: Goldberg

+ N Y World p7m Je 23 '29 800w

"Sincerely as Durant cherishes the mansions of philosophy and studies their designs, when it comes to his own construction, as it does in the new book, he is not much of a builder. There are too many houses like his already; pretentious but flimsy. Turn to Dr. Durant's chapters on character, on Utopia, on Modern Woman. They might be from the syndicated sayings of a daily-paper sage. On such a foundation of serious study as Durant has, he should have done better. A book that can goad men into thinking is good; but not if it encourages them in loose thinking."

DURANT, W: J.—Continued
— Outlook 152:310 Je 19 '29 500w

St Louis 27:259 S '29

"Mr. Durant's 'mansions' are evidently a modern skyscraper apartment, with a somewhat incongruous assortment of tenants. . . He shows a considerable expertness in dealing with ideas to be found in the standard literature of philosophy, and he has a faculty of assimilation and independent criticism. But he has not taken his task seriously enough or with a proper sense of selectiveness. He lapses into easy deductions and meretricious commonplaces. . . The uneven character of his writing may be due to the fact that some of his material appeared originally in magazines of diverse characters."
— + Springf'd Republican p12 Je 14 '29 500w

"The work, as a whole, is inspired with a grateful if rather vague faith in the ideal of progress and in the prospect of the advance of humanity in intellectual and spiritual qualities."
Times [London] Lit Sup p902 N 7 '29 320w

DURANTY, WALTER. Curious lottery, and other tales of Russian justice. 237p $2.50 Coward-McCann
29-6691

Mr Duranty has been since 1921 the Moscow correspondent of the New York Times. Among his many experiences in Russia those in the Soviet courts have interested him greatly. Stories of ten dramatic trials, printed originally in the New York Times are given here.

---

Booklist 25:395 Jl '29

Bookm 69:xxi My '29 120w

"The cases recorded by Mr. Duranty stir reflection upon novel aspects of justice and give a glimpse of significant conflicts between the ideas of old and new Russia." Dorothy Brewster
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ap 7 '29 580w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 13 '29 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p87 Je '29

Reviewed by L: Fischer
Nation 128:538 My 1 '29 430w

"As he is a clever reporter, and Russians appear to be as greedy, blundering, and treacherous as the rest of us, the stories are, indeed, good ones. But the ready-made threadbare style in which Mr. Duranty tells them is too thin to hold any imaginative insight; and so, although the facts are all facts, and the tales are deft, they leave little impression of reality in the reader's mind." L. S. Morris
New Repub 58:364 My 15 '29 430w

"Mr. Duranty has a flair for starkly realistic writing, for reproducing the scene, for imparting life to the actors. Moreover, he has an abounding appreciation of the humorous. On the other hand, the author of 'The Curious Lottery' is not unmoved when the truly pathetic, the genuinely tragic, enters. The human judgment, not formulated, but ever-present in the book, is tolerant and balanced."
+ N Y Times p5 Mr 24 '29 1200w

"Some are fictionized impressions of 'cases' with which the author has come in contact; others are straightforward and dramatic reportorial pieces about actual trials that have made Russian history. They do not cover a wide range of subjects but they do give an accurate picture of conditions in that unhappy country." Milton Byron
+ Outlook 151:468 Mr 20 '29 120w

DUREN, WILLIAM LARKIN. Francis Asbury, founder of American Methodism and unofficial minister of state. 270p il $3 (12s 6d) Macmillan

B or 92 Asbury, Francis. Methodist Episcopal Church 28-23317

A Methodist preacher of the North Georgia conference has written this life of the pioneer leader of Methodism in America who came here from England when Wesley called for volunteers and spent forty-five years on his broad circuit.

---

"Mr. Duren deserves congratulations for accomplishing a feat that, so far as I have been able to learn by extensive reading in religious literature, has never been performed before. We have the unusual spectacle of a minister of the gospel admitting that a great religious hero was after all quite human and had faults like other men. . . He does not aim to create a hero or make a biography; his purpose has been to interpret a life." Herbert Asbury
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 25 '28 520w

Boston Transcript p8 N 17 '28 200w

"As formal biography the book hardly qualifies at all. But as an attempt to get at the inner life of a man, the book is honest and incisive and measurably successful. . . Its failure to stand as a complete characterization grows out of the author's preconceived idea of his subject's sainthood." Paul Hutchinson
+ — Christian Century 46:18 Ja 3 '29 380w

"Not a biography at all, but rather a series of studies about Asbury, each one more or less complete in itself. . . In his concluding chapter the author says, 'We have not touched that vast realm of physical fact and social circumstance which combined to make the life and labors of this pioneer preacher one of the thrilling tales of American history.' . . It is the contention of the reviewer that Francis Asbury's life cannot be properly interpreted without the very facts which the author deliberately omits." W: W. Sweet
— + J Religion 9:313 Ap '29 500w

"The author has endeavored not to be unduly eulogistic, but to collect and discuss all the available facts justly, with due reference to the conditions under which his subject lived and worked."
+ N Y Times p3 S 1 '29 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p45 Je 17 '29 30w

DURFEE, EDGAR NOBLE, ed. Cases on equity. 830p $6 Bobbs

347.8 Equity 28-21527

"This is a unified treatment of equity in one volume, divided into three parts. Part I consists of a brief chapter on the history of equity and a long chapter on equity jurisdiction and procedure. The second part opens with a long chapter on specific performance, followed by a somewhat shorter chapter on injunctions against torts. This in turn is followed by brief chapters on nuisance and crime, bills of peace, and quia timet. Part III surveys vendor and purchaser in about one hundred pages. The book covers most of the familiar problems. The selected cases include the familiar landmarks supplemented by modern decisions dealing with contemporary problems such as obstructions to the flow of labor and unfair competition."— Columbia Law R

---

"No other equity case book has contained relatively so many opinions by judges from the central and western states. The compilation is in no sense a machine-made product. The cases are carefully, even drastically edited, both as to facts and opinions. . . Professor Durfee's new case book will doubtless make such a satisfactory first impression on many equity teachers that they will welcome an opportunity to test it by classroom use. There is every reason to anticipate that it will meet that test more than adequately." J: Hanna
+ Columbia Law R 29:1030 N '29 800w

"As a basis for the study of the judicial administration of discretionary functions, the comparative efficacy of all available remedies, and the operation of enforcement measures, the book is richer in detail, more lawyer-like, and more inherently suggestive than any other case-book on Equity." M. T. Van Hecke

Yale Law J 38:1170 Je '29 650w

DURHAM, MARY EDITH. Some tribal origins, laws and customs of the Balkans. 318p il $6.50 Macmillan [20s G. Allen]

914.96 Balkan Peninsula—Social life and customs. Tribes and tribal system

[29-5196]

"Miss Durham, widely known for her anthropological and folk-lore investigations, tells the story of what she found in those Balkan lands where so many strange customs and beliefs of the past still linger. Much of the material accumulated by her in this field has already been published in the journal of the Anthropological Institute, as well as in 'Man,' its monthly periodical; and what her new volume does is to show that information especially suited to a scientific audience may also be welcomed by the general reader."—Boston Transcript

---

"Miss Durham's intimate knowledge of the Balkans and the spirit and vivacity with which she can write of them have been evident in each one of her successive books. 'Customs of the Balkans' is the record of a keen observer, and it gives a picture of a European peasant people such as we have had all too rarely. After the endless jottings of modern globe-trotters, it is a book full of the familiarity of long association, a book about a deep-rooted and simple people." Ruth Benedict

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p42 S 29 '29 450w

Boston Transcript p4 S 7 '29 500w

"It tells a very interesting story in a very agreeable and understandable way." F. L. Minnigerode

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 25 '29 1050w

DUTTON, CHARLES JUDSON. Streaked with crimson. 280p $2 Dodd

29-8652

A man was found hanging from a beam in a deserted house. He had been strangled with a black rope streaked with crimson. Shortly thereafter a woman was found similarly murdered. Harley Manners, who found the first body, tried to solve the mystery, but it was not until John Bartley arrived that the tangle straightened out.

---

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Mr 31 '29 110w

"There is quite enough suspense and interest in the tale to make the reader quite oblivious of such details as style, characterization, etc., and to turn over the final pages as rapidly as possible to see what really happens. It is rather better than the average."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 25 '29 200w

"Although the identity of the murderer will probably be guessed by most readers long before Professor Manners has the slightest suspicion, there is enough excitement in the story to maintain the interest until the end."

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 7 '29 180w

DUUN, OLAV. Good conscience; tr. from the Norwegian by Edwin Björkman. 368p $2.50 Harper

28-24269

The story is a study of conscience in three generations of a Norwegian family. Per Hoburn, head of the family makes a dishonest deal, and suffers from his conscience to the end of his days. After his death his daughter Nora, spiritually akin to her self-contained mother, marries without love to make a home for her mother. Her first love returns and her jealous husband first drives her to him and then finds a way to kill the lover. This is matter for his conscience to the end of his days. The daughter of these two suffers like them thru her love, but unlike them follows the dictates of heart and will, accepts the consequences, and wastes no time doing penance.

---

"The sins, the penances and the punishments are as geometrically worked out as a good sermon on predestination; and the effect is just about as arousing." C. P. Fadiman

— Bookm 68:590 Ja '29 150w

"The characters are well drawn, but the story as a whole is dull, flavorless and unprepossessing, and leaves an unwholesome mist of Old Testament moralizing on the mind as hard to shake off as a boiled New England dinner."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 18 '28 150w

"Mr. Duun is a leading figure in the literary life of Europe, yet he is unknown in America. His work is generally of the modern school, unemotional, detached, yet deeply sensitive. . . . The name of Hardy is of course mentioned in introducing him, not by way of caliber, but because he writes of the soil, of his own district, and he writes carefully and finely."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 26 '29 380w

Reviewed by Margery Latimer

N Y World p11m Ja 13 '29 520w

"The novel is undeniably an impressive production, but it seems to lack dramatic force and to suffer from a flat, monotonous, overemphasized simplicity."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:664 F 9 '29 250w

"Between the unnatural bookish diction, sprinkled with occasional sudden Americanisms, of Mr. Björkman's characters and the crisp and pithy realism of Mr. Dunn's peasant dialogue there is little in common. We still have to look forward to an adequate rendering of the real Olav Duun, represented by one of his masterpieces."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p450 Je 6 '29 480w

DWIGGINS, WILLIAM ADDISON (HERMANN PUTERSCHEIN, pseud.). Layout in advertising. 200p il $7.50 Harper

659 Advertising. Printing—Specimens

28-24596

"A nationally known authority discusses the subject from both the creative and the critical points of view. From his own extensive consulting practice for prominent agencies and clients he explains how the layout man approaches his problem, discusses the tools at his command—paper, type, illustration, ornament, lettering—describes how these influence design, outlines a catalogue of the products—the many things the layout man helps to produce—and then proceeds to explain in detail with numerous graphic illustrations, the various steps in the designing process itself. All phases of advertising are covered by the author in his discussion of the technique of advertising design."—N Y Times

---

For biographical sketch of the author see Boston Transcript p1 F 16 '29

---

+ Booklist 25:236 Mr '29

"Described in a most engaging style by a man who knows his subject thoroughly, and is interested in it. The book will prove a valuable text book for the advertising executive and copy-writer as well as for the layout man. It is notable also for its typographical excellence." Frances Atwater

+ N Y Times p18 D 2 '28 380w

Pratt p20 winter '29

St Louis 27:129 Ap '29

DWIGGINS, W: A.—Continued

" 'Layout in Advertising' is, I suppose, aimed at the man who is preparing advertisements. He certainly can get from it more first-class information than is probably to be found in any other volume. The real joy in this book will come, however, to the more or less casual reader, who will read, for instance, the 'entr'acte' called 'Product' with ever increasing appreciation of a mind which facilely deals with such extremely mundane affairs as advertisements, but which ought to be teaching philosophy."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:560 D 29 '28 100w

"While a rudimentary knowledge of advertising preparation is presupposed, the book is singularly free from technical matters and the casual reader will find little to interrupt his interest in this extraordinarily clear, orderly, and competent array of sound and workable suggestions. . . Seldom has the author of a technical or semi-technical book been so adroit in demolishing with a gesture long standing traditions; and conversely, so adept in offering new and more acceptable improvements." C: H. Denhard

+ Sat R of Lit 5:622 Ja 26 '29 780w

DYER, FRANK LEWIS; MARTIN, THOMAS COMMERFORD; and MEADOWCROFT, WILLIAM HENRY. Edison, his life and inventions. 2v 1036p il $10 Harper

B or 92 Edison, Thomas Alva 29-16947

Dyer and Martin's standard biography of Edison was originally published in 1910. In this new edition it has been brought down to the period of the Edison celebrations in the summer of 1929. Three chapters are entirely new, including the one devoted to Edison's wartime activities, and others have been revised.

---

Reviewed by J: Dos Passos

New Repub 61:103 D 18 '29 800w

"It is a narrative replete with anecdote and reminiscence; often told in Edison's own words. It depicts a long lifetime of incredible activity, a career possible only to an Edison." E: L. Nichols

+ N Y Evening Post p7m S 7 '29 750w

Reviewed by Uffington Valentine

N Y Times p9 S 1 '29 2000w

Reviewed by W A. Curry

Sat R of Lit 6:104 S 7 '29 1050w

DYER, WALTER ALDEN. Chronicles of a countryman. 355p il $3 Washburn

630.1 Country life 28-24161

"The informal essays of which the book is composed are written in conversational style. The town of Lisburn and its inhabitants are revealed through incidents which the author says are not actual happenings any more than the people are actual people, but are graphic portrayals of a type of living."—Boston Transcript

---

"The farm in his scheme of life, is not a jealous mistress but a smiling handmaiden. He goes about his chores with a mind detached and an imagination unfettered. His orchard and his fields engage his attention without monopolizing his powers. The residuum is converted into engaging prose in which the pleasures of farm life are celebrated most alluringly."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 D 23 '28 170w

Boston Transcript p6 N 28 '28 250w

"Mr. Dyer's book is the record of the thoughts, the labors, the joys and the dreams of an educated contemporary American who has turned his back on the hectic worries and the yet more hectic pleasures of modern city life to seek happiness on a New England farm. And an arrestingly attractive picture he has made of such a life. He has a wonderful feel for New England that marks him as a writer of deep and sensitive perceptions." G. D. M.

+ Cath World 128:762 Mr '29 360w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 29 '29 600w

E

EADIE, THOMAS. I like diving; a professional's story; with an introd. by Philip Andrews. 245p il $3.50 Houghton

627 Diving, Submarine. . S-51 (submarine). S-4 (submarine) 29-11297

Tom Eadie has been diving for nearly twenty years and has engaged in some notable deep-sea exploits, including work on the S-51 and the S-4, for which he received the congressional medal of honor.

---

Booklist 25:381 Jl '29

"If you want to know, without a decorative sentimentality, what it feels like to be a deep-sea diver, this is the book to read."

+ Bookm 69:xxii Ag '29 170w

"No sane human being with a spark of imagination can read this cheerful, accurate, concise narrative without feeling rather overcome with admiration and affection for a service which produces men like Eadie and his colleagues in these many desperate adventures." W: McFee

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7e Je 23 '29 730w

"He takes you with him and tells you all about it as he goes. He has the gift of investing his yarns with a rich quality of experience. If any boy does not like this book he is not worth his salt. It has every element that should appeal to him strongly." D. C. Lunt

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Jl 21 '29 500w

Boston Transcript p6 My 25 '29 230w

N Y New Tech Bks 14:37 Jl '29

"Evidently, Tom Eadie knows his job through and through and he has written about it a book as full of thrills and interest as it is of information."

+ N Y Times p16 My 5 '29 450w

"After reading Mr. Ellsberg's 320 pages there is not very much that Tom Eadie can tell you, except to give you a more accurate account of how the diver feels about his trade. His whole attitude toward the business of diving is admirably heroic and intelligent. 'I Like Diving' has the added attraction of being an autobiography, and as such is more diverting than Mr. Ellsberg's book which sticks close to the salvaging of the S-51."

+ Outlook 152:69 My 8 '29 90w

St Louis 27:283 O '29

"Tom Eadie's business is not writing, so his book lacks the literary polish that the more fastidious may desire. At the same time, however, he writes with a directness that too often escapes those who make writing a profession. . . Eadie begins his book with the simple statement, 'I like diving.' And as one reads his book, and notes the enthusiasm which colors his story, one believes him and understands him."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1099 Je 8 '29 220w

Wis Lib Bul 25:191 Je '29

EAGLETON, CLYDE. Responsibility of states in international law. 291p $6 N.Y. univ. press

341 International law and relations 28-22570

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"The study is technical in character. It is slightly labored in places, but this is excusable inasmuch as more than three hundred cases and controversies have been studied by the author in arriving at his conclusions. It is thoroughly documented and well indexed, and should prove to be of value to practicing attorneys as well as students of international law and world organization." J. G. H.

+ Ann Am Acad 141:278 Ja '29 170w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 F 17 '29 300w

EARP, FRANK RUSSELL. Way of the Greeks. 223p $3 (8s 6d) Oxford

913.38 Greece—Civilization. Greece—Religion. Ethics, Greek 30-27

A study of the Greek view of life in regard to morality and sin, religion and the future life, art and literature, written from the standpoint of the Greek belief that there is a right way of doing all things.

"He has made a readable and serviceable book that will interest those for whom it is intended." Paul Shorey

+ Class Philol 24:418 O '29 2000w

St Louis 27:312 N '29

"His book will be useful for the public to whom it is addressed—'neither scholars nor the wholly ignorant.' The ignorant had better read something else first, for Mr. Earp has deliberately left out those aspects of Greek life that are common knowledge in order to concentrate on some which he thinks have been overlooked." Elmer Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 6:91 Ag 31 '29 620w

"Professor Earp claims only to have written a book for those who know something of Greece and are interested in it; but many a scholar who knows much of Greece will be grateful to him for his valuable, and also delightful study of this subtle and elusive theme."

+ Spec 143:22 Jl 6 '29 250w

"For those who share his rare familiarity with the whole range of the literature which he discusses such finished studies can never be anything but profitable and delightful. Yet we may be permitted to reiterate the doubt whether those whose scholarship is less profound will be wholly attracted by this unimpassioned dissection of the Greek soul."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p469 Je 13 '29 930w

EASTMAN, FRED' (RICHARD MORSE, pseud.). Pursuit of the flying baby; a faithful account of the strange happenings to William Thompson after his mother told him to mind the baby. 237p il $2 Willett

28-30279

Willie is asked to mind the baby at the country fair. As if that were not injury enough, the baby is carried off by a flock of balloons. Willie, mounting a moonbeam rides desperately after. The amazing incidents of his pursuit of the flying baby are illustrated in red and black by "Regina and Ludwig."

"There is a moral, but it is not unduly emphasized, and the tale is told simply and attractively with suspense maintained to a proper climax."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 30 '29 130w

"A book for those who enjoy amusing fantasy with an undercurrent of feeling."

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 31 '29 200w

"In this reviewer's opinion the best juvenile of the year." C: S. Brown

+ Survey 61:690 F 15 '29 160w

EASTMAN, FRED (RICHARD MORSE, pseud.), comp. and ed. Modern religious dramas. 326p $3 Holt

812.08 American drama—Collections. Religious drama 28-22848

From more than two hundred plays the author, professor of religious literature and drama in Chicago theological seminary, chose the thirteen included in this volume. These are not Biblical plays, but plays having a religious effect. Contents: The neighbours, by Zona Gale; Confessional, by Percival Wilde; What men live by, by Virginia Church; The valiant, by Holworthy Hall and Robert Middlemass; Bread, by Fred Eastman; The deathless world, by J. M. S. Tompkins; El Cristo, by Margaret Larkin; Dust of the road, by K. S. Goodman; The color line, by I. T. MacNair; The golden rule in courtship, by C. R. Cook; Modern magi, by C: S. Brown; The Christmas pageant of the Holy Grail, by W. R. Bowie; America's unfinished battles, by Fred Eastman.

Booklist 25:240 Mr '29

"A sane and helpful volume." W. P. Eaton

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 D 30 '28 200w

"The important thing about this collection is the fact that it broadens the scope of the category of 'religious plays' to some adequate correspondence with the modern view of the range of religion. The problem is not the visual presentation of biblical episodes, but the study of human beings trying to act religiously in crucial situations in contemporary life. . . . The technique of this sort of religious drama is still in the making, and those who are doing pioneer work in its development are entitled to encouragement and support." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 45:1369 N 8 '28 300w

St Louis 27:166 My '29

"This book is worth more than it costs, merely as a collection of excellent plays and pageants. It is worth far more than that as a text for study. Its greatest value, however, is this: It is a forecast of new values in religion, and of new sensitiveness and vigor in the social conscience." C: S. Brown.

+ Survey 61:451 Ja 1 '29 320w

"Thirteen plays and pageants of unusual merit in which the social message of good will is not overloaded."

+ World Tomorrow 12:522 D '28 20w

EASTON, JOHN. Unfrequented highway; through Sikkim and Tibet to Chumolaori. 133p il $7.50 Knopf [21s Scholartis press]

915.15 Himalaya mountains. Tibet—Description and travel [29-9042]

The author and a companion followed a trail northeastward over the mountains from Darjeeling to Tibet, to the "mother of mountains" Chumolaori. The story of the leisurely journey on horseback has some beautiful illustrations, and a handsome format.

"The region has a bleak grandeur scarcely to be matched elsewhere on the face of the earth, and Mr. Easton conveys an impression of it which is vivid and packed with interest."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Mr 31 '29 150w

Boston Transcript p3 F 16 '29 780w

"The author attempts only a pedestrian account of his journey, which, not in any degree adventurous, synchronised with the latter portion of Dr. McGovern's remarkable pilgrimage to Lhasa. Sixteen fine photographs, including two of Chumolaori's snows, make the chief attraction of the book."

New Statesman 31:650 S 1 '28 220w

"Mr. Easton's account of his trip, which was in the nature of an arduous picnic and does not profess to have any scientific significance, makes graphic and cheerful reading. But although he tells us that he lost his maps on the road, that does not excuse him for having failed to provide his readers with at least a sketch of his route. Apart from this omission it would be difficult to praise too highly the general production of the book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p619 Ag 30 '28 350w

EATON, JEANETTE. Daughter of the Seine; the life of Madame Roland. 324p il $2.50 Harper

B or 92 Roland de la Platière, Mme Manon Jeanne (Phlipon) 29-15228

A biography of Madame Roland for young people, giving a picture of life in Paris in the days preceding and during the French revolution.

Booklist 26:74 N '29

EATON, JEANNETTE—Continued

"It would be hard to match Jeanette Eaton's life of Madame Roland among the grown-up biographies of women of the French Revolution." M. L. Becker

+ Bookm 70:444 D '29 80w

St Louis 27:344 D '29

Wis Lib Bul 25:326 O '29

EATON, RICHARD, ed. Best European short stories of 1928. 309p $2.50 Dodd

Short stories—Collections (29-7735)

In this book are combined two well-known collections of short stories previously issued separately as the "Best French Short Stories," and the "Best Continental Short Stories."

Booklist 25:359 Je '29

"Mr. Eaton's collection, on the whole, is a pretty dreary one. Karel Capek's 'Money' is by far the best of the lot, and Carlo Linati's Italian tale, 'One of the Claque,' is a gay note in contrast with the prevailing somber tone, but most of the tales do not quite come off." B. R. Redman

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 26 '29 200w

"As a whole Mr. Eaton has accomplished a difficult task well. The stories are typical and carefully selected. The anthology is one that gives a fine summary of the development of the European short story in 1928."

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 4 '29 260w

"The stories in Mr. Eaton's volume are for the most part unsatisfying, slight in conception and crude in execution." Edwin Seaver

— N Y Evening Post p11m Mr 16 '29 210w

"Completely uninspired collection. There is not a truly memorable story."

— N Y Times p14 Ap 14 '29 480w

"These are almost uniformly bad. . . The book lacks a critical apparatus and all information about the authors represented. It reaches a low-water mark for the series." I: Goldberg

— N Y World p11m Ap 7 '28 480w

EBERHART, M. G. Patient in room 18. 302p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Heinemann]

29-9217

The head nurse of St Ann's tells a continuously exciting story of murder and radium robbery in room 18. When detective O'Leary arrives the circle of suspects is narrowed to three doctors on the hospital staff, the head nurse herself, a young and pretty assistant, and a single outsider.

"A plausible and entertaining mystery with a novel background."

+ Bookm 69:xxx My '29 30w

"Well built, well written, amusing in spots and generally Grade A." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ap 7 '29 100w

"Except possibly for the ultra-sophisticated student of the detective novel, it can be guaranteed to give three hours complete and refreshing absorption, sorting out the criminal from a row of five. Perhaps two of the five begin to look innocent too early in the tale, but that is the only flaw." L. L. Irvine

+ Nation and Ath 45:208 My 11 '29 60w

New Statesman 33:190 My 18 '29 100w

"The mystery and horror are well sustained until the very end of the book, but the solution of the mystery leaves something to be desired in the way of logic. Aside from this it is a good, creepy yarn with plenty of thrills."

+ — N Y Times p24 My 19 '29 130w

N Y World p7m Je 23 '29 100w

"The story is one of the best of its kind that we have had the good luck to read this year. The suspense is sustained, the action is rapid, but the genuine atmosphere of the hospital and of a lot of thoroughly credible people going through a harrowing experience is skilfully preserved. And there is no hanky-panky about the evidence."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1028 My 18 '29 200w

"The non-detective parts of this story are excellent. As to say this of what purports to be a detective story is with virtuosi to condemn it, it must be made clear that while the parts praised could be replaced without changing the crimes and their outcome, they are not irrelevant."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p458 Je 6 '29 200w

EBERLEIN, HAROLD DONALDSON. Manor houses and historic homes of Long Island and Staten Island. 318p il $12.50 (60s) Lippincott

917.472 Long Island—Historic houses, etc. Staten Island—Historic houses, etc. 28-30240

Eastern Long Island architecture is of purely English derivation; western Long Island domestic architecture is Dutch in essence—and this racial division shows itself in many ways, even today. Mr Eberlein studies these historic houses both socially and architecturally, with biographical and genealogical notes on the persons who built or occupied them and the historical events connected with them.

"These pages are crammed with odd bits of knowledge relating to the activities of the worthies who were once their proud owners. Numerous photographs, both exteriors and interiors, add to the value of the work."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Ja 27 '29 100w

Spec 142:433 Mr 16 '29 80w

EBERLING, ERNEST JACOB. Congressional investigations; a study of the origin and development of the power of Congress to investigate and punish for contempt. (Columbia univ. studies in hist., economics and public law) 452p $6.75 Columbia univ. press

328.34 United States.Congress—Powers and duties. Contempt of court. Witnesses 29-4309

"Dr. Eberling makes his book chiefly a chronological account of Congressional practice, procedure, statutory development, and judicial review. The content, problems, and findings are necessarily similar [to Dr. Dimock's] since both authors have covered much the same ground and used the same materials."—Harvard Law R

"The book is based on careful study and makes a real contribution by way of tracing the evolution of a familiar governmental function and explaining its present status." J. G. Randall

+ Am Hist R 34:653 Ap '29 480w

Reviewed by G: B. Galloway

Am Pol Sci R 23:471 My '29 400w (Same as Harvard Law R)

Boston Transcript p8 Mr 23 '29 250w

"It is the reviewer's opinion that so far as contributions to the sum of recorded knowledge are concerned both these studies [Eberling's and Dimock's] are, in a sense supererogatory in that they cover ground which had already been adequately covered in published articles. Nevertheless, they represent much diligent research and include some good comment and criticism. . . Dr. Dimock's book is the more succinct, better balanced, and more systematically organized of the two." G: B. Galloway

— + Harvard Law R 42:845 Ap '29 400w

ECHOLS, ULA WATERHOUSE. Knights of Charlemagne. 362p il $3 Longmans

398 Charlemagne 28-27683

The legends of the days of Charlemagne and his nephew Roland are brought to life in this book for boys and girls. Battles with Saracens and enchanters, dragons and wizards vie with the exploits of Ogier the Dane and the rescues of lovely maidens by brave knights.

Reviewed by Rebecca Hourwich

Nation 127:550 N 21 '28 40w

"Simply written and well executed as to events and characters." Isabelle Houck

+ N Y World p11m D 30 '28 90w

"Miss Echols's narrative style has certain defects. . . But the exploits are told with vivacity and color and a good dramatic sense, and this new presentation of Charlemagne and his peers to a new generation of young readers deserves a welcome."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:738 Mr 2 '29 250w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 16 '28 110w

EDDINGTON, ARTHUR STANLEY. Nature of the physical world. (Gifford lectures, 1927) 361p $3.75 Macmillan [12s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

530.1 Physics—Philosophy. Science—Philosophy. Relativity (physics). Space and time
29-15261

"Undertaking to discuss relatively, time and the Quantum Theory in non-mathematical terms, Eddington's beautiful exposition is no popularization in any vulgar sense, for it is as abtruse as even the most intelligent layman could possibly follow, but it is also a marvel of lucidity and a model of detachment."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

+ Booklist 25:236 Mr '29

"The book will become, I daresay, the most widely influential, as it is certainly the clearest and most readable, on the subject." C: R. Walker

+ Bookm 69:555 Jl '29 730w

"Eddington's 'The Nature of the Physical World' is certainly one of the most satisfactory attempts yet made to explain the new physics to the layman—first because Eddington is, of course, among the most distinguished of living astronomers; second, because he has the gift of masterly exposition; and third (but not least important), because he has no ax of any kind to grind." J. W. Krutch

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 D 23 '28 3000w

Boston Transcript p5 D 29 '28 700w

"The clarity and charm of the style lighten the way through what for the layman is at best abstruse and difficult country, and together with the scientific authority of the writer, explain the wide general interest which the book seems to have excited."

+ J Home Econ 21:452 Je '29 80w

"Three-quarters of his course of Gifford lectures is occupied with a popular exposition of the leading ideas of modern physics, while the last quarter is concerned with adapting these ideas to theology. The first three-quarters is wholly admirable, but as to the last quarter opinions will be divided according to the prejudices which the reader brings to bear." Bertrand Russell

+ Nation 128:232 F 20 '29 900w

Nation and Ath 44:469 D 29 '28 650w

Nature 123:4 Ja 5 '29 1750w

"The book is altogether admirable. While a man is reading it he feels elated by the contact with a mind so felicitous and so safe; when he reaches the end of it he is content and grateful." Henshaw Ward

+ New Repub 58:sup146 Mr 20 '29 1050w

New Statesman 32:471 Ja 19 '29 980w

" 'The Nature of the Physical World' is an amazing book. It reveals so much about 'science' and the 'scientist,'—so much more than its author, I fear, intended to expose. All of its confusion and inconsistency, its logical and rhetorical stammerings in trying to translate the clarity of mathematical theory into a coarser language in order to make it 'mean' something about 'reality'—all of this may make the naturalist unhappy, but it must prove amusing to any philosopher who, unlike Russell, doesn't count Kant a misfortune." M. J. Adler

N Y Evening Post p8m Ja 19 '29 1100w

Reviewed by H. W. Horwill

N Y Times p10 Ja 6 '29 350w

"The best available exposition of the new physics. It is not always simple. The author warns the reader of that in advance. Nor is it intended to be an easy lesson in Einstein or anything of the sort. It deals rather with those more ultimate and profound conceptions which have outmoded the whole classical physics." Irwin Edman

+ N Y Times p3 F 10 '29 1900w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 227:adv F '29 70w

"The book is stiff reading, but it is flavored and lightened with humor. It is as clear as the subject will permit." E. B. Chaffee

+ Outlook 151:189 Ja 30 '29 600w

Reviewed by E. B. Chaffee

+ Outlook 151:432 Mr 13 '29 200w

Pratt p13 summer '29

"Perhaps no one is better qualified than Dr. Eddington to pass on to the general public the new findings in the domain of physics; but it must not be assumed that the reader is helped over hard places. Einstein is still Einstein; he is not to be interpreted in words of one syllable. However, all that grace and clarity of expression can do for the subject is done in Dr. Eddington's exposition." W: B. Shaw

+ R of Rs 79:24 Ap '29 220w

+ St Louis 27:127 Ap '29

"To any intelligent and thoughtful reader who would know something of the trend of the finest scientific thought of to-day, and of the bearing of the new theories of the nature of the phenomenal world on the eternal problems of philosophy and theology, it would be difficult to suggest a better or nobler introduction than this brilliant book."

+ Sat R 147:147 F 2 '29 1200w

Reviewed by Leigh Page

Science n s 69:624 Je 14 '29 1500w

"We are grateful for the union of lucid statement with lambent humour and shrewd common sense which makes Dr. Eddington's recast of his 1927 Gifford lectures the most intelligible account yet issued of recent ideas concerning the nature of the physical world. It must not be supposed, however, that Dr. Eddington's book is easy reading."

+ Spec 141:963 D 22 '28 700w

"A work whose brilliancy, breadth of thought, and power of insight are admirable. A scientist of distinction and authority, Prof Eddington is half a poet as well, and his felicity of language and the absorbing interest of which he holds the secret mark this volume as exceptional among current philosophical publications." L. W.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 17 '29 900w

"This is a giant's sort of book, full of heroes you never heard of who do bitter jousts for strange truths. I gather it is not the last word (even in Eddington's mind), for new theories come in while the lecturer takes a drink." Leon Whipple

+ Survey 62:497 Ag 1 '29 500w

"Professor Eddington in this volume has made the newest physical theories the basis of a general philosophic outlook, and in doing so he has written the most stimulating book that he has yet given us."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p923 N 29 '28 1600w

"It is written with all the brilliancy of style which characterized his earlier works. Many passages demand close and sustained thought, but the admirable clearness of exposition spares the reader more than he is likely to realize." H: N. Russell

+ Yale R n s 18:784 summer '29 1350w

EDDINGTON, ARTHUR STANLEY. Science and the unseen world. (Swarthmore lecture, 1929) 91p $1.25 Macmillan [2s 6d; pa 1s 6d G. Allen]

215 Religion and science. Friends, Society of 29-19461

In Dr Eddington's Swarthmore lecture for 1929 a scientific outline of evolution is presented, the differences between a scientific and a mystical outlook are stated, and the relationship of science and religion to the common spirit of seeking.

---

EDDINGTON, A. S.—Continued

Booklist 26:100 D '29

"This lecture approaches nearer that desirable harmonization of the scientific and religious outlook than any recent attempt we have noticed." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p5 O 11 '29 400w

"Will be read with interest by all who watch the movements of scientific thought in relation to philosophy and religion. . . It is, if we may venture to say so, only very rarely that a man of science so well understands the true nature of the religious problem." J. C. H.

+ Nature 124:571 O 12 '29 250w

"This book is made up from an address before the Society of Friends, of which Dr. Eddington is a member. It must be considered as the philosophy of a Quaker, not as the dictum of a scientist. As an exponent of present-day physics, Eddington has no superior. As an exponent of a mystical 'unseen,' known neither to him nor to anyone else, the famous Cambridge professor adds nothing of value to science and fails to endow the 'unseen' with any kind of reality." Maynard Shipley

— + New Repub 60:249 O 16 '29 1000w

"This book has the same winsomeness of style which won so much praise in his former volume." E. B. Chaffee

+ Outlook 153:271 O 16 '29 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 17 '29 470w

EDDY, CLYDE. Down the world's most dangerous river. 293p il $2.50 Stokes

917.9 Colorado river 29-19874

The author's story of the adventures of his expedition in navigating the rapids of the Colorado river in high levels of water. His crew consisted of a number of college students, a navigator and a photographer. The voyage was made in the summer of 1927 from Greenriver, Utah, to Needles, California. Dangerous battles with death, accidents to the boats, etc., in Cataract Canyon and the Grand Canyon, are vividly narrated by the author.

Booklist 26:113 D '29

Reviewed by C: J. Finger

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 10 '29 450w

Boston Transcript p2 O 11 '29 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p150 D '29

Nation 129:756 D 18 '29 100w

"Interest in the Colorado River has been so much increased by the imminent building of the Boulder Dam that Mr. Eddy's book is timely for both its fascinations and its information. Except for Major Powell's account of his first journey, which has long been one of the classics of adventure, it perhaps exceeds any other work about the Colorado River in its power to make the reader realize and visualize what a terrific engine of destruction the stream is."

+ N Y Times p22 S 29 '29 750w

EDDY, GEORGE SHERWOOD. Sex & youth. 338p $2 Doubleday, Doran

176 Sex 29-453

The sex problems of the young are discussed very frankly by Mr Eddy, who has had an exceptional experience as a lecturer and confidant of students the world over.

Booklist 25:230 Mr '29

"I must admit a pleasant candor and wholesome wisdom in Mr. Eddy's book. What he says of auto-erotism—of physical intimacies—of the art of being engaged—are all good counsels, instructed, reassuring, honest to the bone, fortifying and clarifying." Sarah Cleghorn

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Mr 31 '29 380w

"To one who has read Gray or Ellis or Sanger or Robey or Hamilton there is little here that is new. But perhaps nowhere else is so much material of the sort gathered in one place and presented by a writer so obviously anxious to give due regard to all the facts and at the same time conserve all the moral values." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 46:22 Ja 3 '29 180w

"The book has value for all students of the problem because of its frankness, its compactness, and its clarity."

+ Nation 128:594 My 15 '29 110w

"For the most part the discussion is simple, frank, direct and honest. The author has compiled a large number of quotations from various writers. These serve the purpose of enlightening a student group as to authoritative opinion and provide a basis for frank, wholesome discussion. The great weakness of the volume lies in its emotional character—the spilling over, as Josh Billings would call it, that so many employ when discussing adolescents." I. S. Wile, M.D.

+ — N Y Evening Post p10m F 16 '29 320w

"Mr. Eddy's new book is outstanding because of its openness of mind, its understanding, its sympathy, its levelheadedness and the fact that it gets close to life. This last factor gives it particular value, for, instead of being the outcome of theory spinning, it is largely the product of actual contact with young people and of discussion with them of their sex difficulties and problems. . . The book is written frankly for the younger generation, and members of the older may find some things in it rather shocking, but illuminating."

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 20 '29 420w

Pratt p8 summer '29

"As a guide-book to those to whom growing boys and girls appeal, Sherwood Eddy's book is the finest that has been brought to my attention. It is valuable for high-school teachers, for social workers, for counsellors and directors of clubs. It is a guide to the best literature of the subject, indicating the path to further study. It shows how ethically necessary the new frankness and truth-telling is; how it is not contrary to the great religious teaching, but a part of it." Margaret Sanger

+ Sat R of Lit 5:750 Mr 9 '29 1100w

"The author is not arrogant in advice, but somewhat humble in offering suggestions. There pervades at all times a simple, frank, honest and wholesome quality which is not likely to antagonize even the most radical adolescent. One senses throughout the desire to present a balanced and fair statement of adolescent sex problems, so as to aid youth in straight thinking and in self-emancipation from outworn traditional taboos. The weakness of the volume lies in its emotional tone." I. S. Wile, M.D.

+ Survey 62:369 Je 15 '29 330w

"Sex and Youth goes straight at its problem and speaks clearly and even bluntly. That is the only wholesome method. . . Most important of all, there is about the Eddy book a fine sense of the higher human values." F. J. McConnell

+ World Tomorrow 12:233 My '29 760w

EDDY, SARAH J., comp. Alexander and some other cats. 207p il $3 Marshall Jones

636.8 Cats 29-10880

"A large part of the book is made up of anecdotes proving what every cat-lover knows —that cats understand human language, have a language of their own, possess affection for their 'owners' as well as their homes, and show a maternal selflessness many a human mother might emulate. Other chapters tell of the care of these useful as well as fascinating little jungle-descendants; study various cat problems; and analyze the formation of animal rescue leagues and 'pet animal shows.'" —Boston Transcript

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 21 '29 80w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 5 '29 580w

"It is comprehensive in the information and interest it offers, for the compiler has ranged far and wide among books, poems and articles having the cat for their theme and has made judicious selections from the writings of many famous and less-known authors. A great number of interesting and handsome illustrations of cats add to the many attractions of a book that ought to possess much interest for both adults and children and for both pro-cat and anti-cat enthusiasts."

+ N Y Times p15 Je 16 '29 380w

EDEN, SIR FREDERICK MORTON, bart. State of the poor; a history of the labouring classes in England, with parochial reports; abr. and ed. by A. G. L. Rogers. 383p $4.50 Dutton [15s Routledge]

331.8 Labor and laboring classes—Great Britain. Poor—Great Britain. Poor laws—Great Britain. Charities—Great Britain [29-8794]

In 1797 Sir Frederick Eden's history of the laboring classes was first published. This is an abridged edition, with an introduction by A. G. L. Rogers. It presents a picture of the conditions of the poor of the times, complete as to diet and dress, industries and methods of agriculture, with notes on taxation, titles, etc.

Reviewed by Witt Bowden

Ann Am Acad 146:274 N '29 400w

Booklist 26:82 N '29

"Despite his guesses, which at times supplement facts, the report has all the value of an almost isolated personal record made during an exceedingly important period." G. R. B. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 19 '29 350w

"Eden's detailed accounts of the working of the Poor Laws and the conditions of the working classes in his day have been a mine of information for investigators and writers who came after him. But some of his facts and conclusions have been disproved by later research, notably by Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Webb and by Miss Dorothy Marshall in The English Poor in the XVIIIth Century; and even when he was accurate he was often prolix. So that Mr. Rogers is fully justified, we think, in winnowing the grain from the chaff and in abridging the three large original volumes into one. What he has given us (apart from his own excellent introduction) is all the best part of Eden."

+ New Statesman 32:424 Ja 5 '29 140w

Reviewed by E: T. Devine

Outlook 152:673 Ag 21 '29 840w

EDGAR, DAY. In Princeton town. 351p $2 [2] Scribner

29-21214

Ten short stories centering about the same group of Princeton college men. Typical college events and interests—proms, girls, clubs, honors, escapades—are described with that solemn emphasis which the average collegian usually bestows upon them; and the passing comedies and tragedies of undergraduate life are sympathetically narrated.

"No one at present equals Mr. Edgar in the portrayal of college life. . . His stories are completely faithful and recognizable and very entertaining. The college world of Day Edgar is a world in miniature, which he reproduces with sympathy and an accurate sense of human comedy." Margaret Wallace

+ Bookm 70:319 N '29 150w

"Readers whose memory goes back thirty years or more may recall Post's 'Harvard Tales,' which gave great joy to two or three generations of undergraduates. The intervening decades have brought few better stories of campus life. These are much like them—ingenious, frivolous, colorful."

+ Christian Century 46:1546 D 11 '29 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p158 D '29

EDINGTON, ARLO C., and EDINGTON, MRS CARMEN BALLEN. Studio murder mystery. 283p $2 Reilly & Lee

29-11284

"A novel plot-within-a-plot. Dwight Hardell, leading heavy of Superior Films, is stabbed to death the night before the finishing of a masterpiece on Stage Six. Several people had threatened to kill him, and when three had confessed, Chief Detective Smith smelled a rat. So he played along, giving the real murderer plenty of rope, to the inevitable conclusion."—Bookm

"A good close-up of moving-picture people at work, as well as an original work-out."

+ Bookm 69:xxvi Jl '29 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 26 '29 70w

"There are a few loose ends in the plot, but taken as a whole, it is an enjoyable story. The intimate and authentic glimpse of moving picture life furnishes a background that adds not a little to the interest of the story." J. C. G.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 22 '29 330w

N Y Times p16 Je 2 '29 140w

EDMAN, IRWIN. Adam, the baby, and the man from Mars. 304p $2.50 Houghton

814 29-12391

A series of philosophical essays on various phases of contemporary life. Contents: On American life; Antidotes; Speculations; Toward a philosophy of criticism.

Booklist 26:22 O '29

"His chapters are admirably suited—with their diluted Santayana—to the pages of the 'quality' magazines and doubtless have pleased many readers. For myself, I should say that Mr. Edman suggests (faintly) the effort of Randolph Bourne 'to tone up our intellectual life.' The difference is principally one of passion. Bourne had a passion for his undertaking that intensified his prose and sharpened his mind. Mr. Edman appears to me to lack passion in his writing." G. B. Munson

+ — Bookm 69:667 Ag '29 450w

"Some [of the essays] are scintillating, some profound; each is well worth reading for its own sake, and all are rendered delightful by a prose style of unusual finish and distinction. . . There are times when I find Mr. Edman's judgment too tolerant and his general attitude too temperate and serene. A little vitriol now and then is relished by the wisest men. If Mr. Edman were occasionally to lose his temper we should not respect his intelligence less and we might find him more engagingly human." C: A. Bennett

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Je 30 '29 850w

Nation 129:177 Ag 14 '29 200w

"A book of immense suggestiveness and helpfulness." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p5 Je 16 '29 800w

"A delightful book, urbanely and thoughtfully done, and provocative in nearly every page. Mr. Edman has a civilized mind, and while he practises philosophy to the extent, at least, of teaching it at Columbia University he has not allowed its vocabulary to spoil his lucid style, which is one of the principal pleasures of reading him, although not the only one by a good deal." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 228:adv Ag '29 230w

Sat R of Lit 6:27 Ag 3 '29 170w

"The book contains a dozen essays, disconnected, yet nearly all pertinent and pungent. But the title of the book lacks wisdom. As a label for a collection of whimsical and personal light essays it might answer. But the temper of these essays is critical and meditative; the themes embrace even philosophy and religion. And the style, though tending to be journalistic (in the best sense) rather than academic, is not whimsical or personal."

+ — Springf'd Republican p8 Je 22 '29 980w

EDMONDS, WALTER DUMAUX. Rome haul. 347p $2.50 Little

Erie canal—Fiction 29-5703

A young Harvard graduate has written this story of canal boat life on the Erie canal in its heyday, the '50s of the last century. He has gathered together a Dickens cast of characters and rendered the life with picturesqueness and fidelity. The hero is a young farmer turned boatman, who inherits the Sarsey Sal, but the center of interest is the canal itself with its roistering crews and its teeming life.

EDMONDS, W. D.—Continued

---

Booklist 25:285 Ap '29

"Mr. Edmonds has accomplished far more in Rome Haul than the concoction of an agreeable story; he has recreated a miniature world as well, a world with all its unique characters, peculiar circumstances, and individual language. . . It is a triumph of atmospheric reality." Herbert Gorman

+ Bookm 69:197 Ap '29 330w

" 'Rome Haul' would be a notable book in any season. As the first novel of a man born in 1903 it is extraordinary. Mr. Edmonds undoubtedly set forth to make this a chronicle of the Erie Canal. In this he has succeeded most admirably. He has fabricated a book as richly American as many of those which, written years ago, are now being constantly reissued in cheap editions as 'classics.' " W: Vogt

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 F 17 '29 700w

" 'Rome Haul' sets up a broad canvas on which many figures appear for a moment, disappear for a long time, and reappear, some of them only for a moment. But no matter how brief the appearance, while the figure is there it is clear and distinct and real. It is a segment of life itself, showing on the side a young empire suffering from growing pains and an old industry beginning to feel the withering process of outworn usefulness." J. W. Maury

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 16 '29 1650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p76 My '29

+ Nation 128:322 Mr 13 '29 200w

"Mr. Edmonds holds two strong suits and plays them well in this first novel. In the first place, he writes dialogue with vim, wit and conviction. In the second place, he has an unusually fine power of description. . . Perhaps his plot would be improved if it were more closely knit, but even on this point it is hard to carp at a book which holds the attention and rewards the sense of humor as well as this one does." C. A. C.

+ — New Repub 58:235 Ap 10 '29 200w

"Walter D. Edmonds's 'Rome Haul' has given to the Erie Canal of the 1850s a fine and graphic resurrection. We think it is one of the best of all the better historical novels." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p10m F 16 '29 350w

"Assiduous research, restraint in treatment and a deal of fine, lucid writing distinguish this first novel by Mr. Edmonds. The author has been extraordinarily successful in recapturing the currents and cross-currents of life among the 'canawlers,' delving into the written and more often, one suspects, the spoken lore of the period."

+ N Y Times p8 F 24 '29 530w

"Mr. Edmonds has done a remarkably fine job with first-rate material which has apparently been neglected in the past. His story of the 'canawlers' is a rich revival of one of the richest periods in the history of the country, and one that is as completely unknown to most of us as if it had never existed." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 227:adv Ap '29 120w

Pratt p40 summer '29

"As a chronicle of life on the old Erie the book is a richly colored addition to the panorama of American fiction; as a story of Dan Harrow, the hero, and Molly, the heroine, it is of inferior merit. The narrative lacks organic structure." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:725 Mr 2 '29 1050w

"While Mr Edmonds tells a tale of well-knit and sequential incidents and some dramatic events, his real achievement is the recreation of the people, their means and methods of living and their environment in 1850. . . Though this story lacks literary distinction, it is to be hoped that Mr Edmonds will develop further the new vein he has discovered."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 10 '29 550w

"This is literature of escape, into a new world of relish, honesty, pith and color. It's fine to have young Americans recreating the people and events that made us." Leon Whipple

+ Survey 62:208 My 1 '29 460w

"A distinct contribution to novels of local color."

Wis Lib Bul 25:102 Mr '29

EDWARDS, ARTHUR CECIL. Persian caravan. 166p il $2.50 Harper [8s 6d Duckworth]

Persia—Social life and customs [29-8753]

Fourteen tales interpretive of Persian life and character illustrated from delicate drawings from the author's private collection of Persian miniatures.

---

"Mr. Edwards, who wrote this slim book at times when he was not engaged in buying or selling rugs, knows Persia so well that he falls naturally into the manner of Hajji Baba. His stories are as light and charming as the best tales of the Hajji himself, and, like that Anglo-Persian classic, they reveal character in flashes of perception which never impede the narrative." Vincent Sheehan

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 Mr 24 '29 200w

"These stories are related in a rambling sort of a way, and suddenly as the closing paragraphs are in sight a strange and at times weird climax is presented which seems thoroughly in keeping with the mystical character of the tale."

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 24 '29 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p96 Je '29

New Statesman 31:430 Jl 7 '28 350w

"Mr. Edwards must be ranked high both as a social historian of Persia and as an exciting entertainer in what has the charm of twice-told tales." Edwin Clark

+ N Y Times p2 Je 30 '29 830w

"Mr. Edwards has caught the age-old East, and the stirrings of the new. His sly humor is admirably fitted to cement the two. Memory returns to phrases and situations that could not be bettered." L. H. Titterton

+ N Y World p11m Ap 14 '29 330w

"A collection of tales, told with a disarming simplicity and presenting with irony, with humor, and with deft selection of incident a succession of amusing episodes notable alike for their ingenuity and their ingenuousness. The delightful illustrations are reproductions from Persian miniature paintings."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:703 F 23 '29 230w

"An educated Persian reading this book would, if he were honest with himself, recognize the truth of some of the sarcastic descriptions of government procedure and psychology. He would, on the other hand, be mystified and probably irritated by some of the anecdotes and statements, which show a misunderstanding of some of the most elemental traits of his mind and of his national customs."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p554 Jl 26 '28 350w

Wis Lib Bul 25:125 Ap '29

EDWARDS, GAWAIN. Earth-tube. 309p $2 (7s 2 6d) Appleton

29-19452

The theme of this novel is a war of the future between invading Asiatic hordes and America. The Asians have succeeded in building a tube of undulal, a new, indestructible metal, thru the center of the earth. King Henderson, a young scientist, discovers the scientific make-up of undulal and the means of combatting it, saves the Americans, and weds the beautiful captive, Diane.

---

"Since the wildest speculations of one age are the everyday occurrences of the next, it may be that at some future date a tube will be built through the centre of the earth, allowing communication between the Eastern and Western Hemispheres. If one is interested in such speculation 'The Earth Tube' will hold him enthralled, in spite of sentimental absurdities and obvious flaws in logic."

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 5 '30 320w

"Mr. Edwards's imagination proves inadequate to the demands upon it, and his heroine, the beautiful Diane, is, in particular, quite unconvincing."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p1098 D 26 '29 250w

EDWARDS, GEORGE THORNTON. Music and musicians of Maine. 542p il $7.50 Southworth press, Portland, Me.

780.974 Music—Maine. Musicians, American 28-30345

This account of the progress of music in Maine includes the story of musical societies and festivals of the state as well as individual biographies of musicians who contributed to the musical history of Maine and of the nation.

"The almost complete absence of references to the sources which furnished the historical data is unfortunate. Exact references to the most important newspapers and to other records would have helped to make the book a model for other workers in similar fields. They would have aided the next musical historian of Maine in adding to the author's very complete lists of names of officers, conductors, and even the personnels of choral and instrumental ensembles the more important programmes of their performances, which are almost wholly lacking. For the completion of the musical picture they are practically indispensable. On the other hand, the portraits and other illustrations, numbering more than 150, and the sixty-three finely printed pages of classified indexes greatly increase the value and usefulness of the book." O: Kinkeldey

+ Am Hist R 34:895 Jl '29 330w

Reviewed by P: Bowdoin

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 My 19 '29 30w

"The story of music in a state which gave to the world Annie Louise Cary, Lillian Nordica, Emma Eames and Geraldine Farrar, to say nothing of the author of 'America,' Luther Mason, Luther Emerson and 'Mellie' Dunham, is certainly worth telling. But it is a long story, and one who undertakes it must have not only musical knowledge, a sense of discrimination and unbounded enthusiasm, but a capacity for earnest, hard work in a difficult field of research. All these qualifications are possessed by George Thornton Edwards, author and composer." G. H. S.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 19 '29 450w

EDWARDS, RICHARD HENRY; ARTMAN, JOSEPH MANSON; and FISHER, GALEN MERRIAM. Undergraduates; a study of morale in twenty-three American colleges and universities. 366p $4 Inst. of social and religious research; Doubleday, Doran

371.8 Colleges and universities—United States. Students 28-23793

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

"A scrapbook collection of opinions, which, because of their number and the variety of their major premises, make conclusions very difficult. Probably the most valuable element is the anecdotal material that often occurs in the interviews. More emphasis upon such concrete evidence would furnish the reader with more positive information. As it is, he is left with an unorganizable mass of utterances which may be good as a study of verbal gestures, but is not dependable as a study of situations."

+ — Am J Soc 35:342 S '29 200w

"It is a pity that the book's scope has prevented it from discussing the educational side of this life, for at least one or two of the institutions included lay some stress on intelligence."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 F 24 '29 350w

"The authors have gathered a rich fund of material bearing upon the life of academic youth that may well provide a basis for further inquiry and experimentation." S. G. Cole

+ Crozer Q 6:256 Ap '29 350w

"Most of the matter cited is surprisingly trivial and hardly offers a reasonable background for the main portions of the book, chapters v and vii, dealing with moral conditions. And, finally, the solutions offered are too timid and superficial to meet any but the most angelic situations."

— J Religion 9:166 Ja '29 120w

"Messrs. Edwards, Artman and Fisher, have done a thorough, conscientious job." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p3 F 17 '29 750w

St Louis 27:12 Ja '29

"Despite all its revelations the book has serious defects. There will be many who will object to the kind of data that are employed. A second objection, and a more obvious one perhaps, is that the data upon which the book is built were acquired over four years ago."

— + Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 14 '29 640w

"A source book of very great interest—and entertainment. Especially good are the anonymous contributions which are marked by a startling candour that adds to their interest and, in some cases, makes the identification of the institution fairly easy!"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p486 Je 20 '29 1600w

Wis Lib Bul 24:341 D '28

World Tomorrow 12:187 Ap '29 40w

EDWARDS, WILLIAM HAYDEN. Heading for war; what you ought to know & fear (Eng title This pact business). 162p $1.50 Payson & Clarke

940.5 World politics. Europe—Politics. European war, 1914-1918—Influence and results 28-28528

An exposure of the dangers in certain phases of international relations which, unless public opinion be aroused, may push the nations into war. Dr Edwards draws from the American, British and European press statements bearing out his own conclusions.

"Worthless, save as a piece of 'scare' literature. It circulates a number of half-truths, together with some statements out of the whole cloth, in the hope of scaring the world into better behavior. The best guarantee of such behavior would seem to lie in a careful study of such books as Professor Fay's." J: Carter

— Bookm 68:580 Ja '29 200w

"There are pages and pages here of newspaper opinion which might better have been condensed by the copy readers of 'The Literary Digest,' and this makes for dullness; and there is a European myopia which makes for disproportion." L: S. Gannett

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 N 11 '28 1000w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 24:13 F '29

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 79:24 Mr '29 100w

"Dr. Edwards's book is an exceptionally able appeal for the substitution of arbitration for war."

+ Sat R 147:80 Ja 19 '29 380w

"The idea that the League of Nations represents a means of ventilating national grievances does not seem to have made much progress in the German mind. And why—oh why—does Dr. Edwards believe everything he reads in the newspapers?"

— Spec 141:793 N 24 '28 110w

EGGE, PETER. Hansine Solstad, the history of an honest woman; with an introd. by Henry Goddard Leach; tr. by Jess H. Jackson. 311p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

29-20887

Hansine Solstad, a Norwegian peasant girl, tended sheep for a family that treated her cruelly, and, when she left for another position as a servant, spread rumors to the effect that she was a thief. Determined to rise above the reputation that followed her, Hansine saved her earnings, married, and with the aid of her husband became a successful fish merchant. She gained the respect of all who knew her, but it was not till her sons and daughters were married and she herself an old woman, that a letter arrived which might have established her innocence many years before.

---

Booklist 26:118 D '29

"The bare outline of Hansine's life can only in small measure give the ultimate sense of richness which the book possesses. Concerned with an obscure destiny, it distills, nevertheless, such an essence of human frailty and nobleness that it rises to an incontestable dignity. It is written, fittingly enough, in a leashed prose, stripped of every impediment, clear and outlined often as the early winter mornings of the fjords under starlight." Leonard Ehrlich

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 O 27 '29 550w

"At the hands of the Associate Professor of English of the University of Texas, Egge does not suffer. While the whole tale is depressing, the character analysis is creative of a living and admirable personality. Further translations from Egge will bear watching by those who appreciate fine writing."

+ Boston Transcript p10 N 23 '29 280w

"The theme is peculiarly one of the Maupassant type, and its treatment is that of the school of Flaubert. Mr. Egge tells the story with fine restraint and sure understanding but without the startling flashes which illuminate the pages of the masters of this order of writing."

+ Nation 129:699 D 4 '29 180w

" 'Hansine Solstad' is a novel beautiful in what a painter would call composition, beautiful in its spirit and beautiful in its quiet coloring. Hansine will be found to live in memory long after she and the reader have parted company."

+ N Y Times p8 O 13 '29 600w

EHRENSTEIN, ALBERT. Robbers and soldiers; tr. from the German by Geoffrey Dunlop. 268p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Howe]

29-11285

"From a seven-century-old Chinese classic—'Shui Hu-Chuan' (The Island in the River)—Albert Ehrenstein has fashioned a curiously penetrating, tumultuous book. The work is utterly distinct from the lyrical, slightly tinseled, often innocuous novels of Eastern life with which we are familiar. It has its roots, rather, in the savage life of the poor, in the teeming world of robbers and saints, bawds and pedagogues, adulterers and bonzes—in short, in a real China. The tale bears certain general resemblances to the Western picaresque novel."—N Y Evening Post

---

" 'Shui Hu Chuan' is one of the amorphous old Chinese novels born of the storyteller's rambling market-place art, with endless incident, an enormous cast and little organic dramatic unity." L: Gannett

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Je 9 '29 600w

"From the day that Wu Sung, bare-handed, killed a man-eating tiger until we leave him in the shadow of Two Dragon Mountain quaffing great quantities of wine, his story is one of action and suspense." H. F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 15 '29 400w

"We are unable to judge how the book would seem in Chinese, but in the English translation it ranks nearer the thriller than the epic."

+ — Nation 129:231 Ag 28 '29 130w

"The novel—which is defined as a 'picaresque thriller'—reaches us at third-hand, having been translated from the Chinese by Albert Ehrenstein into German, and from the German by Mr. Dunlop into English, and having lost, no doubt, a good deal of its original interest on the way. This is a pity, for through the disguise of Mr. Dunlop's pidgin-colloquialisms it is possible to see the character of this primitive epic of robbers, tigers, Mandarins, heroes, pandars, lustful monks, and beautiful young women." V. Sackville-West

— + Nation and Ath 44:756 Mr 2 '29 130w

"The peculiar, monosyllabic quality of Chinese has been captured with felicity, evidently by author and translator alike." Leonard Ehrlich

+ N Y Evening Post p9m My 25 '29 500w

Outlook 152:147 My 22 '29 150w

"Regarded as a fantasy on a Chinese theme, 'Robbers and Soldiers' has decided charm and much to recommend it, and is, moreover, a good substitute for a translation of the 'Shui Hu Ch'uan' which, in its entirety could scarcely hold the attention of Western readers." Florence Ayscough

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:55 Ag 17 '29 430w

"To the man who knows only the Treaty Ports and International Settlements of China this translation of an old thirteenth-century Chinese novel will open out what is nothing less than a new world. . . And it is all pretty strong stuff. The characters do not mince their words, and their epithets are sometimes more reminiscent of Billingsgate than anywhere else. They are all, in spite of the strangeness of their setting, very much alive."

Spec 142:517 Mr 30 '29 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Mr 7 '29 200w

EICHLER, LILLIAN. Stillborn. 308p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

29-4538

Unable to hold the artist husband who loved, married and deserted her within a few months, Katherine determines to keep entirely to herself her son, of whom the father knows nothing. She dedicates little Talmy to the church. The boy accepts her plans contentedly, as a dutiful, devoted son, until love changes his ideas of life and religion.

---

"One should read Stillborn. Title and style notwithstanding, it is a valuable piece of work."

+ — Bookm 69:xxiv Jl '29 200w

"Dripping with sentimentality, the book is, nevertheless, well written. The atmosphere of Catholicism is sympathetically shown, and the essential theme of the book, the influence of a fanatical woman over an impressionable boy, is worth writing about."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 24 '29 210w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 27 '29 230w

N Y Times p9 F 24 '29 360w

"The author has a deplorable taste for melodrama and an unfortunate tendency to imitate the stylisms of Fannie Hurst. Both these elements in her story render obscure her real understanding and liberal-mindedness."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:936 Ap 20 '29 250w

"Here is the foundation for a moving, perhaps an impressive, story. The author writes well enough to be easily readable, but there is missing the imagination which would give vitality to this rather bare record of event and emotion."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p244 Mr 21 '29 250w

EIKER, MATHILDE. Stranger fidelities. 304p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

29-18937

Miss Eiker tells the story of Marie-Hélène, a young Frenchwoman, and John Meglassen, an American officer, who met and loved each other in France during the war and whom a series of cruel mischances kept from marrying. Their love survived the making of other ties, but tho their paths continued in America to cross and re-cross, their fidelity to these ties, save only for two brief interludes, proved more constraining than their enduring love.

---

"Perhaps the most interesting part of the book from an American standpoint deals with Marie-Hélène's reactions to her American environment, to the people in small towns on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts; women idle and searching a thrill and men busy and seeking comfort. The novel is a decided advance on Miss Elker's earlier novels, and shows a sympathetic understanding of one much-maligned type of European character."
+ Bookm 70:316 N '29 400w

"Like the dresses of yesteryear, each book [of Miss Elker's] is smoother and briefer than its predecessor. More economical of yardage, more sophisticated in effect. But each in turn seems to me a trifle more remote from the things that matter to writer or reader. . . It would seem to me that Miss Elker here has been more interested in her ideas than in her people, and as a result the people became rather frail props for perilously balanced spans of generality." Mary Ross
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 S 15 '29 1000w

Boston Transcript p3 S 14 '29 530w

Nation 129:700 D 4 '29 230w

"Marie-Hélène is neither very convincing nor very French. The series of coincidences which keep her apart from her lover are worthy, moreover, of the movie version of 'Evangeline.' They are quite unworthy of the author of 'Over the Boatside.' Miss Elker started off well, but her latest novel, like the one preceding it, is a facile and perfunctory piece of work." E. H. Walton
— New Repub 60:158 S 25 '29 170w

"Mathilde Elker's art has matured and mellowed since she wrote 'Over the Boatside'; its brilliancy has been touched with sympathy and warmth. She has never told a simpler nor more human story than that of 'Stranger Fidelities' . . The character of Meglassen is more tangibly realized than that of Marie-Hélène. He is an ordinary and estimable man, caught in a by no means unusual dilemma and compromising with his fate in an entirely understandable fashion. But Marie-Hélène is not so much a woman as a set of materialized and personified virtues."
+ — N Y Times p8 S 15 '29 780w

"In Stranger Fidelities she has not only dared or learned to strip her excellent story and firm characterizations down to essentials and to say what she has to say with firm—but not mean—economy, but she has also permitted a mellow humanity to warm her work. Details of human relations are skilfully managed in Stranger Fidelities, as are minor characterizations, important to the development of the major characters."
+ Outlook 153:110 S 18 '29 230w

EIPPER, PAUL. Animals looking at you; [tr. by Patrick Kirwan]. 163p il $3 Viking press [10s 6d Putnam]

591.5 Animals—Habits and behavior 29-20290

The author is art director of one of the leading publishing houses in Berlin. He is well acquainted with zoological gardens and animal trainers, and has had excellent opportunity to study the nature and habits of various animals. His book contains a series of short, sympathetic sketches that are the result of these observations. He makes leopards, lions, and strange birds become individuals to us, but his chief interest lies in the almost-human characteristics of orang-outangs and gorillas. Illustrated with photographs.

---

Booklist 26:106 D '29

"I know of no other animal book at all like Paul Eipper's 'Animals Looking at You.' In the intense, almost morbid sincerity of its sympathetic identification with the beasts behind the bars it is unique." L: Gannett
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 N 3 '29 450w

Boston Transcript p2 N 16 '29 200w

"These photographs are excellent, showing an extraordinary range of facial expression."
+ New Statesman 34:supx O 12 '29 180w

"Through whatever he writes and whatever the animal he writes about, Paul Eipper's love for and understanding of his animal friends shines brightly. The illustrations, from photographs, are noteworthy."
+ N Y Times p38 O 6 '29 200w

"His book is illustrated with photographs so lifelike as to be uncanny. . . It reflects not only a life-time spent in studying animals but the friendships the author has made with thousands of beasts and birds. It should be read by all animal lovers everywhere." S: Scoville, Jr.
+ Sat R of Lit 6:471 N 30 '29 800w

"The author does not sufficiently heed his own warning against sentimentality, and the whole book is 'subjective' to a degree which many English readers will find unwelcome. Especially do the descriptions of dreams and 'cloud animals' seem out of harmony with the subject, and the 'self' of the author is throughout exposed in a way which is not essential, though it may be interesting to many besides his friends."
— + Spec 143:503 O 12 '29 400w

"Those who have tried to photograph animals will best understand and admire the excellence of the illustrations. The text is well enough. There is a good deal of the gushing sentimentality to which affection for animals tempts many popular writers. But there is exact description and shrewd observation."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p809 O 17 '29 150w

EISELEN, FREDERICK CARL; LEWIS, EDWIN; and DOWNEY, DAVID GEORGE, eds. Abingdon Bible commentary. 1452p $5 Abingdon press [21s Epworth]

220.7 Bible.Whole—Commentaries 29-9121

"It was an event in the Biblical world when twenty years ago the One Volume Bible Commentary was published under the editorship of Rev. J. R. Dummelow. . . Ten years later, Peake's One Volume Commentary on the Bible appeared. . . Another decade passed, 1919-1929, and then came Bishop Gore's One Volume Commentary with its predominantly Anglican contributors and its Anglican atmosphere and attitude. . . Now on the heels of this comes the Abingdon Bible commentary, edited by Doctors Eiselen and Lewis. It is larger than any of its predecessors, having over fourteen hundred well-printed pages that are a delight to the eye. There are sixty-six contributors, the majority of them American."—Crozer Q

---

"The critical results of ripe scholarship find frank and full recognition in this commentary, and the great religious ideas of both testaments stand out the more convincingly in their historic setting when freed from the casuistry which is almost inevitable in any theory of an inerrant Bible." W. P. Lemon
+ Christian Century 46:1121 S 11 '29 1000w

"The work is of a very high average of scholarship, perhaps surpassing its predecessors with the exception of Peake. . . It is a very definite mark of progress in the world of Biblical thought, and will easily put within the reach of the intelligent layman the results to date of scholarship. It should serve its avowed purpose for some ten years, when it is to be hoped a revised edition may be required to meet the general demand." I. G. Matthews
+ Crozer Q 6:517 O '29 1400w

"The great majority of these articles are well done, and a large amount of reliable and valuable information is conveyed in understandable form in small space. Only those who have worked through the problems of biblical criticism can fully appreciate the fine scholarship which underlies not only most of the articles but the greater part of the commentary itself." E. W. Parsons

EISELEN, F: C., and others, eds.—Continued
+ J Religion 9:617 O '29 1250w

ELAM, SAMUEL MILTON. George Borrow. 139p $3 (10s 6d) Knopf
B or 92 Borrow, George Henry 29-5740

A rather slight biography of the author of "Lavengro" which, drawn as far as possible from the record of himself in his own books, gives the feeling of his personality.

"Mr. Elam's narrative of Don Jorge's life is rapid and manly, written with gusto, and giving a coherent portrait, but he seems to miss—as most of Borrow's critics have missed—the fact that Lavengro-Romany Rye is not autobiography at all, except in the sense that the Opium Eater or Moby Dick is autobiography." R. M. Gay
Bookm 69:438 Je '29 460w

"Scarcely more than a succinct paraphrase of the story of the Romany Rye's career, drawn from his own books. The tale is pleasantly told, but is scarcely a substitute for George's books; and the portrait drawn is on the whole so unfavorable that not many people as yet unacquainted with the books will be induced by Mr. Elam to read them."
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 21 '29 250w

"'Finding Borrow,' says this author, 'was a hard job; George wrote so much.' Borrovians will wish that Mr. Elam had let George do the job for them—as indeed he did." Norah Meade
— Nation 129:329 S 25 '29 260w

"It is a little too acidulous and at times somewhat cheap. On the other hand we have here a concise and well thought-out picture—even if not a gracious one—of the man who called himself a gipsy and really was a vagabond; who called himself a philologist and really was a capable linquist; who called himself a Christian and really was a consistent deist. More kindness and less flippant ridicule would have served the purpose better. But it is a consistent book and better than most of its kind written today." C. A. C.
+ — New Repub 59:296 Jl 31 '29 200w

"The main facts about Borrow's life have long been well known, and unless someone can come forward with something more than conjecture about the 'seven veiled years,' Isopel Berners or any of the minor mysteries, there is not much point in repeating the labours of Knapp, Watts-Dunton and Clement Shorter. As for the modern fictional method of biography as here practised by Mr. Elam, Borrow himself has long ago beaten his competitors at their own game in Lavengro and The Romany Rye. Mr. Elam's book amounts to little more than a watery, rather vulgar precis of these books."
— New Statesman 33:692 S 14 '29 190w

"It is Mr. Elam's choice to do him in the modern biographical manner. He exercises the privilege of a novelist to select and omit any details not pertinent to his design. Unhappily for his effort, he has not achieved the sharp effects, the striking characterizations, which have been the reward of this school. Apparently he has no particular view of Borrow. And he indulges in what Quiller-Couch so aptly cited as jargon to the extent of being almost constantly irritating." Edwin Clark
N Y Times p5 Jl 7 '29 980w

"A brief and bad biography. Mr. Elam's reasons for selecting the redoubtable Lavengro as the subject for one of these determinedly modernistic biographies is somewhat of a mystery, unless he set out to 'debunk' George; but whatever his interest in the character of the man, he missed his mark in portraiture about as far as anyone could. The Borrovians will find a good many statements in Mr. Elam's book to make them froth at the mouth." Herschel Brickell
— No Am 227:adv Ap '29 150w

"We do not care much for Elam's style, but his matter is interesting, well selected and pungently expressed. And he has pursued, captured and put into words a feeling about Borrow's enigmatic personality which has eluded previous biographer-critics."
+ — Outlook 151:349 F 27 '29 130w

"The laborious Dr. Knapp, the chief authority on Borrow, is heavy and long. Mr. Elam is short and light, writing, indeed, in a flippant American style. His summary is picturesque and confident, but we are not bound to accept all his conclusions, which, after all, we do not find very novel."
Sat R 148:356 S 28 '29 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p669 Ag 29 '29 250w

ELDERSHAW, M. BARNARD, pseud. (FLORA S. ELDERSHAW and MARJORIE BARNARD). A house is built. 395p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Harrap]
29-21424

An Australian prize novel written in collaboration by two women graduates of Sydney university. The history of an Australian family in the 19th century is the subject matter of the novel. James Hyde, quarter-master, opens a store in Sydney. His two daughters, Maud and Fanny, and his son William grow up there. Fanny has a thwarted romance; Maud and William marry, and the lives of their children round out the cycle of the story.

"In spite of the obvious effort of the authors to link their story with the growth and trade expansion of Australia, the reader feels little of that unity of a family with its time and place which lends greatness to the work of a Galsworthy or a Mann. The glimpses one gets of the convicts in serried ranks, the distant bush, the gold fields seem out of joint; for except for them the Hydes might just as well have been living in Boston or Liverpool or Hamburg. Perhaps for this reason the book gains in realism."
+ — Nation 129:700 D 4 '29 300w

"It is a good piece of work, substantial and competent."
+ Nation and Ath 45:742 S 7 '29 200w

"This Australian novel is one of high excellence. Intertwined with the story of the business is an excellent account of social life in Australia for the years covered, with the result that we have a picture of unusual merit of the bourgeois English colonial spirit in action." C. H. G.
+ New Repub 61:205 Ja 8 '30 250w

"There is no sign that the work is due to a collaboration: a single mind seems to have brooded over New South Wales as it grew from the 'thirties to the 'seventies of the last century. . . . It is a very human history, full of psychological insight and informed by a sound knowledge of the period, or rather periods, of which it treats. And its unhappy ending, with the great business built up, the old man and his son falling at last into the hands of the one descendant temperamentally unfitted, though not spiritually unworthy, to carry on, has a quality of mature irony unusual in a first novel."
+ New Statesman 33:506 Jl 27 '29 160w

"It is this matter of style which is the book's greatest weakness. The story goes along at a pedestrian pace and practically never rises above a lady-like murmur. The grip of the book is in the tale itself, and one can almost say that the power of the story persists in spite of the authors, were not the authors themselves responsible for the tale. 'A House Is Built' was awarded a $5,000 prize offered by the Sydney Bulletin for the best novel by an Australian author. The book is much above the average of the usual prize-winner, and, in spite of its rather monotonous level of narration and structure, it holds the interest to the end by the force of its living people and its vital background." Lillian Rogers
+ — N Y Evening Post p12m D 21 '29 550w

"There is much quiet humor in the book, and a great deal of insight that needs no heavy sexy passages to make itself understood. . . Life is never, for the Hyde family, a clinic. It is not melodramatic. But things happen, as they do in all families, and the sequence of the happenings make up a tale that one cannot lay down until the end is reached."

+ N Y Times p37 N 17 '29 550w

"Every picture is painted in a firm white light. One leaves the novel almost confused by the wealth of characters. But they take a firm hold upon the imagination. This is indeed a novel worthy to rank with Somerset Maugham's Of Human Bondage. And there is irony in the thought that perhaps the 'great American novel' was written in Australia. Certainly no American novel conveys so vivid a sense of the pioneering business man as this."
+ Outlook 153:312 O 23 '29 300w

"It is a fine theme, this pitting of the human will against a continent's inertia; a great story could be made of it. Maybe twenty years hence, Miss Barnard or Miss Eldershaw will make one. At present it is too heavy a task for both of them . . . The real defect of the book is its lifelessness. It is a beautifully manœuvred marionette-show, the figures gesticulating in lifelike fashion amid elaborately built-up scenery; they have their full quota of characteristics, but scarcely a character between them, and are consequently overburdened with their trappings."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p593 Jl 25 '29 370w

ELDRIDGE, SEBA. New citizenship; a study of American politics. 357p $2.50 Crowell

353 Citizenship. United States—Politics and government 29-5255

Deploring the listless attitude of the average citizen toward affairs of government, Professor Eldridge of the University of Kansas suggests a new organization of the citizenry wherein the individual may be roused to intelligent and active participation in the rôle of government.

---

"Democracy is a perennial theme upon which every social scientist will sometime write. Professor Eldridge continues to do so in this book —a sequel to his Political Action. The book is readable, flaming with a crusader's zeal, but moderated by the philosopher's wisdom and the scientist's caution." N. L. Sims
+ Am J Soc 35:505 N '29 400w

"For many readers The New Citizenship will raise more questions than it will answer. That is its merit." H. L. Childs
+ Am Pol Sci R 23:769 Ag '29 650w
Booklist 26:11 O '29

"As a criticism of existing conditions the book is worth reading, but the adoption of its suggestions would be equivalent to inaugurating a wholesale constitutional revolution."
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 9 '29 220w

"The book is intended primarily for publicists, educators, community organizers and students, rather than for the rank and file. Certainly the criticisms which the author makes have point and pertinence. Professor Eldridge makes some valuable suggestions, and some definite proposals for the working out of his ideas." T. C. R.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '29 350w
Outlook 151:506 Mr 27 '29 350w

"Seba Eldridge refuses to take the pessimistic outlook of what might be called the Lippmann school of political thought in regard to the capabilities of the voter. Neither does he accept the point of view of those whose chief concern is non voting and whose major objective in political activity seems to be 'getting out the vote.' The crux of the problem of democracy as the author sees it is the quality, not the quantity, of the vote cast. In this he agrees with Mr. Lippman. The author should nevertheless be commended for calling to the attention of his colleagues in political science once again an aspect of their subject which in the study of the law and structure of government is frequently overlooked—the problem of improving the quality of the voter." S. C. Wallace
+ Pol Sci Q 44:478 S '29 500w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:12 Ag '29 80w
St Louis 27:261 S '29

Reviewed by J. K. Hart
Survey 62:203 My 1 '29 250w
Wis Lib Bul 25:157 My '29
World Tomorrow 12:378 S '29 100w

ELDRIDGE, SEBA, and CLARK, CARROLL DE WITT. Major problems of democracy; a study of social conditions in the United States. 585p $1.80 Century

309.173 United States—Social conditions. Social problems 28-28825

A textbook in social science which divides its study of the major problems of democracy under the headings Foundations of social life, Problems of work and welfare, The business of living together, Problem individuals, and Processes of social control. The authors are, respectively, associate professor of sociology, University of Kansas, and fellow in the department of sociology, University of Chicago.

---

Boston Transcript p4 F 23 '29 200w

"The authors, instead of attempting to treat all the problems of present-day society, have wisely limited their discussion to a relatively small number of topics. In consequence, they have been able to include sufficient illustrative material to make the problems which they discuss interesting and meaningful." H. C. Hill
+ School R 37:548 S '29 550w

"The case illustrations seem well chosen and the references are up-to-date and well arranged for use. We predict that this book will have a wide field of usefulness in secondary schools." F. S. Chapin
+ Survey 62:146 Ap 15 '29 230w
Wis Lib Bul 25:124 Ap '29

ELGIN, MARY (NISBET) countess of. Letters; arr. by Nisbet-Hamilton-Grant. 358p il $5 Appleton

B or 92

These letters from Mary Nisbit, countess of Elgin, to her mother in England, written from 1799 to 1805, form a vivacious account of the sultan's court to which her husband was ambassador, of travels in the Near East, of the famous Elgin Marbles, and of political difficulties in Paris.

---

"The letters of Mary Countess of Elgin are simple, unaffected and spontaneous. They touch upon important political situations and upon the most trivial matters with equal lightness and ease. They are revealing, they are charming in their sly hits at the foibles and evil traits of the foreign officials posing and acting at the court of the Pasha."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 9 '28 400w

"A more accurate and entertaining idea of historical occurrences is given than can be found in many histories. It is like having a strong and brilliant light thrown on events which through the medium of ordinary reporting have often seemed dull and sordid."
+ Boston Transcript p5 N 24 '28 380w

"A reader who has the patience to glean the pages of this book may gather a small harvest of interesting facts concerning Turkish customs, travel in the Levant, and the life of a grand lady of high diplomatic rank gifted with an ardent and enthusiastic nature, tender emotions, and an untrained but observant eye. Not the least of his entertainment will come from the revelation of the extent to which a diplomat's wife of the first years of the nineteenth century was permitted to ignore the rules of punctuation and spelling."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:607 Ja 19 '29 160w

ELGOOD, PERCIVAL GEORGE. Transit of Egypt. 335p $7.50 Longmans [18s E. Arnold]

962 Egypt—History. Egypt—Politics and government [29-4301]

"A reliable survey of Egyptian history from the time of early Persian subjection under Cambyses to the present time. The past is covered by a brief recapitulation, the larger part of the book being devoted to the story of British intervention and recent troublous days of Egyptian independence. The author has long resided in Egypt, in the service of the British ministries of war, interior, and finance, and is intimately acquainted with the personages and events of which he writes."—Booklist

---

"His volume is as good as any brief introductory account now available. The facts are substantially correct and are presented throughout with impartiality and detachment. There are obvious difficulties, however, in the composition of such a book, and Colonel Elgood has not entirely escaped them. A survey covering more than two thousand years in somewhat over three hundred pages is an ambitious undertaking. The author has confined himself to a rapid review of the period prior to the French expedition, but throughout the book there is evidence of pressure of space. . . The book is astonishingly free from misstatements, considering how large a field it attempts to cover, and can be used with confidence by the student." W: L. Langer

+ Am Hist R 35:152 O '29 410w

Booklist 25:279 Ap '29

"Colonel Elgood writes well, and his book is fascinating as well as informative; but his outstanding merit is an impartiality about which there is nothing negative. Whether he is writing of Gladstone or Gordon, of Cromer or Allenby, or Zaghlul Pasha, of British interests or Egyptian aspirations, he writes like a man to whom nothing matters except the truth, and the truth, as he sees it, matters a great deal. The patience, sympathy and justice for which he pleads, in the handling of Anglo-Egyptian relations, are conspicuously exemplified in his own work."

+ Nation and Ath 44:660 F 9 '29 200w

St Louis 27:138 Ap '29

"His book represents very fairly, on the whole, the average, commonsense point of view of Englishmen who have lived in Egypt and know its problems at first hand."

+ Sat R 147:218 F 16 '29 430w

"He [does not] attempt to dogmatize. Still less does he rest content with loose generalizations. He gives chapter and verse for all important statements of fact; and, while he explains the Egyptians' point of view, he is not blind to their shortcomings and to the immense influence both for evil and for good which Zaghlul exercised right up to his death last year."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p817 N 8 '28 920w

ELIAS, MRS EDITH L. Young folk's book of polar exploration. (Romance of knowledge ser.) 278p il $2 Little [7s 6d Harrap]

919.8 Arctic regions. Antarctic regions 29-374

Mrs Elias weaves into one continuous story the undaunted efforts of heroic men to discover the secrets of the Arctic regions and to reach the north and the south poles. The fascinating record has copious illustrations, a few in color.

---

Booklist 25:399 Jl '29

"Concisely and dramatically, Mrs. Elias tells the heroic story of polar explorations. . . A book for 'young folks'? Yes. And for all readers who desire a brief account of what generally is of forbidding length."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 8 '29 330w

Cleveland Open Shelf p134 N '29

ELIOT, THOMAS STEARNS. For Lancelot Andrewes; essays on style and order. 159p $2 Doubleday, Doran [6s Faber]

804 Literature 29-9136

Eight essays on literary themes, ranging from the sermons of Lancelot Andrewes, bishop of Winchester, to the philosophy of Irving Babbitt. Contents: Lancelot Andrewes; John Bramhall; Niccolo Machiavelli; Francis Herbert Bradley; Baudelaire in our time; Thomas Middleton; A note on Richard Crashaw; The humanism of Irving Babbitt.

---

Booklist 25:385 Jl '29

"The essays are all interesting and individual, many of them contain original ideas, and some of them are excellent both for their detached critical penetration and their excellent exposition of their writers' philosophical ideas."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 8 '29 300w

"All of Mr. Eliot's very fine and strong intelligence is here; he has in no sense lost footing, though his steps may take him where most of us never dream of walking these days. And I have every reason to believe that, far from being at the end of his critical career he is only at the beginning of it." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation 128:590 My 15 '29 580w

"The book is important both as an addition to the treasury of good English prose, and as a symptom of a crisis in the intellectual world." Sherard Vines

+ Nation and Ath 44:588 Ja 26 '29 650w

"These essays are all distinguished by Eliot's unique combination of subtle and original thinking with simple and precise statement, and will be read by everybody interested in literature. T. S. Eliot has now become perhaps the most important literary critic in the English-speaking world." Edmund Wilson

+ New Repub 58:283 Ap 24 '29 1450w

"A pleasant little volume of essays written by a man who is evidently fond of reading, generally reads with intelligence, and can always express his opinions with force and lucidity."

+ — New Statesman 32:387 D 29 '28 770w

Reviewed by Clarence Britten

N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 6 '29 1200w

Reviewed by J: Chamberlain

N Y Times p12 N 24 '29 1300w

"The battle which Mr. Eliot is fighting in the modern world is a battle for the reinstatement of Reason upon her throne. A very important and a very noble battle it is." Christopher Hollis

+ Sat R 146:770 D 8 '28 960w

"It is his direction, as well as his force and scholarship, that leads me to think Mr. Eliot among the most indicative of modern critics, indicative of the way things will possibly be tending a generation ahead, when the elders among us have gone away with our recollections and our surmises." Arthur Colton

Sat R of Lit 5:947 Ap 27 '29 1150w

"Austerity of taste and economy of method place Mr. Eliot in the small company of living writers whose work is a serious contribution to English prose. These short essays are dense with a thought which is often concerned with the chief mysteries of life; yet this density of thought is not at first perceived by us, because a deliberate purgation of the mind has given to it clarity and quietness of expression." E. U.

+ Spec 142:206 F 9 '29 330w

Times [London] Lit Sup p953 D 6 '28 1450w

ELIZABETH, pseud. See Russell, M. A.

ELLIOTT, GEORGE ROY. Cycle of modern poetry; a series of essays toward clearing our present poetic dilemma. 194p $2.50 Princeton univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

809.1 Poetry—History and criticism 29-14473

"It is an investigation of the dilemma into which the author finds that poetry has fallen,

the influence which brought it there, and the new directions toward which poetry is groping. It is especially significant as reflecting the turn toward classicism which is beginning to be apparent in much writing."—Outlook

---

"G. R. Elliott has written one of the ablest books of the year 1929. He has also written one of the most significant literary studies that has appeared in the Twentieth Century. . . The whole book is on high ground, ground so high that few will attempt to climb with the author." Norman Foerster

+ Bookm 70:214 O '29 1350w

"The extraordinary interest of Mr. Elliott's essays springs from the weight and the coherence of his general ideas; but it is impossible not to be struck at the outset by the sensitive astuteness of his criticism in its 'appreciative' details. His subjects—Keats, Shelley, Byron, Browning, Hardy even Robert Frost—are not new; and one is likely to feel too well prepared for what may be said about them; but Mr. Elliott manages, almost beyond belief, to endow them with fresh interest and meaning." Newton Arvin

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 My 12 '29 900w

Boston Transcript p3 Je 22 '29 320w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver

N Y Evening Post p11m My 11 '29 370w

"This is as interesting a piece of literary criticism as we have read in a long time."

+ Outlook 152:148 My 22 '29 130w

St Louis 27:286 O '29

"It is a rare delight to encounter the challenge of Professor Elliott's poised, documented, and judicial analysis of poetic thought. He may be pardoned for slighting what is peripheral. And surely one can pardon much in the presence of his fine sense of form, his crisp style, his delicate, sensitive taste, his fine contemplative spirit, and his resolute, persuasive marshalling of evidence to support a most suggestive thesis." H. H. Clark

+ Sat R of Lit 6:52 Ag 17 '29 630w

Springf'd Republican p10 Je 15 '29 1120w

"His theory is more than a theory: it is a living conviction fortified by reflective experience as well as by reflective reading; so that in most of his pages one feels that one is meeting the poets on their own ground, that their critic's thought completes their own and has not been artificially applied to it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p491 Je 20 '29 1700w

ELLIOTT, WILLIAM YANDELL. Pragmatic revolt in politics; syndicalism, fascism, and the constitutional state. 540p $3.75 Macmillan

320.1 State, The. Syndicalism. Socialism. Pragmatism 28-17156

For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

---

"In a volume of such pretensions, there is much to dissent from. On the whole, it is to be welcomed with enthusiasm, for it is an ambitious effort to broaden the perspective of American students of government. He has succeeded so well that no one can successfully challenge him without having undergone the self-discipline in philosophy and social theory to which the author subjected himself." H. D. Lasswell

+ Am J Soc 35:134 Jl '29 520w

"The book is to be welcomed no less for its fine promise than for its performance. It is the work of a true thinker, and that is rare enough. It is sincere and trenchant and thorough. As a critique of modern political trends, it is a book which no student of the subject can afford to neglect." R. M. MacIver

+ Am Pol Sci R 23:192 F '29 1100w

"It is distinctly stimulating to see how he connects the temper of the age, impatient with representative and constitutional government, obsessed with a lust for the immediate, with a revolt that has penetrated into the realm of the metaphysical. . . The literary structure of this really valuable monograph suffers from a certain discursiveness and from the fact that articles and at least one essay have been incorporated as chapters. This probably accounts for the repetitions and lack of unity." W. P. Lemon

+ — Christian Century 46:20 Ja 3 '29 620w

"The argument runs along with linguistic agility, but it is not true. For example, no one has emphasized the pivotal character of reflection more emphatically than has Mr. Dewey. Mr. Elliott fails utterly to understand Mr. Dewey's philosophy. . . Had Mr. Elliott made his defense of constitutional government merely a political discussion he would have avoided exposing himself to accusations of ignorance or prejudice. The book is written in a very readable style. The footnotes to literature are comprehensive." P. W. Ward

J Philos 26:134 F 28 '29 1100w

"Indubitably the book of the year in political theory." G: E. G. Catlin

+ Pol Sci Q 44:259 Je '29 2300w

ELLIS, MRS ANNE. Life of an ordinary woman; with an introd. by Lucy Fitch Perkins. 300p il $3.50 Houghton

B or 92 29-18110

The autobiography of a woman who grew up in the environment of western mining camps. She tells the story of her childhood, with its poverty and hardships but wealth of experience and associations. Anne Ellis grew to womanhood, and, with her marriage to a miner and the birth of her children, lived life fully as she found it, at the same time building up, in so far as possible, cultural surroundings for herself and her family. Her chronicle is that of an extraordinary, rather than an ordinary woman.

---

Booklist 26:115 D '29

"The title of the book is in the nature of a misnomer. The woman is far from ordinary and the story she tells is an extraordinary one. In its honesty and its simplicity the book achieves epic proportions; and, in spite of its drabness, it holds the reader breathless to its conclusion." E. R. Richardson

+ Bookm 70:567 Ja '30 420w

"Mrs. Ellis's story of her girlhood and young womanhood in the mining camps of Colorado is interesting from the first word to the last. It throws a vivid light on the boom towns of the West of thirty, forty and fifty years ago. This is no labored narrative, but a succession of lively anecdotes about vividly realized people. . . Scattered throughout the book in one salty anecdote after another is the most veracious and beautiful portrait of the American pioneer woman I have read." A. B. Parsons

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 S 29 '29 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p147 D '29

"Here is a volume of unusual and vivid reminiscence. . . In spite of the judicious editorial labors of Kathleen Carman Dodge, her manuscript is still somewhat formless, still baldly direct and unquestionably sincere. We have had many more sophisticated accounts of the world Mrs. Ellis describes, but none so close to the heart of it, so completely and artlessly convincing." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Evening Post p13m D 14 '29 700w

"Anne Ellis has written this story of her life modestly and has tried to make it a true picture of the mining camp life of which she was a part, and thereby she has added something to the story of the West as well as told an appealing and thrilling tale of how one woman faced the adventure of living." F. F. Kelly

+ N Y Times p10 S 29 '29 1000w

"We may regret the strained, inchoate, ungrammatical form (which seems like a forced mannerism), but we find here qualities of dramatic vigor, and a chronicle by a woman of extraordinary resources and courage. It resembles a motion picture in which parts of the film have been broken, some portions patched and creased, and in which yet other scenes are

ELLIS, ANNE—Continued
vivid and haunting, like the wild storm, the sudden death of little Joy, or the death of the author's mother. . . There is valuable material for industrial history in the chapters about the strike of the Miners' Union and the I. W. W.'s. Real life is in this chronicle, touched with romance but no sentimentality." A. R. Marble
+ Sat R of Lit 6:367 N 9 '29 400w
Wis Lib Bul 25:322 O '29

ELLIS, HAVELOCK. Art of life; sel. and arr. by Mrs S. Herbert. 149p $2 Houghton [3s 6d Constable]
828 29-10506
Brief selections from the works of Havelock Ellis, grouped under the topics love, art, morality, religion, and philosophy. A short bibliography is added.

Booklist 25:385 Jl '29
"A satisfactory little volume." B. R. Redman
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 5 '29 750w
"They present the meditation of a great mind and heart's acceptance of the challenge of life. It is a very definite, but none the less a well balanced and well rounded view that comes to those courageous enough to delve beneath the surface of every-day experience and catch something of its meaning." L. L. R.
+ Churchman 139:28 My 4 '29 80w
Cleveland Open Shelf p135 N '29
"These pages are a masterpiece of selection and compression. They give us the essentials of what Havelock Ellis has to say on those major problems with which his mind has grappled for half a century: Love, Art, Morality, Religion and Philosophy. Owing to the compactness of his style each paragraph is in itself complete, but they are so well arranged that each section of the book is a logical summary of the author's challenge to life." Joe Gould
+ N Y Evening Post p11m Ap 27 '29 380w
Outlook 152:350 Je 26 '29 100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p414 My 23 '29 1400w

ELLIS, JOHN BRECKENRIDGE. Mysterious Dr Oliver. 282p $2 Macaulay 29-13070
"For thirteen years the victim of amnesia, the hero, Dr Oliver, recovers his memory in a California earthquake. He discovers himself to be the moving figure in a strange cult, but after many puzzling events finally regains his equilibrium."—Bookm

Bookm 69:xxvi Ag '29 40w
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 10 '29 250w
"The execution of this tale is by no means as good as the original conception, as is so often the case with mystery stories, but it is a readable yarn and holds the interest nearly to the end."
+ — Sat R of Lit 6:192 S 28 '29 130w

ELLIS, M. H. Express to Hindustan; an account of a motor-car journey from London to Delhi. 303p il $3.50 Dodd [12s 6d Lane]
915 Voyages and travels. Automobile touring
The story of an attempt by three Australians, under the author's leadership, to go from London to Australia by automobile, covering only 800 miles by sea travel. The expedition was undertaken partly as a test for a specific motor-car, partly as an experiment in this kind of overland travel. The journey began in February, 1927, took them thru a terrific European winter, on to Constantinople, thence to Syria, and finally to India in the following May. With illustrations from photographs.

"There are entertaining photographs, many amusing incidents and a great deal of atmosphere. Indeed, it is especially fitted for the people who like to buy a book which 'has lots of conversation.'"
+ Boston Transcript p7 N 27 '29 450w
"His object apparently was to test for the makers a car designed for the exigencies of Australian motoring. Mr. Ellis, who is lively without being over-facetious (except about once in every thousand miles) has made capital use of [his material]. He had a sharp eye for the peoples he passed among and the ways in which they hampered or helped his progress, and his comment on various countries, which he modestly apologises for as only superficial and casual, is nevertheless agreeable and acute."
+ New Statesman 33:supxii My 4 '29 280w
Sat R 147:546 Ap 20 '29 120w
"The book is too long and contains too many of the author's small misadventures and difficulties, yet much of it is well written and entertaining."
— + Spec 143:106 Jl 20 '29 80w
Times [London] Lit Sup p407 My 16 '29 280w

ELLIS, ROBERT SIDNEY. Psychology of individual differences. 533p $3.50 (15s) Appleton
150 Psychology 28-18406
For descriptive note see Annual for 1928.

Reviewed by R: W. Husband
Am J Psychol 41:667 O '29 550w
Booklist 25:148 Ja '29
Bookm 68:x F '29 100w
"This is an indispensable handbook for a much discussed and important topic." Joseph Jastrow
+ Survey 61:687 F 15 '29 220w

ELLMS, JOSEPH WILTON. Water purification. 2d ed 594p il $7 McGraw 628.16 Water—Purification 28-16371
"Revised and considerably enlarged edition of work first published in 1917. Deals in detail with up-to-date methods of rendering impure water potable and hygienically safe and suitable for industrial uses, but does not treat of the removal of putrescible organic matter and disease-producing organisms from the fouled water supply or sewage of a community. There is a new chapter on hydrogen-ion concentration. Numerous illustrations. References at chapter endings."—N Y New Tech Bks

"It has been and should continue to be one of the modern authoritative and fairly comprehensive texts on water supply treatment." Abel Wolman
+ Am J Pub Health 18:1201 S '28 580w
Booklist 25:86 N '28
"The book now stands as the only up-to-date exposition of the science and art of water purification. It has the good and the bad features of revised editions generally. These faults or problems have met with more than average success in this book which bids fair to continue for years as the standard work on water purification."
+ Eng N 101:106 Jl 19 '28 350w
N Y New Tech Bks 13:51 O '28

ELLSBERG, EDWARD. On the bottom. 324p il $3 Dodd [10s Constable]
627 Submarine boats. S-51 (submarine). Salvage. Diving, Submarine 29-11296
There is a quality of breathless interest about this story of the salvage of the S-51 which was rammed and sunk in a hundred and thirty-two feet of water off Block Island. Commander Ellsberg was the officer in charge of salvage operations. His quiet, modest narrative which gives full credit to the divers for their courage and heroism, brings vividly to the reader the difficulties of the task, and makes intelligible even to the uninformed, the technical problems that were met and overcome in raising the sunken submarine. Illustrated from many photographs of the actual operations.

Booklist 25:381 Jl '29

"A record of extraordinary fascination. For sheer vividness this battle with the treacherous waters has no equal in recent fiction or non-fiction." W: McFee

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 My 5 '29 1100w

"'On the Bottom' is an excellent piece of writing. It has the attributes of terse simplicity and a realism sympathetically related to the daily round. The technicalities should trouble no one. Indeed much of the work was the blazing of a new path in the ancient work of salvage." D. C. Lunt

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Jl 21 '29 980w

Boston Transcript p5 Je 22 '29 330w

Cleveland Open Shelf p152 D '29

"The narrative holds the attention all the way along, and, with every temptation and opportunity to exaggerate, the tale obviously sticks to the truth and leaves with the reader an impression of straightforward and unassuming veracity." Lincoln Colcord

+ Nation 128:767 Je 26 '29 730w

"It is the kind of book one cannot put down until one has come to the end."

+ New Statesman 33:632 Ag 31 '29 380w

"An unadorned, unpretentious record of actuality, told in a steady, matter of fact fashion without any conscious attempt at atmosphere, with no straining whatever for thrills." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p11m My 4 '29 350w

"All of the book is well worth reading, as a heroic chapter in sea history and as a plain, unvarnished story of things that really happened, more dramatically gripping than fiction or than 'human document.'" Lindesay Parrott

+ N Y Evening Post p11m My 4 '29 900w

Reviewed by F: F. Van de Water

N Y Evening Post p8m My 18 '29 250w

"It must be said for the detail, which sometimes seems a little excessive, that it makes the story more realistic and therefore more impressive and thrilling."

+ N Y Times p3 My 12 '29 500w

Outlook 152:69 My 8 '29 230w

Pratt p19 autumn '29

St Louis 27:265 S '29

"The story is admirably told, and few readers can fail to be thrilled by it."

+ Sat R 148:250 Ag 31 '29 120w

"This book is distinguished by its simplicity, its restraint, and its willingness to let heroic achievement speak for themselves without thundering in the index and without 'back-slapping.'" J: Carter

+ Sat R of Lit 5:1016 My 18 '29 850w

Spec 143:99 Jl 20 '29 230w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 5 '29 220w

"This seems almost a new kind of literature, for it is told with meticulous scientific pains and detail, yet no page but is gripping and the whole has the sweep of creative art." Leon Whipple

+ Survey 62:311 Je 1 '29 300w

"It may be recommended not only to engineers, but also to those who seek absorption in detective stories and 'thrillers' and still more confidently to all who like to read of man 'facing fearful odds' and winning by the exercise of the specific human qualities."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p633 Ag 15 '29 1000w

ELLSWORTH, LINCOLN. ed. Air pioneering in the Arctic; the two polar flights of Roald Amundsen and Lincoln Ellsworth, pt. 1, The 1925 flight from Spitzbergen to 88° north; pt. 2, The first crossing of the polar sea, 1926. 126p il $35 Nat. Americana soc., 44 E 23d st., N.Y.

919.8 Arctic regions. Aeronautics—Voyages. North pole 29-10867

"The text is a compilation. It is drawn chiefly from the books written by Amundsen and Ellsworth about their unsuccessful and so nearly tragic adventure with planes in 1925 and their crossing in the Norge in the following year. Additional excerpts have been culled from editorials, from public speeches and from articles by Ellsworth in the press. The reading matter is all strictly to the point, and there is comparatively little of it. The principal value and the novelty of the book are in its pictures. After the story of each flight has been told in text it is told again in a set of full-page pictures, each on a separate sheet. And so beautifully are these portraits and Arctic scenes reproduced and mounted that one is tempted to take them out of their binding and frame them."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

---

"The volume is in its format, typography and wealth of engraved illustrations, a thing of beauty designed to be a joy in any library that possesses a copy as long as cloth binding and paper page may live." C. L. Skinner

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 My 26 '29 1200w

"'From first to last the history of Polar exploration is a single, mighty manifestation of the power of the Unknown over the mind of man.' If illustration of Dr. Nansen's oft-quoted words be wanted it may be found in 'Air Pioneering in the Arctic' with its photographs so exquisitely reproduced, with such skillfully caught 'atmosphere,' that it is impossible not to be profoundly affected by them."

+ Geog R 19:526 Jl '29 270w

"We have no poets today to celebrate the feats of Amundsen. The poetic mind, or at least the composite mind of our good poets, has become too complex a thing to permit of vigorous celebration of elemental deeds. Lacking the proper poets, prose must do—prose, and such pictures as may be seen in this big blue volume."

+ N Y Times p13 Je 9 '29 1250w

ELLSWORTH, WILLIAM WEBSTER. Creative writing; a guide for those who aspire to authorship. 207p $2 (8s 6d) Funk

029.6 Authorship. Authors, American 29-9543

A series of talks on authorship and authors given by the former president of the Century company to student groups in our colleges and universities.

---

Booklist 25:375 Jl '29

"It is advice that is infused with so much of the experience of the writer that the book is saved from the dullness of mere exposition and becomes interesting as well as helpful."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 29 '29 200w

"If we bear in mind that 'Creative Writing' is based upon the author's lectures given in schools and colleges, we can perhaps afford to be generous. It is hard, however, to think of our tender young being fed with such pap as this: 'What personality is more interesting than that of writers? Not Congressmen or Senators; of all in official life, perhaps only that of the President of the United States.' It seems hard, too, to believe that our school kids would just be thrilled to death to see Booth Tarkington in his bathrobe 'writing away for dear life,' as our sanguine author suggests." Edwin Seaver

— N Y Evening Post p10m Ap 13 '29 330w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

N Y World p10m Ap 7 '29 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 25:192 Je '29

ELLWOOD, CHARLES ABRAM. Man's social destiny in the light of science. (Cole lectures, 1929) 219p $2 Cokesbury press

304 Sociology. Social problems 29-19545

"Dr. Ellwood sets forth a philosophy that would remake at once our social and our religious life. He does not try to minimize or gloss over the ugly facts in current conditions. On the contrary he takes pains to point them out with refreshing candor. But he does not stop there. In science, government, and education, as well as in religion itself, he finds the forces of reconstruction at work. His message, therefore, is optimistic, but it is not an optimism that ignores evil or promises an easy way out of difficulties."—R of Rs

ELLWOOD, C: A.—Continued

Bookm 70:xii O '29 80w

"His lectures are broadly based on a mutually sympathetic union of religion and science for the benefit of the race, and in all the phases in which he views and discusses them he makes each illumine and inspire the other."
+ N Y Times p6 Ag 25 '29 220w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw
R of Rs 80:22 S '29 160w

"There is little in the current scene that the author has not touched upon in his rapid survey, and he does not fail to lay about him vigorously." G: L. Collins
+ World Tomorrow 12:520 D '29 700w

ELM, IENAR EWALD. Avigation by dead reckoning (aerial navigation). 120p il $2 McKay
629.13 Aeronautics 29-10418

The new word "avigation" is used and endorsed as the most appropriate term to signify the guidance of craft thru the air in accordance with previous calculations. The purpose of the book, which is intended as a textbook for ground schools, is to give the pilot a clear understanding of avigation by dead reckoning, the system used by Colonel Lindbergh in his memorable flight.

Booklist 26:16 O '29
Cleveland Open Shelf p105 Jl '29

ELSOM, JAMES CLAUDE. Community recreation. (Social workers' lib.) 278p il $2.25 Century
790 Games. Amusements 29-15221

"The author has made the attempt in the present volume to gather together a wide variety of suggestions for many social occasions, with hints as to organization and methods, with the desire to furnish an outline of a year's program. All of these methods and games have been tested in actual practice in a large number of groups in many parts of the country. Only those that have seemed to the author to be the most workable and most interesting have been included in the present volume. An attempt has been made to describe in detail the games and the methods of teaching them; it has been the author's purpose to prepare a handbook for those who are promoting recreational programs in their communities, and also for those who may be called upon to teach subjects pertaining to community recreation."—Preface

Booklist 26:60 N '29
Boston Transcript p2 S 25 '29 300w
Christian Century 46:1314 O 23 '29 40w

"The abundance of material which the book contains, and the suitability of its suggestions for the widest possible variety of occasions and for the use of both maturity and youth, ought to make it invaluable as a handbook for camp directors, teachers, Boy and Girl Scout leaders, social workers and those engaged in the study or work of community organization and recreation. Its usefulness is enhanced by a ten-page classified bibliography."
+ N Y Times p20 Ag 18 '29 500w
Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 22 '29 130w
Wis Lib Bul 25:319 O '29

ELSPETH, pseud. See O'Halloran, E.

ELSTON, ROY. Off the beaten track in southern France. 332p il $2.50 McBride [8s 6d Bell]
914.4 France—Description and travel 29-13416

"Some of the river valleys to which the author introduces us, such as the Lot, the Dordogne, and the Drôme, with their picturesque towns, break more or less new ground; and only the hardy pedestrian has penetrated such mountain recesses as the Cirque de Troumouse and the Upper Ossau in the Pyrenees, and the less frequented paths through the Basses and Maritime Alpes. The author is excellent company in these sketches."—New Statesman

Booklist 26:26 O '29
Reviewed by A. B. Maurice
Bookm 69:xxi Jl '29 230w

"Mr. Elston is an assiduous traveler as well as an enthusiastic one. He is never in a hurry and he has an eye for the picturesque and the antiquarian. To the reader who shares his 'propensity for dawdling' these pages will hold a responsive charm."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 Ag 18 '29 120w
Boston Transcript p2 My 29 '29 280w

"There is an appendix, giving itineraries, costs, and candid information about hotels, which will be serviceable to any reader who may be tempted by the racy text and admirable photographs to follow in the author's footsteps. And how pleasant it is to find a travel book adequately equipped with a select bibliography, an index, and a map!"
+ New Statesman 32:332 D 15 '28 200w

"Roy Elston combines the informative guidebook with a narrative of his ramblings so adroitly that there is no boredom in the instruction. He is not a lonesome wayfarer, although he travels alone." R. C. B. Brown
+ N Y Evening Post p8m Je 1 '29 120w

"This book possesses a greater degree of literary facility than its modest introduction might indicate, and its emphasis on old churches, historical events and architectural relics, rather than contemporary life, should be useful to the traveler seeking information about these matters."
+ N Y Times p13 S 1 '29 500w
St Louis 27:289 O '29

"A book of delightful and informed gossip, scenic and historical."
+ Spec 141:892 D 8 '28 80w
Times [London] Lit Sup p307 Ap 18 '29 800w

ELTON, OLIVER. Survey of English literature, 1730-1780. 2v 412;367p set $8 Macmillan [32s Arnold]
820.9 English literature—History and criticism 29-6262

"Professor Elton's first 'Survey,' published in 1912, covered the period from 1780-1830; his second (1921), the period from 1830-1880; and now a third half-century is passed in review. Regretfully we note the statement in his preface that this is the last that he intends to make. . . As compared with the volumes of the 'Cambridge History' devoted to this period, this work has the great advantage of being written by a single scholar, not a syndicate, and therefore of being composed in accordance with one method and point of view throughout. The scholarship upon which it is based is massive, yet easily carried."—N Y Evening Post

Booklist 25:313 My '29

"In all the variety there is the unity that is grounded upon the taste and judgment of a single well-equipped scholar; and that is why his 'Survey' possesses merits that are denied to the great co-operative 'Cambridge History of English Literature.' His comments are always sound, though in the nature of the subject they cannot always be fresh; but he has a knack of saying old things in a new way." S: C. Chew
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 F 10 '29 1250w

"The wide scope of English literature is everywhere expressed in Professor Elton's pages. They reveal an exact knowledge of every aspect of the subject, a sound scholarship, and especially the ability of the teacher to put it into a form that is both informative and interesting. And what is even better, he inspires us to continue our investigations into some of the obscure corners of literature into which he throws no little light." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 9 '29 1650w

"His book is almost a model of what such books should be. His style is not only pleasant and readable but at times distinguished in its flexibility and directness."
+ Nation 128:594 My 15 '29 180w

"A survey covering so much and such densely populated ground might have been breathless, cursory, and inconclusive. Professor Elton's is none of these things. Thanks to his keen and delighted sense of character, hardly one of the vast throng of lesser writers whom he evokes can slip back into the shadows without leaving a perdurable image on the eye of the mind. There is no sense of pressure or of haste. One by one they emerge, poets and novelists, diarists and pamphleteers, Methodist divines and Grub Street hacks, ladies of quality, philosophers and 'sons of the waves,' and within comparatively narrow limits each is somehow given elbow-room. Yet all this mass of detail does not obscure the architectural unity of the general plan. This unity is further emphasized by the concentration of all the notes and references at the end of each volume." D. M. Stuart
+ Nation and Ath 44:586 Ja 26 '29 680w

"It can be said for Professor Elton that he is less frequently banal than most critics of his school would be in his place; his learning comes to the rescue when his enthusiasm or his perceptions fail. But the sheer weight of the task is too much even for him; for one really illuminating page he gives us twenty which say nothing not already said many times before; and he is often forced back on the easy-going comment and pedagogical advice that form the stock in trade of harassed lecturers to undergraduates." R. S. Crane
+ — New Repub 60:248 O 16 '29 1100w

"The power of apt and telling characterisation is Dr. Elton's chief mark. This is not to disparage that rare union of wide sweep with minute observation which enables him, for example, to take in the whole landscape of the Decline and Fall while detecting Gibbon's mastery of an ironical 'some.' But the other gift is still higher—that of summing up in a phrase the most various and voluminous author; a gift which makes this book, in spite of its eight hundred pages, brief, and raises it from a mere study of literature into a piece of literature itself." E. E. Kellett
+ New Statesman 32:291 D 8 '28 1750w

"The qualities of the earlier volumes—qualities that have been much praised and are for the most part praiseworthy—reappear in the new work. This critic invariably states coolly and clearly the reasons for his likes and he exhibits a rarer gift, an ability to do justice to what he does not admire. The whole work is sustained at a singularly uniform level of execution, and that level, if not of the highest, is high." S: C. Chew
+ N Y Evening Post p8m F 9 '29 800w

"Covers the most important years (1730-1780) of the great century of prose in such a manner as to include [the author] among the minority of literary historians who are men of letters as well. He writes with the support of that wealth of scholarship which has corrected so many of the libels that have been fastened on the eighteenth century by Macaulay and others. This fine body of research has been examined, and the copious and interesting notes resulting therefrom make an excellent commentary to Dr. Elton's entertaining as well as informative review." Edwin Clark
+ N Y Times p2 Je 9 '29 1050w
Outlook 151:158 Ja 23 '29 20w

"The latest, and unhappily the last of his admirable 'Surveys.'"
Sat R 146:611 N 10 '28 280w
Spec 141:831 D 1 '28 50w

"The outstanding value of Professor Elton's survey lies in the admirable capacity of his reading, which reveals a breadth of appreciation and a serenity of attention not unworthy of comparison with some of the men in his illustrious roll call. It would be rash to offer him, or any other explorer of the profusion of English literature, the title of the complete historian; but the patient maturity of study, well-drawn plan, avoidance of compact traditional opinions, and the recognition of human variety carry him within sight of completeness."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p41 Ja 17 '29 1750w

EMERSON, EDWIN. Adventures of Theodore Roosevelt. 336p il $2.50 Dutton

B or 92 Roosevelt, Theodore 28-22434

"The author, a newspaper correspondent who was one of the original Rough Riders, gives the facts of Roosevelt's life in an easy style which makes interesting reading."—St Louis

Booklist 25:289 Ap '29
Cleveland Open Shelf p48 Mr '29
St Louis 27:63 F '29

"Mr. Emerson, himself a 'Rough Rider,' has told with vim and fire the physical adventures of Theodore Roosevelt, but he has been able also, in depicting the character of the man, to show that that physical prowess was a factor in the finer spiritual achievement." C. R. Robinson
+ Sat R of Lit 5:344 N 10 '28 600w
Springf'd Republican p8 My 7 '29 100w

EMERSON, ISABEL. Things seen in Sicily. (Things seen ser.) 157p il $1.50 Dutton [3s 6d Seeley, S.]

914.58 Sicily—Description and travel 29-26568

A description of one of the most beautiful islands of the world. As in other books in this series the history of Sicily is given along with the description.

Booklist 25:389 Jl '29
Boston Transcript p7 Je 29 '29 180w

"Small as it is, it is packed with both information and enchantment." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 46:992 Ag 7 '29 170w

"Miss Emerson takes a big step towards popularity. The whole of Sicily in a tiny volume precludes eccentricities such as walking tours. Yet it is surprisingly exhaustive, and fulfils its utilitarian purpose adequately." Sylva Norman
+ Nation and Ath 45:sup137 Ap 27 '29 30w
New Statesman 32:supxii Mr 16 '29 20w
St Louis 27:313 N '29
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 9 '29 40w

EMERSON, LOUVILLE EUGENE, ed. Physician and patient; personal care. 244p $2.50 Harvard univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

610.4 Physicians 29-1726

"A series of nine lectures delivered at the Harvard Medical School by well-known physicians. Of interest to laymen, especially such lectures as those on 'The Significance of Illness,' by Austen Fox Riggs; 'Human Nature and Its Reaction to Suffering,' by Lawrence K. Lunt; 'The Care of the Dying,' by Alfred Worcester; and 'Attention to Personality in Sex Hygiene,' by Alfred Worcester."—J Home Econ

J Home Econ 21:284 Ap '29 80w

"Although the book will have first importance, of course, for physicians, nurses and medical and nursing students, intelligent laymen will discover much to interest and inform them in these addresses by eminent practitioners of medicine."
+ N Y Times p10 F 3 '29 280w

"By far the most helpful and original of the essays is that by Dean David L. Edsall, the present and the best dean of the Harvard Medical School. Out of his wide experience, not only of hospital and consulting practice but of family practice, and his very penetrating and sympathetic understanding of folks, he writes an essay so valuable that the book is worth buying for this essay alone. Dr. Alfred Worcester has three chapters in this book—one on the care of the aged, one on the care of the dying, and one on sex hygiene. That on the care of the dying is almost unique in that he deals with a subject avoided by almost all writers either on medicine or on human life. The essay is a memorable one." R: C. Cabot, M.D.

EMERSON, L. E., ed.—Continued
+ Survey 62:142 Ap 15 '29 320w

EMERSON, RUPERT. State and sovereignty in modern Germany. 282p $3.50 Yale univ. press [16s Oxford]
320.157 Sovereignty. Germany—Politics and government 28-30606

A study of the development of the theory of sovereignty in Germany from the Franco-Prussian war through the World war, to 1921.

"As a non-German historian of German political and juristic thought, Emerson is superb. So deeply has he entered into the spirit of his German originals that they seem to have considerably influenced his terminology and style. To those who are already familiar with at least the fundamentals of German political philosophy, the book will offer pleasurable and profitable reading. In the interest of international understanding, we need more works of this kind." Johannes Mattern
+ Am Pol Sci R 23:757 Ag '29 1250w

Boston Transcript p2 F 20 '29 230w

"This American book discusses, very lucidly and with a thorough command of German authorites, the relations between the political Germany of to-day and the conceptions of German jurists about it."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p267 Ap 4 '29 1500w

"Emerson's study is not only a valuable interpretation of the development of German constitutional theory; it is also an important contribution to the general juristic problems of sovereignty, pluralism, and anarchy." S. B. Fay
+ Yale R n s 18:808 summer '29 360w

EMERY, SAMUEL. House that whispered. 2 4p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Paul, S.]
29-3964

What promised to be a peaceful vacation turned out to be a wild scramble, owing to the personality of an old Vermont house.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 F 3 '29 90w

"The characters have a certain distinctness uncommon to the usual mystery. There is no more confusing them than, ultimately, of confusing their motives. . . The story is of the engrossing kind that engages undivided attention so completely that the reader lets the furnace fire all but die." W. M. T.
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 13 '29 480w

"The author has skillfully created an atmosphere of mystery and horror, but when the time comes to explain what has happened it is found that four separate and unrelated elements enter into the explanation. And that, it seems to us, is rather a severe strain."
N Y Times p22 Ap 21 '29 170w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 10 '29 180w

EMHARDT, WILLIAM CHAUNCEY. Religion in soviet Russia; anarchy; together with an essay on The living church, by Sergius Troitsky; with an introd. by Clarence A. Manning. 386p $4 Morehouse
274.7 Russia—Religion 29-13572

Mr Emhardt's study of the effects of the revolution upon the religious life of Russia and particularly upon the Orthodox church is followed by an essay of Sergius Troitsky on the so-called "Living Church," founded in 1922 by a group of Petrograd priests who attempted to usurp authority over the whole Russian church.

"A long needed, well documented and impressive account of the religious situation in Russia." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 13 '29 830w

"Here is a strangely jumbled book; almost as much so as the situation with which it deals. . . The whole compilation, which closes with nearly a hundred pages of dissertation by a Russian emigré ecclesiastical lawyer attacking the regularity of the now defunct Living Church movement, has a curiously unreal air to any reader who is conscious of the awful struggle which religion—any religion—is having to maintain its existence in Russia these days."
Christian Century 46:1441 N 20 '29 280w

St Louis 27:304 N '29

"A detailed and abundantly documented survey from the Christian standpoint of the Soviet attack on religion."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p611 Ag 1 '29 80w

ENCYCLOPÆDIA Britannica; a new survey of universal knowledge; ed. by J. L. Garvin; F. H. Hooper, Am. editor; W. E. Cox, art editor. 14th ed 24v il $129.50 Encyclopaedia Britannica, inc., 342 Madison av., N.Y.
032 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 29-17944

"It is a far cry from 1768, when the first edition of the 'Encyclopaedia Britannica' began to appear in six-penny numbers, to the present year of grace which sees the publication of the fourteenth edition in twenty-four stout and handsome volumes, revised and largely rewritten from beginning to end. Lovers of statistics will doubtless be glad to know that this is the first thorough-going revision since the eleventh edition of 1911, the twelfth and thirteenth having been made by adding supplements; that the volumes contain about a thousand pages each, with a total of some 35,000,000 words besides 15,000 illustrations and 500 maps; that the number of separate headings is about 45,000, compared with 37,000 in the eleventh edition; and that the work represents the cooperative labors of 'more than 3,500 of the world's foremost authorities' over a period of nearly three years. To this it may be added that the thin India paper of the eleventh edition, which in practice proved rather unmanageable, has been replaced by a paper of greater firmness but only a trifle greater weight; that cross references are abundant, and that the index is a monument of detailed analysis. The volumes are good to look at, convenient to handle, and easy to use."—Nation

"The fourteenth edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica is one of the most potent instruments of adult education that has ever been devised. It is not merely a great compendium of facts covering man's world as known to the Twentieth Century. It is also a vast body of organized public opinion, treating some of the most difficult questions of the day, casting the weight of its authority and its appeal upon the side of civilization, of international understanding and good will. It is, above all, an encyclopaedia of the Twentieth Century, and of the third decade of the Twentieth Century; an encyclopaedia of the time, almost of the day. Rising above the neutrality of timidity, it speaks out clearly and fearlessly on many themes. One may not agree with some of the authors honored by the Encyclopaedia, but one must at least respect the publication that gives them this great forum of mankind." H: N. MacCracken
+ Bookm 70:275 N '29 2250w

"Not since Diderot has any encyclopaedia aimed at such minuteness in the matters of current daily life as has the fourteenth edition of the 'Britannica;' and on the whole it surpasses Diderot's achievement in this respect, thanks to the enormous advantage of photography. In the new 'Britannica' you can not only read about the world, you can also look at it." Carl Van Doren
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 O 13 '29 2600w

"The new 'Britannica' is a monument of learning and editorial competence. If something of the finer flavor of culture which characterized the earlier editions is lacking in this one, and what is offered bears often, in unaccustomed clearness, the stamp of practicality, it is because a new age is upon us and efficiency has taken culture in hand." W: MacDonald

+ Nation 129:467 O 23 '29 2000w

"The final volume contains 192 maps in colour, specially prepared for this edition by Messrs. Bartholomew, and the all-important Index, upon which an immense amount of care has been bestowed, for it not only includes references to the illustrations as well as the text of the twenty-three preceding volumes, but also serves as a Gazetteer of the maps comprised in the Atlas. This Fourteenth Edition will, therefore, well sustain the reputation which the Encyclopædia Britannica has enjoyed for a century and a half."

+ Nation and Ath 45:831 S 28 '29 1000w

"A feature of the new Britannica which excites my profound admiration is the treatment of the great war. It is impossible for a reviewer to begin to approach the riches of the Britannica without having lived with the volumes for a considerable time. One can merely express the genuine satisfaction and the warm delight to be derived from the possession of a source of authentic and living information concerning the world we live in and wish to know. The new Britannica has preserved the distinction of its past and added a large comprehension of our present environment to its dignified pages." W: Soskin

+ N Y Evening Post p12m N 9 '29 2250w

Reviewed by W: B. Shaw

R of Rs 80:18 N '29 630w

St Louis 27:327 D '29

"The fourteenth edition is a series of concessions to the conjectured limitations and needs of the plain man. . . With the utmost respect for the Editor-in-Chief and many of his colleagues and contributors, and the utmost patience towards the American enterprise which has 'stunted' this venerable British monument, we submit that the policy of 'humanization' was radically wrong. . . With many merits, perhaps particularly in the treatment of science and of recent political history. the fourteenth edition of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica' has been vitiated by an attempt to anticipate the demands of the plain man which is here out of place. It will meet most of the requirements of most people most of the time; but it is not the final resort of the student."

— + Sat R 148:409 O 12 '29 1900w

"It is not the 'popularization' of the work which most impresses the careful observer, though the claim of 'humanization' is valid. What do stand out are four characteristics which are to the credit of the edition, and two which may be counted as partial defects. In the first group we may note that (1) it has been thoroughly and carefully modernized; that (2) it has been given a much more practical character than it previously had; that (3) it has been decidedly Americanized, the excessive British emphasis of previous editions being largely overcome; and (4) that it contains many scattered innovations which are a result of approaching the field of knowledge in a new way, and accepting new divisions in that field. The defects are that it is a shorter work and in some respects materially less exhaustive than its predecessors; and that an unevenness is visible both in some of the rewriting and in some of the work of retention from the old edition." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 6:227 O 12 '29 4000w

Sat R of Lit 6:304 O 19 '29 200w

"It is universally recognized that the Encyclopædia Britannica has a great tradition of scholarship painstakingly built up since the first edition of 1771. It is the simple truth to say that the present edition abundantly maintains this tradition, while developing many features of the utmost value, that were either wholly lacking, or much less adequately represented in the earlier editions. The more carefully I have examined the text, the more profound has become my admiration for this great monument to human intelligence." J. R. Angell

+ Sat R of Lit 6:365 N 9 '29 2900w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 15 '29 950w

"The price is within the scope of any desirous family, about that of a radio, or one-tenth of an automobile. In the standard binding it is slightly over five dollars a volume. I feel that you may discount all possible spots that may be discovered on this sun of publishing, and, comparing what you get for your usual expenditure, never feel that this is not your money's worth, pressed down and running over. For your children, for your culture, for practical guidance this book will add to your wisdom and your pleasure in belonging to the human race." Leon Whipple

+ Survey 63:41 O 1 '29 1100w

ENDORE, S. GUY. Casanova; his known and unknown life. 390p il $5 Day

B or 92 Casanova de Seingalt, Giovanni Jacopo 29-29951

In this biography Casanova is depicted as a man who lived by his wits, and whose life was, perhaps, an exaggeration of the good and most certainly the bad traits of the time in which he lived. His amorous boastings, his seductions, and his charlatanisms are placed counterpoint to his brilliant literary talent, his superb reflection of certain aspects of that eighteenth century life in which he was so gallant a participator.

---

"Except for a certain looseness, a sagging of structure as it were, Mr. Endore has written a really excellent book. He is not at all gullible in the face of Casanova's boastings. . . He has also added some clever analysis and convincing assumptions of his own. The result, then, is a large book that contains all that has been actually accepted as pertinent to the career of the Venetian adventurer." Herbert Gorman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 D 1 '29 1100w

Boston Transcript p3 D 24 '29 550w

"His biography is sound, amusing, intelligent and readable. It is also direct and forthright: it presents no pretty theories to account for Casanova, for Mr. Endore holds the simple and apparently sensible belief that a fair picture of the man's character can be secured from the self-portrait in the Memoirs, checked against the findings of scholarly investigation." C. P. Fadiman

+ N Y Evening Post p14m N 23 '29 850w

"The scholarly background of this biography is wholly admirable, and in these days when hundreds are rushing to print with journalistic lives of great men, Mr. Endore deserves the highest commendation for his patient research and careful collation of source and commentary that must have taken years of study. It is not hack work, but a labor of love by one who must surely have made Casanova his life hobby." H. L. Matthews

+ N Y Times p6 D 8 '29 1100w

"Presumably this is his first formal biography in English; assuredly it is the first published in the United States, although Casanova has been the subject of various magazine articles and gets a chapter in William Bolitho's new book, 'Twelve Against the Gods.' What strikes me as pertinent is the fact that this is the first public appearance of his career as a whole in a book to which the censors can take no exception." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p14 N 15 '29 1150w

ENGELHARDT, NICKOLAUS LOUIS. School building programs in American cities. 560p il $5 Teachers college

371.62 Schoolhouses. Public schools—United States. Educational surveys 29-7184

A survey of the school building programs of ten American cities, chosen to represent different conditions and geographical locations. The cities studied were: Lynn, Massachusetts; Watertown, New York; Fort Lee, New Jersey;

ENGELHARDT, N. L:—Continued
